The demand was sent to Japan on March 24, ~~in which Spain~~ APR 12 1945 "energetically" protested the bayoneting of Spaniards in a bloody orgy just before the liberation of Manila, in which 250 men, women and children were killed. An official estimate said that 90 per cent of Spanish property in ~~Manila~~ the Philippines was destroyed.

Following the announcement of the break in relations, there was no unusual activity evident at the Japanese legation. Only the usual guards were on duty in front of the building.

Suma told neutrals sources here yesterday that Japan had acknowledged on April 7 receipt of Spain's protest about the ~~Ma~~ Manila killings. APR 12 1945

There was NO announcement of immediate government actions but it was assumed that one of the first measures would be the internment of Suma.

It was believed the Japanese minister was summoned to the Spanish foreign ministry late this afternoon and informed of the cabinet's decision, but there was NO official statement to that effect

The Spanish public has been well prepared for the break through a furious press campaign during the past few weeks, beginning with the first announcement from Washington of Japanese atrocities in Manila.

Recent editorials ~~disclosed~~ paved Japanese attacks on Spaniards and attempts to wipe out Spanish culture in the Philippines began as soon as the Japanese took over the islands.

"IF DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES ARE TO GROW THROUGHOUT THE WORLD, THEY WILL THRIVE BEST WHERE PEOPLE EXERCISE THEIR RIGHT TO KNOW AND BASE THEIR JUDGMENTS AND DECISIONS ON AN ACCURATE KNOWLEDGE OF EVENTS ASSERTED MCLEAN, PRESIDENT OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS AND PUBLISHER OF THE PHILADELPHIA EVENING BULLETIN.

IN AN ADDRESS PREPARED FOR THE CANADIAN PRESS ANNUAL LUNCHEON, MCLEAN SAID THE TWO SERVICES WERE BASED ON THE PRINCIPLE THAT "WE AS NEWSPAPERMEN SHOULD GATHER THE NEWS BY OUR OWN INSTRUMENTALITIES AND IN ACCORD WITH STANDARDS SET BY OURSELVES," AND THAT THIS PRINCIP HAD RECENTLY BEEN APPLIED IN THE UNITED KINGDOM WITH THE PURCHASE OF THE REUTERS NEWS AGENCY BY BRITISH NEWSPAPERS.

"OUR TWO ORGANIZATIONS HAVE INDEED DEMONSTRATED THE VIRTUES OF SUCH FORM OF ORGANIZATION, AMONG WHICH I HOLD THE FOREMOST IS THAT EACH MEMBER NEWSPAPER HAVING AN OWNERSHIP IN THE REPORT BECOMES A GUARDIAN OF ITS VIRTUES," MCLEAN SAID. "NOT ONLY EACH NEWSPAPER BUT EACH EDITOR AND REPORTER, YES, EACH READER--AN ARGUS-EYED HOST ALERT TO OBSERVE AND RESTRAIN ANY INJECTION OF BIAS OR SPECIAL INTEREST.

KNOWLEDGE, AND OF INCOMPLETENESS BY COMPLETENESS.' X X X FOR THE PEOPLES OF THE WORLD ARE NEWS HUNGRY."

MCLEAN SAID THAT BEFORE THE WAR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS HAD LAID ITS PLANS TO MEET THE NEWS-HUNGER OF PEOPLE IN MANY PARTS OF THE WORLD AND THOUGH THE CONFLICT INTERRUPTED THIS WORK "EVEN TODAY, AS MILITARY SUCCESS FREES ONE COUNTRY AFTER ANOTHER, WE HAVE FOLLOWED CLOSE BEHIND THEM INTO FRANCE, BELGIUM, HOLLAND, INTO THE MEDITERRANEAN AREAS, FROM SWEDEN INTO FINLAND, AND RECENTLY INTO SOUTHEASTERN ASIA AND INDIA."

"IT WILL AMUSE YOU TO KNOW," HE ADDED, "THAT WE ARE SUPPLYING 16 UNDERGROUND NEWSPAPERS IN DENMARK WITH A NEWS REPORT BROADCAST TO THEM WITH THE FULL PRIVILEGE OF USING IT AND CREDITING THE ASSOCIATED PRESS."

APR 12 1945

BUT, HE ADDED, THERE WOULD ARISE THE PROBLEM OF "WHAT TO DO WHEN SUCH EXCHANGES CONTAIN MORE HEAT THAN LIGHT, WHEN THEY SEEM TO BE CREATING MISUNDERSTANDING RATHER THAN UNDERSTANDING, WHEN THEY DISTORT OR MISREPRESENT THE VIEWS AND IDEAS OF ONE PEOPLE OR ANOTHER."

"THERE WILL ARISE," HE PREDICTED, "A CRY THAT SUCH EXPRESSIONS MUST BE INTERDICTED OR CENSORED OR WE PERISH AS DID THE PEOPLE OF THE TOWER OF BABEL. X X X

"AS A DEMOCRATIC PEOPLES WE ARE DEDICATED TO THE PRINCIPLE THAT THE PEOPLE SHALL BE FULLY INFORMED, FOR IF THEY ARE NOT FULLY INFORMED SOMEONE M SHALL BE FORCED TO DECIDE WHAT THEY SHOULD KNOW AND WHAT THEY SHOULD NOT HEAR. WHO SHALL SO ~~BEEBEE~~ DECIDE? AND IF THEY ARE WRONG, WHAT THEN?

APR 12 1945

"WE CANNOT RETREAT FROM THE PRINCIPLE THAT IF THE PEOPLE ARE FULLY INFORMED THEY WILL WINNOW THE WHEAT FROM THE CHAFF AND THAT THEIR JUDGMENTS SO FORMED WILL BE SOUND. IT IS NECESSARY TO MEET THE DANGER OF MISUNDERSTANDING BY MORE UNDERSTANDING, AND OF IGNORANCE BY GREATER

MCLEAN SAID THAT IN EXPANDING THIS WORLD W SERVICE THE ASSOCIATED PRESS WAS "FULFILLING A DUTY AND AN OBLIGATION TO DO OUR PART IN SUPPLANTING WHERE THEY HAVE EXISTED THOSE GOVERNMENT-CONTROLLED SERVICES ON WHICH, ALL TOO OFTEN, THE PEOPLES WERE DEPENDENT."

"YOU ARE UNDOUBTEDLY FAMILIAR," HE SAID, "WITH KENT COOPER'S EFFORTS TO GAIN ADOPTION THROUGHOUT THE WORLD OF THE PRINC PLE OF FREE ACCESS TO NEWS BY ALL AND THE FULL AVAILABILITY OF COMMUNICATIONS TO ALL. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, WHERE POSSIBLE, HAS ALWAYS SOUGHT AND CONTINUES TO SEEK TO FOSTER THE GROWTH OF ORGANIZATIONS LIKE OURS AND YOURS GOVERNED BY THE NEWSPAPERS THEMSELVES."

CLEVELAND, APRIL 11-(AP)-AN ALLIED VICTORY IN EUROPE WILL SIGNAL THE OPENING OF THE GREATEST ALL-OUT WAR IN HISTORY AGAINST A SINGLE NATION, H.G.BATCHELLER, NATIONAL CHIEF OF OPERATIONS OF THE WAR PRODUCTION BOARD, DECLARED TODAY.

THE WPB VICE-CHAIRMAN TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE THAT AFTER V-E DAY ALL UNDAMAGED AMERICAN EQUIPMENT AND ABLE-BODIED MEN IN THE EUROPEAN THEATER WOULD BE TRANSFERRED TO THE ORIENT "TO BRING THE JAPANESE WAR TO A VICTORIOUS AND SPEEDY CONCLUSION."

APR 12

BATCHELLER SAID FEARS THAT OUR ECONOMY WOULD SUFFER A SUDDEN PARALYSIS ON V-E DAY ARE UNWARRANTED.

"WAR PRODUCTION WILL DROP ABOUT 12 PER CENT IN THE FIRST THREE MONTHS AFTER VICTORY IN EUROPE, AND ANOTHER EIGHT PER CENT IN THE NEXT THREE MONTHS," HE PREDICTED. "AS THE WAR AGAINST JAPAN PROGRESSES, MUNITIONS CUTS WILL REACH A MAGNITUDE OF 35 TO 50 PER CENT.

THIS TIME, BATCHELLER CONTINUED, GOVERNMENT AGENCIES HAVE ADOPTED UNIFORM PLANS TO TERMINATE CONTRACTS. STORAGE SPACE FOR GOVERNMENT-OWNED EQUIPMENT HAS BEEN PROVIDED AND THE GOVERNMENT IS ACTING TO CLEAR PLANTS PROMPTLY.

IN A LATER ADDRESS PREPARED FOR DELIVERY BEFORE THE CLEVELAND ADVERTISING CLUB, THE WPB EXECUTIVE SAID "AMERICAN INDUSTRY FACES A THREE-FOLD TASK; FIRST, 59 .-8,5-8, 529-FRONT WAR PRODUCTION UNTIL GERMANY IS DEFEATED; SECOND, AFTER VICTORY IN EUROPE, TO SUSTAIN MUNITIONS MANUFACTURING UP TO MILITARY CHIEFS OF STAFF SCHEDULES AND, THIRD, TO TAKE THE NECESSARY STEPS TO TOOL UP FOR A RAPIDLY EXPANDING CIVILIAN ECONOMY."

PHILIPPINES INDEPENDENCE INTERPRETIVE (400)

BY RUSSELL BRINES

MANILA, APRIL 11-(AP)-A POLITICAL IMPASSE PROBABLY WILL MAKE THE PHILIPPINES LEGALLY INDEPENDENT AGAINST THEIR WILL.

RESPONSIBLE FILIPINOS APPREHENSIVELY EYE THE NEARING DATE OF FREEDOM, KNOWING THAT IT WILL PRODUCE NUMEROUS MAJOR PROBLEMS FOR THIS BANKRUPT, WAR-RUINED NATION.

BUT NO ONE CAN FIND A DIGNIFIED WAY OF DECLINING THE MOST GENEROUS GIFT EVER OFFERED TO AN ORIENTAL RACE.

INDEPENDENCE WAS USED AS A POLITICAL CATCH PHRASE BY AMBITIOUS FILIPINO POLITICIANS AND IT FIRED POPULAR IMAGINATION. WHEN IT WAS GRANTED IN 1935, HOWEVER, THE DESIRE CHILLED -- TOO LATE.

WAR, OCCUPATION AND THE UNREST OF LIBERATION HAVE CONVINCED THE GREAT MAJORITY OF FILIPINOS THAT THEY DO NOT WANT INDEPENDENCE FOR MANY YEARS YET. COMMONWEALTH OFFICIALS CANDIDLY SAY IN PRIVATE THAT THEY HAVE SEARCHED FRUITLESSLY FOR A FACE-SAVING METHOD OF POSTPONING IT.

BUT THE GOVERNMENT OF PRESIDENT SERGIO OSMENA IS COMMITTED TO THE 1935 INDEPENDENCE ACT AND SUBSEQUENT AGREEMENTS WHICH CALL FOR FULL FREEDOM BY JULY 4, 1946, AT THE LATEST. PRESIDENT OSMENA FURTHERMORE FELT OBLIGED TO EXPRESS THE PUBLIC WISH THAT IT MIGHT BE GRANTED ON AUGUST 13, 1945, THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE FIRST AMERICAN ENTRY INTO THE ISLANDS. HE WAS YIELDING TO THE INFLUENCE OF A PRESSURE GROUP, OF SOME 20,000, WHICH DEMAND IS IMMEDIATE INDEPENDENCE. NO OTHER CALL FOR THIS STATUS HAS ARISEN WITHIN THE ISLANDS.

THE UNITED STATES, ON THE OTHER HAND, CANNOT REN[illegible] ITS PLEDGES, WITHOUT AT LEAST A RESPONSIBLE PETITION FROM THE ISLANDS. TO TAKE THE INITIATIVE IN POSTPONING FREEDOM WOULD SABOTAGE COMPLETELY AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL PRESTIGE, PARTICULARLY IN ASIA WHERE JAPANESE POLITICAL WARFARE IS STILL EXTREMELY ACTIVE.

ALL FILIPINO LEADERS OF SUFFICIENT STATURE TO MAKE A POSTPONEMENT PETITION STICK ARE ALIGNED WITH THE OSMENA GOVERNMENT AND THEREFORE TECHNICALLY PINNED TO ITS COMMITMENTS.

THIS IMPASSE MEANS AN UNCERTAIN FUTURE. UNDER INDEPENDENCE AGREEMENTS, THE UNITED STATES COULD NEGOTIATE TO RETAIN NAVAL, AIR AND ARMY BASES IN THE ISLANDS.

THE FILIPINOS PRIVATELY HOPE THAT THE PRESENT ARRANGEMENT WILL CONTINUE. WHILE THE COMMONWEALTH GOVERNMENT POSSESSES FULL CIVIL RIGHTS, THE UNITED STATES [illegible] AT PRESENT IS HANDLING POL[illegible],

PUBLIC HEALTH AND SIMILAR ESSENTIAL ADMINISTRATIVE JOBS. THE ARMY ALSO IS SUPPLYING CONSIDERABLE FOOD TO THE WEAKENED POPULACE. COMMONWEALTH OFFICIALS FEAR THE POSSIBILITY OF DISORDERS IF AMERICAN AUTHORITY IS REMOVED ABRUPTLY. THEY ALSO RECOGNIZE THE ISLANDS' DEPENDENCE UPON THE UNITED STATES FOR REHABILITATION AND AS AN ESSENTIAL MARKET. ECONOMIC REVIVAL IN THE ANCHIPELAGO WILL BE SLOW AT BEST AND MAY BE SHORTENED WITHOUT PREFERENTIAL AMERICAN TRADE TREATMENT.

THESE AND OTHER PROSPECTIVE PROBLEMS HAVE BRAVED YEAR AMONGS THE WORD "INDEPENDENCE."

President Roosevelt Is Dead; Truman Sworn In as Successor

APR 13 1945

Sudden Death Shocks Nation; Rites Saturday

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., April 12.—(AP) President Franklin D. Roosevelt, his strength sapped away as Commander in Chief in America's greatest war, died suddenly this afternoon.

His duties fell on Vice President Harry S. Truman who, sworn in as the 32nd president in a White House ceremony at Washington, issued this statement:

"The world may be sure that we will prosecute this war on both fronts, east and west, with all the vigor we possess, to a successful conclusion."

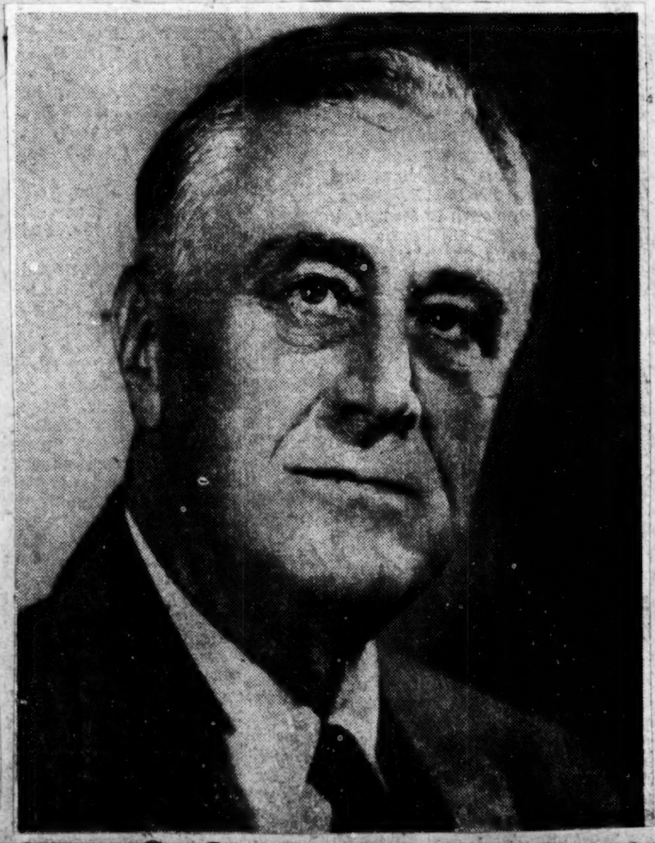
4:35 (correct)

It was at ~~3:35~~ p. m. Eastern War Time that Mr. Roosevelt died of a cerebral hemorrhage. It was at 7.09 p. m., that a solemn-faced Truman took up the burden and the honor of president.

Mr. Roosevelt's last words were.

"I have a terrific headache."

He spoke them to Comdr. Harold Bruenn, naval physician



Funeral Saturday

The funeral will be in the White House East Room in Washington on Saturday. Burial will be at the Roosevelt ancestral home at Hyde Park, N. Y., Sunday.

The body will not lie in state.

APR 13 1945

Presidential Secretary William D. Hassett said Mr. Roosevelt's body would leave here around 9 a. m. (EWT) tomorrow for the approximately 22-hour run to Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt, 63, was sitting in front of a fireplace in the little White House here atop Pine mountain when the attack struck him.

Bruenn described it as a massive cerebral hemorrhage.

Dies Without Pain

The President's Negro valet, Arthur Prettyman, and a Filipino messboy carried him to his bedroom. He was unconcious at the end. It came without pain.

Mr. Roosevelt, in the third month of his fourth term as President, came here three weeks ago to rest.

Mrs. Roosevelt planned to fly here this evening. She left the White House at 7:15 after informing their four uniformed sons by wire of their father's death.

The death removed from world councils one of the Big Three—Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill—who worked together to win the war and laid joint plans for keeping the peace. Truman likewise has stressed the need for international cooperation.

Dr. Bruenn said he saw the President this morning and he was in excellent spirits at 9:30 a. m.

"At one o'clock," Bruenn added, "he was sitting in a chair while sketches were being made of him by an architect. He suddenly complained of a very severe occipital headache (back of the head).

"Within a very few minutes he lost consciousness. He was seen by me at 1:30 p. m., fifteen minutes after the episode had started.

"He did not regain consciousness and he died at 3:35 p. m."

Cousins Present

(Central War Time)

Only others present in the cottage were Comdr. George Fox, White House pharmacist and long an attendant of the President; Hassett, Miss Grace Tully, confidential secretary; and two cousins, Miss Laura Delano and Miss Margaret Suckley.

APR 13 1945

Bruenn said he called Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntyre Navy Surgeon General and White House physician in Washington and that McIntyre in turn called Dr. James E. Paullin, of Atlanta, an internal medicine practitioner and honorary consultant to the Navy surgeon general.

Paullin was present when Bruenn gave the statement of the cause of death to reporters of the three national news services.

Hassett gave newsmen the first announcement.

News of the President's death spread like wildfire around the Foundation and atop an adjoining mountain where guests were gathering for a barbecue.

The President's late arrival for the barbecue caused some anxiety. A telephone call was put through and a few minutes later representatives of the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service were told to rush immediately to the Carver cottage on the Foundation grounds for some news.

"It is my sad duty," Hassett told the reporters, "to announce the President died at 3:35 p. m., of a cerebral hemorrhage."

(Central War Time)

Hassett urged the reporters to rush to their telephones immediately as a simultaneous announcement was being made at the White House in Washington.

So insistent was Secretary Hassett that the news be made public immediately that details were left for future announcement.

The President, the nation's first chief executive to break the two-term tradition, had planned to stay here another week, then he was to return to Washington and spend one day before taking a train to San Francisco to open the April 25 United Nations conference to which he had given so much attention in recent months.

Mr. Roosevelt died in the bedroom in his little white bungalow atop Pine mountain, where he had been coming for 20 years to take the after-treatments for infantile paralysis with which he was stricken in 1921.

Interested in Expansion

Long before his presidency, Mr. Roosevelt helped found the Warm Springs foundation for polio victims. In recent months he had taken a deep interest in expanding it for servicemen afflicted with the disease.

Mr. Roosevelt arrived at Warm Springs March 30. He had been underweight and his doctors wanted him to take it easy to see if he could not regain the poundage at which he felt comfortable.

Rumors had been heard the last few days that the President was not picking up as much as his doctors would have liked.

He received reporters last Thursday and, in the presence of Sergio Osmena, president of the Philippine Commonwealth, told of his desire to grant full independence to the islands by Autum.

Had Ambitious Plans

Mr. Roosevelt also outlined ambitious postwar plans for American participation in the Western Pacific to prevent further Japanese aggression.

He said the United States and the other United Nations must accept trusteeships over Japanese-mandated islands, build new naval and air bases and help the Philippines rebuild economically after the commonwealth becomes a self-governing nation.

Reports of this news conference were to have been withheld for security reasons until the President returned to Washington.

The death announcement was made in the center of the 2,000-acre Warm Springs foundation for polio treatment which the President helped found more than 20 years ago. That was before he began serving his first term as governor of New York.

The announcement was dictated to reporters in a white cottage across a red clay road from the administration building of the foundation where Hassett and four other White House attaches were making their home here.

This was Mr. Roosevelt's second stay here in four months. The President spent 19 days here only last November-December.

Reporters who attended his news conference a week ago today noted his gray pallor. This had been noticeable ,however, for many months and had caused considerable comment among White House correspondents.

Voice Became Weak

Mr. Roosevelt's voice also had become weak in recent months, and he frequently asked reporters to repeat their questions.

This was attributable, according to those close to him, to a sinus leakage into the throat which caused slight constrictions.

The last piece of legislation Mr. Roosevelt signed was one to continue the Commodity Credit Corporation and increase its borrowing power.

Secretary Hassett said that as he did so, Mr. Roosevelt made his usual comment at such a time:

"Here's where I make a law."

Hassett said the President's mail was quite heavy on his last day and that "it took him at least 20 minutes to sign papers."

Other papers Mr. Roosevelt signed among his last official acts were the appointments of a batch of smalltown postmasters, including one for Panaca, Nev., as well as several citations for the Legion of Merit.

The President went about his final work dressed in a blue suit with vest and a four-in-hand tie.

President Stricken While Being Sketched

APR 13 1945

Warm Springs, Ga., April 12 (AP). President Franklin D. Roosevelt died unexpectedly here today at 4.35 P.M. of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Roosevelt's last words were: "I have a terrific headache."

Spoken To Naval Physician

He spoke them to Commander Harold Bruenn, naval physician.

Presidential Secretary William D. Hassett said Mr. Roosevelt's body would leave here around 9 A.M., (E.W.T.) tomorrow for the approximately 22-hour run to Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt, 63, was sitting in front of a fireplace in the Little White House here atop Pine Mountain when the attack struck him.

Described As Massive

Bruenn described it as a massive cerebral hemorrage.

The President's Negro valet, Arthur Prettyman, and a Filipino messboy carried him to his bedroom. He was unconscious at the end. It came without pain.

Mr. Roosevelt, the the third month of his fourth term as President, came here three weeks ago to rest.

Dr. Bruenn said he saw the President this morning and he was in excellent spirits at 9.30 A.M.

Complains Of Severe Headache

"At 1 o'clock," Bruenn added, "he was sitting in a chair while sketches were being made of him by an architect. He suddenly complained of a very severe occipital headache (back of the head).

"Within a very few minutes he lost consciousness. He was seen by me at 1.30 P.M., fifteen minutes after the episode had started.

"He did not regain consciousness and he died at 3.35 P.M."

Only others present in the cottage were Commander George Fox, White House pharmacist and long an attendant on the President; Hassett, Miss Grace Tully, confidential secretary; and two cousins, Miss Laura Delano and Miss Margaret Suckley.

News Services Notified

Bruenn said he called Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, United States Navy surgeon general and White House physician in Washington and that McIntire in turn called Dr. James E. Paullin, of Atlanta, an internal medicine practicioner and honorary consultant to the navy surgeon general.

Paullin was present when Bruenn gave the statement of the cause of death to reporters of the three national news services.

In response to a question, Dr. Bruenn said the President died without pain.

News of the President's death spread quickly and caused many a tear among the 125 infantile paralysis patients at the foundation here.

Was Giving Barbecue

Mayor Frank W. Allcorn of Warm Springs was giving a barbeque at his mountain cabin this afternoon for the President and about 50 other guests.

Allcorn was awaiting the President's arrival when reporters got word through the Army Signal Corps radio telephone and summer White House telephone communication to rush to the foundation.

Miss Louise Hackmeister, veteran White House chief telephone operator, could hardly talk in her excitement to round up those who had to be informed.

Tears and quivering voices accompanied the announcement of the President's death by Hassett.

Had Been Underweight

Miss Tully, Mrs. Alice Winegar, Hassett's secretary, and Mrs. Dorothy Brady, presidential stenographer, sat tense on a sofa as Hassett gave the news.

Mr. Roosevelt arrived at Warm Springs March 30. He had been underweight and his doctors wanted him to take it easy to see if he could not regain the poundage at which he felt comfortable.

Rumors had been heard the last few days that the President was not picking up as much as his doctors would have liked.

Outlines Postwar Plans

Reports of this news conference were to have been withheld for security reasons until the President returned to Washington.

Funeral arrangements were not decided at the time Secretary Hassett and Commander Bruenn made their statements.

Burial At Hyde Park

[In Washington it was said the funeral will be held in the White House Saturday. Burial will be at Hyde Park, N.Y.]

The death announcement was made in the center of the 2,000-acre Warm Springs foundation for polio treatment which the President helped found more than twenty years ago. That was before he began serving his first term as Governor of New York.

The announcement was dictated to reporters in a white cottage across a red-clay road from the administration building of the foundation where Hassett and four other White House attachés were making their home here.

Gray Pallor Noticed

This was Mr. Roosevelt's second stay here in four months. The President spent nineteen days here only last November-December.

Reporters who attended his news conference a week ago today noted his gray pallor. This had been noticeable, however, for many months and had caused considerable comment among White House correspondents.

Mr. Roosevelt's voice also had become weak in recent months, and he frequently asked reporters to repeat their questions.

Details Wait

This was attributable, according to those close to him, to a sinus leakage into the throat which caused slight constrictions.

Hassett gave reporters the first word.

"It is my sad duty," Hassett said, "to announce the President died at 3.35 P. M., of a cerebral hemorrhage."

Hassett urged the reporters to rush to their telephones immediately as a simultaneous announcement was being made at the White House in Washington.

A quivering voice, in the presence of other members of the White House staff who came here with Mr. Roosevelt March 30, for what was to be a three-week rest, Hassett said further details as to the cause of death would be given out later by Commander Howard Bruenn, naval doctor, who was taking care of the nation's thirty-first President in the absence of Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, navy surgeon general.

Insistent was Secretary Hassett that the news be made public immediately that details were left for future announcement.

Planned To Stay Week

The President, the nation's first Chief Executive to break the two-term tradition, had planned to stay here another week, then he was to return to Washington and spend one day before taking a train to San Francisco to open the April 25 United Nations conference to which he had given so much attention in recent months.

Block in Blood Vessel of Brain Caused Death

Cerebral Hemorrhage Is Also Known as Stroke; Arteries Break Suddenly

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—President Roosevelt died from a cerebral hemorrhage, a sudden extensive bleeding in the brain caused by a ruptured blood vessel.

Laymen recognize a cerebral hemorrhage under other names, such as a stroke, or a stroke of apoplexy.

This is usually what happens in a case like this:

As people grow old their arteries lose their elasticity. They become hard and brittle. Usually, with advancing age blood pressure increases.

Sometimes arteries in the brain grow harder and more brittle than blood vessels in other parts of the body.

Then some day, usually without warning, a blood vessel in the brain gives way. Blood pours through the brain, paralyzing nerve centers.

Very often people get a mild hemorrhage and recover and then maybe much later get a second,

ALL WASHINGTON MOURNS DEATH OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP) From diplomats to cab drivers, capitol residents took first news of the President's death today with a shocked unbelief which left them literally stunned into momentary speechlessness.

News of the chief executive's passing came to the British embassy by a phone call, as an Associated Press reporter was standing by. The entire office froze into various positions of incredulous immobility.

People Speechless

For a full ten seconds not a soul spoke. Then one attache simply blurted "my God!" and the tension broke.

Someone else said "he hasn't looked at all well lately," and still another Englishman added "it's the beastly changeable weather," but it all obviously was small talk.

Finally the attache voiced the thoughts of the others: "I wonder what it will mean—to the war." Nobody answered him.

When another reporter rushing downtown told a negro cab-driver the news, he refused to believe it at first. Then he said slowly: "I'm sorry to hear that. Man, but I'm sorry to hear that!" As I got out of the cab he added, "I wonder what it will mean to us—if anything. I wonder."

An American army major on a downtown corner shook his head unbelievingly and asked: "It's really true?" assured that it was, he said:

"Well, now he's next to Lincoln—in more ways than one." He walked on down the street, still looking dazed.

In front of the White House, the crowd was assembling fast—civilians and servicemen and women. Some had their hats off, others stood holding the iron grill fence, staring up at the porch, where the doors stood open and newcomers, riding up in various official cars walked soft-footedly inside.

Can't Believe News

There was little talking anywhere, at first, and people on the street stared questioningly at newcomer to the group, as th still expecting someone might say that it had really happened.

Everywhere the scene was much the same. Little groups gathered on street corners throughout the ci proper to stand about aimlessly—and a little disbelievingly.

Workers going home at the end of the day to their suburban homes were hailed by neighbors as they alighted from street cars and busses.

"Have you heard—?" People called to one another.

And then fresh groups gathered, repeating the same news, again and again.

There seemed to be a general realization that an era in American history had suddenly come to an end.

Up and down Massachusetts Avenue,—embassy row—the flags of scores of nations were lowered to half staff in the late day sunshine.

People gathered and looked at them and repeated the news again: "The President is dead."

Before dark, hundreds had moved into Jackson Square, across Pennsylviania Avenue from the White House to stare at the executive mansion, where lights blazed through the broad windows. Military police with sidearms—removed from the White House gates months ago—suddenly appeared again, taking up stations at all entrances, and pedestrians were routed to the opposite side of the street.

Automobiles converged on the executive mansion bearing people of high rank from official and diplomatic fields, each wishing to leave a personal word of condolence.

The White House executive offices seethed with reporters, photographers and radiomen.

Roosevelt Guided Nation Through Perils of Depression and War

Shouldered Great Burdens During 12 Years in Office

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

APR 13 1945

The tradition-shattering presidential career of Franklin Delano Roosevelt spanned turbulent years of peace in which he worked to lift the Nation out of a depression and tumultuous years of war when he played a dominant role in charting an Allied victory.

While he gained the adulation of millions, the unprecedented moves he made and the political theories he embraced made him the frequent target for blistering criticism.

Accusations ranged from "demagoguery" to "dictatorship." The public debt jumped to a record peacetime high, then to even greater wartime peaks. Critics charged the President with trying to "pack" the Supreme Court after that tribunal had thrown out several of his favorite projects and he sought to inject "new blood" by reorganizing the membership. Some party stalwarts forsook him.

But he became the first President in history to be elected to a third term—and by a smashing majority—and then won a fourth.

An International Statesman

Mr. Roosevelt had attained a substantial international stature in the years when he was concerned primarily with applying revolutionary remedies to an economic blight rooted in World War I.

And after the flames of a second global conflict were kindled, he became the pivotal statesman of more than 30 United Nations which pooled their might to smash a German-Italian-Japanese Axis.

Kings and queens, presidents and prime ministers, travelled to the White House to consult him.

The military strategy of nations representing 75 percent of the earth's surface and 60 per cent of its population—a strategy that sent American fighting men, American war weapons, American food and American dollars to combat the Axis—was mapped at conferences in which he took a leading part.

In Unprecedented Parleys

He constantly shuffled and revised a prodigious war production program, framed stupendous war budgets to be met by taxes that hurt and, also at home, fought an inflation peril hardly less dangerous to the nation than its enemies at arms.

He drew up with United Nations colleagues, as the war progressed, blue prints for peace—a peace designed to avoid the hasty mistakes of the Versailles treaty.

International conferences on a scale never before seen in history helped the President to formulate his war plans. Rising to a pinnacle of world attention with him in these councils was Britain's sturdy Prime Minister, Winston Churchill.

His intimates said nothing less than the threat of war, and finally war itself, could have prompted Mr. Roosevelt to stir up political turmoil in tremendous proportions by shattering the 150-year-old two-term presidential tradition begun by George Washington, and then running for a fourth term.

Says He Prefered to Retire

In 1940, the Chief Executive told the Democratic National Convention he was accepting renomination for a third term only because of a "storm" raging in Europe. He was reelected overwhelmingly over Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican candidate.

Four years later, Mr. Roosevelt said his preference was to retire to the family estate at Hyde Park, N. Y., where he was born January 30, 1882. He told Democratic Chairman Robert E. Hannegan in a letter:

"All that is within me cries out to go back to my home on the Hudson River, to avoid public responsibilities, and to avoid also the publicity which in our democracy follows every step of the nation's Chief Executive.

"Such would be my choice. But we of this generation chance to live in a day and hour when our nation has been attacked, and when its future existence and the future existence of our chosen method of government are at stake.

Accepts as 'Good Soldier'

"To win this war wholeheartedly, unequivocally and as quickly as we can is our task of the first importance. To win this war in such a way that there be no further world wars in the foreseeable future is our second objective. To provide occupations, and to provide a decent standard of living for our men in the armed forces after the war, and for all Americans, are the final objectives.

"Therefore, reluctantly, but as a good soldier . . . I will accept and serve in this office, if I am so ordered by the commander-in-chief of us all—the sovereign people of the United States."

His Republican opponent was Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Fourth Term Campaign

As in the third-term campaign, Mr. Roosevelt said he would not have time to campaign in the usual partisan sense, but would reserve the right to answer what he called "misrepresentations."

Dewey opened his campaign Sept. 7 with a speech at Philadelphia. The President got going Sept. 23, accusing the opposition of "callous" and "brazen" falsehood.

Mr. Roosevelt was elected, by an electoral vote of 432 to 99. He carried 36 states and Dewey 12.

In a clatter of tangling telephones and news wires, Mr. Roosevelt followed the election returns into the early morning of Nov. 8, and when assured of his election to a fourth term he said:

"We have again demonstrated to the world—that democracy is a living, vital force."

The President was in Hyde Park, where he cast his ballot, and later he confessed to a little lust: cussing when his voting booth lever stuck on election day. But, he insisted, he didn't take the name of the Deity in vain—Time Magazine and the Glendale, Calif., Ministerial association notwithstanding.

Mr. Roosevelt, the election over, swung back into the complex duties of his office, while the world speculated about another meeting of the Big-3.

On Nov. 20, Prime Minister Winston Churchill sent him a message "not to go out in the rain." Mr. Churchill knew the President's health was poor, and he had seen a photograph of the President motoring in the rain.

Late in November, Mr. Roosevelt decided upon a short vacation to recover his strength after the strenuous political campaign. He went to Warm Springs, returning to Washington Dec. 19 and began tussling immediately with world problems.

The Voyage to Yalta

The 79th Congress convened Jan. 3. Mr. Roosevelt did not appear in person before a joint session, but sent his annual message up to be read. Then an event the whole world expected occurred. The President arrived at Yalta, in the Russian Crimea on Feb. 4 for a conference with Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Joseph Stalin, to draw the framework of a hope for enduring world peace.

The last great appearance of the President was on March 1, when he addressed a joint session of Congress, outlining the Crimea charter for peace.

Thereafter newspapermen saw him several times at news conferences. He was a guest of the press March 22 at the White House correspondents' dinner. The President seemed to enjoy the dinner, and the following stage show, as much or more than any newspaperman there. He chided the newspapermen in the brief speech, and told them in fun that he had attended more White House press conferences than any of them.

A tremendous figure of a man, despite legs left withered and useless by infantile paralysis in 1921, Mr. Roosevelt shouldered burdens as heavy as any Chief Executive ever carried. While he stood up under a job which had wrecked the health of many a predecessor, the years naturally left their mark on him.

Forced to Take Rest

Influenza, sinusitis and bronchitis weakened him in the winter of 1943-44 and rumors spread about his health. In April, 1944, he bundled up his old clothes and took a month off to convalesce in shirt-sleeves on the languorous plantation coast of South Carolina. When he returned to Washington, his physician said he was in as good shape as any man of 62 could hope to be and that his condition offered no bar to another four years in the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt accepted the fourth-term nomination by radio from a naval base at San Diego, Calif. Immediately, he boarded a cruiser for his first wartime trip into the Pacific and consultations in Hawaii—where a sneak punch brought America into the war on December 7, 1941—with top commanders in the battle against Japan.

He long since had broken all Presidential travel records, and war did not deter him from pushing the mileage up around 300,000.

Momentous Decisions

Time after time, he or Mr. Churchill dared the dangers of Atlantic crossings for epochal conferences which shifted the Allies from the defensive to the offensive and changed the course of combat around the world.

Standing out in sharp relief, in the light of events the next summer, were their meetings at Cairo and Tehran, Iran, at the close of 1943. In a series of parleys, they talked with Premier Joseph Stalin of Russia, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China and President Ismet Inonu of neutral Turkey.

Italy already had been knocked out of the war. So at Cairo and Tehran, strategy was perfected for obliterating the military power of Germany and Japan.

It called for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who had welded British and American arms in the Mediterranean into a mighty and victorious force, to assume command of invasion forces poised in Britain for a knock-out blow at Germany from the west.

Guarded By Russians

First, at a desert hotel in the shadow of a great pyramid, the American President, the British Prime Minister and the Chinese Generalissimo agreed that Japan must be utterly defeated and her empire utterly destroyed by stripping away lands acquired in decades of conquest. Military measures necessary to fulfill these aims were considered.

The Generalissimo flew back to Chungking. Roosevelt and Churchill flew to Tehran, where the adjoining Soviet and British embassies formed a single compound surrounded by grim Russian tommy-gunner guards.

Stalin, who had left his country for the first time since the revolution, invited the American President to stay at the Soviet embassy during his participation in perhaps the most significant of all United Nations war talks.

In 'Complete Agreement'

Four days of deliberation produced, Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin said, a determination that "our nations shall work together in the war and in the peace that will follow." They added they had concerted plans for the "destruction of the German forces," and had "reached complete agreement as to the scope and timing of operations which will be undertaken from the east, west and south."

From Tehran, Stalin went back to Moscow, Roosevelt and Churchill to Cairo to be joined by President Inonu. Three days of conferences in Cairo brought forth another communique which reported that "the closest unity existed between the United States of America, Turkey and Great Britain in their attitude toward the world situation."

En route home, the President stopped at battle-scarred Tunis, Malta and Sicily. The Secret Service had to restrain him from looking in on fighting in Italy.

Action Follows Conferences

By mid-1944, the full significance of the Cairo-Tehran meetings had become apparent.

In fulfillment of the commitments, the invasion of France got under way from the west and south. Russia pounded hard on the eastern front and by fall Allied arms were on German soil. Victory in Europe was in sight.

And in the Pacific, Allied forces won successes in Burma, flushed the Japanese from one island stronghold after another, dealt serious blows to the enemy's navy and sent bombers winging with increasing frequency over the heart of Nippon.

War was far from Mr. Roosevelt's thoughts on that March 4, 1933, when he declared in his first inaugural address that the only thing America need fear was "fear itself."

'New Deal' Is Born

Of aristocratic lineage, a scion of wealth, he came to power in the midst of a strangling depression, proclaiming that there must be a "new deal" for the "forgotten man."

Thus his administration got its name. And the New Deal label stuck even in later years when the President wanted to substitute the slogan: "Win the war."

When Mr. Roosevelt went into the Presidency at the age of 51, the United States had an estimated 12,000,000 persons unemployed, prices were depressed to new low levels, foreign trade shrunken and the national banking system in an extremely nervous condition as the result of widespread bank failures.

One of his first acts was to proclaim a national banking holiday that closed every financial depository in the country for 10 days while readjustments were made. He summoned Congress into special session to implement by law a national recovery program that shattered precedents. One hundred days later virtually his every request had been granted and he held powers never before entrusted to a President in peacetime.

Controversial Steps

Many of the steps he took were disputed at the time, and later, on economic, social, moral and constitutional grounds. Some were successfully contested in the courts, but others stood the test of time.

The National Industrial Recovery Administration (NRA) was set up by Congress in response to the President's request for "machinery to obtain wider reemployment, shorten the working week, pay decent wages for the shorter week and prevent unfair competition and over-production."

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration (AAA) was designed to help farmers through crop control measures. Laws were passed to insure bank deposits and to provide government aid for homeowners facing mortgage foreclosures.

The Constitution was amended to repeal national prohibition. Social security benefits were provided by legislation. A wage-hour law was enacted for labor. A "good neighbor" policy was established for the western hemisphere.

Congress Stiffens

"Alphabet agencies" were created in profusion. Such letter combinations as NRA, RFC, AAA, CCC, TVA, WPA, PWA, HOLC, FHA and many others became familiar household terms.

The New Deal also represented bigger government budgets, larger deficits, heavier taxes and abandonment of the gold standard. In the beginning there was a "brain trust" whose college professor members were credited with formulating many of the Roosevelt policies.

There was swift acceptance by Congress of early reforms, then a gradual stiffening against White House recommendations and an abortive "purge" in which the Chief Executive tried in 1938 to get the political scalps of legislators he considered too conservative. He failed in all but one instance.

A startling, unsuccessful Presidential attempt was made to reorganize the United States Supreme Court so as to pump "new blood" into a tribunal which had ruled unconditional some of Mr. Roosevelt's pet measures including the NRA and AAA.

Hits 'Economic Despotism'

This attempt split the party wide open. Opponents of the plan said it was an effort to "pack" the tribunal to make it see the Chief Executive's way.

It was to hoist aloft the New Deal banner for a second term that the President was unanimously renominated by the Democrats in 1936 and overwhelmingly defeated Republican nominee Alf M. Landon, then governor of Kansas, in the election.

In a speech accepting the second term nomination, Mr. Roosevelt said: "America will not forget these recent years. We feared fear. Today we have conquered fear. But I cannot, with candor, tell you that all is well with the world." He raised his voice against "economic despotism" which he likened to the "tyranny of political autocracy" that precipitated the American Revolution.

Accused of 'Warmongering'

"Out of this modern civilization," he continued, "economic royalists carved new dynasties. They created a new despotism and wrapped it in the robes of legal sanction. The collapse of 1929 showed up the despotism for what it really was. The election of 1932 was the people's mandate to end it. Under that mandate it is being ended."

The third and fourth term bids brought from the opposition such cries as "indispensable man," "one-man government," and "dictatorship." But such terms were not new to Mr. Roosevelt.

He had heard mutterings and then loud roars of "dictatorship" when he proposed reorganizing the Supreme Court and the executive branch of the government.

And he had heard charges of "warmongering" long before his second term was up. His utterances and actions in the field of international affairs evoked protests that he was compromising the nation.

Avts Against Aggressors

Unquestionably Mr. Roosevelt had caught a glimpse of war on the horizon. As early as 1937, in a Chicago speech, he demanded the "quarantine" of "aggressor nations."

He repeatedly advised America to prepare for any emergency. He urged repeal of a "neutrality" law that banned shipment of arms to warring nations. He said opponents of this step were "gambling" that there would be no second world war.

In January, 1939, the President called for "measures short of war" to defeat aggressors. He declared in his third-term campaign the next year that America's objective was to fend off aggressors from the western hemisphere. To fathers and mothers he gave a solemn, repeated assurance—which was hurled back at him later—that "your boys are not going to be sent into foreign wars."

Europe went to war in September, 1939, and Mr. Roosevelt watched the Axis run roughshod over country after country. The President took realistic steps.

'Arsenal of Democracy'

He and his Congressional supporters remodeled the Neutrality Act to allow "cash-and-carry" purchase of arms by belligerents—a step favoring the Allies, since Germany couldn't get through the British blockade.

After the Nazis swarmed through Holland and Belgium in 1940, Mr. Roosevelt set up a billion dollar emergency arms program and a National Defense Advisory Commission which evolved later into the War Production Board.

He laid down the principle that the preservation of Britain and the British navy were necessary to American safety, and in September, 1940, traded 50 old destroyers to Britain for naval and air base sites in the Western Atlantic. The next month, selective service became law. A new army was drafted.

Naval and air programs were accelerated, industry put on a wartime basis, and America became the "arsenal of democracy."

Japan's Treachery

In March, 1941, the dollar sign was wiped from munitions for the Allies in a multi-billion lend-lease program. And, on May 27, 1941, a few months after his third term began, the Chief Executive declared an "unlimited national emergency."

The United States had watched uneasily the victorious sweep of Japanese arms through the Southwest Pacific and had attempted to check it by persuasion.

But suddenly Japan, borrowing a technique of surprise and treachery from her Axis partners, struck Pearl Harbor with planes and submarines on that fateful Sunday, Dec. 7, 1941—at the very moment when her emissaries in Washington deceitfully talked peace with Secretary of State Cordell Hull. The attack left many United States warships sunk or seriously damaged and caused more than 3,000 casualties.

It was a day, Mr. Roosevelt declared, "which will live in infamy."

The 'Survival War'

President Roosevelt called World War II the "survival war."

In his war message the day after the Pearl Harbor attack, he said Japan has struck a "dastardly" blow while still at peace with this Nation, and added, "No matter how long it may take us to overcome this premeditated invasion, the American people in their righteous might will win through to absolute victory."

Germany and Italy declared war on the United States the morning of Dec. 11, and Congress, at the President's request, adopted a war resolution the same day after the Chief Executive had said in a message:

"The forces endeavoring to enslave the entire world now are moving toward this hemisphere. Never before has there been a greater challenge to life, liberty and civilization.

"Delay invites great danger. Rapid and united effort by all of the peoples of the world who are determined to remain free will insure a world victory of the forces of justice and of righteousness over the forces of savagery and of barbarism."

Jabs At Mussolini

For some time before the United States entered the war there had been trouble with Germany over attacks on American ships helping to move supplies to Great Britain. The President had ordered the Navy to shoot at Axis submarines on sight in what he called American "defense" waters.

Mr. Roosevelt was outspoken in his friendship for Britain, and some of his critics declared that his utterances and actions had compromised the Nation. Organizations sprang up in opposition to his attitude. Some men of his own political faith in Congress differed with his course.

Prior to Germany's attack on Poland that precipitated World War II, the President urged conference settlement of international problems. But his personal intervention with Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini brought only cold rebukes from the German and Italian dictators.

The day after Italy entered the war against collapsing France, Mr. Rocsevelt said in a commencement address at the University of Virginia: "On this tenth day of June, 1940, the hand that held the dagger has struck it into the back of its neighbor."

'Four Freedoms' Proclaimed

The statement was one of the most militant and emotion-arousing he had ever made. America's war policies were developing swiftly in the President's mind. In that same address he said: "I call for effort, courage, sacrifice and devotion. Granting the love of freedom, all these are possible."

In the midst of all his preparations for emergency, the President had proclaimed to Congress his famed "four freedoms"—freedom of speech and religion, freedom from want and fear—as fundamental to perpetual harmony among nations.

In part, those concepts formed the basis for that doctrine of peace aims, the "Atlantic Charter," drafted by President and Prime Minister Churchill in their first meeting.

In August, 1941, Mr. Roosevelt set off on a "fishing" cruise and Mr. Churchill disappeared from London. They met aboard warships anchored off the Newfoundland coast. One meeting was held aboard the British battleship Prince of Wales, later sunk by Japanese bombers in the Southwest Pacific. Other meetings were aboard the American cruiser Augusta. From their deliberations came the charter, later subscribed to by all the United Nations, which spoke out for:

No territorial aggrandizement; no territorial changes opposed by peoples concerned; the right of all peoples to choose their own form of government; equal access by all states to world trade and raw materials; full international collaboration, economically and socially; a peace assuring all nations safety within their borders and freedom from want and fear; freedom of the seas; disarmament of aggressors and a permanent system of "general security."

From the original meeting in the Atlantic there developed, between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, a profound affection and confidence, nurtured by mutual respect and unity of purpose and by a series of additional conferences at fairly regular intervals.

From the bond between them, which was at the same time personal and official, there developed the closest military collaboration ever achieved by two great nations.

A fortnight after the United States entered the conflict, Mr. Churchill put in a dramatic, unheralded appearance in Washington.

Outlines Huge Program

He found the American Chief Executive still turning out in bewildering profusion the proclamations and executive orders which shifted the Nation from peace to war.

Thirty days after Pearl Harbor, Congress gasped when the Chief Executive proposed a two-year production of 185,000 planes, 120,000 tanks, 55,000 anti-aircraft guns and 18,000,000 tons of shipping.

The "militarists of Berlin and Tokyo started this war", he said, but "the massed, angered forces of common humanity will finish it."

Production goals, mammoth at the time, subsequently were expanded again and again, war costs mounted into the hundreds of billions, and the Allies achieved a crushing superiority of arms over their foes.

But when Mr. Churchill arrived in Washington on that bleak December day in 1941, the prospects of the Allies were grim indeed.

Allies' Fortunes Improve

For 24 days, he and the President, with the assistance of their ranking military advisers, toiled to chart the initial course for their two countries in overcoming a powerful foe.

They roughed out plans for an invasion of North Africa in November, 1942. They set up joint Anglo-American strategic and supply boards. And, on New Year's day, 1942, they promulgated a "Declaration by the United Nations", in which each signatory subscribed to the principles of the Atlantic Charter, pledged the use of its full resources against the Axis and promised to shun a separate peace.

Against a backdrop of Allied reverses on fronts around the world, a second Roosevelt-Churchill meeting in Washington took place in June, 1942. Russia, reeling from a midyear Nazi offensive, had been clamoring for a second front to siphon Nazi soldiers from Soviet battlegrounds.

The President and Prime Minister completed plans and logistics for the invasion of North Africa, which Russia insisted was no second front at all. But it marked a definite turning point in Anglo-American fortunes of war, for the Allies swept the enemy off the African continent and from Sicily, and finally, in Italy, carried warfare to Europe itself.

'Unconditional Surrender'

Mr. Churchill gave the American President credit for being "the author of this mighty undertaking" in North Africa, an undertaking which first brought General Eisenhower to the fore front of the Allied military command.

By January, 1943, the enemy had been cleaned out of Africa sufficiently for Mr. Roosevelt to fly to Casablanca, Morocco, for another get-together with Mr. Churchill, this time in a glistening villa.

It was an epochal trip. For the first time during a war an American Chief Executive had gone to foreign soil. Not since the days of Abraham Lincoln, who did not have to leave the District of Columbia, had a President been in a combat zone.

For ten days, the President and Prime Minister had their heads together. Then they called in war correspondents to tell them they had decreed "unconditional surrender" for the Axis and had reached "complete agreement" on war plans for 1943.

Situation Is Bright

Premier Stalin had been invited to the conference but coudn't make it. He was too busy with fighting. But he and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were advised of the decision calling for the mopping up of resistance in Tunisia and the conquest of Sicily.

Mr. Roosevelt flew to Casablanca and back by way of the African and South American bulges. He spent the sixty-first birthday above the Caribbean.

The outlook for the United Nations was bright, because of Anglo-American success in North Africa and a momentous Russian victory at Stalingrad, when May of 1943 found Mr. Churchill back in Washington.

In the Pacific, Allied arms had brought the Japanese juggernaut to a halt.

Plans for hurtling it into reverse bulked on the agenda of the Roosevelt-Churchill talks that spring. So the Allied leaders brought to their conferences the top military, naval and air commanders of British and American forces in India and China.

Pacific War Mapped

An official statement said, however, that "complete agreement" had been attained "on future operations in all theaters of the war."

The Pacific came in for a large share of attention at still another war conference in Quebec three months later. Lord Louis Mountbatten, who had led Britain's famed Commandos, was appointed Allied supreme commander in Southwest Asia.

Within the walls of a moated citadel, high above the St. Lawrence, the President and Prime Minister arrived at decisions providing for "the forward action of the fleets, armies and air forces" of their countries, drafted precise plans for "other landings on the continent of Europe and elsewhere," and talked of the post-war world.

After the Quebec meeting, Mr. Roosevelt became the first American Chief Executive to visit Canada's capital, Ottawa, where he spoke to an informal assembly of the dominion parliament. Mr. Ccurchill took a short vacation in Canada, then went to Washington.

Another Quebec Meeting

Together in the White House, the President and Prime Minister joyfully received word of Italy's capitulation to the Allies in September, 1943.

The way had been prepared for an acceleration of attacks on Germany, through relentless bombings and amphibious assaults, and for the Cairo and Teheran conferences.

Another Quebec meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill was held in September of 1944. Their war maps proclaimed that Germany's fate was settled and they were able to perfect plans for shifting the tremendous weight of British and American arms from Europe to the Pacific and for new crushing blows at Japan. They pledged "destruction of the barbarians in the Pacific" just as soon as Europe could be pulled from under "the corroding heel of the Hun'.'

In between war conferences, the Chief Executive found time to deal with acute economic problems, which plagued his administration as they had done in its non-war years, and to take a couple of lengthy swings around the country to see how war plants, military establishments and the people were getting along under wartime difficulties.

Finds America In Stride

The first trip, in September, 1942, took him across the northern tier of states, down the west coast, across the south and back to Washington, where he voiced a conviction the rest of the counrty was far ahead of the capital in war spirit.

The next April Mr. Roosevelt was off again, traveling through the southeastern states, as far west as Colorado and back through the midwest.

The highlight of the journey was a dip into Mexico, another precedent-shattering journey beyond the borders on which he met President Manuel Avila Camacho of Mexico at Monterrey, was acclaimed with bubbling enthusiasm by a festive city, and discussed Mexican-American problems.

He said the tour convinced him that the armed forces and the home front were in their stride.

Battle Against Inflation

The economic issues which harassed the country in wartime centered around inflation and its many facets. On Sept. 7, 1942, President Roosevelt asked Congress to authorize rigid control of prices, salaries, wages and profits. A "stabilization act" resulted. And from the Supreme court the President drafted James F. Byrnes to be economic stabilization director.

Rationing, started with gasoline and sugar, was expanded; price ceilings were clamped on more and more commodities. But the threat of inflation remained.

The popular-title of "Assistant President" had been hung on Mr. Byrnes, and it became even more appropriate when Mr. Roosevelt established a new Office of War Mobilization, put Mr. Byrnes in charge, and brought in Judge Fred M. Vinson of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia as stabilization director.

The people saw novel restrictions placed on them. They couldn't take new jobs at higher pay unless the change would help the war effort. They couldn't get salary raises unless the Treasury or War Labor board approved.

U. S. Seizes Coal Mines

Congress had refused once to impose a $25,000 limit on salaries, after payment of taxes, but Mr. Roosevelt subsequently set it by executive order. The legislators overruled him later.

APR 15 1945

A so-called "Little Steel Formula" was drawn up under which a 15 per cent increase in wages over the levels of Jan. 1, 1941, could be granted to compensate for higher living costs.

Then, on April 8, 1943, The President virtually froze all prices and drastically tightened the barriers against wage boosts in a "hold-the-line" order against inflation. Pressure soon developed against the order.

Four times during 1943 there were strikes in the coal industry. To keep up production, Mr. Roosevelt ordered government seizure of the pits and let Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes run them. Eventually the miners won some of their demands for more money.

Rail, Steel Strikes Averted

Railway workers who had been demanding more pay called a strike for Dec. 30, 1943 and the President ordered the War department to take over the railway network. However, all 20 railway brotherhoods agreed to let him arbitrate their wage cases.

Simultaneously with the possibility of a paralysis in rail transportation there had developed a threat of a shutdown of the nation's steel furnaces. Steel workers' contracts were expiring and thousands stopped work.

Greater trouble was averted, however, when the employes heeded appeals of the Chief Executive and their union leaders to stay on the job while new contracts were negotiated with the steel companies.

Possessed of a charming personality and a ready ability to put people at ease, Mr. Roosevelt also had an entrancing radio voice. He established "fireside chats" as a national institution for discussing problems of the hour with the American people.

Enjoys Jokes On Himself

Even opponents conceded him to be a master politician. He was idolized by millions and hated by others — few people were lukewarm about Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Loyal to his friends, Mr. Roosevelt rarely displaced associates in government who had passed the point of their usefulness. He was a man of strong likes and dislikes. A streak of stubbornness ran through his makeup.

But to most people he was warm and affable, a gifted conversationalist who chatted with callers in his office long after they were due to leave. He was an able story teller and enjoyed a good joke, even on himself.

His drinking was in moderation and of the social type, but he chain-smoked cigarettes in tremendous quantities in a yellowed, ivory cigarette holder. Occasionally some of his cronies came to the White House for a session of poker—the more "wild" cards the better.

Two Attempts On Life

Occasionally, too, he saw movies at the White House, or worked with a valuable stamp collection. Even before he lost the use of his legs, swimming, fishing and sailing had been favorite pastimes, and they continued to be throughout the years.

Mr. Roosevelt, the son of James and Sara Delano Roosevelt, was in the national eye long before entering the White House. He had been a New York state senator, Assistant Secretary of the Navy in World War I days; unsuccessful candidate for Vice President when James M. Cox was defeated for the Presidency and governor of New York for two terms.

It was during Mr. Roosevelt's first term as governor that the first of two attempts was made on his life. In April, 1929, a bomb addressed to him was found in the Albany postoffice. A porter ac-

President Spent Most Of Life In Holding Political Offices

[By the Associated Press]

Born to social distinction and reared in an atmosphere of culture, Franklin D. Roosevelt reached the high position in national politics through more than two decades of office-holding and intimate association with the affairs of the Democratic party.

After his reelection to the Governorship of New York in 1930 by the unprecedented plurality of 725,000 votes, he emerged as choice of a large section of the Democratic party for the Presidential nomination.

In 1920, before infantile paralysis crippled him, he was Democracy's selection for the Vice-Presidential nomination. With James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio, as the Presidential choice, he went down to defeat in the Republican landslide which swept Warren G. Harding into the White House.

Nominated Smith

Returning to the national arena after bitter years of struggle to overcome the handicap of physical incapacity, Roosevelt in 1924 and again in 1928 nominated Alfred E. Smith for the Presidency. Smith induced Roosevelt to run for Governor of New York in 1928 and, although the Presidential election of that year brought an overwhelming defeat to Smith, it seated Roosevelt in the Governor's chair at Albany.

Four years later both Smith and Roosevelt were rivals for the Presidential nomination and the political partnership of "Al and Frank" was dissolved.

Roosevelt came from conservative Dutch patroon and Franco-Flemish stock, but evidenced liberal leanings before he left college. The conservative element of the Democratic party turned thumbs down on his Presidential aspirations. Early in 1932 a "stop-Roosevelt" movement developed which attracted party groups, widely separated by geography and political philosophy, but all agreed that Roosevelt was "too radical."

The distant cousin of the illustrious "T. R." took many pages from the political catechism of the late President, but on social problems the New York Governor added new chapters. He championed State development of water power and control of the sources; he advocated old-age pensions and unemployment insurance and proposed the first widespread policy of State relief for New Yorkers made jobless by the depression of 1929.

Had Three Homes

State owned and developed water-power sites had been a war cry for fifteen years when Roosevelt became New York's Governor. Smith had used it effectively in four campaigns. Roosevelt succeeded in jockeying a Republican Legislature into passing an act creating an authority to develop and retain ownership an electric plant on the St. Lawrence river. The Legislature also accepted his old-age pension and unemployment-relief plans.

Roosevelt's farm-relief program, reforestation of marginal lands, crop diversification and utilization of lands for the most adaptable crops, tax relief by transfer of general functions to the State government and simplification of local government cemented a following in Republican up-State New York, which is rural.

Deprived of the power to walk unaided, Roosevelt developed the faculty of doing much work without moving around. Legislative spokesmen, national leaders, visitors of many and diverse bents came to his desk. It was the exact opposite of the routine of the Roosevelt as his associates had known him at Washington in World War days. Then he was always dashing about the Capital, across the country, to Europe—never still.

Mr. Roosevelt had three homes. One was the old family estate at Hyde Park, on the Hudson river, eighty miles north of New York. The Governor's forbears had lived there since before the French and Indian War, when that section was cidentally kicked the package causing it to set off a sputtering fuse. It was dropped in a pail of water and failed to go off.

Stricken While Swimming

In February, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt as President-elect, visited Miami, Fla. Giuseppe Zangara fired five shots at him, but they killed Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago instead when a bystander deflected the assassin's aim. Zangara was electrocuted for the Cermak slaying. His excuse for the shooting was "hate for all rulers."

Of distinguished Dutch ancestry Mr. Roosevelt was born to a life of comfortable ease. Educated at Groton and Harvard he studied for the law and practiced his profession before engaging upon a public career. In 1921 he was stricken with infantile paralysis while swimming at the family summer home at Campobello, N. B.

On the day he was stricken he had plunged into the cold surf with his usual zest. A few hours later he had to be carried away on a stretcher. For months his life hung in the balance.

The story was told that as he lay grimly concentrating every force of will on the task of forcing reluctant nerve centers to respond, his exertion plainly visible, he gasped to those about him:

"You folks don't know what fun it is just to move one little toe."

Gamely, he fought the disease and after weary, discouraging months of treatment, was able to walk with steel braces, crutches and finally with the aid of canes.

When he became President, he appeared at public functions supported by a military aide or leaning upon the arm of a son. Ramps were used to assist him onto railroad trains and in parts of the executive mansion. He permitted his birthday to be used for celebrations through the country to raise funds for sufferers from the disease.

Because he found the waters at Warm Springs, Ga., helpful, Mr. Roosevelt established the Warm Springs Foundation so that others suffering from the same affliction, but without the money to go there, might enjoy the benefits.

Likes Being President

Once he told a close friend he thought his crippled condition was an asset. He explained that while others might be tempted to get up now and then to look out of the window or stretch their legs, he was riveted to his desk and thus was able to concentrate on his work.

He liked his job and seemed able to take his tasks in stride.

"Wouldn't you be President if you could?" he once asked a friend. "Wouldn't anybody?"

During his career great friendships were broken, among them with two of his earliest and most powerful supporters, John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, and former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York. The "new deal" and "forgotten man" political philosophy brought the word "demagoguery" from Smith.

James A. Farley, almost a lifelong friend and political bulwark, cooled toward Mr. Roosevelt when he ran for a third and fourth term, but each time supported the Roosevelt ticket.

On the other hand, some old friends such as Harry L. Hopkins faithfully served through the years as executive aides in any job assigned.

Criticized and Chided

Throughout everything, the crippled, thirty-second President of the United States smiled, played when he could and continued to captivate many of his personal audiences and the millions who listened to his fire-side chats.

But he made many enemies, too, and they were quick with replies and counterthrusts. He was criticized and chided. A frequent charge was that he was headed toward dictatorship. When he said he would accept "reluctantly, but as a good soldier" the fourth term nomination, the Republicans retorted:

"Mr. Roosevelt is the first of 32 Presidents of the United States to claim that the title of Commander in Chief makes him a soldier and to use that title as a pretext to perpetuate himself in office."

The New Deal program cost enormous sums in peacetime, especially for public relief and public works. Millions of people were put on the government payroll, and vast expenditures were authorized for Bridges, roads, dams, and public buildings in the largest "pump priming" experiment in history.

Public Utility Program

The result was a series of badly unbalanced budgets, and an increase of the public debt to unprecedented figures.

All of this was attacked by the opposition as wasteful, ruinous to the financial stability of the government, and damaging to national morale. It was defended unflinchingly by the President as necessary to permit the nation to keep its head above the inundation of the world depression.

Mr. Roosevelt's campaign against great public utilities also generated bitter controversy and brought from his opponents a cry of "state socialism."

TVA—the Tennessee Valley Authority project of flood control, navigation and electric power distribution—was the striking example of the President's rate "yard-stick" for public services.

In eight years alone Mr. Roosevelt pushed through Congress expenditures of $850,000,000 for vast construction such as Bonneville and Grand Coulee power and irrigation plants on the Columbia river. By the end of his second term these public enterprises were supplying more than one-twentieth of the country's electricity.

Some Innovations Applauded

He also brought about strict regulation of utility holding companies and instituted a huge rural electrification program.

While President Roosevelt's many innovations drew terrific attack, there were other changes which appeared to win almost unanimous approval, such as establishment of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and enactment of the Social Security Act.

The CCC was established to supply work of constructive nature, plus training in various skills for unemployed young men and war veterans. The Social Security Act was aimed at providing the security of social insurance for the aged and the jobless.

In his first two terms, Mr Roosevelt was concerned primarily with domestic problems. The first term opened in the depths of a national economic collapse and the famous 100 days of banking and other emergency legislation followed.

The Blue Eagle era of the NRA and the first AAA emerged from this, and the conflict between the New Deal and conservative tradition was on in force. Mr. Roosevelt swiftly became known as the country's foremost "practical liberal" and leader of a social revolution.

Clash With Supreme Court

The mainspring of the NRA was the code structure, under which a mammoth portion of American business was conducted for nearly two years. Employers accepting a blanket code of work hours and wages were entitled to display the blue eagle emblem as an evidence of their cooperation. In the spring of 1935 the Supreme Court ruled out the codes of fair competition provided by the NRA on the ground Congress had handed over too much authority to the President, who had been given broad regulatory powers over business engaged in interstate commerce.

At a press conference, Mr. Roosevelt engaged in a long discussion of the NRA decision, which was based on interpretation of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution. He said that when that clause was written the country was in the "horse and buggy age," a phrase that spread like wildfire and set off explosive debate.

The "whole tendency" in later years, the President said, had been "to view the interstate clause of the Constitution in the light of present day civilization."

He stirred up further controversy a few weeks later when he wrote the chairman of a house ways and means subcommittee, then considering the Guffey act to regulate prices, wages and hours in the soft coal industry: "I hope your committee will not permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation."

His Party Splits

Critics said he was attempting to persuade Congress to pass unconstitutional legislation, but supporters insisted he was merely trying to expedite action on the measure.

After the high court had held NRA, AAA and some other major enactments unconstitutional, the President, lauding the teamwork between Congress and White House, set out expressly to inject "new blood" into the august nine-member tribunal.

But this time Congress balked and another famous period of days came into being—the 168 days of the Court Reorganization fight.

The President's bill failed of passage but a system for retirements from the high court was enacted, and by the end of the second term vacancies occasioned by retirement and death enabled him to name five men of his own choosing. Two additional vacancies occurred early in the third term. The President said the court fight had been won.

It was not an unleavened victory. The democratic party split on the issue, and the division continued into the House and Senate elections of 1938 and the third term controversy of 1940.

Third Term 'Draft'

Despite the conflicts and criticisms, the President, with great personal charm and an unusual ability to fathom the desires of the electorate, turned up unprecedented majorities at the polls.

But it remained for the war-born third term to test to the limit his qualities of leadership both as President and as an international champion of embattled democracy.

While Europe blazed throughout the early months of 1940, the great political question here was "What about the third term?" The administration had produced no leader who appeared qualified in all respects to inherit the Roosevelt prestige and carry on the program. If the democrats wanted to win, the argument ran, they would have to "draft Roosevelt."

A third-term nomination appeared even more certain after the Republicans, in convention at Philadelphia, chose dynamic Wendell L. Willkie, utility executive and old-time foe of the New Deal's Tennessee Valley Authority, to head their 1940 ticket. Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon was his running mate.

Does Little Campaigning

It was no surprise to anybody, therefore, when the Democratic National Convention, meeting in Chicago, renominated Mr. Roosevelt. More surprising because hardly expected at all was Mr. Roosevelt's choice of his Secretary of Agriculture, Henry Agard Wallace of Iowa, to be Vice-Presidential nominee.

Mr. Wallace was sidetracked in 1944, however, when the Democratic National Convention selected Senator Harry Truman of Missouri for second place on the fourth-term ticket.

Engrossed in questions of defense and foreign policy, Mr. Roosevelt refrained from stumping for a third term until the week before election.

Mr. Willkie set campaign travel records and he gained a greater popular ballot total than any Republican nominee ever had registered. But Mr. Roosevelt, the "old campaigner" as he dubbed himself, was approximately 4,000,000 ballots ahead, and he received 449 electoral votes to 82 for Mr. Willkie.

Five Children

Despite the huge popular majority he rolled up in 1940, Mr. Roosevelt had gained greater electoral victories in both 1932 and 1936. He won the first election over President Herbert Hoover by 472 votes to 59, and four years later received 523 electoral votes to 8 (those of Maine and Vermont) for Mr. Landon.

Mr. Roosevelt's mother, Sara Delano Roosevelt, gray-haired and aristocratic, was present at three Presidential inaugurations. She died on September 7, 1941.

His wife, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, the favorite niece of President Theodore Roosevelt, was a distant cousin. The Republican President gave the bride away when the young couple were married March 17, 1905.

Five children were born to the union, one daughter, Anna Eleanor, who became Mrs. Curtis Dall and later Mrs. John Boettiger, and four sons, James, Elliott, Franklin, Jr., and John.

All the boys served as officers in the armed services during World War II, James in the Marines, Elliott in the Army, and Franklin and John in the Navy.

Had Georgia Farm

Another Roosevelt home was on East Sixty-fifth street in New York. It had been built by Mrs. Roosevelt's mother. The third residence was at Warm Springs, Ga., where Mr. Roosevelt instigated a health foundation for the treatment of infantile paralysis victims. In addition to a colonially designed cottage facing Pine Mountain, Roosevelt owned a farm back in the Georgia hills.

The Roosevelts retained ownership of a summer home at Campobello, New Brunswick, but they never returned to its rugged confines after the Governor was stricken with paralysis while swimming in the cold ocean water near there.

Governor Roosevelt's fighting spirit continually asserted itself, but on most occasions in behalf of others rather than for himself. It first came to the surface while he was a student at Harvard and editor of the Crimson. Almost singlehanded he began a fight to have fire escapes placed on dormitories for the safety of the residents of those buildings. He kept up the fight until the fire escapes were erected.

Leader For Wilson

Entering politics in Dutchess county, his home, he was elected to the New York State Senate in 1910 when he was only 28 years of age. It had been a like number of years since a Democrat had carried the county. In the Senate he came to grips for the first time with Tammany Hall and won. The issue was the election of a United States Senator, for which Tammany picked William F. Sheehan, of Buffalo. Roosevelt was for

Periods Of Mourning Ordered By Many Nations

Washington, April 12 (AP)—News of President Roosevelt's death, flashed to friend and foe, troops in the field and sailors at sea, reached into every corner of the world tonight, and expressions of sympathy, along with bitter enemy comment, poured into a bereaved American nation.

Cable dispatches and radio broadcasts carried the news to the capitals of the world and to Allied soldiers fighting toward a victorious end of the world's greatest war. The peoples of Europe were informed in a special broadcast by the American Broadcasting Station In Europe, which declared that "the world has lost its greatest champion for peace."

Expressions of grief came from London, Paris, Rome, South America, Cuba, Canada and elsewhere, while the German radio, in a comment heard by FCC monitors, declared that the President "will go down in history as the man upon whose instigation the present war turned into the second World War."

Announcement By Japanese

The Tokyo radio, in a broadcast monitored in San Francisco, made an announcement of the death and the announcer said:

"We now introduce a few minutes of special music to honor the passing of this great man."

The announcement was made in the middle of a program of prisoner of war messages broadcast regularly each night.

The President's close friend, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, was informed of the death just before he retired and was expected to express Britain's sympathy in the House of Commons tomorrow morning.

King George VI, it was announced, received the news "with profound regret."

"Loss To All Peace Lovers"

There was no immediate comment from Moscow, but in Washington Soviet Ambassador Andre Gromyko said in a broadcast that Roosevelt's death was a great loss to "all the peace-loving people of the world."

The army radio carried the news to General Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander, who was somewhere in the forward area of the Western front where he could not be reached for a statement.

Canadians received news as a great personal loss.

The House of Commons, stilled by the word, paid moving tribute by standing for a minute of silence, and then adjourned until tomorrow afternoon.

Deeply Affected

Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King, a lifelong friend of the President whose close relationship had done much to bind the United States and Canada during the war years, was deeply affected by the news.

The Prime Minister rose in Parliament and, in moving adjournment, paid tribute to the President as "so close a neighbor, so great and true a friend of the Canadian people, that the word when received was as if one of our very own had passed away."

At Dublin Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Ireland was informed of the death and was expected to issue a statment in Parliament today.

"For All Human Kind"

In Paris, United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey declared that "the news has shocked me more than I can say. It is an appalling loss not only for the country and for me personally, but for all human kind."

Elmer Davis, director of the OWI now in Paris, issued a statement to the French press which declared that the President's death "is made doubly tragic by the fact that he did not quite live to see the victory which he had done perhaps more than any other man to achieve. But his death will mean no change in America's determination to prosecute the war to a complete victory on all fronts and to endeavor to build a working and durable peace."

Edward J. Flynn, former Democartic National Committee chairman who was in Europe on a personal mission for the President, said in London, "I am inexpressibly shocked. I cannot attempt to describe my emotions."

Pope Sends Condolences

In Rome, Pope Pius XII received the news of the President's death with visible sorrow and immediately telegraphed condolences to the President's family and the United States Government.

Italian Premier Ivanoe Bonomi expressed "profound sorrow" on behalf of the Italian people and added that the nation considered the President "a great liberator and one of her sincerest friends." Crown Prince Umberto said, "the entire world has lost a defender of democracy and liberty."

Nations to the south of the United States, where the President had worked for a policy of good neighborliness, received the news of his death with great sorrow. Guatemala declared three days of mourning and Foreign Minister Guillermo Toriello delivered a mourning address to the nation which was carried over every broadcasting station in the country.

"Mourning Period Declared"

A period of national mourning was declared in Cuba and all public amusements closed down immediately. President Ramon Grau San Martin declared in a statement that "all humanity is in mourning, and Cuba has lost a great friend."

Costa Rica also declared national mourning.

In Argentina, Pan-American day celebrations scheduled for Saturday were cancelled, and Foreign Minister C. Ameghino declared that "the Government will take all fitting measures as the result of the sorrowful event." He added: "I am truly astounded by the news."

James A. O'Gorman, who was elected.

Two years later Roosevelt's political prominence became nation-wide when at the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore in 1912 he led the fight among New York delegates for the nomination of Woodrow Wilson. Again he acted contrary to the wishes of Tammany, whose leaders did not look favorably upon the then New Jersey Governor for the Presidential nomination.

With Wilson's election Roosevelt received his reward in his appointment as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the youngest man ever to hold that post. He served in the Navy Department until 1920, when he was nominated by the Democratic National Convention for Vice-President on the ticket with James M. Cox.

The next year Mr. Roosevelt was stricken with infantile paralysis at his summer home at Campobello, New Brunswick, and for several months his life was despaired of. He devoted the next few years to a fight in his own behalf—to recover his health. Notwithstanding his physical condition, there were insistent demands for his nomination for various offices, but he declined everything until 1928, when he consented to run for Governor.

Born In 1882

Governor Roosevelt was born at Hyde Park, N. Y., January 30, 1882. He was the son of James Roosevelt, a fourth cousin of President Theodore Roosevelt, and Sarah Delano Roosevelt, member of a socially prominent family in New York. The Governor was educated at Groton School and Harvard University, being graduated from the latter in 1904. Three years later he earned his degree in law at Columbia University and began practicing in New York city. He also became vice-president in charge of the New York office of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland.

On March 17, 1905, Governor Roosevelt married Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, of New York, a member of a distant branch of his own family. They had four sons and a daughter.

Governor Roosevelt's fight against his affliction was regarded as a remarkable example of courage and confidence. Paralyzed from the waist down, it was a tragic fate for one who had been a crack tennis player, outdoors man and swimmer. After he had won his fight against death he spent much of his time at Warm Springs, Ga., the healing properties of whose waters had been recommended to him. He swam in the waters for hours at a time, gradually regained the use of his legs and later on discarded his crutches, being able to walk with the aid of canes.

Work For Smith Failed

He became so encouraged by his progress toward health that he was instrumental in the establishment of the Warm Springs Foundation in order that others suffering from the same affliction and without necessary means might go to the springs and benefit from them as he did.

The friendship between Governor Roosevelt and his predecessor, Alfred E. Smith, was perhaps one of the closest and warmest ever formed in New York politics. One was the wealthy, well-educated lawyer, the other the poor, self-educated young man from New York's East Side. Each, however, possessed attributes that appealed to the other and in many respects were not unalike.

Governor Roosevelt, if not the pioneer, was among the first to put Governor Smith forward as a Presidential possibility. He did it first at the Democratic National Convention in 1920 when he placed Governor Smith's name in nomination. In 1924, the memorable convention in old Madison Square Garden, New York, he acted as floor manager for the Governor and again made the nominating speech for him.

Although his two efforts in behalf of Governor Smith failed, Governor Roosevelt was not discouraged and during the next four years he worked actively in behalf of his friend. At the Houston convention in 1928 he had the satisfaction of witnessing the nomination of Governor Smith on the first ballot after he had, for the third time, placed the name of the New York Governor before a national convention.

Accepts Nomination

After that convention Governor Roosevelt returned to Warm Springs to prepare himself for part in the campaign on behalf of Governor Smith. Meanwhile, the Democrats of New York State were weighing every available candidate for Governor that would add strength to the national ticket in the State. Roosevelt had made known that he would not be a candidate, but when all others were eliminated he was called on the long-distance telephone and apprised of the situation. The leaders appealed to him for the strength he would add to the Smith-Robinson ticket. One of them added these words of encouragement:

"And there is every likelihood that you will be elected."

"Yes," replied Roosevelt, "that's the hell of it."

Mr. Roosevelt finally agreed to put aside personal preferences in order to help the national ticket and accepted the nomination. When he was inaugurated he expressed in his address for an administration during which good feeling would prevail between the executive department and the Republican-controlled Legislature. Things went along smoothly for a while, but when the important controversial legislation was reached the legislative session became a sort of continuation of the battles Governor Smith was obliged to wage against unsympathetic legislatures.

On Harvard Board

Because of his fights against Tammany when he was in the State Senate and at the Baltimore convention of 1912, Governor Roosevelt was regarded by many as being opposed to Tammany generally. When that was brought to his attention some years after the two events he defined his position in politics, saying:

"I am a regular organization Democrat of Dutchess county. I am not an anti-Tammany Democrat, but in those two incidents as in many others, I have taken a consistent position against the control of the State Democracy by Charles F. Murphy, believing him to be a handicap to our Democracy."

During his service as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Governor Roosevelt performed much work of an important nature, especially during the period of American participation in the first World War and immediately after the Armistice. He was in charge of the inspection of the United Naval forces in European waters between July and September, 1918, and directed the demobilization of the fleet in those waters in January and February, 1919.

Outside of politics and business, Governor Roosevelt was interested in various movements of educational, welfare and public nature. For many years he was a member of the board of overseers of Harvard University, a trustee of Vassar College, of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, Seaman's Institute and president of the Boy Scout's Foundation of New York. He served as national chairman of the committee to raise funds for the completion of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York. He held membership in the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, the Naval Historical Society, the New York Historical Society, the Holland Society of New York, as well as in numerous clubs.

In April, 1929, a bomb addressed to Governor Roosevelt at the Executive Mansion in Albany was found in the parcel-post department of the general postoffice in New York. It was accidentally discovered by a porter who kicked it aside while cleaning, causing the bomb to sputter and ignite, the fuse. The bomb was quickly dropped into a pail of water and made harmless.

No Campaign In Usual Sense

As in the third-term campaign, Mr. Roosevelt said he would not have time to campaign in the usual partisan sense, but would reserve the right to answer what he called "misrepresentations."

Dewey opened his campaign September 7 with a speech at Philadelphia. The President got going September 23, accusing the opposition of "callous" and "brazen" falsehood.

Mr. Roosevelt was elected by an electoral vote of 432 to 99. He carried 36 states and Dewey 12.

In a clatter of telephones and news wires, Mr. Roosevelt followed the election returns into the early morning of November 8, and when assured of his election to a fourth term he said:

"We have again demonstrated to the world that democracy is a living, vital force."

Cast Ballot At Hyde Park

The President was at Hyde Park,

where he cast his ballot, and later he confessed to a little lusty cussing when his voting booth lever stuck on election day. But, he insisted, he didn't take the name of the Deity in vain—Time magazine and the Glendale (Cal.) Ministerial Association notwithstanding.

Mr. Roosevelt, the election over, swung back into the complex duties of his office, while the world speculated about another meeting of the Big Three.

On November 20, Prime Minister Winston Churchill sent him a message "not to go out in the rain." Mr. Churchill knew the President's health was poor, and he had seen a photograph of the President motoring in the rain.

Short Vacation After Election

Late in November, Mr. Roosevelt decided upon a short vacation to recover his strength after the strenuous political campaign. He went to Warm Springs, returning to Washington December 19 and began tussling immediately with world problems.

When the Seventy-ninth Congress convened January 3, Mr. Roosevelt did not appear in person before a joint session, but sent his annual message to be read. After the inauguration an event the whole world expected occurred. The President arrived at Yalta, in the Russian Crimea, on February 4 for a conference with Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Joseph Stalin, to draw the framework of a hope for enduring world peace.

The last appearance of the President was on March 1, when he addressed a joint session of Congress, outlining the Crimea charter for peace.

At Correspondents' Dinner

Thereafter newspaper men saw him several times at news conferences. He was a guest of the press March 22 at the White House correspondents' dinner. The President seemed to enjoy the dinner.

A few days ago the President, in need of rest, left on his last journey—to his beloved Southern home at Warm Springs, Ga.

Roosevelt Retreat Revealed

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., April 12 (AP).—The bedroom in which President Roosevelt died here today was perhaps the most simple of all his retreats. He called this his "second home." MRS. ROOSEVELT FLIES TO GEORGIA

Leaves in Army Plane after Receiving Word of Death at White House

APR 13 1945

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP) Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, left the White House tonight for the sorrowful flight to her dead husband's side.

The army supplied an airplane for the journey to Warm Springs but said that for reasons of personal safety the take-off time would not be announced.

"I am more sorry for the people of the country and the world than I am for us," the President's widow said of his death.

Going with Mrs. Roosevelt on the trip were Admiral Ross McIntyre, the late President's personal physician, and his press secretary Stephen Early.

She had received Vice President Truman in her second floor sitting room in the White House. There she made the remark about being grieved first for the people.

She told Mr. Truman: "the President has passed away."

Truman asked: "what can I do."

"Tell us what we can do," Mrs. Roosevelt replied. "Is there anyway we can help you?"

This exchange was made public by Early.

As she came out of the White House door she kissed her daughter Anna, Mrs. John Boettiger, goodbye.

Mrs. Boettiger remained at the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt received the news of her husband's death by telephone. She was attending an afternoon benefit for a Washington charity which was being held at the Sulgrave club.

She went to the phone, spoke a few words, put down the receiver, and walked out to her car without a word to anyone.

day).—The White House announced early today that a funeral service for Franklin D. Roosevelt will be held at 4 p. m., Eastern War Time, Saturday in the East Room of the White House.

Those who will attend will be high officials of the government, members of the Supreme Court, chiefs of foreign diplomatic missions, representatives of the Senate and House, and friends of the family.

The time of burial Sunday, at Hyde Park, N. Y., has not been settled finally.

The body of the late President will not lie in state, and the White House requested that the public not send flowers.

Since the East Room will seat only approximately 200 persons, the number attending the services here must be restricted. An overflow will be permitted, probably, into an adjoining room.

The East Room Service

WASHINGTON, April 13 (Friday (AP).—The White House announced early today that the Roosevelt funeral service at 4 p. m., Eastern War Time, Saturday in the East Room of the White House will be attended by high officials of the government, members of the Supreme Court, chiefs of foreign diplomatic missions, representatives of the Senate and House, and friends of the family.

The body of the late President will not lie in state, and the White House requested that the public not send flowers.

Since the East Room will seat only approximately 200 persons, the number attending the services here must be restricted. An overflow will be permitted, probably, into an adjoining room.

The service is expected to follow the usual Episcopal rites, which would mean an absence of eulogies.

In charge of the East Room services will be Bishop Angus Dun, presiding Episcopal Bishop of Washington; the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, which Mr. Roosevelt customarily attended when in Washington, and the Rev. John G. Magee, of St. John's Episcopal Church, the Church of the Presidents directly across Lafayette Park from the White House.

The burial service at Hyde Park will be in charge of the Rev. George W. Anthony, rector of St. James Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Roosevelt was senior warden.

The White House expressed a desire that crowds not meet the funeral train on its arrival here on Saturday.

Nazis Cautious In Comment on News of Death

Refrain From Drawing Any Conclusion About Effect on Foreign Policy of U. S.

APR 13 1945

LONDON, April 13 (Friday) (AP).—The German D. N. B. News Agency said this morning that the news of President Roosevelt's death "has of course made a great impression in Berlin," but added that Nazi officials refrained from drawing any immediate conclusions concerning any possible effect on American foreign policy.

The D. N. B. wireless dispatch, the first German comment on the President's death, was transmitted almost an hour after the agency's first announcement of the news, a terse dispatch quoting a British news service message from Washington.

"In Berlin political circles one refrains from drawing any conclusions now with regard to the effect (of the President's death) on interior and foreign policy of the United States," the D. N. B. dispatch said. "Wilhelmstrasse circles are not inclined, either, to comment on political consequences before details have come through.

"Here our fundamental point of view is that a matter of inner policy, even if it may have great consequence in matters of foreign policy, is first of all the business of that people which is affected by it."

[The German radio declared earlier that President Roosevelt "will go down in history as the man upon whose instigation the present war turned into the second world war."

Stalin Voices Soviet Grief to Mrs. Roosevelt

Sends His Condolences; Expresses Regrets Also in Message to Truman

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 13 (Friday).—Marshal Stalin expressed his sorrow at the death of President Roosevelt today in a message to Mrs. Roosevelt in which he characterized the President as "a great organizer of the struggles of the freedom-loving nations against the common enemy."

The text of the note as broadcast by the Moscow radio:

"Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Washington:

"Please accept my sincere condolences on the occasion of the death of your husband and an expression of my sympathy in your great sorrow.

"The Soviet people highly valued President Roosevelt as a great organizer of the struggles of freedom-loving nations against the common enemy and as the leader in the cause of insuring the security of the whole world.

"JOSEF STALIN."

Stalin also sent a separate note to Vice-President Truman.

"On behalf of the Soviet government and myself personally," the message said, "I express our profound condolence to the government of the United States of America on the occasion of the premature death of President Roosevelt.

"The American people and the United Nations have lost in Franklin Roosevelt a great politician of world significance and a pioneer in the organization of peace and security after the war.

"The government of the Soviet Union expresses sincere sympathy to the American people in their great loss and their conviction that the policy of friendship between the great powers who are shouldering the main burden of war against the common enemy will continue in the future.

"JOSEF STALIN."

ENGLAND DAZED AT NEWS OF DEATH

APR 13 1945

LONDON, Friday, April 13—(AP) England learned last night of the death of President Roosevelt through a midnight broadcast of BBC.

The grave-voiced announcer read the flash over the air seven minutes after it was received in London.

The German agency DNB announced the news without comment, quoting a British news service under an Amsterdam dateline.

News of the President's death was conveyed to King George at midnight and the monarch received it with profound regret.

A spokesman at 10 Downing street said Prime Minister Churchill was informed immediately, but that no statement was expected until morning and probably none until Churchill addresses Commons.

Churchill Says British Nation Shares in Loss

Message to Mrs. Roosevelt Says Cause of Freedom in Every Land Suffers

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 13 (Friday).—Prime Minister Churchill said today that the death of President Roosevelt was "the loss of the British nation and of the cause of freedom in every land." His voice breaking, Jonathan Daniels, one of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, read this message which Mr. Churchill sent Mrs. Roosevelt:

"I send my most profound sympathy in your grievous loss. It is also the loss of the British nation and of the cause of freedom in every land.

"I feel so deeply for you all. As for myself, I have lost a dear and cherished friendship which was forged in the fire of war.

"I trust you may find consolation in the glory of his name and the magnitude of his work."

It was signed simply "Churchill."

News Saddens Soldiers In Hospital Near Front

Wait at Radio for Details of President's Death

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS ON THE TAUBER RIVER, Germany, April 13 (Friday) (AP).—Only a few soldiers were up in this sleepy little Bavarian town early this morning when the news of the President's death was broadcast from London.

But they were up at one place—the tent hospital, where casualties are trickling in from the front lines not so far away.

"I'm awfully sorry," said Private First Class Frederick Olsen, Dodgeville, N. Y. "At first it was mentioned so casually we didn't believe it. But they repeated it."

He was one of a group that sat glum and silent around a radio turned low—waiting for any additional details.

Captain K. E. Wilcox, Sioux City, Iowa, who had just finished digging shrapnel from an American soldier's arm, wiped his perspiring face and declared that the President would "go down in history as one of three greatest Presidents, Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt—because of his long term and this war."

Canadian Soldiers Mourn For Roosevelt

With Canadian Troops, Friday, April 13 (AP)—First news of President Roosevelt's death reached Canadian headquarters at midnight and after a shocked silence officers and men alike asked each other: "Why did it have to be now?"

Word sped swiftly through this headquarters and men roused out of sound sleep at first scoffed and refused to believe the news. But one by one they left their beds and gathered, half-dressed, around radios as additional news came in.

"He is America's great man," one officer said soberly. "Not only the United States' great man, but Canada's—and the world's. What will we do now when he is needed so badly?"

Near by a battle raged and artillery rumbled murderously, but it went unnoticed.

Chiang 'Visibly Stunned' By Death of Roosevelt

Generalissimo, Told at Breakfast, Leaves Food Untasted

CHUNGKING, April 13 (Friday) (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was "visibly stunned," an aide said today, when informed of the death of President Roosevelt.

Chiang, always an early riser, had started his day's work and was having breakfast when an aide brought him the news. He left his food untasted and relapsed into sorrowful meditation, the aide disclosed.

Chiang, who met Mr. Roosevelt at Cairo in November, 1943, held him in high regard as a true friend of China.

Pope Wires Condolence To Roosevelt's Family

News Rouses Pontiff at Night; Bonomi Expresses Sorrow

ROME, April 13 (Friday) (AP).—Pope Pius XII received the news of President Roosevelt's death early today with visible sorrow and immediately telegraphed condolences to the President's family and the United States government.

Word of the President's sudden passing was communicated to the Pope in his private quarters by Monsignor Giovanni Battista Montini, acting for the Secretary of State, after the Pope had retired for the night.

Premier Ivanoe Bonomi of Italy, who was awakened after midnight to hear the news, expressed "profound sorrow" on behalf of the Italian people.

Tokyo's Comments

The Tokyo radio, in its first comment on the death of President Roosevelt, said last night that he was a "symbol of American imperialism" but admitted he was "a man of a type of which the world has not seen many in history."

Heard by The United Press at San Francisco, the Tokyo radio said, in part:

"He was the symbol of American imperialism, a mixed phenomenon of the contemporary type. America handed him its greatest expression of its cause of imperialism—if it is a cause.

"Let us not question here if what President Roosevelt stood for and worked for has been for good or evil.

"There is at least no question but that he was a man of a type of which the world has not seen many in history.

"There may be room for questions as to the course on which he directed his deeds, but there is no doubt that it was what entrusted him to the American people.

"Franklin Roosevelt's loss to America is the severing of one leg of a three-legged table supported by the personalities of Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin. It is not likely the table can be steadied very well by whoever fits into President Roosevelt's shoes. The three-power relationship is going to be a problem and will stay a problem."

TRUMAN PLEDGES CONTINUANCE OF FDR'S POLICIES

New President Asks Roosevelt Cabinet to Remain in Office.

WILL WAR TO SUCCESS

San Francisco Conference Will Be Held as Scheduled April 25.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP) Harry S. Truman, who 11 years ago was a Missouri county judge, became the 32nd President of the United States at 7:09 p.m. (EWT) tonight and solemnly pledged himself to the policies of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Sworn in 2 hours and 34 minutes after Mr. Roosevelt's death in Warm Springs, Ga., as a shocked capital sought to weigh the import of the sudden change, Truman announced in quick succession:

1. He will try to carry on as he believes President Roosevelt would have done.

2. The San Francisco United Nations conference will go on as scheduled April 25.

3. He has asked the Roosevelt cabinet to stay on with him.

4. The war will be pressed to a "successful conclusion."

The new chief executive issued this statement:

"The world may be sure that we will prosecute the war on both fronts, east and west, with all the vigor we possess, to a successful conclusion."

Steadies Stunned Nation

Thus Mr. Truman acted immediately to steady a stunned nation and drive forward toward victory and a lasting peace.

About the White House crowds stood silently at the tall iron fence. Flags there, and on embassies and other public buildings, dipped to half staff.

After the brief and solemn induction ceremony, President and Mrs. Truman went from the cabinet room to the White House residential quarters to speak with Mrs. Roosevelt, who was leaving to fly to Warm Springs. Shortly after 7:30 p.m., they left by a rear entrance and motored to their apartment on Connecticut avenue in northwest Washington.

Secret Service men and district police threw a cordon around the apartment building and visitors to the Truman suite were barred. All telephone calls, and they were myriad, were rejected except one from Mrs. Truman's brother, Frank Wallace.

Senator Green (D., R.I.) was among those who called in person to congratulate the new president, but he too was denied an audience.

Guards patrolled the third floor corridor all night. The neighborhood was quiet in contrast to the throngs which stood across from the White House for hours, far into the darkness.

It was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who summoned Mr. Truman from his capitol office to the White House and told him her husband was dead.

While waiting she sent messages to the four Roosevelt sons in the armed forces — James, Elliott, Franklin, Jr., and John—telling them of their father's passing.

Mr. Roosevelt's death was announced to the press at 5:50 o'clock by Stephen Early, former presidential secretary. It was Early who also gave out the stunning news of the Pearl Harbor attack.

An emergency cabinet meeting was called immediately and arrangements made to elevate Mr. Truman quickly into the presidential job.

Stone Administers Oath

The 60-year old former Missouri county judge took the oath from Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone amid epochal world events—at a time when Nazi Germany is tottering and the Allies are getting ready to throw their full strength at Japan.

Truman wore a medium grey business suit, a white shirt, a light blue polka dot bow tie. A harmonizing handkerchief was in his breast pocket.

His glasses glistened, reflecting the flashes of photographers' lights recording the event for history.

Cabinet Present

Among those present for the oath-taking were Secretary of State Stettinius, Secretary of Commerce Wallace, Secretary of War Stimson, Navy Secretary Forrestal; Attorney General Biddle; Treasury Secretary Morgenthau; Labor Secretary Perkins; Interior Secretary Ickes and Agriculture Secretary Wickard.

From outside the cabinet there were Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the fleet; Admiral William D. Leahy, personal chief of staff to the chief executive; War Mobilization Director Fred M. Vinson; Speaker Rayburn; House Minority Leader Martin; House Majority Leader McCormack; Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan.

War Production Chairman J. A. Krug; Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley; House Democratic whip Ramspec; and Federal Works Administrator Phillip Fleming.

Also present were Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, Stephen Early and Jonathan Daniels, and an administrative assistant James Barnes, and Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle.

Truman puffed a bit nervously at a cigarette before he moved to the north end of the cabinet room to stand before a marble-mantled fireplace for the ceremony. Mrs. Truman dabbed a handkerchief to her eyes. Her husband smiled and patted her hand.

Mrs. Truman, like her husband, was wearing a grey suit, she had on a black felt hat with a green feather. Their daughter was attired in a brown suit and matching hat.

Just before her husband took the oath, Mrs. Truman chatted for a few moments with Secretary Perkins. Then a White House aide touched her husband's arm and directed him to the end of the long cabinet table where the oath was administered.

Stone administered the oath from memory and as Truman read from his slip of paper, the Chief Justices lips formed the words with him.

He came to the end.

"So help you God?" Stone intoned.

"So help me God," Truman said.

To his left was Mrs. Truman and her daughter.

Truman shook hands with the group around him, all with solemn faces, many with red eyes.

Then he and his family walked over to the White House for a few moments of seclusion.

Frisco Parley To Go On As Set, Truman Says

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Harry S. Truman, who eleven years ago was a Missouri county judge, became the thirty-second President of the United States at 7.09 P.M. tonight and solemnly pledged himself to the policies of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Senator Denied Audience

Senator Green (D., R.I.) was among those who called in person to congratulate the new President, but he, too, was denied an audience.

"He slept away this afternoon," she told them. "He did his job to the end, as he would want to do. Bless you all and all our love." She signed it Mother.

Funeral On Saturday

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon in the East Room of the White House. Burial (Continued on Page A-[illegible], Col. [illegible]) will be in the family plot at Hyde Park Sunday afternoon.

The late President's body will not lie in state, and the funeral is expected to be as private as possible.

Mr. Roosevelt's death was announced to the press at 5.50 o'clock by Stephen Early, former presidential secretary. It was Early who also gave out the stunning news of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Washington Shocked

The flash from Warm Springs shocked Washington to its very foundations. From Truman down to the least of the city's people the news was overwhelming.

Jonathan Daniels, White House secretary, said President Truman had authorized Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Secretary of State, to make a statement that the United Nations meeting will be held as planned.

Several delegations already have arrived in this country.

May Go To San Francisco

The late President Roosevelt had planned to address the meeting.

It was not known immediately whether President Truman will travel to San Francisco to speak, but the immediate indications were that he will be there as President to follow the lead taken by his predecessor.

Consistently throughout the last campaign, Truman indorsed wholeheartedly the Roosevelt foreign policies, particularly as they pertained to the organization of a world league to preserve the peace.

Friends said Truman may be expected to carry out fully the pledges Mr. Roosevelt made at the Big Three conference at Yalta.

Voting Procedure Included

These included an agreement with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin on voting procedure of the proposed world security council.

To Truman falls the tremendous task of shaping that peace so largely patterned by Roosevelt.

Truman, his hand on a small black Bible whose pages were edged in red, repeated the oath after Chief Justice Stone.

"I do solemnly swear," he said, "that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Cabinet Room The Scene

The scene was the Cabinet room in the executive offices of the White House, where for more years than any other President, Mr. Roosevelt had presided over momentous meetings of his key advisers.

They were there tonight to watch the slender, gray, former Senator from Missouri inducted into the highest office. Truman read the oath from a slip of white paper, swearing to uphold the Constitution.

He came to the end.

"So help you God?" Stone intoned.

"So help me God," Truman said.

To his left were Mrs. Truman and her daughter.

Truman shook hands with the group around him, all with solemn faces, many with red eyes.

Just before her husband took the oath, Mrs. Truman chatted for a few moments with Frances Perkins, [illegible]

Secretary of Labor. Then a White House aide touched her husband's arm and directed him to the end of the long Cabinet table where the oath was administered.

Dressed In Business Suit

Truman wore a medium-gray business suit, a white shirt and a light-blue polka-dot bow tie. A harmonizing handkerchief was in his breast pocket.

His glasses glistened, reflecting the flashes of photographers' lights recording the event for history.

Among those present for the oath-taking were Secretary Stettinius, Secretary of Commerce Wallace, Secretary of War Stimson, Navy Secretary Forrestal, Attorney General Biddle, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, Secretary Perkins, Interior Secretary Ickes and Agriculture Secretary Wickard.

Truman Listed as 32nd President In Directory, Historians Differ

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP) Harry S. Truman is either the 32nd or 33rd president of the United States—depending upon how the counting is done.

The Congressional directory lists Roosevelt as the 33rd president. But some historians list Roosevelt as the 32nd president.

If you follow the directory's reasoning, then Truman is the 32nd president. If you follow the other system, Truman is the 33rd president.

This is the difference:

Grover Cleveland became without question the 22nd president when he served his first term from 1885 to 1889.

But after leaving the White House for Benjamin Harrison who became the 23rd president, Cleveland won re-election to another four-year term in 1893.

The congressional directory simply acknowledges Cleveland's second term but doesn't give him a number and lists his successor in the White House, William McKinley, as the 24th president.

But some historians count Cleveland's second term as the 24th presidency although he was the 22nd man to hold the post.

That's where the difference in counting arises.

Security Talks to Be Held As Planned, Truman Says

WASHINGTON, April 12 — (AP) President Truman announced tonight that the United Nations conference called for April 25 will go on as scheduled.

White House Secretary Jonathan Daniels said President Truman, who was sworn in late today had authorized Secretary of State Stettinius to make a statement that the United Nations meeting will be held as planned.

Delegates Have Arrived

Several delegations already have arrived in this country.

President Roosevelt had planned to address the meeting.

It was not known immediately whether President Truman will travel to San Francisco to speak.

Consistently throughout the last campaign, Truman indorsed wholeheartedly the Roosevelt foreign policies, particularly as they pertained to the organization of a world league to preserve the peace.

Will Carry Out Pledges

Friends said Truman may be expected to carry out fully the pledges that President Roosevelt made at the Big Three conference at Yalta.

These included an agreement with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin on voting procedure of the proposed world security council.

Truman has supported without reservation the President's plans for the international organization.

Truman Humbly Confident He Is Big Enough to Meet Burden

By ERNEST B. VACARRO

(Member of the Associated Press Senate staff, who traveled with President Truman during Truman's campaign for the vice presidency last fall)

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP) Harry S. Truman entered the White House tonight in one of the most critical periods in his nation's history with humble confidence that he is big enough to meet the burdens of a war-time presidency.

He entered it with a determination to call upon the best brains of the country to help guide him through the perils of war, peace negotiations and reconversion.

Those of us who travelled with him on a transcontinental speech-making tour for the vice presidency last fall and who were in daily conference with him before and after his election, think of him as a man:

1. Whose courage has been demonstrated time and again as a campaigner and as chairman of the Senate war investigating committee who never hesitated to lambast those high in administration favor.

2. Whose knowledge of his own limitations is such that he never hesitates to call on others whose qualifications on matters of high importance he may consider superior to his own.

3. Whose ability to "pick the brains" of others raised the Truman committee to a status rarely enjoyed by a congressional committee.

4. Whose friendliness and modesty is the same as it was when he was a farmboy down in Missouri.

Truman's Initial 'S' Stands For Just That

Washington, April 12 (AP)—President Truman's middle initial "S" is just an initial—it has no name significance.

It represents a compromise by his parents.

One of his grandfathers had the first name Solomon, the other Shippe. Not wanting to play favorites, the President's parents decided on the "S."

Truman Talks With Mother, 91, By Telephone

Calls His Home in Missouri After Taking the Oath, Says 'I'm Terribly Busy'

GRANDVIEW, Mo., April 12 (AP). — President Truman telephoned his mother and brother tonight soon after he took the oath of office and told them "I'm terribly busy—you folks probably won't hear from me for some time.

The President first talked to his brother, Vivian Truman, and then to his ninety-one-year-old mother, Mrs. Martha Truman.

Vivian Truman answered the phone and later told reporters the President had said he had heard reports his mother was unable to receive the press and that he wanted to inquire about her health.

Mrs. Truman, who had been seated beside the radio in her son's farm home, then walked to the telephone and talked with the President two or three minutes. She did not divulge her conversation.

Vivian Truman kept visitors and well wishers from his aged mother, explaining that "mother is in good health and we are trying to keep it that way. I am afraid too much excitement might not be good for her."

He said "Momma was very sorry to hear of the President's death."

New First Lady—Mrs. Bess Truman

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Retiring Bess Wallace Truman took over the prodigious job of First Lady tonight from active Eleanor Roosevelt, who became an ordinary citizen again.

The new President's wife has been her husband's adviser and aide through his rise from Kansas City haberdasher through local office to the Senate, the Vice Presidency and now the chief office of the nation. In recent years the new President has entrusted much of his secretarial work to her.

The much-traveled Mrs. Roosevelt had been the most active White House wife in United States history. Her influence on her husband had been great.

Perhaps no less, but probably less in the forefront, will be the influence of the new mistress of the White House.

He States Her Position

President Truman, then a senator, made her position clear some years ago when he was under political fire, criticized for employing his wife as a Senate clerk on public funds.

"I need her there and that's the reason I've got her there," he said. "I never make a report or deliver a speech without her editing it."

Childhood sweethearts, Bess Wallace and Harry Truman were married as soon as he returned from France and World War I—June 28, 1919. Six years later she presented him with a daughter, Mary Margaret.

MRS. TRUMAN 'GRIEVED'

Mother, 91, of President, Is Guarded From Interviews

GRAND VIEW, Mo., April 12 (AP)—Mrs. Martha Truman, 91, mother of Harry Truman, who succeeds to the Presidency of the United States, remained in seclusion at the home of her son tonight "deeply grieved" at the death of President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Truman's remarks were relayed by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Vivian Truman, who said she feared to allow callers in the house because "the shock might be too bad for mother."

The daughtre-in-law said she preferred not to ask Mrs. Truman's comment on her son's elevation to the Presidency at this time. She said:

"I don't believe it is best for anyone to talk to her now."

VICE PRESIDENCY REMAINS VACANT

WASHINGTON, April 12 — (AP) Accession of Vice President to the presidency moves Secretary of State Stettinius up to next in line for the office.

The vice presidency itself remains vacant, but Senator Kenneth D. McKellar of Tennessee, president pro-tempore, becomes permanent presiding officer of the Senate.

In event of the death, removal or resignation of a vice president who has succeeded to the presidency, the line is this: Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, Attorney General, Postmaster General, Secretary of the Navy, Secretary of the Interior.

It never has been necessary in United States history to go beyond the vice president.

McKellar, dean of the Senate, was elected president pro-tempore at this session, succeeding Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who is ill. In the new post he will receive an additional $5,000 a year.

A FIRST FOR MISSOURI

Truman State's Only Native Son to Reach the Presidency

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 12 (AP)—Harry S. Truman, successor to President Roosevelt, is the first native Missourian to become the nation's chief executive. Except for Herbert Hoover, a native of Iowa and a resident of California, he is the only President from west of the Mississippi River.

No wapproaching his sixty-first birthday, President Truman was born at Lamar, Mo., May 8, 1884. Lamar now is a town of 2,300 population.

When elevated to the Vice Presidency from the United States Senate last November, Mr. Truman likewise became the first resident of the "show me" State to occupy that office. The only othe westerners who became Vice President were his immediate predecessor, Henry A. Wallace of Iowa, John Garner of Texas and Charles Curtis from Kansas.

Kansas City Shocked

KANSAS CITY, April 12 (AP).—News of President Roosevelt's death today stunned and shocked Kansas City and near-by Independence, home of Harry S. Truman, who succeeded to the Presidency.

At Lamar, Mo., birthplace of President Truman, news of President Roosevelt's death was received quiety, said Publisher Arthur Aull.

He said he had not yet talked with top people concerning the fact that Mr. Truman now would become President but added:

"People here think well of Harry Truman. They think he will do quite well."

Hopkins Says All People Of World Will Mourn

Wires to Mrs. Roosevelt From the Mayo Clinic

ROCHESTER, Minn., April 12 (AP).—Harry Hopkins, perhaps President Roosevelt's closest friend as well as trusted adviser, tonight sent the following telegram to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga.:

"I am so terribly sorry. The people all over this country, and indeed, the entire world, will mourn with you tonight. He was so gallant and brave."

Mr. Hopkins, who suffered recurrence of a nutritional disturbance while abroad with the President, has been at the Mayo Clinic here since his return from Yalta. There was no official word forthcoming as to whether his condition would permit his attendance at the funeral.

Miss Emerson Leaves Studio

HOLLYWOOD, April 12 (AP).—Faye Emerson, actress daughter-in-law of President Roosevelt, quit work at a film studio today upon learning of his death and left for the seclusion of her home. Studio spokesmen said she sent telegrams to the White House and her husband, General Elliott Roosevelt.

Another daughter-in-law, the former Romelle Schneider, wife of Colonel James Roosevelt, said at her home in near-by Beverly Hills: "I am terribly saddened by the news as every one else is."

The two young women immediately made plans to fly East. At San Diego they will be joined by Mrs. John Roosevelt, the former Miss Anne Clark, of Nahant, Mass., another of the President's daughters-in-law.

Koussevitzky Pays Tribute

PHILADELPHIA, April 12 (AP).—Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, paid musical tribute tonight to President Roosevelt in the program presented at the Academy of Music here. At the opening of the program, Dr. Koussevitzky said: "Our great President is no more with us. This performance will be dedicated to the greatest man of our time. The program will conclude with the N tional Anthem."

Public Concern Over Roosevelt Dates to 1932

Apr 13 1945

State of President's Health a Matter for Conjecture Since His First Campaign

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—President Roosevelt's health had been a subject of public speculation ever since his first campaign for the Presidency in 1932.

The latest of a series of periodic reports that he was ill bobbed up only last December, when he passed three weeks at Warm Springs—an unusually long period for war-time.

Rumors flooded Washington that the Chief Executive was undergoing an operation. Some reports had him in Bethesda Naval Hospital here, others under treatment in Boston. But when he returned to Washington, tanned and looking rested, Vice-Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, his personal physician, pronounced himself "pleased" with the President's condition.

Mr. Roosevelt was stricken with infantile paralysis in 1921 while swimming at his summer home in Campobello, N. B. His legs were paralyzed. Instead of despairing, he fought the disease until after long months of treatment he was able to walk with steel braces and canes.

It was a painful effort, but in later years he used the braces less and less. However, he addressed Congress from a chair on the House floor at the time of his return from the Yalta conference. He explained then that the braces were too heavy and painful.

In 1932 he met rumors that he was not healthy enough for the Presidency by taking out a $50,000 insurance policy, and passing the medical examination. He then was fifty years old.

Throughout his three terms in the White House he seemed to delight in demonstrations of physical fitness. During his last campaign he rode in an open car through a drenching rain in New York City. He repeated the performance during his triumphal parade back to the White House after the November election.

In the winter of 1943-'44 he was weakened by influenza and sinusitis. The rumors about his health began spreading again. He went to Warm Springs for a month's rest. When he returned Admiral McIntyre said he was in as good shape as any man of sixty-two could hope to be and that his condition offered no bar to another four years in the White House.

Troops Hear News at the Front; Allies Are Shocked, Nazis Bitter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News of President Roosevelt's death, flashed to friend and foe, troops in the field and sailors at sea, reached into every corner of the world last night, and expressions of sympathy, along with bitter enemy comment, poured into a bereaved American nation.

Cable dispatches and radio broadcasts carried the news to the capitals of the world and to Allied soldiers fighting toward a victorious end of the world's greatest war. The peoples of Europe were informed in a special broadcast by the American Broadcasting Station in Europe, which declared that "the world has lost its greatest champion for peace."

Expressions of grief came from London, Paris, Rome, South America, Cuba, Canada and elsewhere, while the German radio, in a comment heard of FCC monitors, declared that the President "will go down in history as the man upon whose instigation the present war turned into the Second World war." The Japanese carried a factual broadcast of the death, but were not heard to comment immediately.

The President's close friend, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, was informed of the death just before he retired and was expected to express Britain's sympathy in the House of Commons this morning.

King George VI, it was announced, received the news "with profound regret."

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, president of the Provisional Government of France, sent a telegram to President Truman expressing the sympathy of the French people and ordered all flags on official buildings throughout the French Empire to be placed at half staff immediately. He called Roosevelt "the symbolic champion of the cause of Liberty."

There was no immediate comment from Moscow, but in Washington Soviet Ambassador Andre Gromyko said in a broadcast over the Columbia network that Roosevelt's death was a great loss to "all the peace-loving people of the world."

The Army radio carried the news to Gen. Eisenhower, the Supreme Allied commander, who was somewhere in the forward area of the Western Front where he could not be reached for a statement.

Prime Minister MacKenzie King of Canada stated in the House of Commons at Ottawa that the President's death was "in truth a loss to the whole of mankind."

At Dublin Prime Minister Eamon DeValera of Ireland was informed of the death and was expected to issue a statement in Parliament today.

In Paris, U. S. ambassador Jefferson Caffrey declared that "the news has shocked me more than I can say. It is an appalling loss not only for the country and for me personally, but for all human kind."

Davis Sees Policy Unchanged

Elmer Davis, director of the OWI now in Paris, issued a statement to the French press which declared that the President's death "is made doubly tragic by the fact that he did not quite live to see the victory which he had done perhaps more than any other man to achieve. But his death will mean no change in America's determination to prosecute the war to a complete victory on all fronts and to endeavor to build a working and durable peace."

Edward J. Flynn, former Democratic National chairman who was in Europe on a personal mission for the President, said in London, "I am inexpressibly shocked. I cannot attempt to describe my emotions."

In Rome, Pope Pius XII received the news of the President's death with visible sorrow and immediately sent condolences to the President's family and the United States government.

Italian Premier Ivanoe Bonomi expressed "profound sorrow" on behalf of the Italian people and added that the nation considered the President "a great liberator and, one of her sincerest friends." Crown Prince Umberto said, "the entire world has lost a defender of democracy and liberty."

Latin America Grieves

Nations to the south of the United States, where the President had worked for a policy of good neighborliness, received the news of his death with great sorrow. Guatemala declared three days mourning and Foreign Minister Guillermo Toriello delivered a mourning address to the nation which was carried over every broadcasting station in the country.

A period of national mourning was declared in Cuba and all public amusements closed down immediately. President Ramon Grau San Martin declared in a statement that "all humanity is in mourning, and Cuba has lost a great friend."

Costa Rica also declared national mourning.

In Argentina, Pan-American Day celebrations scheduled for Saturday were cancelled, and Foreign Minister C. Ameghino declared that "the government will take all fitting measures as the result of the sorrowful event." He added: "I am truly astounded by the news."

In Mexico City, flags on public buildings flew at half-staff and dignitaries from embassies in the Mexican capital called at the American Embassy to present their condolences to U. S. Ambassador George S. Messersmith, a close personal friend of the President. Public functions and even private dinners were cancelled.

Spain's Foreign Minister Jose Felix LeQuerica, who was dining with U. S. Ambassador Norman Armour when news of the President's death reached Madrid, said, "Mr. Roosevelt's death is a tremendous loss for the whole world."

AT F.D.R.'S LAST PRESS PARLEY

He Hoped Soon To Proclaim Full Philippine Freedom

Warm Springs, Ga., April 12 (AP). At his last news conference before his death President Roosevelt expressed the hope that he would be able to proclaim complete independence for the Philippines by autumn.

It was the nine hundred and ninety-eighth gathering, White House records showed, that the President had held with reporters.

He made his Philippines disclosure along with his view that the United States will play an ever-expanding role in the Western Pacific after the war to thwart further Japanese aggression.

He believed Japan, like Germany, should be policed internally and externally when she is beaten, and that the United States and other United Nations must accept trusteeships over Japanese mandates and build new naval and air bases—in a combined move to stamp out Japanese militarism.

Publication Authorized

The Chief Executive expressed these views at a news conference April 5 at his Pine Mountain cottage near here.

For security reasons he asked that they be withheld from publication until he returned to Washington.

White House Secretary William D. Hassett authorized publication today after the President died.

Philippine independence by fall would be in advance of the July 4 1946, date prescribed ten years ago by Congress. But it would be in line with a congressional policy statement of last June permitting earlier freedom once the Japanese invader is expelled.

F.D.R. Talked With Osmena

The President said he believed all organized enemy resistance in the islands will have ended in the next six months.

While favoring independence in advance of the originally prescribed date, he also advocates this country helping the islands to get back on their feet economically, and providing them with relief and technical assistance.

Prior to calling all representatives of the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service to his cottage for special interview, Mr. Roosevelt conferred with 66-year-old Sergio Osmena, second President of the Philippine Commonwealth.

Saw Long Guerrilla Action

Osmena had come up from Florida where he had been recuperating from an operation in Jacksonville in mid-March. He attended the news conference at the "Little White House."

Their conference was in accordance with a June 29, 1934, amendment to the 1934 Tydings-McDuffie Independence Act. This amendment authorized Mr. Roosevelt to grant complete freedom to the Philippines after consulting its chief executive and determining that "constitutional processes and normal functions of government" have been restored.

The President said he did not know precisely when this would be, but he was hopeful he could issue his proclamation by autumn. Although he expected organized Japanese resistance to end by then, he believed Japanese guerrilla activity may continue for several years.

Took Issue With Some

By favoring independence now, the President took issue with some in his Administration who have contended the war has set the islands back economically several years, thus rendering them unfit to stand alone in an unstable world.

The President's views, however, conformed to congressional policy. Last June Congress declared the islands had "undoubtedly demonstrated their independence" and their "will to resist invasion and encroachment." Japan, it said in a joint resolution, had attempted to frustrate their democratic processes to freedom by substituting therefor their own puppet government "conceived in intrigue, born in coercion, and reared primarily for the purpose of Japanese selfishness and aggrandizement."

Mr. Roosevelt said the war was not the fault of the Philippines and it had not changed in the least our promise to make them a separate and self-governing nation. He favored post independence continuation of existing tariff preferential treatment by the United States until the islands have had an opportunity to rebuild economically.

Tributes paid to President Roosevelt by the country's leaders, as transmitted by The Associated Press and other sources, follow:

Former President HERBERT HOOVER—The nation sorrows at the passing of its President. Whatever differences there may have been, they end in the regrets of death. It is fortunate that in this great crisis of war our Armies and Navies are under such magnificent leadership that we shall not hesitate. The new President will have the backing of the country. While we mourn Mr. Roosevelt's death, we shall march forward.

GOVERNOR DEWEY—With a deep sense of tragedy the nation learns of the loss of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, one of the great Presidents of the United States. Coming to leadership of the nation at a critical period in our economic life, he brought high courage and indomitable spirit to the task of meeting the most difficult of national problems, inspiring the people with fresh confidence and establishing basic liberal reforms. Every American of every shade of opinion will mourn the loss of Franklin Roosevelt as a human being of warm human qualities and great capacities.

Bishop WILLIAM T. MANNING—The President's sudden death is a shock beyond words to express to our whole nation and to the world. The prayer which will go up from the hearts of Americans is that in this hour of crisis our country may be rightly guided and that as a nation we may hold unfalteringly to President Roosevelt's great ideals and hopes for the ending of the war and for the establishment of lasting peace.

Archbishop FRANCIS J. SPELLMAN—Our nation, still bleeding from the wounds of war, today suffered its most grievous wound—the death of our President and Commander-in-Chief. His gifted, inspiring leadership brought us to the threshold of victory, but victor in his fight for peace, he himself became war's victim. Franklin D. Roosevelt was a warrior for peace and now, as the cloud is are lifting and the night is passing, he has been called by the God of peoples and of nations, to become a part of the great holocaust of war which mankind is offering to gain peace.

Mayor Calls for Unity

Mayor LA GUARDIA—It is the greatest loss the peace-loving people of the world have suffered in the entire war. The shock is so great that it is extremely difficult for one to realize fully what has happened. There is only one thing we can all do as good Americans—to pay adequate tribute to this war casualty—and that is to unite in carrying out his ideals for world justice and permanent peace.

Senator JAMES M. MEAD—We have suffered a terrific shock; a great casualty of the war has just been announced. From the crises of the early Thirties, President Roosevelt guided the Republic from strength to strength. He gave the matchless leadership which he posessed to the solution of our economic problems at home, and to the victory over the forces of nazism abroad. He set up to the guideposts that lead to an enduring peace.

Senator ALBEN BARKLEY, Majority Leader—I am too shocked to talk. It is one of the worst tragedies that ever happened to the nation or the world, but we must tighten our belt and go forward to the goal which he set for us.

Senator ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG—President Roosevelt leaves an imperishable imprint on the history of America and the world. Those who disagree with him have always recognized his amazing genius in behalf of his always vigorous ideals.

Senator KENNETH M. WHERRY—It is a terrific shock to me. It calls for a continued united effort to fight the war to a victorious conclusion and to win the peace.

"Tremendous Loss to World"

Senator TOM CONNALLY—The death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt is a tremendous loss to the United States and to the world. People of the world who dreamed of a successful termination of war and erection of machinery for permanent peace and security will shed tears at his untimely death.

Representative JOSEPH W. MARTIN Jr.—His dynamic force and ability will be missed in this tragic hour. President Truman has the confidence of all who know him and have served with him in Congress. A united country will be back of him in his efforts to win the war and build a better Amer-

JAMES W. GERARD—The passing away of President Roosevelt on the eve of the greatest victory of the ages in the destruction of the brutal power of Germany and Japan is difficult to comprehend. The American people are not only indebted to him for his far-sightedness in understanding what the Germans were planning to do, but also for his vision in planning for the small man at home. I feel a deep personal loss, but that is insignificant compared to the loss which the nation and the world has suffered.

Dr. JAMES B. CONANT, President of Harvard—The sudden death of President Roosevelt at this moment in our history is a world tragedy of such magnitude as to render trivial all conventional expressions of grief and homage. Friends of freedom in all countries must respond to this challenge given them by fate and insure by their efforts the realization of his aims.

Dr. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, President of Columbia—This is most appalling news. It is as strong a blow as could be possibly imagined at a moment when everyone is striving for liberty and peace in the world. It is impossible to describe at this moment the feeling that we must all have, not only of sorrow but of distress of what this loss means to the world. May God help us.

"Greatest Human Assets"

BASIL O'CONNOR—Today, in President Roosevelt's death, the world lost its greatest human asset. The entire universe had its attention focused upon his leadership to lead it out of the wilderness of sorrow onto the plain of at least some happiness. One of history's greatest figures, and a very kindly individual, has passed on.

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL—We have lost a great leader. His farseeing wisdom in military counsel has been a constant source of courage to all of us who have worked side-by-side with him from the dark days of the war's beginning. No tribute from the Army could be so eloquent as the hourly record of the victories of the past few weeks.

SECRETARY HENRY MORGENTHAU—It has been my unique privilege to have served him for two years in Albany and for over twelve years here in Washington, and I know what a really great man he was. He, more than any one person, is responsible, in my opinion, for the successful conduct of this terrible war against the aggressor nations.

Secretary HAROLD L. ICKES—We have been fortunate, during the world crisis, to have given to civilization and the world the greatest leader in the history of our country. We know what his ideals were. President Truman will take up where President Roosevelt left off. All of us will help him to accomplish the objectives and realize the ideals of the great general who has gone down facing the enemy.

"We Shall Go Forward"

Secretary HENRY A. WALLACE—America and the world must and will carry on. Tonight we bow in prayer for that gallant world citizen who so unerringly acted to save democracy. Tomorrow behind and with President Truman we shall go forward into victory and peace.

Secretary EDWARD R. STETTINIUS Jr.—A great leader has passed on into history at an hour when he was sorely needed. Once before in an hour of national crisis our country suffered such a loss. Like Abraham Lincoln, Franklin Delano Roosevelt has truly given his life that America might live and freedom be upheld.

CORDELL HULL, former Secretary of State—President Roosevelt's statesmanship must continue to inspire us for the crucial task which even now is before us—the task of building a world peace. No greater tragedy could have befallen our country and the world at this time. His inspiring vision, his high statesmanship and his superb leadership were factors without which the United Nations could not have come to the present phase of the war with victory just in sight.

JESSE H. JONES, former Secretary of Commerce—We were not prepared for the shock of President Roosevelt's death. But the nation, true to its tradition, will carry on and support President Harry Truman in bringing the war to final victory and in achieving a just peace.

HERBERT H. LEHMAN, Director General of the UNRRA—Indefatigable and without thought of self, he sacrificed his life in the service of his fellow men.

BRIG. GEN. CARLOS P. ROMULO, Philippine Resident Commissioner—Liberty loving peoples of all races have lost their outstanding champion. Mankind has known no greater liberal. A grateful Philippines indebted to him for his unswerving advocacy of their freedom stodd by America in her darkest hour in the Pacific. Now their steadfast friend is gone.

Lord HALIFAX, British Ambassador—The British people will have learned with deep emotion this grievous news. With the American nation they will mourn the passing of one who has guided the Allied forces so far and so well on the road to victory.

ANDREI A. GROMYKO, Soviet Ambassador—One of the greatest statesmen the world has ever known. The Soviet people shares this great national grief which has befallen the friendly American people. Mr. Roosevelt could distinguish true friends as well as real enemies. He knew the value of unity of great Allied powers and its importance for victory.

HENRI BONNET, Ambassador of The Provisional Government of the French Republic—Like all my compatriots, I grieve for the great statesman to whom we are indebted for the immense services he has rendered to the cause of democracy and freedom and for the decisive part he has taken in the common victory which liberated France, a victory which he so well deserved to see completed throughout the world.

JAMES A. FARLEY—The death of President Roosevelt is, of course, a shock to me, as it will be to all Americans and to millions throughout the world who have looked to him for leadership during these trying times. I shall always recall and cherish my close association with him during the years that I was with him in New York State and with his Administration for seven and a half years in Washington. His accomplishments make his place in history secure.

THE REV. DR DAVID DE SOLA POOL—It is too early as yet to realize the full extent of the tragedy that has befallen the country and the world. At this hour we can but pray for courage and strength to bring to fulfillment the victory for which he lived and died and create a world of freedom, peace and justice for all peoples, as he dreamed.

SAMUEL SEABURY—My feeling is one of profound sorrow. One can hardly realize it, because the news comes so suddenly, but I feel that very strongly.

HARRY HOPKINS—I am so terribly sorry. The people all over this country, and indeed, the entire world, will mourn tonight. He was so gallant and brave.

Calls for Making Vision Reality

HENRY J. KAISER—As Commander in Chief the President liked to be known as a soldier. He is as much a war casualty as those who have given their lives on the battlefield. A sorrowing America and a grateful mankind will hold his memory in reverence. He brought the nations of the world together in the name of the liberty, the security and the peace of all humanity. Together we must go on and make his vision a reality.

GOVERNOR WALTER E. EDGE of New Jersey—The tragic death of the President stunned the nation and almost defies comment. His leadership at this critical period cannot be transferred to any living American. The knowledge he possessed of the preparations for peace probably will be never fully known by even his closest advisors. On behalf of the people of New Jersey I extend my sympathy and condolence to his family and to the country for which he gave his life.

GOVERNOR RAYMOND E. BALDWIN of Connecticut—Our heads are bowed in sadness, our hearts are burdened with sorrow, at the tragic news of the death of the President of the United States—Our President. A great, fearless leader of our country in these most critical days of our lives, and of our nation's life, his passing will be deeply mourned by all of his countrymen and by freedom-loving people throughout the world.

GOV. CHARLES M. DALE of New Hampshire—In this situation we will all redouble our efforts to attain the objective to which he devoted so much effort—a speedy and victorious conclusion of the war and a just and lasting peace.

"Profoundly Shocked and Grieved"

GOV. HERBERT O'CONOR of Maryland—I was profoundly shocked and grieved to receive the news of the death of President Roosevelt, because I realize the nation has lost one of the greatest statesmen of our entire history. It is a source of genuine satisfaction that in his successor, the Honorable Harry S. Truman, the country will have an experienced and able leader who will carry on the program so successfully launched by our late lamented President.

Governor WALTER S. GOODLAND of Wisconsin—The news of President Roosevelt's death comes with as much shock to me as I know it does to every citizen of the United States. I have always considered his handling of our foreign affairs to be admirable. In my judgment he has conducted the affairs of the nation during this war in a manner that has won the approval of all our citizens. I share with all citizens of Wisconsin a sense of great loss in the death of President Roosevelt.

THOMAS W. LAMONT—The news is so shocking that it seems almost impossible to make comment upon it. Every citizen must be stunned and grief-stricken by this news. Regardless of differences on domestic issues, Americans of every party and faith have acclaimed Franklin Roosevelt as a great leader and a great war President.

PHILIP MURRAY, president of the CIO—The nation and the world have lost a great leader and a great soldier and labor its noblest friend.

"Sad Blow to Organized Labor"

THOMAS A. MURRAY, President of the State Federation of Labor—President Roosevelt's death is a catastrophe, coming at a time when the nation is on the eve of great decisions which will determine our future in the post-war world. His death is a particularly sad blow to organized labor, which had recognized him as a stanch friend from the earliest days of his public career.

DAVID I. DUBINSKY, President of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union—Words fail me to express my grief over the passing of this greatest American of our generation. Hundreds of millions all over the globe to whom Franklin Delano Roosevelt symbolized the ageless idealism of our America and the very heart of the great struggle for civilization which we are waging will be bowed with sorrow.

EMIL SCHRAM—This is a great tragedy. We all feel we have lost a great man. Now is the time for everyone to rally around Mr. Truman. I have every confidence that Mr. Truman will be able to pick up the reins and carry on.

EDWARD V. LOUGHLIN, Tammany Leader—I am shocked beyond words. His death is the greatest loss ever suffered by our country in its history.

Hyde Park To Honor Memory Of Roosevelt

Hyde Park, N.Y., April 12 (AP)—Neighbors of President Roosevelt, sorrowed by his death at Warm Springs, Ga., paid homage tonight to the man who made this village famous.

Dr. W. George W. Anthony, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, of which the President was senior warden, said Sunday services at 8 A.M. in the chapel and at 11 A.M. in the church would be dedicated to Roosevelt's memory.

The Hyde Park firehouse, where Roosevelt voted each year, will be draped in honor of the President, who was a life member of the Eagle Engine Company.

News of the death came as a shock to members of the Roosevelt Home Club, a group of neighbors who first organized to honor Roosevelt at the time he was governor of New York.

Philharmonic Cancels First Concert Since '65

New York, April 12 (AP)—The New York Philharmonic Symphony Society canceled its concert at Carnegie Hall tonight beause of President Roosevelt's death.

The only other time in its 103-year history the society had canceled a concert was in April, 1865. That was when President Lincoln was assassinated.

F.D.R. DEATH FELT IN SPORTS

Roosevelt Called Great Champion Of Baseball

Washington, April 12 (AP)—The athletic world felt tonight that it had lost a friend in the death of President Roosevelt.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators and friend of Presidents back to "the other Roosevelt, Teddy," expressed the sentiment of sports people generally:

"We've lost a warm personal friend, and a great champion of baseball."

Only last month, Roosevelt said in his own words that he was "No. 1 night baseball fan," when Griffith visited him at the White House to deliver the President's annual big-league pass.

Pinch Hit For Baseball

Twice during this war, Roosevelt pinch hit for baseball, which opens its fourth wartime season Monday. The first occasion was early in 1942 when grave doubts hung over the status of that season.

Roosevelt replied to a letter from the late Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, then baseball commissioner, by stating that the game should carry on.

During the past winter, when manpower problems beset the national game, Roosevelt gave it new hope by saying it should continue through without using healthy young men who could be of greater value in the war effort.

He had indicated that if wartime duties permitted he would toss out the first ball at the season opener between the Senators and the New York Yankees. His eight opening-day appearances at Griffith Stadium—1934 through 1940—established a record that rivals Babe Ruth's 60 homers.

Interested In Fitness

In many other respects, the President showed deep interest in sports. His public speeches were spiced with phrases from athletic vocabularies.

He was intensely interested in national physical fitness after the war, and was himself a swimming enthusiast.

Griffith recalled that in Roosevent's school days at Groton and Harvard he was "quite an athlete" in boxing, tennis, track, rowing and so on.

Griffith dug back into his memory for a baseball story about Roosevelt, Gen. Dwight G. Eisenhower, Gen. Omar Bradley and Jim Farley, prominently mentioned as possible successor to Landis as baseball commissioner.

Eisenhower was captain of one of West Point's greatest diamond teams about 1915 on which were officers who are making history in this war, including General Bradley.

Roosevelt In Outfield

The Cadets were undefeated. Farley, manager of a crack semi-pro club in the Hudson Valley League, challenged the Cadets to a game.

Farley took his team to West Point but some of his players failed to catch the boat. In West Point, Farley began scouting around for players to round out his nine.

A local fan brought to Farley a young fellow by the name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt with the assurance that "he'll play a good game for you."

Roosevelt went into the outfield and "played well," Griffith said, adding "that probably was the first time Roosevelt and Farley ever met, and the world knows what a lasting friendship they formed and what both have done since then."

Negro Prisoners Pray When Told Of Death

Mobile, Ala., April 12 (AP)—Negro prisoners at the Mobile City jail knelt in prayer, then lifted their voices in spirituals tonight when told of the death of President Roosevelt.

"We lost a good man—the only one who ever helped the poor," said one.

"He was the greatest President since Lincoln," said another.

Similar messages of sympathy came from the white prisoners.

"He treated the common man like the higher-ups," one man observed.

9th Army Crosses Elbe, 50 Miles From Berlin

Ninth Crosses Elbe, Smashes Toward Berlin

APR 14 1945

BERLIN TIME

PARIS, Friday, April 13—(AP) U. S. Ninth army tanks smashed across the Elbe river on a six-mile front just 57 miles from Berlin yesterday and U. S. First and Third armies in sweeps of nearly 50 miles thundered at the gates of the great city of Leipzig, 75 miles southwest of the capital.

A field dispatch said only orders from Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson were needed to send the Second Armored division dashing on into Berlin, which could possibly be reached today. Wholly unconfirmed French reports said Allied parachute troops had been dropped at Brandenburg, barely 20 miles from greater Berlin.

Sweep Across Elbe

The NIGHT crossing of the Elbe—last big river barrier before the devastated capital—came with such speed that Supreme headquarters was unable to confirm it, a spokesman saying that SHEAF was completely out of touch with Ninth army spearheads.

The U. S. First and Third armies, after their long gains, were under a security blackout, but a field report said it was possible that one of them would reach Leipzig by today. They last were reported 23 to 24 miles from the city with nothing in front of them.

From out of the security blackout came the news that the First Army's Third Armored division had reeled off a 26-mile gain on the First's north flank and had driven more than two miles beyond Sandgerhausen, 84 miles southwest of Berlin.

The advances of these two powerful armies, bidding for a quick decision in the war in Europe by balking a die-hard stand in southern Germany, were expected to be Western Front sensations once the blackout is lifted.

(Paris radio said tank spearheads were 16 miles from Leipzig and 19 miles from the Czech border.)

Three tank columns of the U. S. Third army ripped beyond the heart of Germany in dashes of more than 46 miles and were 129 miles from the Russian lines, 40 miles from the Czech border and 109 miles from Berlin. The Ninth army was 115 miles from the Russian lines.

Patton Takes Weimar

The Third army overwhelmed Weimar, birthplace of the German Republic in 1919.

The First army, traveling east at a rate of 30 to 40 miles a day, had picked up a new batch of camp followers—liberated Russian slave laborers who turned around and began walking east, believing they could get home quicker that way.

Germany appeared in her final hours of organized resistance in the west as all Allied armies cut loose. Even No. 1 Nazi propagandist Paul Joseph Goebbels declared gloomily in his weekly newspaper that the war "cannot last much longer in my opinion."

The U. S. Seventh army, joining in the drive to cut Germany in half, smashed eastward to within 35 miles of the Munich-Berlin superhighway, most important north-south German road link, and was nearing Bamberg, 30 miles northwest of the Nazi shrine city of Nuernberg.

The Seventh army captured Schweinfurt, a ballbearing manufacturing center of 42,000 population, while farther to the southwest the French First army seized the Black Forest cities of Baden Baden and Rastatt.

On the northern end of the front, the British Second army captured Celle, a German training center for gas warfare 50 miles south of Hamburg, and deepened its Aller river bridgehead thrust within 45 miles of that second greatest German city.

The Canadian First army drove 22 miles into the center of the Holland trap, where an estimated 200,000 Germans are pinned against the sea and fought on beyond the Issel river where the enemy hopes to hold up the Allied drive to liberate Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

The Canadians by battling into Spier were 12 miles from the communjcations center of Assen and 25 miles from the North Sea.

The Ruhr pocket, where an estimated 150,000 additional Germans originally were surrounded, was falling apart as U. S. First army troops made spectacular gains. They were within 20 miles of a junction with the U. S. Ninth army near the western border of the trap.

Three-fifths of the area had been whittled away and more than 43,000 prisoners had been brought out. The Germans said the Ruhr manufacturing city of Bochum had fallen.

Tanks Hurtle Across Elbe

Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's tanks hurtled across the 450-foot-wide Elbe river at undisclosed points and by means which likewise were censored. The Second Armored division was known, however, to have reached the Elbe at Magdeburg, 57 miles from greater Berlin.

The Second Armored division thus became the first to cross the Elbe since Napoleon, and a field dispatch said the columns of Sherman tanks awaited the "signal that would send them to Berlin."

Other Ninth army forces along the flanks were swinging up to the river on a 50-mile front.

Resistance in front of the spearhead of armor crumpled completely Wednesday at the Hermann Goering steel works near Brunswick, whereupon the old "Hell On Wheels" division dashed on unopposed 57 miles to the Elbe.

AP Correspondent Robert Eunson said Thursday morning that if the order came to attack the dusty battlers "can be at Berlin's Brandenburg gate (in the capital's center) by tomorrow night or Saturday morning unless the Germans pull Panzers in from the Eastern front."

Front reports recently said the German Sixth Panzer army was believed to have pulled out of the Russian front and headed west.

Far back of the front lines, Ninth army infantry was mopping up in Brunswick, where only a handful of Nazis still held out.

The Fifth Armored division, bringing up the north flank, was nearing the Elbe north of Magdeburg. Magdeburg itself was being attacked by infantry battling on all sides of that aircraft building city.

In the sweep beyond Weimar, which is near the geographic center of Germany, Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. Third Army was bypassing the Napoleonic battlefield of Jena.

Near Czech Border

The Fourth and Sixth armored divisions cracked across the Saale river line on a 30-mile front, both north and south of Jena, while farther south the 11th Armored division at Gestungshausen advanced to within 40 miles of the Czech border.

Weimar surrendered by bicycle to Patton's 80th Infantry division. Negotiations for surrender of the city of 50,000 where the Treaty of Versailles was ratified was made in the village of Troistedt, three miles south of the city.

The Troistedt burgomeister hopped on his bicycle, pedaled into Weimar, and delivered the ultimatum to Weimar's mayor, who came out and reported the city was ready to capitulate. American troops then entered the historic city without firing a shot, tramping through streets lined with civilians cheering them.

9th Army Tanks Are Only 57 Miles From Berlin; Patton Gains 46

Paris, April 12 (AP)—The American 9th Army crossed the Elbe River today and began beating down the last 57 clear miles toward Berlin.

The last river before the German capital was forced by the Hell on Wheels (2d) Armored Division, which blazed more than 50 miles to Magdeburg in a twelve-hour dash yesterday. The precise site of the crossing was not announced.

A bridgehead, however, was established at one undisclosed place, some 115 miles from Russian lines. To the south, 3d Army tank divisions broke loose again and thundered forward up to 46 miles on the approaches to Leipzig, Czechoslovakia and the Red Army.

Tanks Reported Only 15 Miles From Leipzig

Large and important cities toppled. Among them were Weimar, Essen, Coburg, Nordhausen, Schweinfurt, Halberstadt, Emmen in Holland, Neustadt and, by German account, the Ruhr coal and steel center of Bochum.

Besieged and falling were Brunswick, Dortmund, Heilbronn and Erfurt. The Germans said Bremen was under all-out British assault; the 9th Army imminently threatened Magdeburg.

One report placed American tanks near Halle, 15 miles from Leipzig. Infantry following the swift tanks of the 3d Army beat to within 40 miles of Leipzig and 95 of Dresden. A junction with the Russians may come between those two great Saxony cities within a week.

Third Army's Gains "Sensational"

"The phantom 6th and 4th armored divisions of the 3d Army are stabbing deeper into what remains of the heart of Germany," Associated Press Correspondent Thoburn Wiant was allowed to report through the 3d Army security blackout. "It can be said that the present armored stabs are much like those made by the 3d Army in the past—sudden, swift and sensational."

At one point, the tanks were a bare 43 miles from Czechoslovakia and possibly closer. The censorship ban suggested that the 3d might be veering southward to cut routes into the natural redoubt in the Bavarian Alps, where Hitler has planned his last "operation Götterdämmerung."

Canadians Drive Into Western Holland

All the North German ports were menaced. The Canadians launched a drive into western Holland against thousands of trapped Germans. Ninth and 1st army divisions whittled down the Ruhr pocket and its garrisons of up to 100,000 German troops.

The 3d Army reached the outskirts of Weimar and captured Neustadt, 8 miles northeast of Coburg and 43 from Czechoslovakia. Infantry following the tanks marched and rode to points 40 miles southwest of Leipzig and 95 west of Dresden.

The full extent of the 3d Army drive was masked in a security blackout. The 6th Division whipped 46 miles across central Germany yesterday and the 4th (Breakthrough) Armored Division gained 25.

Brunswick Being Mopped Up

Ninth Army infantrymen were mopping up the aircraft manufacturing center of Brunswick, 45 miles behind the 2d Armored Division tanks on the Elbe River at Magdeburg, Associated Press Correspondent Robert Eunson said.

Other 9th Army units were closing up to the Elbe. The 83d Motorized Division raced 38 miles east of Goslar and captured Halberstadt and Wegeleben. The 5th Armored Division, driving north of Brunswick, reached Gifhorn, 50 miles northwest of Magdeburg.

Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's tanks at Magdeburg threatened the city of 334,358, whose bombed out industrial area includes the Gruson Werke armor plant, a subsidiary of Krupp.

Halberstadt Gives 9th An Important Rail Junction

Only a handful of Nazis were still fighting in Brunswick. The capture of Halberstadt gave the 9th Army an important junction of railroads just north of the Harz Mountains.

Canadians mopping up northern Holland advanced 22 miles and started assaulting the Dutch traps in which up to 200,000 Germans are caged. The 1st and 9th armies sent several divisions to hammer down the Ruhr pocket, where up to 100,000 Nazis remain.

The 6th Armored Division captured two high-ranking German officers, one of whom said: "I had no idea the 3d Army was here." The division captured a concentration camp at Ettersburg, northeast of Erfurt, and liberated 21,000 political prisoners who had only a day's supply of food. A prison camp containing some American captives was also taken, but it cannot be identified at this time.

Fighting In Streets Of Erfurt

Erfurt itself was encircled and the Blue Ridge (80th) Division fought in its streets after a three-hour artillery bombardment. The Onaway (76th) Division reached a point 10 miles north of Weimar and 47 miles southwest of Leipzig.

Three miles northwest of Weimar the Americans found 20,000 to 25,000 political prisoners in the infamous Buchwenwald concentration camp, second in size only to the even more notorious camp at Dachau. A guard was thrown around the camp until it was decided what to do with the inmates.

Except for the battle for encircled Erfurt, 11 miles west of Weimar, there was no sign of war as the columns rolled eastward through hills capped by ruins of ancient castles.

Tanks, trucks and jeeps sped along a broad six-lane superhighway at full throttle. The Sixth Armored division captured two high-ranking officers, one of whom said: "I had no idea you were here."

The 90th Infantry division liberated 15,000 slave laborers from six nations in a 20-square mile area east of Hersfeld in capturing 100 salt mines. Machinery for making tanks, motor parts and aircraft had been installed in the mines.

Tanks Sweep Ahead

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' U. S. First Army was traveling over Frederick the Great's old battlefields with such speed that the infantry was motorized to keep up with the racing tank columns.

The Germans were able to blow a few bridges and snipe from the wooded hills, but that was all.

The First and Third armies were moving in such close formation that the Third's Sixth armored division skieed seven miles into First army territory and captured a village.

One officer said advance columns were moving so far and fast that "we simply can't tell where they are except by flying our artillery cub observation planes over the roads."

The Ninth Armored division, disclosed to be spearheading the First army attack, last was reported 23 miles from Leipzig early Thursday afternoon and still driving hard.

It was driving north of Naumberg, 62 miles from the middle Elbe, where the Russians and Americans are expected to meet on this front.

German resistance was crushed, and a field dispatch said only scant resistance was expected in front of Leipzig.

The Germans said parachute and glider troops were dropped northwest of Weimar. They said the 3d Army had "penetrated deeply into the main German defense field north of Erfurt." The enemy appealed to the Volkssturm to "keep your eyes open—you may find yourselves in the front lines in your villages without knowing how it came about."

The Germans appeared most concerned about the 9th Army push, one broadcast saying:

Big Tank Battle In Crailsheim Area

"Supported by masses of aircraft, American tanks and infantry forces advanced on both sides of the Autobahn (superhighway) from Hannover to Magdeburg. The river was reached at Schoenbeck and German counterattacks are still in progress."

The enemy said a great tank battle was in progress in the Crailsheim area, where the 7th Army has pushed to Schwaebish Hall on the Kocher River, a tributary of the Danube. German "space in the Ruhr is shrinking," the Berlin radio said.

The 3d Army tanks were meeting little resistance and the Germans had "extremely bad communications" in the center, Correspondent Wiant reported. Infantry following the tanks made steady progress against little or no opposition, but the foot troops were reported "far behind the armor."

The 11th Armored (Thunderbolt) Division captured Neustadt and reached a point 33 miles northwest of the Wagnerian festival town of Rayreuth in the redoubt. The 89th Infantry advanced 7 miles eastward and deployed along the Ilm River from 6 to 13 miles southwest of eWimar. The 97th (Golden Acorn) Division reached the Ilm in the area from 12 to 18 miles south of Erfurt.

Weimar Reached

It was the 80th (Blue Ridge) Division which reached Weimar. The 90th reached pointed 22 miles south of Erfurt and the 26th moved to the area 12 miles north of Coburg. The 71st Division was 7 miles north of Coburg.

The dismemberment of Germany continued apace on all sectors; daily gains of 20 miles or more were commonplace. The greatest advance of all was scored late yesterday by the Hell on Wheels (2d) Armored Division of the 9th Army in reaching the Elbe, last waterway before Berlin. It went more than 50 miles in twelve hours.

The 3d and 1st armies were fighting with skill and dash to bisect Germany in combination with an expected Russian push to somewhere between Leipzig and Dresden. A linkup with the Eastern front likely was only a matter of days.

Assault On Bremen

The Germans asserted that the British 2d Army opened an all-out assault on the U-boat lair of Bremen at dawn, but was thrown back to its siege lines 4 miles from the great port.

[The Brussels radio said Allied troops had reached Vegesack, on the east bank of the Weser, 10 miles northwest of Bremen.]

Stars and Stripes, the American Army newspaper, quoted 9th Air Force flyers as saying American tanks were nearing Halle, 15 miles northwest of Leipzig, but this was not confirmed at supreme headquarters.

Approach To Leipzig

The latest officially announced 1st Army position—reported yesterday—was 48 miles from Leipzig. Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's tanks had sprinted 20 miles to reach Hoelleda, on the approaches of Leipzig and 30 miles from Halle.

Plane attacks which destroyed or damaged 120 German tanks near Halle suggested strongly that either the 1st or 3d Army, or both, was in the area.

Two of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d Army tank divisions broke loose yesterday in gains of 12 and 15 miles before a news blackout closed down. When the 4th and 11th (Thunderbolt) Armored divisions took off, the 3d Army was 48 miles from Czechoslovakia.

Nazis Stiffen In North

To the north, German resistance stiffened somewhat as the enemy strove mightily to defend the North Sea ports of Emden, Bremen, Hamburg and Wilhelmshaven along the line Bremen-Oldenburg-Emden. At last reports the Canadians were 10 miles from the North Sea, 20 from Emden and 42 from Wilhelmshaven. The British at Celle were 50 miles from Hamburg.

With the Russian offensive across the Oder River still held up by thaws which made Polish supply roads sodden, there seemed every likelihood that the Americans would yet be the first to reach Berlin. The Russians in the late winter pulled up within 32 miles of Berlin while General Eisenhower's armies were still more than 300 miles away.

Slave Laborers Freed

Tens of thousands of slave laborers were freed in the dash to the Elbe—the most spectacular of the war on German soil. There was no immediate indication whether the Magdeburg bridges had been blown up. The speed of the drive and the collapse of German resistance made it quite possible that one or more of the bridges were taken intact.

The Germans said the Americans reached the Elbe 10 miles south of Magdeburg in the area of Schoenebeck, 63 miles from Berlin.

Nazi Tanks In Halle Area

Obviously, if what is left of the German Army is not to be pinned back and front along the stiffened eastern line, the enemy must pull sme of his divisions from the Russian front and hurl them against the American push.

That might explain the presence in the Halle area of the largest number of German tanks seen since Eisenhower drove his armies across the Rhine.

But out of the mounting debacle the bedraggled Wehrmacht had produced nothing yet to check the victorious onrush. There was no cohesive front in the west. The Germans were fighting hard with what they had left, but they simply did not have the manpower to stem the tide of 1,250,000 or more combat troops which Eisenhower was throwing against them day after day.

Canadian Drive

Meanwhile, Gen. Henry Crerar's Canadian 1st Army struck to liberate western Holland and such cities as Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague. The Canadians gained up to 22 miles yesterday and had captured 6,022 Germans in a dozen days.

Front-line dispatches said the Canadian attack had been delayed and that even the getaway corridor around the Zuider Zee had been left open intentionally in the hope that the Germans would pull out or be forced out to fight in the open of northwest Germany. This would have spared the Dutch further sufferings.

Associated Press correspondents at the front said the defenders of the Ruhr were marching out in ever-increasing numbers to surrender, although at first they were determined on a die-hard stand.

Strong German pressure forced the 10th Armored Division to pull back from Crailsheim, at the end of a 22-mile-long corridor it had driven midway between Stuttgart and Neurnberg. Frontline dispatches did not disclose how far the 10th had withdrawn.

No word of a further gain by the 1st French Army toward Stuttgart had been reported this morning.

Reaching Berlin Gate Tomorrow 'Possible'

By Robert Eunson

Near Magdeburg, Germany, April 12 (AP)—Ninth Army tanks crossed the Elbe River today, forcing that last stream before Berlin for the first time since Napoleon did it more than a century ago.

The Hell on Wheels (2d) Armored Division was a bare 57 miles from Greater Berlin—the closest reported unit on the Western front.

Onto Open Plains

A bridgehead was established at an undisclosed point and tanks crossed the 450-foot river by means that censorship would not permit to be divulged.

Maj. Gen. Isaac D. White, of Peterborough, N.H., and Des Moines, ordered his Sherman tanks across into the open plains leading to Berlin.

If the order comes to "attack and occupy Berlin" General White's dusty tank crews can be at the Brandenburg gate in Berlin by tomorrow night or Saturday morning unless the Germans shift some of their guns and armor from the Russian front.

At the crossing the 9th Army was within 115 miles of Russian lines, projected within 32 miles of the capital to the east, Berlin, a city of 4,332,242, sprawls over some 25 miles from east to west.

Reached Elbe After Dark

The tank veterans of campaigns in Africa, Sicily, Normandy and the Ardennes Forest reached the Elbe after dark last night and were bivouacked on the east bank at dawn.

Other 9th Army units were approaching the river along flanks of the 9th Army wedge, established in a dash of more than 50 miles in a dozen hours. The 9th Army undoubtedly will be using all types of bridges across the river.

Resistance in front of the 2d Armored Division cracked completely yesterday after a sharp fight in the Hermann Goering iron works at Walfenbuttel, south of Brunswick. After the great steel plants were mopped up, the old Hell on Wheels tanks rambled unopposed to the Elbe.

Transfer From East

There were indications a few days ago that the 6th Panzer Division had been pulled out of the line on the Russian front and headed west.

Ahead lies a broad superhighway, with Berlin at the end. But the German military highway system has not been of too much help to the fast-going Americans up to now, because of blown-up bridges and other damage.

Advance columns went ahead boldly without waiting for flanking columns to catch up, and with scarcely a breather.

The 5th Armored Division is plunging ahead to bring up the northerly tip of Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's salient and has reached Githorn, 50 miles north of Magdeburg.

Southern Flank

Truck-riding infantrymen of the 83d Division on the southern flank were 25 miles southwest of the 2d Armored Division's post on the river near Magdeburg.

Ninth Army troops were mopping up Brunswick, advancing street by street and hunting out—and convincing—handfuls of German soldiers who refused to believe that for them the war is over. It is a job these veterans of Maj. Gen. Leland S. Hobbs have done many times before.

The finish of their job will put out of business several of Hitler's training schools for SS (Elite Guards) troops and a school for Hitler Youth leaders.

The 9th Army made the 240 miles from the Rhine to the Elbe in 19 days, an average of better than 19 miles a day. It has made six major river crossings since crossing the Roer February 23. The Roer was the narrowest but most troublesome, because the Germans opened floodgates to speed its current.

Russians Expecting Allied Juncture

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, April 12 (AP)—The possibility of an early meeting between the Red Army and the western Allies in the heart of Germany held the attention of the Russian public today as it learned that American troops were less than 57 miles form Berlin and 115 miles from Soviet lines along the Oder.

The same question is on everyone's tongue—when is the war going to end? The Soviet press, however, is keeping silent on this tion and there has been no speculation.

Final Drive Across Oder, Neisse

The impression prevails here that the war will end when the Red Army launches its impending offensive across the Oder and Neisse rivers, where—according to Soviet front-line dispatches — the main strength of the German Army is concentrated.

There has been no hint when this drive may be launched, but one gains the impression here that the zero hour is approaching.

Konev At Breslau

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukraine Army, of course, still is tied up in one sector liquidating the large German garrison of Breslau, but the Russians have been stepping up their attacks here and the capture of the Silesian city on the banks of the Oder seems not too far distant.

The fall of Breslau would free many troops for a drive westward.

While the Russian public is greatly elated by the rapid advance of the American armies, the average Soviet citizen is firmly convinced that the great majority of the German forces are massed on the Eastern front, battling the Russians for every mile.

Vienna's Fall Expected Any Time

Dispatches from the Russian front, meanwhile, suggested that Moscow's big guns might salute the fall of Vienna any time now.

Official Russian dispatches were silent on a German announcement that Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3d Urkainian Army tanks were driving westward from Vienna in the direction of Linz and Munich, but there was every reason to believe this was true.

It is known that Tolbukhin has punched a big hole in Nazi positions and presumably he has poured through it rapidly.

RUSSIAN FORCES MOP UP IN VIENNA

LONDON, Friday, April 13—(AP) Russian armored forces, leaving doomed Nazi forces in Vienna only a seven-mile escape gap, yesterday cut the Austrian capital's last lifelines with the Czechoslovak city of Bruenn (Brno) while spearheads burst within 33 miles of that war arsenal city of an invasion of southern Moravia.

In the rubble-strewn streets of Vienna, tommy-gunners of Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army battled in bitter house-to-house fighting against Nazi hold-out troops from 60 blocks of the Jewish quarter of Leopoldstadt between the Danube and the Danube canal.

While Russian river gunboats landed Marines in the rear of German remnants in Vienna, Berlin reported a general Nazi withdrawal along the Danube valley west of the capital toward Hitler's Bavarian mountain fortress at Berchtesgaden.

South of Vienna, mountain fighters of Marshal Tolbukhin's army battled into the foothills of the Austrian Alps on a 28-mile front, seizing more than 40 towns and villages on the roads to Graz, Austria's second city. The front extended from Markt-Allhau, 33 miles northeast, to Eltendorf, 35 miles east in the Feistritz river valley.

Northeast of Vienna, Moscow revealed that Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian army had crossed the Moravian frontier and invaded that last great war arsenal of the tottering German Wehrmacht by capturing the village of Radejov.

Capturing 30 towns and villages in the area, Malinovsky's men drove within two miles southeast of the great rail center of Hodinin by taking Katov, where the onrushing Soviet spearheads were 33 miles southeast of the great war production center of Bruenn (Brno).

North of Vienna, Malinovsky threw 300,000 infantrymen and two motorized corps into battle on the Marchfeld plain in a drive to close an iron ring around the capital. After a heavy tank battle, Malinovsky's troops swept across the Vienna-Bruenn highway and railroad by taking the road and rail junction of Elbesbrunn, five miles north of Vienna.

While 5,000 enemy troops were captured in street battles in Vienna, Malinovsky's troops drove within seven miles of the Danube northwest of Vienna. Within the narrow escape corridor runs a highway and railroad to Prague, but both Berlin and Moscow reports said that Russian troops had crossed the Danube in this area to cut across these lines.

There was no confirmation of this from Moscow, but it was evident that the last possible escape lines were under violent artillery fire.

The Nazi Transocean agency reported widescale Nazi "disengaging movements" in the Danube valley just west of Vienna, a classic invasion route to Bavaria.

German withdrawals in Austria within 16 miles of Berchtesgaden and 75 miles of Bavaria followed Nazi broadcasts that Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army was leaving beleaguered Vienna far behind and attacking with all speed up the Danube valley toward Linz and Munich.

Berlin virtually wrote off the Austrian capital as lost, the Transocean agency saying gloomingly: "the decision is at hand. . . . The battle rapidly is approaching its end."

To protect the withdrawal in Austria, Berlin asserted Nazi troops were exerting pressure between the Drava and the Danube on the roads to Austria's second city of Graz, from which Soviet mountain fighters were 32 miles away in the heart of the Austrian Alps.

Both Moscow and Berlin, meanwhile, again predicted the zero-hour for the Red army's frontal assault on Berlin was near.

Moscow dispatches said that the Soviet capital was alive with talk of an imminent juncture between the Red army and the Allies, but there were no signs when the Russians would attack from the Oder-Neisse sectors east and southeast of the German capital.

"The impression is that zero-hour is approaching," Associated Press Correspondent Eddy Gilmore cabled from Moscow.

Hole Is Punched In Nazis' Line Past Vienna

London, April 12 (AP)—Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian Army has punched a big hole in German defenses west of Vienna, Moscow dispatches said today, and Berlin reported Soviet armor had reached a point between Krems and Melk, 115 miles from Berchtesgaden.

Soviet troops virtually completed the occupation of Vienna, and dispatches from the Russian capital said "Moscow's guns may salute the freeing of the ancient Austrian capital tonight."

In Sight Of Highway

Northwest of Bratislava, the Russians were fighting within sight at least of the Vienna-Bruenn highway, last escape route for the Germans northward out of the capital.

Moscow dispatches said the encirclement had been completed. Berlin said Soviet gunboats were putting tommy gunners ashore in the rear of German troops still fighting on the 9-mile long island in northern Vienna between the river and Danube Canal.

Berlin-Front Warning

The German commander on the Berlin front was reported by the German radio to have issued an order of the day to his troops warning that the zero hour for the push by Marshal Gregory Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army Group, its bases along the Oder could be expected at any time.

Soviet air reconnaissance heralding such an assault already is "exceptionally brisk," a Berlin military spokesman said.

"In the Oder bend from north of Gueben (50 miles southeast of Berlin) as far as Kuestrin, enemy motorized and rail movements continue and indicate a growing Russian readiness for the offensive," he said.

Nazi General Doomed

The German communiqué said General Lasch, commander at Koenigsberg, had been court-martialed for cowardice in surrendering the East Prussian capital and sentenced to death in absentia.

"Reprisals will be taken against his family," the official German war bulletin added.

Berlin said Tolbukhin's forces had reached the Danube bend, 42 miles west of Vienna and 12 miles west of St. Piten.

Mopping up of the last enemy resistance progressed rapidly inside Vienna, vital communications center and second city of the Greater Reich.

Most Of Island Held

Russian troops yesterday stormed across the Danube Canal inside the capital, gaining control of half the island between the canal and the river, where the Nazis were making a final stand.

Northeast of the capital the Russians slashed one of the last German escape routes—a railroad running north to Lundenburg and the Czechoslovak city of Bruenn.

Supply Road Cleared

A great tank battle raged in that area, as the Germans tried to check the westward drive of Marshal Ivan S. Malinovsky's 2d Ukrainian Army for a linkup with Marshal Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian troops sweeping through and beyond Vienna from the south.

In Czechoslovakia, meanwhile, the 2nd and 4th Ukrainian armies linked up in the Carpathian Mountains and cleared a supply road from Poland to the Vienna front.

Tolbukhin's forces captured one of the Danube Canal bridges intact and raced across under Nazi mortar fire, quickly seizing the Vienna electric power station and clearing the entire Prater Park area, chief amusement center of the city.

Pressing farther along the narrow island, the Russians engaged a heterogeneous Nazi garrison, which included Luftwaffe pilots, sailors, Volkssturmers, SS men and even boys from Junkers schools, and then broke into the Jewish quarter of Leopoldstadt, one of the last three districts held by the Germans.

There the Germans were fighting from cellars, overturned streetcars and from their own burned-out tanks.

NAZI TROOPS MAY MAKE LAST-DITCH STAND IN NORWAY

SINGLETON

LONDON, April 12 — (AP) Indications that Germany plans to wage last-ditch warfare from Norway's high-rimmed fjords, air bases and mountain fortresses raised a new possibility today of an Allied request that Sweden sacrifice her neutrality.

Informed quarters speculated that such an appeal might be for Sweden to throw her well-armed force of 600,000 troops against the Germans, or that she at least allow Allied troops to pass over Swedish soil to reach the Germans and avert a hazardous amphibious operation.

Proud, fighting Norway, after five years of German occupation, seems unlikely to present such a plea unless in concert with the Allies. Privately, however, many of her people say they can see no other way to save their homeland from savage destruction.

This view represented a sharp shift from most Norwegian opinion which has held that Sweden, having sat out the war during the years of Nazi dominance, should not be called into its last stages to share the fruits of victory.

The Norwegian government information office quoted the clandestine newspaper "Sisaltetinen" in Norway as saying: "Should Sweden intervene, she must use all her military strength for a quick decision. This should be possible, considering the comparative strength of the Swedish army and the German army of occupation. x x x With all respect for the Swedish volunteer movement, we feel that it would not be strong enough."

The information bureau said it interpreted underground reports as meaning that "both the Swedish people and government are, in fact, aware of their moral responsibilities and are prepared to assist in saving what can still be saved."

Norwegian sources here said the trend among them was in favor now of Swedish intervention, and that this feeling stemmed from experience with German destruction and evidence that the Germans were increasing their forces and strengthening defenses.

They estimated Germany has 200,000 troops in their country, plus a Quisling force of 5,000 or 10,000, controlling southwestern Norway and the coast north to the Altafjord airfield.

Twin drives through Sweden, these sources contend, could split the German forces in Norway into three parts, and give the Germans little opportunity to destroy factories and electrical power plants.

As alarm signals of German intentions, the Norwegians report the Germans have:

1—Moved important remnants of their navy to Norway.

2—Built their air force in Norway to its strongest point.

3—Offset troop withdrawals with reinforcements from the army ousted from Finland.

4—Imported heavy guns and other war material.

5—Shipped in ammunition and supplies by air.

6—Fortified U-boat ports and improved harbors.

7—Spent "millions of kroner" improving airfields.

8—Laid in "considerable" oil stocks.

BRITISH CLAIM NAZIS WILL QUIT WITHIN 6 WEEKS

JOHN DAUPHINEE

LONDON, April 12—(AP) Whitehall believes now that organized German resistance will be ended within five or six weeks and that afterwards the defeat of Japan will come much sooner than anyone had been able to expect.

(Whitehall, the street on which some of the chief government offices are located, is a term generally used to designate government circles.)

There may still be pockets where the Germans will be holding out, such as Bavaria and Norway, but be the end of May it is believed the situation will be such that Allied military leaders will announce Germany is beaten.

This "interim" statement of the downfall of Germany will not be official end of the European war, however. It may be several years before the official proclamation of peace.

By that time the last resisters will have been dug out and the Allies will have put into effect severe peace terms. There is not the least hope for Germany that Britain, the United States and Russia will show any sympathy.

Prime Minister Churchill and his cabinet colleagues are determined to impose terms to insure Germany absolutely will be unable to offer even the threat of war again.

The cabinet is most anxious to avoid any "mafficking" when Germany is declared beaten, because a huge British effort will be going into the war against Japan.

(The relief on May 17, 1900, of the town of Mafeking, besieged by the Boers for seven months, set off a delirious celebration in London and other towns. Since then mafficking has been a colloquial term for wild demonstrations.)

Perhaps 1,000,000 additional troops plus R.A.F. and Royal Navy forces will have to be sent to the Far East to speed the victory.

But if Germany is treated harshly after victory, Japan is going to be treated even more drastically, it is believed.

Japan can count on being stripped of all her colonies in the Pacific area, with the Japanese people restricted solely to their homeland.

Island possessions she was granted after the first great war almost certainly will revert permanently to the United States and Australia, nations with the greatest interest in maintenance of peace in the Far East.

NAZI PLANE LOSS TOLL RISES TO 989

London, April 12 (A. P.).—German plane losses in the last six days mounted to 989 today when eleven American Thunderbolt pilots strafed two airfields near Leipzig where 350 gas-less aircraft were parked. The Thunderbolt pilots attacked until their ammunition was exhausted and at the end counted seventy-four planes destroyed and eighteen others damaged.

Allied planes raked Berlin with bombs again during the night, dealt punishing blows to German shipping and pressed their methodical program of reducing the enemy's aerial defenses.

Three times the belabored German capital and unloaded 2,000-pound blockbusters, running up the total there to six raids in two nights and fifty-six in the last forty-nine days.

Five German merchant vessels were set afire late yesterday by Beaufighters and Mosquitoes of the R. A. F. Coastalt Command, continuing their stepped-up attacks on enemy shipping off Norway.

Led by Lieut.-Col. Paul P. Douglas of Paragould, Ark., the eleven Thunderbolt pilots first attacked sixty planes on a field west of Leipzig and then found about 300 others lined up on a large field east of the city. Racing back and forth across the fields, Douglas himself bagged twelve of them.

"We set seventeen on fire and damaged six before the flak got too hot at the first field, then we went to work on the other one," said Lieut. Edwin Ferrar, 118-40 192d street, St. Albans, Queens, who accounted for seven planes.

American Eighth Air Force heavy bombers remained idle today for the first time in ten days.

Allies Bomb Berlin, German Shipping

London, April 12 - (AP)—Allied planes raked Berlin with bombs again during the night, dealt punishing blows to German shipping and pressed their methodical program of reducing the enemy's aerial defenses.

Three times RAF Mosquitos visited the belabored German capital and unloaded 2,000-pound blockbusters, running up the total there to six raids in two nights and 56 in the last 49 days.

Five Ships Set Afire

Five German merchant vessels were set afire late yesterday by Beaufighters and Mosquitos of the RFA coastal command, continuing their stepped up attacks on enemy shipping off Norway.

Allied planes destroyed 112 more German aircraft—23 in dogfights and 89 on the ground—in operations Wednesday and Wednesday night, boosting to 915 the number of enemy planes knocked out in the last five days.

Blast Flying Bomb Supply

RAF Typhoons combing Holland blew up what they believed to be a big flying-bomb supply, the pilots reporting a tremendous explosion and numerous fires followed their bombing.

British Halifaxes, escorted by Mustangs and Spitfires and United States fighters of the 1st Tactical Air Force, made concentrated attacks on Nuernberg and Hayreuth, causing large fires.

The British Air Ministry said a bomber, three coastal planes and a fighter were missing after these operations.

Pact Seen as Pattern.

London, April 12 (A. P.).—The pact between Yugoslavia and Russia providing for military and economic collaboration, was regarded here as offering a probable pattern for future agreements between the Soviet Union and her immediate neighbors.

The treaty contained these five principle points:

1. A pledge to continue the struggle against Germany until final victory, with mutual assistance to the fullest extent.

2. A pledge of military aid if either becomes involved again in hostilities with Germany "or with any other Government which might ally itself with Germany officially or in any form."

3. Mutual participation "in a spirit of the most sincere collaboration in all international activities for the purpose of insuring peace and the security of nations."

4. An agreement to refrain from concluding any alliance directed at the other party to the pact.

5. Establishment of a post-war policy to "act in a spirit of friendship and collaboration with the aid of furthering the development and consolidation of economic and cultural ties between the people of the two countries."

117 Luftwaffe Planes Destroyed On Ground

London, April 12 (AP)—At least 117 German planes were destroyed on the ground today by United States 9th Air Force continent based warplanes, bringing the toll of enemy planes destroyed in six days to 1,032.

Eighth Air Force heavy bombers were held on their bases by weather.

London, April 12 (AP)—Sir Clive Ballieu, former director-general of the British Purchasing Commission in the United States, has been elected president of the Federation of British Industries, succeeding Sir George Nelson.

Swiss Get 2 Foreign Planes

London, April 12 (AP)—The Swiss radio said two aircraft, a Hungarian plane with two passengers and a German trainer with one passenger, landed on Swiss soil today. The broadcast gave no identification of the passengers, who were interned.

London's Papers Skeptical About Hitler Rumors

London, April 12 (AP) — British morning papers greeted with frank skepticism today published reports that Adolf Hitler is seriously ill and has yielded his place to Heinrich Himmler.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Mail recalled that Dr Paul Joseph Goebbels is "still a good propagandist" and warned that "such stories must be treated with reserve."

"There have been indications that Himmler wasn't a do-or-die Nazi, that in certain circumstances he might try to negotiate peace," the Mail correspondent added. "If that is one of his tricks at the moment, he is not likely to obtain a hearing from the Allies."

"Of Little Moment"

The Daily Herald's diplomatic correspondent, writing under the heading "Beware of Hitler Yarns," took a similar attitude.

"I do not place the least credence in them," he said.

Some papers said even if reports of Hitler's illness were true it was not a matter of great moment.

"To the Allies, who will soon rid the world of the gang now ruling Germany, it does not matter much," observed the Yorkshire Post.

"Butcher Of Europe"

The Daily Mail, commenting in the same vein, said "Himmler, the butcher of Europe, has undoubtedly been gathering power into his hands lately but his record is hardly less villianous than that of Hitler."

A wave of speculation over Hitler's status was stirred yesterday when the diplomatic correspondent of the British Press Association said he had authoritative information that Hitler is "a dying man" and has been superseded by Himmler.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden subsequently was asked in the House of Commons if he could confirm a report that Hitler had been assassinated, but indicated he gave the report no credence.

London Is Optimistic

By John Dauphinee

LONDON, April 12 (AP)—London believes now that organized German resistance will be ended within five or six weeks and that afterward the defeat of Japan will come much sooner than any one had been able to expect.

There may still be pockets where the Germans will be holding out, such as Bavaria and Norway, but by the end of May, it is believed, the situation will be such that Allied military leaders will announce that Germany is beaten.

By then, it is remarked here, the last resisters will have been dug out and the Allies will have put severe peace terms into effect. NAZIS PUNISH KIN OF BEATEN GENERAL

London, April 12 (A. P.).—In its broadcast communique the German High Command announced today that Gen. Lasch, the German commander at Koenigsberg, had been court-martialed for cowardice for surrendering the East Prussian capital and sentenced in absentia to death.

"Reprisals will be taken against his family," the communique added.

Marine Insurance Cut Again

LONDON, April 12 (AP)—Another reduction on cargo war risk insurance rates was announced today by the Institute of London Underwriters—the second cut in a week for some shipments. Reductions included from 1½ to 1 per cent on shipments between the United Kingdom and South America, either Atlantic or Pacific; from 1½ to 1¼ per cent between Spain and South America, and from 2½ to 2 per cent between South America and Australasia.

BRITISH RELAX DRAFT

London, April 12 (A. P.).—Great Britain plans to discontinue the conscription of men of 31 and older after May 1 except where a need for specialists or other special factors present themselves, Labor Minister Ernest Bevin announced in the House of Commons today. With the same exceptions, the conscription of men and women for war jobs under Britain's national service law will also be discontinued, he added.

No British women have been called up for a considerable time now.

UNRRA Official Defends Unit

London, April 12 (AP)—Fred Hoehler, director of the Bureau of Displaced Persons of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, said today that chief responsibility for coping with the mass of "slave laborers" liberated since the Allies crossed the Rhine must be placed with the military.

He was commenting upon British press charges that UNRRA had failed in the handling of displaced persons.

"At this stage displaced-person operations in Germany, as must be the case in any military zone, is full of military responsibility," he said, adding that a statement concerning the operation should come from authorities at General Eisenhower's supreme headquarters.

"Advance With Field Forces"

"However, based on a press interview given by General Michelsen, chief of the Displaced Persons, Refugee and Welfare Branch of Supreme Headquarters G5, it can be said that the Army Civil Affairs detachments are going forward with field forces, carrying food and medical supplies and service personnel to aid displaced persons."

UNRRA teams and repatriation representatives of the United Nations are moving forward at the request of supreme headquarters as operations permit, he continued.

Admitting difficulties in recruiting teams, due to manpower shortages everywhere, he said 29 such teams had gone forward to date and that nearly 2,000 recruits were being equipped and trained.

Younger Persons Available

He said an order by Gen. George C. Marshall in Washington, permitting release of officers and enlisted men to UNRRA's staff would make younger men and women available for the work.

President Roosevelt's announcement that UNRRA would send 200 teams of workers into Germany to care for United Nations nationals brought editorial warnings from London newspapers today that such relief work would face tremendous problems of shortages and inadequate shipping.

"Slow Getting Started"

The Daily Herald said UNRRA had been slow in getting under way, declaring that in the collapse of Germany "there has been no strong, sustaining hand from outside to succor the homeless, hungry exiles. And only now, weeks after the foreseeable need matured, is something being done."

In an editorial entitled "World Shortage," the Daily Telegraph declared that no one could feel satisfied concerning the progress of UNRRA's work.

"The plight of a large part of Europe is grave already and more urgent efforts are required to solve the problem," it added.

LONDON RETURN OPPOSED

Churchill Urges Evacuees to Stay Away Until Notified

LONDON, April 12 (AP)—A half million Londoners who were evacuated during the German V-bomb attacks were advised today by Prime Minister Churchill to stay where they were unless they had a place to live in the city.

"As soon as the time is ripe they will be told of the Government's organized arrangements for their return in comfort and with due speed," Mr. Churchill said, indicating that in some instances, at least, this would be after victory in Europe.

Britain has suffered 146,742 civilian casualties, 60,583 killed and 86,159 injured, from enemy air action since the beginning of the war, the Air Ministry announced. The figures included 792 killed and 1,426 badly injured during March.

CHURCHILL INSISTS ON FULL SURRENDER

London, April 12 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill declared in the House of Commons today that the Allied policy of unconditional surrender for Germany still stands, even though Gen. Eisenhower has asserted that the war in Europe may not end with a clean-cut surrender of all the German forces.

"The policy of unconditional surrender does not exclude unconditional surrender piecemeal, and is not necessarily applied only to a wholesale surrender," Mr. Churchill added.

Rhys Davies, Laborite, raised the question by saying that Gen. Eisenhower's declaration meant in effect that the policy of unconditional surrender "was completely unworkable." He then referred to the Boer war in South Africa, contending that after the proclamation to end hostilities had been issued, "the war actually began in earnest and lasted for two years afterward."

Mr. Churchill replied that he believed that Mr. Davies was "not very accurate in his history."

Himmler Orders Every Town, House Defended to Last Man

KASISCHKE

LONDON, April 12—(AP) With the threat increasing to more big German cities—Bremen, Hamburg, Magdeburg, Leipzig and Berlin itself — Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler decreed today that "every German town and every house must be defended to the last man" and threatened death to anyone disobeying the order.

Himmler's decree was followed by one from the army high command declaring that "garrison commanders are held personally responsible for the execution of this order" and warning that "any who deflect from this duty will be condemned to death, together with civilians who may have prevailed on them."

Gen. Lasch Executed

In a swift sequel the German High command announced the death sentence had been imposed in absentia on General Lasch, who surrendered the East Prussian fortress capital of Koenigsberg to the Russians earlier in the week.

"Reprisals will be taken against Lasch's family," a High Command communique asserted.

This was the first such bald official statement of the Nazi practice of inflicting punishment—possibly death—upon the relatives of those incurring the displeasure of the Army or the Nazi party. Prisoners previously have said such reprisals were common.

The High command accused Gen. Lasch of "cowardice in prematurely surrendering Koenigsberg," where the Russians took more than 92,000 prisoners after killing 42,000 Germans.

Himmler's decree obviously was aimed at combatting the epidemic of white flags on the Western Front. He accused the city populations there of cowardice in surrendering to the Allies on the promise that their cities would be spared destruction. Some cities, he declared, had surrendered to scouting parties racing in armored cars far ahead of tanks and artillery.

Henceforth, the Gestapo chief said, no German town will be declared an open city, but must be "defended to the last man." Every person responsible for the defense of a town or village who disregards the order will lose his honor and his life, he said.

Obviously the Wehrmacht has neither the men or the material to defend every town and village, and the German people do not have the will to do so. Some British observers interpreted Himmler's decree as intended solely for the record, aimed at establishing the legend of United German resistance to the last rather than at actually organizing such resistance.

Army's Discipline Weakening

The fact that the High command was forced to resort to the death threats indicated that the Army's discipline was weakening, for the pronouncement plainly indicated that some garrison commanders were surrendering towns in defiance of strict orders.

Since the Wehrmacht order threatened death not only to surrendering commanders but to civilians "who prevail upon them to deflect in their duty," it was clear that an increasing number of officials and officers were refusing to obey the Nazi policy of national suicide and that the instinct for self-preservation was winning over terror of the Gestapo.

The High command's pronouncement was issued as a supplement to the regular military communique. It was extraordinary in that it bore the signatures not only by Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, head of the armed forces, but also of Himmler and Martin Bordmann, the latter as "head of the party chancellery."

London observers, who believe Hitler has been superseded, interpreted the several signatures to mean that Hitler no longer was in central control at his headquarters, else he would have signed the order.

A German military commentator, observing that American forces had reached the Elbe river west of Berlin, expressed the opinion there would be no immediate drive upon the capital but that the Allies and the Russians first would join forces south of Berlin; splitting the German armies.

the propagandist still tried to hold out hope over salvaging something from the Reich's military collapse.

"On the other hand," he said, "our enemies must finish this war quickly or they will stand no chance of winning this to-be-or-not-to-be struggle at all."

Harping his familiar theme that the Allied coalition was tottering, Goebbels said "the alliance can only be kept up because the peoples know that the war will come to its conclusion very soon."

"To gain time in this phase of the war means to gain everything," he said, exhorting the people to "leave no stone unturned" in their defense against the Allies.

"National resistance is not something for the Wehrmacht only," he wrote. "It is something for the entire German people. We all must swear rather to die than live under a foreign yoke. We must rather risk the most hazardous enterprise than to resign."

"Only in this way can the enemy be held," Goebbels said. "He must be engaged in guerrilla warfare and must be made to suffer great loss of blood."

Arguing that the Allies only "employ the daring strategy" of sending flying tank columns deep into the Reich "because they believe they will meet no resistance," the Propaganda Minister declared, "this is our chance. We must not look on passively, but must resist actively."

In an obvious attempt to stiffen resistance on the crumbling Western Front, he warned "there is no difference between the Eastern and Western Allies and life under their power would be hell for the Germans in any case."

Although there have been rumors, unconfirmed, that Hitler has been supplanted by Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, Goebbels continued to hold up the Fuehrer as the Germans' beacon of hope.

"I know for certain that our Fuehrer will find a way out from this dilemma and that only by his genius can the seemingly lost sense of this war be renewed," he said.

Goebbels Declares W Cannot Last Much Lo

LONDON, April 12—(AP) Nazi propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels declared today that "the war cannot last much longer in my opinion," a German broadcast said.

In an article in his weekly "Das Reich," Goebbels said, "we have sunk very low."

Although conceding that Germany's enormous "losses of territory in the east, west and south" had brought the nation to a crisis,

Decrees No German City Shall Be Declared Open—Bans Easy Surrender to Yanks.

London, April 12 (A. P.).—Heinrich Himmler, commander of the German Home Army and Gestapo chief, issued a decree today declaring that "no German city will be declared an open town," DNB announced in a Berlin broadcast.

"Every German town and every house must be defended," the SS leader declared. Every village, every town will be defended with all means. Every German man responsible for the defense of a place who does not follow this order loses his honor and his life."

DNB said that the decree was necessitated by a tendency toward easy surrender in the west to American spearheads commanders who promised that if the towns gave up they would not be destroyed.

Although Himmler signed the order as Reichsfuehrer of the SS (Elite Guard), unverified reports reaching [illegible] have said he was virtually the ruler of Germany and had superseded Hitler.

British morning papers, however, greeted with frank skepticism published reports that Hitler has yielded his place to Himmler.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Mail recalled that Dr. Paul Joseph Goebels is "still a good propagandist" and warned that "such stories must be treated with reserve."

"There have been indications that Himmler wasn't a do-or-die Nazi; that in certain circumstances he might try to negotiate peace," the Mail correspondent added. "If that is one of his tricks at the moment he is not likely to obtain a hearing from the Allies."

The Daily Herald's diplomatic correspondent, writing under the heading "Beware of Hitler Yarns," took a similar attitude toward the reports.

Gauleiters Fleeing.

The gauleiter of the upper-Danube district has admitted over [illegible] Graz radio that he knows of many cases where gauleiters are deserting their districts, the British radio said today in a broadcast heard here by NBC Gustave Hoehm, the manager of the upper Danube labor front, fled his district, was arrested at Braunau on the Inn River and was brought before the Peoples Court, the gauleiter said. He did not reveal the fate of Hoehm, according to BBC. Braunau is the birthplace of Adolf Hitler.

During the night large posters were pasted on walls in Graz, Leoben and other Austrian cities, asking the citizens to resist the Germans and to help end the war, BBC said.

S. H. A. E. F. Enlarges Its Map

PARIS, April 12 (AP).—Supreme headquarters changed its huge wall battle map today in an effort to keep pace with its armies. The huge 1-to-100,000 scale German map was shifted over and bent around the corner of the briefing room. The new strip showed Berlin and Leipzig.

MORE ART TREASURES CAPTURED BY YANKS

PARIS, April 12—(AP) Another hideaway of art treasures, believed to surpass any store of paintings and art works yet uncovered, has been found by American soldiers at Mercedes, south of Gotha, it was announced today.

Cataloguing of the cache has just begun. It is said to include virtually all the treasures stored for safekeeping from Berlin's public and private museums.

Giraud Family Freed

Wife and 13 Kin of General Return to France

DIJON, France, April 12 (AP).—The family of General Henri Giraud, liberated by American troops in Germany, arrived here today. One daughter died during her internment.

Those freed were Mrs. Giraud, two daughters, seven grandchildren, a son-in-law and two sisters-in-law of Mrs. Giraud. The family was arrested in April, 1944, at Aix-en-Provence and taken to Thuringia.

FELLED V-BOMBS

Paris, April 12 (A. P.).—Anti-aircraft gun crews of the U. S. Ninth Air Force shot down 60 per cent of the thousands of German V-bombs aimed at Antwerp between October and March, Brig.-Gen. William L. Richardson, chief of the Ninth Air Defense Command, announced today. Less than 5 per cent of the Nazi V-1 and V-2 weapons directed at Antwerp's forty miles of docks reached the port area and the remaining percentage of bombs went wide of the target, Gen. Richardson said.

An average of more than twenty V-bombs daily were fired at Antwerp in the six months and some days they totaled 150.

REOPEN KINDERGARTENS IN PARTS OF GERMANY

PARIS, April 12—(AP) Kindergartens have been reopened in Allied-occupied Germany.

A set of seven old pre-1933 German textbooks found in Teachers College, Columbia university, is being reproduced so that the non-political education of German children in the first to fourth grades can begin soon.

The kindergartens came first because no textbooks were needed. The first to fourth grades will be opened as soon as the printing of the book is ready.

French Decorate 3 Yanks For Health Work

Paris, April 12 (AP)—The French Government today decorated two American Medical Corps officers and a member of the Federal Economic Administration for their public health work.

The officers are Lieut. Col. Henry Ross, chief of the public health section of the American Expeditionary Force, and Major Harold Macy, his first assistant.

Ross is the husband of Glenda Farrell, New York actress. Macy is on leave from the faculty of the University of Minnesota. St. Paul is his home town. Both received the award of Chevalier of the Order of Public Health.

Robert Gasen, a returned American and Federal Economic Administration doctor, received the same order.

British Leap Santerno River, Clash with Nazi Tiger Tanks

ROME, April 12—AP) The British Eighth army hammered westward today from three bridgeheads across the Santerno river and British armor locked in a heavy battle with Nazi Tiger tanks.

North of the new bridgeheads troops which had made amphibious landings from Lake Comacchio behind the enemy's lines captured the villages of Menate and Longastrino and linked up with other units advancing astride the Reno river.

Polish troops of the Eighth army, smashing along the vital highway nine (via Emilia) which runs from Bologna through Faenza captured Castel Bolognese, an important junction town five miles west of Faenza and 24 miles southeast of Bologna. Their dawn attack routed a strong enemy rear guard.

The Germans' strongest resistance across the Santerno came south of Mordana, where the veteran 26th Panzer division was fighting grimly, and a few miles farther north in the area just east of Massa and Lombarda where the enemy had massed many big Tiger tanks. The Germans launched several counterattacks in that vicinity.

Lt. Gen. Richard L. McCreery, commander of the Eighth army, sent his own armor pouring into the bridgeheads last night for a close range slugging match with the enemy tanks.

As a result of the Polish capture of Castel Bolognese and the elimination of enemy positions immediately to the north, the Eighth army was within 3 1-2 miles of Imola, another vital junction along the main road to Bologna.

In the west the American Fifth army battled within 14 miles of the naval base of La Spezia, seizing the mountain villages of Torana and Gragnana against only light resistance. Fifth army troops cleared the marble quarrying center of Carerra and five miles to the east took the village of Colonnata.

Every yard the Eighth army gains in the direction of Bologna, 25 miles west of the Santerno river, means greater danger to German troops in the 15-mile deep salient extending southward into the Apennines below the big rail center.

In a broadcast over the Rome radio, Gen. Mark W. Clark told Italian partisans behind the German lines that the "final battles for the liberation of Italy have begun." He warned them, however, that the time was not yet ripe for them to strike.

The thrust across the Santerno, which runs parallel to and about five miles west of the previously-crossed Senio river, brought Allied troops in the center of the Eighth army advance almost to the edge of the extensive Argenta marshlands.

The Germans were employing Tiger tanks and many multi-tank weapons in a grim effort to halt the British. The Nazis in Italy apparently are hopeful of finishing the war unbeaten on the battlefield.

Italian partisans aided American Fifth army troops in routing the Germans out of the famed marble quarrying center of Carrera, four miles northwest of captured Massa near Italy's west coast.

Carrara, with a population of 50,000, apparently was entered by the 442nd regiment, made up of Americans of Japanese ancestry, since they last were reported within a half-mile of its outskirts.

Flying Fortresses and Liberators pounded several rail points in northeastern Italy. Bomb-carrying Lightnings attacked two rail bridges just inside the Austrian frontier.

The Mediterranean air forces flew more than 3,000 sorties yesterday in close support of the Eighth army offensive and in strategic attacks in northern Italy and Yugoslavia. Fifteen planes, including eight heavy bombers, were lost. Two German craft were destroyed.

British Force 2d River In Italy

Rome, April 12 (AP)—British 8th Army troops battling heavy opposition have pushed across a second barrier thrown up by the Germans at the Santerno River, while on the opposite end of the front American troops, assisted by Italian Partisans, have captured Carrara, Allied headquarters announced today.

The crossing of the Santerno was forced "against strong opposition," the communiqué said.

The Santerno River runs parallel to and about 5 miles west of the Senio River line from which the 8th launched its new offensive four days ago.

Carrara is 4 miles north of Massa, west-coast hub whose capture by the 5th Army was announced yesterday.

Message By Clark

Meanwhile, in a message to Italian patriots behind German lines in northern Italy, Gen. Mark W. Clark said the "final battles for the liberation of Italy have begun."

He warned, however, that the moment for co-ordinated action had not yet arrived. The instructions were broadcast over the Rome radio.

Dozens of towns have been reduced to rubble around the stubborn Germans by artillery concentrations.

Cotignola, which was one of the first towns taken by the 8th Army in the new drive, was destroyed. Only about 1,000 of its normal population of 10,000 remained, living out the bombardments in cellars.

"Show Piece" Defense

Capture of Carrara apparently was accomplished by the 442d Regiment, made up of Americans of Japanese ancestry. They had been last reported only a half mile from the town, a marble quarry center of 50,000.

The Germans obviously were putting up one of their "show-piece" defenses all along the Italian front—a stubborn fight for every crossroad, despite the present situation inside Germany.

RAF Liberators were out in support of the 8th ground forces during the night, attacking points close to the battle line southwest of Lake Comacchio where enemy supplies were concentrated.

Sarajevo Area Raided

The new fighting in Italy was coincident with a reported German withdrawal north of Sarajevo in Yugoslavia. The Balkan Air Force has been attacking German communication lines in that area almost constantly for three days.

Ship Blows Up In Bari Harbor

Rome, April 12 (AP)—An American Liberty ship loaded with aerial bombs blew up in Bari harbor at noon Monday, killing or injuring possibly 1,867 Italian civilians and an unstated number of American and British service men, an Italian Government spokesman announced today.

Only two persons who were aboard the ship at the time were reported to have survived. They were Italian civilians who were blown clear. The identity of the ship was not disclosed pending an investigation by a military board of inquiry.

Warehouse Collapses

The next of kin of all American service and merchant service casualties have been notified. Tentatively, the Italian spokesman placed the toll of Italian dead at 267 and the injured at about 1,600.

Three other merchant ships caught fire from the explosion, but the flames were brought under control. The harbor, though damaged, continued to work to full capacity. A warehouse collapsed.

Investigation so far had brought no indication of the cause of the disaster, the second in Bari Harbor in less than two years. More than 1,000 persons, mostly American and British merchant seamen, were killed December 2, 1943, when German bombers sank seventeen ships in the harbor.

Ship Disappears

Lieut. Col. Robert H. Harper, Washington, D. C., who witnessed Monday's explosion from another ship only 200 yards away, said:

"I was standing in the officers' cabin when I heard a big crack, followed by another terrific one. I was thrown to the deck, together with others in the cabin. When I looked out the porthole the exploded ship had disappeared, to all intents and purposes."

Blown Through Wall

Lieut. Com. Jonathan Lee, of Liverpool, England, the port manager, was sitting in his office near by.

"I suddenly became airborne," he said. "I felt a sharp pain in my back. Then I found myself in another room and realized I had been blown through a wall."

The explosion was accompanied by a tidal wave which swept some dock workers into the water. The roof of Bari's 1,000-year-old Cathedral collapsed.

Two Air Marshals Reported Held

HEADQUARTERS OF GEN. OMAR N. BRADLEY, April 12 (AP)—Two leading field marshals of the German Air Force were reported tonight to have been arrested by the Nazis, reflecting the serious dissension believed existing in Germany.

The report which headquarters here considered reliable, said the two high air officers arrested were Huge Sperrle, 59 years of age, and Baron Wolfram von Richthofen, 49, son of Germany's top ace in World War I. Each commanded an air fleet.

No Troops, Nazi Officer Yields

WEIMAR, Germany, April 12 (AP).—Separated from his troops for four days, a high-ranking German officer surrendered to an American G. I. today and complained: "I have no troops to command." Wryly, he suggested that "it perhaps is significant that in the last war I was captured just before the Armistice was signed."

15 CAPTIVE BRITONS SLAIN BY GERMANS

With the British Second Army, Germany, April 12 (A. P.).—German Marines captured fifteen British soldiers, lined them up against a wall of a burning house and killed them today, just before the Fifty-third Welsh division captured Rethen by storm, British officers announced.

The slain Britons had entered the house during a night attack and were surrounded by the marines, who set fire to the place. The men were captured as they run out, lined up and shot. The scene was witnessed by a Sixteenth British soldier who feigned death to escape his comrades' fate.

15,000 Sales Set Free

With the United States Third Army, April 12 (A. P.).—The Ninetieth Division reported today the capture of an underground network of 100 salt mines, half of them housing slave laborers of Nazi subterranean factories. Fifteen thousand workers were liberated in the twenty-square-mile area east of Hersfeld. Most of them had come from the prison camp near Weimar.

Lieut.-Col William Russell of Chevy Chase, Md., AMG officer, said German authorities had rushed war machinery from plants in heavily bombed Berlin and Dresden to these mines as recently as six months ago.

"In one mine alone," he said, "there were 500 machines capable of making aircraft and tank motor parts. The lower levels of the mine, four miles in length, were well stocked with food and liquors, apparently for the German overseers in a siege emergency."

Two hundred and fifty captured women members of the French resistance movement were forced by the Germans to work ten or twelve hours daily in one of the subterranean factories. It was 1,400 feet deep.

"Their hands were cracked and infected by the salt," said Pfc. Pierre Charpentier, of 134 Broadway, Lynbrook, L. I.

In one underground factory the Americans found eighty-nine British prisoners, captured at Dunkirk. They had been ordered by the Germans a week previously to leave, but had refused.

Bicyclist Arranges Surrender of Weimar

By EDWARD D. BALL.

Weimar, Germany, April 12 (A. P.).—Weimar, birthplace of the German republic in 1919, surrendered to the United States Third Army's Eightieth Infantry Division without a shot today. The bloodless conquest was negotiated by a German bicycle courier.

Negotiations for the surrender began last night in the village of Troistedt, three miles south of the historic German city. The surrender ultimatum, which was to have expired at 8:30 A. M. today, was drawn up by Lieut.-Col. Paul Bandy of Hillsboro, Tex., and handed to the gray-haired Mayor of Troistedt, who then pedalled a bicycle into Weimar. Before 8 o'clock the Mayor was back—riding his bicycle again—and he was followed ten minutes later by the Over-Mayor of Weimar, who said his city was ready to give up. The American troops then marched in.

The Over-Mayor, riding in a limousine, brought with him Dr. Erica Fischer, whose American mother lives in Germany, and Dr. Fischer's German husband. Both Frau Fischer and her husband are psychologists. Both speak flawless English. The Fischers told Eightieth Division officers the German Army had pulled out of Weimar yesterday.

The Over-Mayor said simply: "We want to surrender."

How Ultimatum Read.

The ultimatum read:

"The American Army once again is marching triumphantly forward. Your city is surrounded and untenable. Surrender and you will be treated according to the rules of the Geneva convention."

The Mayor's limousine led the American column into the city, Capt. Lawrence A. Degner of New York city, the division's military Government officer, riding with the Mayor.

Simultaneously with the occupation of Weimar the Americans overran the infamous Buchenwald prison camp in the woods three miles northwest of the city, where they found between 20,000 and 25,000 political prisoners. The camp was said to have a capacity of 160,000. Divisional officers threw a guard about the camp and said the prisoners would be kept there until they were checked and disposition of their cases was decided.

Goethe's Home Destroyed

As infantrymen streamed into the city, Weimar's people lined the streets, some waving and cheering as if they were glad the war was over for them. The American conquerors passed the destroyed home of Goethe and the home of Schiller, which was badly damaged but can be restored. The home of Liszt, the composer, also was destroyed, as was the theater where the German republican constitution was signed in 1919.

Another bomb had destroyed a landmark familiar to American tourists, the church where Herder preached. Herder, a poet and minister, was a friend of Goethe.

Dr. Erica Fischer, a slender, middle aged woman with a New York accent, told of two big raids on the city and numerous smaller ones. Pointing from the mayor's office across the street to the ruins of the Wieland house on Wieland Square, which was named in honor of the German author who also was a friend of Goethe, she said it was destroyed in the first raid. Wittum's Palace, where the Duchess Anna Amalia lived close by, also was burned out.

Capt. William H. Chamberlain of San Francisco led the first doughboys into Weimar. The German police force, whose uniforms looked like those of the Wermacht, lined up in the streets and turned over their arms to the Americans.

tiations for surrender were started. The grey-haired mayor of the town pedalled his bicycle to Weimar, carrying from Lt. Col. Paul Bandy of Hillsboro, Tex., of the 80th, this ultimatum to the Weimar mayor:

"The American Army once again is marching triumphantly forward. Your city is surrounded and untenable. Surrender and you will be treated according to the rules of the Geneva convention."

The city was given until 8:30 this morning to surrender, but at 8 a. m., the little mayor came pedalling back followed closely in a limousine by the Weimar mayor, who announced "we want to surrender."

The limousine, carrying Weimar's mayor, Capt. Lawrence A. Degner of New York, the division's military government officer, and others, led the American column of troops into the city.

Simultaneously, other elements of the division captured the infamous Buchenwald prison camp, three miles away in the woods, but the 20,000 to 25,000 political prisoners were kept under guard until their cases are checked.

Weimar's mayor was accompanied by Dr. Erica Fischer, half-German and half-American, and her German husband, both of whom speak perfect English. Her American mother lives in Germany.

She said the German army abandoned Weimar Wednesday.

Frau Fischer pointed to many bomb-ruined historic landmarks, describing two heavy raids and several smaller ones by Allied planes earlier in the war.

"Our historical monuments are all gone," she said, "but I'm not complaining. I'm German, and war is 50-50." She said her son, Eric, was in the German army but now is in a prisoner of war center at Camp Lee, Va.

Weimar, Home of 1919 Republic, Falls Without Firing a Shot

WEIMAR, Germany, April 12—(AP) General Patton's 80th Infantry division today captured Weimar, birthplace of the short-lived 1919 German republic, and did not have to fire a shot.

In fact, the historic and bomb-torn city surrendered by bicycle, and many of its populace cheered the American conquerors, as though glad to be out of the war.

Job Of 'Mayor' Gives Yank Headache

By Harold V. Boyle

Liblar, Germany, April 12 (AP)—Some men seek public office and others have it thrust upon them.

One of the latter is Capt. C. P. Echerd, mayor of this mining town of 4,000 Germans "by appointment."

"And the sooner they find someone else to take it over, the better I will like it," said the young Greensboro (N.C.) infantry officer who became military governor because there was nobody to whom he could turn over the job.

Now for twelve hours a day—until the evening curfew confines the citizens to their homes—the captain is beset with Liblar's civic woes and ambushed on every hand by German civilians with personal problems. And all Echerd wants to do is to get the war over and get back to North Carolina.

200 Waiting One Morning

"This morning there were 200 people waiting to see me," he sighed, "and all of them had complaints."

They crowded around the drawling, unhappy officer and began singing the blues, to wit:

"Somebody stole my bicycle."

"I need a doctor."

"Can I go feed my cows and chickens outside of town?"

"Somebody stole 136,000 marks I hid in a coal mine."

Intermediary for Echerd is his German-born interpreter, Sergt. H. W. Hirsch, of New York city, who left the Reich before the Gestapo began breaking bones on a full-time basis. With his help and the assistance of the village priest, who has been named acting burgomeister, Echerd has been able to restore some order.

German Families Moved

But he still has to find a solution for everything from an emergency problem in obstetrics to a Polish girl's aching tooth.

"We moved all German families out of the secton of town occupied by our troops," Echerd said, "and at least ten times a day some housewife comes in wanting permission to go back to her home. They want to get another blanket or pick up the baby's cough syrup.

"Another woman wanted to take a coffin and go to the next town to bury a relative. Of course, we gave her permission. I had to get a physician for one woman who was about to have a baby—in my office, I was afraid.

"Most Germans are co-operative and obey army regulations strictly. They don't really have much choice in the matter.

CAPTIVE WOMEN FREED BY YANKS

Mistreatment Had Crazed Some Political Prisoners.

Heiligenstadt, Germany, April 12 (A. P.).—Three hundred women political prisoners, including a German housewife who served eighteen months for tearing Adolf Hitler's picture from a wall, have been liberated by a rapidly advancing American infantry column.

"Some of the women have been crazed by confinement," said Lt.-Col. Richard J. Conran of 484 First street, Brooklyn, N. Y. He added that the women were emaciated from lack of food and that their spirit had been broken by prison hardships and whippings.

"They ranged in age from girls who looked no more than 16 to gray-haired women of 60," Conran said. "They were kept under filthy conditions in a regular town prison and herded like sheep. They were of French, Polish, Dutch and German nationality. They were not criminals—just women who violated in one way or another the political rules of the Nazis. Yet we found 300 rubber clubs with wrist thongs with which the women were beaten regularly.

"They were forced to march at double-time as they moved about the prison—gray-haired old women were made to march like young soldiers."

Conran said one woman gave birth to a baby in the prison but that the infant died.

"When we freed them, they were half dead from hunger. Our doughboys took some rations from a group of captured German soldiers and gave them to the women. Some women cried when they saw a can of sardines being opened for them. They had been living for months almost entirely on potatoes."

German Signs Still Adorn Walls Throughout Europe

By Wade Werner

APR 14 1945

In Germany, April 13 (AP)—One of the biggest mopping-up jobs of this war scarcely has begun.

It's the job of removing outmoded German signs, slogans, warnings, directions and admonitions from the walls and buildings in Europe.

All through France, Belgium and Luxembourg deep into Germany one sees them, grotesquely out of tune with the times.

One public building still is richly adorned with inspirational excerpts from Hitler's speeches—this in the midst of liberated France. Scores of buildings once occupied by American soldiers retain signs directing where the Luftschutzkeller (air-raid shelter) may be found in case of Fliegergefahr (air alarm).

In the middle of France there's a hospital formerly used by the Wehrmacht still equipped with floor signs in German, German no smoking signs, even elevator shaft markings in German. The payoff in this hospital, however, is a ticket which was issued to a patient, if able to walk, entitling him to a seat in the hospital movie. The ticket bears this notation: "Unbenützte Karten Zurückgeben" (return unused tickets).

Inside Germany, of course, it seems natural to find signs in the German language. But many of them strike a fantastically discordant note. For example, the first thing a conquered German sees when he enters military government headquarters in a certain occupied town to submit an humble petition to American authority is a bold Nazi slogan, "Better death than slavery."

Across the front of a prominent public building a Nazi warning still proclaims "Victory or Bolshevistic Chaos." Perhaps the commonest sight in Germany is the slogan, "Victory or Siberia," which seems to be painted somewhere on almost every building. Inside office buildings and hotels, wherever they still are standing, every room seems to have at least one wall motto authored by Hitler.

Considering the evangelistic zeal wherewith Americans are supposed to be wiping out all traces of Nazi influence in Germany, persistence of such obvious traces in such bold lettering seems strange—but only at first. It soon becomes evident that both Germans and Americans are indifferent to such appeals. Apparently nobody believes propaganda anymore.

Or maybe the stark facts of death, destruction and defeat speak louder than anything man can paint on a wall in any language.

France Gets American Aid For Railroads

6TH ARMY GROUP IN FRANCE—(AP) Above the clang and clamor of the locomotive repair factory Col. Lewis E. Covin agreed that the United States Army is giving the French railroad industry a boost on its way to recovery.

Former trainmaster of the Atlantic Coast Line at Waycross, Ga., he is now in charge of an important section of rail line operated jointly by the Army's Military Railway Service and the Societe Nationale des Chemins de Fer.

In his area he not only has to run the railways and keep supplies rolling to French and American armies, but also build bridges, repair locomotives, build freight cars, and find the coal and oil to run his roads.

Much of his work is done by army railroaders, a great deal by French civilians.

The locomotive factory, somewhere in southern France, uses French civilian labor, repairing army locomotives on contract and steadily restoring French and captured German locomotives for use on French railways.

The freight car factory, located in another area, employs soldier labor to assemble five types of freight cars, most of them shipped knocked down from the United States.

These are some of the 39,000 railroad cars the Army is scheduled to feed onto French railway lines in the next year—refrigerator cars, high and low side gondolas and British type box cars.

"The United States has been furnishing most of the supplies and we have brought our own coal and oil along to operate our lines," Covin said.

"The help the French workers have given us has been unstinted. We haven't had a single serious case of labor trouble.

The French have some usable equipment left. For instance, they have been able to fit out complete hospital trains with their own equipment."

Along railways of Southern France it is common to see a 40 hommes-8 chevaux boxcar of the last war hooked into the same train with modern box cars.

And many a "Pershing engine"—the heavies they brought over for the last war—still haul freight around France.

Yugoslavia and Russia Conclude 20-Year Treaty for Mutual Aid

MOSCOW, April 12 (AP).—Soviet Russia and Yugoslavia announced today the conclusion of a twenty-year treaty of friendship and mutual assistance, pledging joint military effort against the Nazis in this war and in any future war involving Germany or an ally of Germany.

The treaty was signed yesterday at Moscow by Foreign Commissar Viacheslav M. Molotov, for Russia, and Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), for Yugoslavia, "on authorization of the Regency Council of Yugoslavia." Early Yugoslav ratification with a formal ceremony at Belgrade is expected.

Hailing the six-article treaty, Molotov declared it would "serve the cause of the United Nations, which are inclined toward a firm peace security in Europe," and of all freedom-loving peoples, especially Slav nations, who "will see in it a new consolidation in the struggle for their glorious future."

Marshal Tito said it would be "one of the foundation stones of future security in Europe," and declared Yugoslavia "relied and will rely for support on the powerful coalition of great allies forged in the struggle against the common enemy."

His statement suggested Yugoslavia would seek similar pacts with other nations.

Article 2 of the treaty reads: "Should one of the high contracting parties be drawn, in the post-war period, into military operations against Germany, in the event of that country renewing her aggressive policy, or against any state joining directly with Germany or in any other form in that war, the other high contracting party will immediately render to the high contracting party drawn into military operations military and other assistance and support with all the means at its disposal."

The treaty contains a one-year cancellation clause whereby either party may denounce it one year before the twenty-year period expires. Otherwise it is to remain automatically valid for successive five-year periods until one party cancels it a year before expiration of any five-year period.

[A Serbian national government, to operate within the framework of the Yugoslav government, has been organized with Dr. Blashko Neskovitch as President and Milentije Popovitch as Interior Minister, the Belgrade radio said in a broadcast reported yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission. Neskovitch and Popovitch are members of the Serbian Communist party.]

Russo-Yugoslav Pact Signed

20-Year Friendship and Mutual Aid Treaty Seen as Pattern for Future.

Moscow, April 12 (A. P.).—The Soviet Union and Yugoslavia concluded a twenty-year friendship and mutual assistance agreement today and early ratification was expected at formal ceremonies in Belgrade. The signers were Premier Marshal Tito for Yugoslavia and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov for Russia.

The treaty contains a one-year cancellation clause whereby either party may renounce it one year before the 20-year period expires. Otherwise, it is automatically valid for successive five-year period.

Meanwhile a Tass dispatch from Belgrade reported today the "formation of a new Serbian government." The Serbian Premier is Blagoye Meshkovic, and the Minister of Internal Affairs is tough, youthful Milentia Popovic, Tass said.

[The dispatch did not explain this development, but apparently it would indicate the setting up a Serbian section within the framework of the Yugoslav Government.]

The treaty, said Molotov, "strengthens the relations of friendship and closest collaboration formed between the people of the U. S. S. R. and Yugoslavia in their joint combat against the common enemy, the German invaders." He added that it also would aid the United Nations in establishing a "firm peace and security in Europe."

Reds See Victory Near.

Moscow, April 12 (A. P.).—The impression prevails here that the war will end when the Red Army launches its impending offensive across the Oder and Neisse rivers, where—according to Soviet front-line dispatches—the main strength of the German Army is concentrated. There has been no hint when this drive may be launched, but one gains the impression here that the zero hour is approaching.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukraine Army, of course, still is tied up in one sector liquidating the large German garrison of Breslau, but the Russians have been stepping up their attacks [illegible] and the capture of this [illegible] here Silesian city on the Oder seems not too far distant. The fall of Breslau would free many troops for a drive westward.

While the Russian public is greatly elated by the rapid advance of the American armies, the average Soviet citizen is firmly convinced that the great majority of the German forces are massed on the eastern front, battling the Russians for every mile.

REDS SAY NAZIS RELY ON ALLIES

Assert Our Benevolency Is Counted On by Foe.

Moscow, April 12 (A. P.).—A writer in Izvestia, the Soviet Government newspaper, declared today that Allied benevolency toward the Germans was growing, and that it formed an integral part of Nazi plans to go underground in preparation for another war. He cited a statement from abroad, to the effect that "an appreciable part of the German people are friendly toward the invading army," and commented: "This benevolency undoubtedly forms the basis for Adolf Hitler's plans."

He said that the impression was gained, "as may be seen from the history of the Reichsbank's gold reserves," that the Germans were trying to use the Allied occupational zone for saving foreign exchange values and army cadres.

The Nazis, he continued, were sending emissaries "in all directions" and apparently are prepared even to repeat the jump of Rudolph Hess," erstwhile No. 2 Nazi who made a strange flight to Britain in 1941, shortly before Germany attacked Russia. The writer referred to "the well known Hitlerite envoy Karl Schnurre sitting in Stockholm," a German Foreign Office trade envoy said to be recuperating from bronchitis in a Stockholm hospital. Last week the British Legation in Stockholm denied rumors that he had established contact with them.

"Cartel movements by German industrialists and patent agreements have been put into motion," the writer added. "On the other hand a provocative project has been advanced, not without the co-operation of the Vatican, concerning 'the formation of a strong military government in Germany' headed by Dr. Heinrich Bruening," exiled chief of the dissolved German Catholic Center party, who has come under periodic fire of the Moscow press.

Poles Act to Rebuild Warsaw

MOSCOW, April 12 (AP).—The Soviet-supported Polish provisional government enacted today a decree calling for personal participation wherever possible of citizens of both sexes between the ages of sixteen and sixty in the reconstruction of ruined Warsaw.

Submarine Sinks Swedish Craft

Stockholm, April 12 (A. P.).—The 600-ton Swedish fishing boat Ramona was shelled and sunk by a submarine of unknown nationality south of Karlskrona, it was announced last night. The submarine fired despite cries of "We are Swedes," by the Ramona's crew. One member of the crew was lost, but the others reached safety in a lifeboat.

Spain Breaks With Tokyo

Madrid, April 12 (AP)—Spain has broken relations with Japan in protest against the bayoneting of Spanish nationals in the Philippines by Japanese soldiers.

A Government communiqué, issued last night at the conclusion of a Cabinet meeting presided over by Generalissimo Francisco Franco, declared:

"Direct information of Spanish origin and officially confirmed leaves no doubt concerning the attack on February 12 by Japanese troops on the Spanish consulate at Manila, followed by assassination of consular functionaries and other Spaniards there, and the wilful burning of buildings, in addition to many other assassinations and deliberate destruction of the property of Spanish citizens.

Insists On Indemnity

"As a result of these exceptionally grave facts, the Spanish Government, esteeming them incompatible with the maintenance of friendly normality between the two countries, has resolved to break diplomatic relations with the Government of Japan, while maintaining a demand for indemnity sent Japan for the loss of life and damage caused to Spanish citizens."

Spain forwarded the demand on March 24 soon after the first announcement of the atrocities came from Washington. Yakichiro Suma, Japanese Minister, said this week that the Japanese Government had acknowledged receipt of the protest on April 7.

In the Manila consulate incident, 250 men, women and children were killed. The list included many members of prominent Spanish families.

It was expected the Spanish Government would intern Suma and other Japanese diplomats until safe departure of Spanish diplomats from Japan can be arranged.

JAP PLANES SINK U.S. DESTROYER IN

Japanese warplanes renewed their suicidal attacks on American amphibious forces off Okinawa yesterday, sinking one destroyer and damaging several other surface units, Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz said in today's communique.

All damaged U. S. ships remained in action.

111 Planes Downed

One hundred eleven Japanese planes were shot down in an afternoon attack after seven had been downed in a morning raid.

Nimitz said "large numbers of enemy aircraft made desperate attacks on our forces in the Okinawa area." These presumably were Vice Adm. Richmond K. Turner's amphibious support ships which landed the Okinawa invasion force Easter Sunday.

The afternoon attack, in great strength, also reached to the Yank land forces, for Nimitz said shore-based anti-aircraft as well as ships' guns and carrier planes shared in downing the 111 Japanese planes.

Nimitz also disclosed the presence on Okinawa of four more divisions, bringing to six the number officially ashore on Okinawa and nearby islands.

Two of the newly-named divisions were Marines: the 6th and 1st. The other two are Army: the 27th and 96th.

Nimitz previously reported the 77th Army division captured eight islands in the Kerama Rhetto group, just west of southern Okinawa, and that the 7th Army division was moving on Yonaberu town and airfield on eastern Okinawa.

All of these divisions except the 6th Marines, a new outfit, are veterans of Pacific fighting.

Marines Make New Gains

The 6th Marine division continued its advances on Motobu peninsula against sporadic resistance yesterday. Nimitz said progress was made across rough terrain and along extremely rough roads.

The 1st Marines on Ishikawa peninsula "continued to press forward, mopping up in its zone of action," but the admiral did not give any yardage for either the First or 6th division advances.

In the southern sector, where both the 96th and 27th Army divisions presumably are fighting toward the capital city, Naha, Nimitz said, there "was no change in our lines." The communique again emphasized the enemy resistance continued strong.

While tons of shells from Marine and Army artillery, and the guns of warships offshore, tore at Nipponese positions on the southern sector, the Third Marine amphibious corps on the northern front continued their progress against comparatively light resistance.

The Marines trampled the first enemy efforts to organized opposition in their sector and continued advancing northward on Ishikawa isthmus. The Leathernecks also pressed westward toward the tip of Motobu peninsula.

Artillery Blasts Enemy

Front reports said American officers were utilizing the full force of exterminating artillery fire to hold down as much as possible Yank infantry casualties in the push against the Naha defense line, where most of the estimated 60,000 Japanese troops on the island were reported centered.

Carrier and rocket planes supported the American artillery and ground troops. Fourteen Japanese amphibious tanks and 15 boats were wrecked by fighter planes.

More than 1,400 insane people and a number of lepers were released on the island when retreating Japanese troops opened the gates of hospitals, said Maj. Charles G. Sweet, Washington, Pa., official of the American military government on Okinawa.

American military patrols are attempting to round up the lunatics, and some of the lepers have been recognized by relatives and segregated, Sweet said.

Okinawa Battle In 8th Day

Guam, April 12 (AP)—Southern Okinawa's grim, no-quarter artillery battle went into its eighth day today as the Navy announced American casualties of 2,695 for the first nine days of the campaign. The Yanks were killing eleven Japanese for every American.

Japanese in the bitterly contested southern sector hurled fur determined and well-prepared counter-attacks against Maj. Gen. John R. Hodge's 24th Corps doughboys yesterday after firing 4,000 rounds of mortar and artillery fire.

The Japanese were calling for supporting mortar fire even though some of it was falling into their own lines. Artillery shells and small arms fire poured into the American positions in increasing amounts along the "Little Siegfried Line" about 4 miles north of Naha, the capital.

No Changes In Lines

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz again reported "no substantial changes in the lines in the southern sector."

Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger's Marines in the north ran into organized resistance for the first time as they pressed toward the end of the tip of the Motobu peninsula. Other Marines advanced into the mainland of northern Okinawa against only slight opposition.

Carrier and land-based planes as well as naval guns gave close support to the ground operations. Fighters wrecked fourteen Japanese amphibious tanks and 15 camouflaged boats along the southern shore. A shore battery was silenced.

Plane With U.S. Markings

Associated Press Correspondent Vern Haugland reported that the Japanese were suspected of using a small observation plane with United States markings. The tiny craft was believed observing American positions and directing Japanese mortar fire.

Admiral Nimitz announced the 2,695 American casualties included 432 dead, 2,103 wounded and 160 missing. This count was up to midnight on Monday.

The last report of Japanese dead showed 5,009 by midnight Sunday, but much heavy fighting has been under way since then. The ratio of better than 11 to 1 is considerably under that of Iwo Jima and Saipan. The ratio at Iwo Jima was around 20 to 1.

Suicide Boat Attack

Further details were disclosed of an attempted suicide boat attack on American shipping off Naha last Monday by a dozen small enemy craft. Five were destroyed and one damaged. At least fifteen swimmers, some of them carrying hand grenades, were killed. Some took their own lives when threatened with capture.

Occupation of Tsugen Islet off the mouth of Nakagusuku Bay on the east coast of Okinawa was completed Tuesday night with the entire garrison of 150 Japanese killed. American casualties were light in the operation, undertaken to secure the entrance to the fine fleet anchorage.

Battle in Eighth Day.

Guam, April 12 (A. P.).—Southern Okinawa's grim artillery battle went into its eighth day today as the Navy announced American casualties of 2,605 for the first nine days of the campaign. The Americans were killing eleven Japanese for every American.

The Japanese in the bitterly contested southern sector made four determined and well-prepared counter-attacks against Major-Gen. John R. Hodge's Twenty-fourth Corps fighting boys yesterday after firing 4,000 rounds of mortar and artillery fire. The Japanese were calling for supporting mortar fire even though some of it was falling into their own lines. Artillery shells and small arms fire poured into the American positions in increasing amounts along the Little Siegfried Line about four miles north of Naha, the capital.

Fleet Admiral Nimitz again reported "no substantial changes in the lines in the southern sector," and said that the Marines in the north ran into organized resistance for the first time as they pressed toward the end of the tip of the Motobu Peninsula. The occupation of Tsugen, an islet off the mouth of Nakagusuku Bay on the east coast of Okinawa, was completed on Tuesday night with the slaughter of the entire garrison of 150 Japanese. American casualties were light. The operation was undertaken to secure the entrance to the fine fleet anchorage.

Meanwhile today further details were disclosed of an attempted suicide-boat attack on American shipping off Naha last Monday by a dozen small enemy craft. Five were destroyed and one damaged. At least fifteen swimmers, some carrying hand grenades, were killed. Some took their own lives when threatened with capture.

Marines Continue Gains

GUAM, Friday, April 13 (AP)—The Sixth Marine Division continued its advances on Motobu Peninsula against sporadic resistance yesterday. Admiral Nimitz said progress was made across rough terrain and along extremely rough roads.

The First Marines on Ishikawa Peninsula "continued to press forward, mopping up in its zone of action," but the Admiral did not give any yardage for either the First or Sixth Division advances.

In the southern sector, where both the Ninety-sixth and Twenty-seventh Army Divisions presumably are fighting toward the capital city, Naha, Admiral Nimitz said, there "was no change in our lines." The communiqué again emphasized that enemy resistance continued strong.

NIMITZ WOULD KEEP ISLES

Calls Marianas and Iwo Vital Now and in Future Defense

GUAM, April 12 (AP)—The importance of the Marianas Islands to the United States now and after the war was suggested today by Admiral of the Fleet Chester W. Nimitz, who told a group of touring war correspondents: "These islands are vital to our prosecution of the war, and they are equally vital to our defense in the future."

He included Iwo in the Volcano Islands to the north, saying: "Those islands are as important to the United States as the Hawaiian Islands."

Admiral Nimitz praised the Army Air Forces, saying their fliers from the Marianas "have performed missions which I remember among great accomplishments."

B-29'S MAKE LONGEST RAID

Take 3,800-Mile Roundtrip To Bomb Tokyo, Koriyama

Guam, Friday, April 13 (AP)—Fighter-escorted Superfortresses struck deeper into Japan Thursday—in their longest mission yet from Marianas bases—as they bombed Koriyama and Tokyo targets on Honshu Island by daylight.

Flyers returning from the record 3,800-mile round trip to Koriyama, industrial center some 110 miles north of Tokyo, reported they left large fires burning. This was the first raid so far north.

Engine Plant Is Target

The Tokyo target was the Nakajima Musashino aircraft engine plant, bombed seven times before by B-29's. It was the third raid this month on the important plant.

Seventh Air Force Mustang fighters, making their second escort mission over Japan from their Iwo Jima base, accompanied the bombers.

Twentieth Air Force headquarters in Washington said the B-29's which hit their targets at approximately 11 A.M. Tokyo time, flew in "very large" force. Previous raids by 300 and more B-29s have been similarly described.

Formosa Raided, Japs Say

Tokyo radio said about 150 Superfortresses participated in the Tokyo raid, also hitting south of there in the Shizuoka district, and that a "small force" attacked targets to the north. The raids lasted about two hours, the broadcast said.

An unconfirmed Japanese Domei News Agency dispatch said "about 80 enemy carrier-based planes" raided northern Formosa targets at Keelung, Taihoku and Shinchiku for two hours starting at 8 A.M. Thursday, Formosa time.

The Superfortresses dropped their bombs from the comparatively low altitude of 8,000 feet. The bombing was with visual sights in good weather.

No Report Of Loss

There was no report of any of the raiding planes being lost and bomber crews said Japanese fighter opposition was "on the timid side." This was in contrast to the stiff interception encountered by the Mustangs in their first Tokyo mission April 6.

Lieut. Loy Collingwood, of Fox Chapel, Pa., a bombardier, said he saw bombs hit "right in the money" and that the target was "burning fiercely."

Lieut. Joseph Currier of Lincoln, Maine, also saw large fires. He said the few Japanese fighters he saw "weren't aggressive."

B-29's Pound Koriyama In Area's Longest Hop

Guam, April 12 (AP)—Tokyo and industrial Koriyama on Honshu Island were plastered with bombs by American Superfortresses today roaring out on a 3,800-mile round-trip mission from the Marianas.

The Nakajima Musashino aircraft engine plant was a Tokyo target.

Returning pilots who made the flight, the longest Central Pacific bombing mission to date, termed their attack "very successful." The B-29's were escorted by Iwo Jima-based fighter planes.

First Raid On City

Koriyama targets were not identified except as "industrial" in the city 110 miles north of Tokyo.

Part of the Superforts hit a second industrial target at Koriyama in the first raid on that city.

Bombing was done visually from 8,000 feet with the aid of unusually good weather and, while Japanese fighters were encountered, B-29 crewmen said they were "on the timid side." There was no report of losses.

Fighters Scared Away

"The target was burning when we left," said Lieut. Joseph Currier, of Lincoln, Maine. "There was one big fire there. We saw a few fighters, but they weren't aggressive. After a few bursts they were scared away."

Lieut. Loy Collingwood, of Fox Chapel, Pa., who watched bombs from his bombardier's compartment, saw them "go right in the money."

"The target was burning fiercely and all we could see was smoke.

"Four fighters made a co-ordinated attack but they were scared off."

150 In Raid, Japs Say

Collingwood said after his bombs were away he was unable to look the bomb bay doors until concussion from bombs exploding 8,000 feet below closed them for him.

Tokyo Radio said a fleet of "approximately 150" Superfortresses escorted by a "sizeable" force of fighter planes concentrated an attack on Tokyo's west section, while "some 50" B-29's bombed Fukushima Prefecture north of the Japanese capital.

Frequent "feinting" movements were conducted by the planes, the broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said.

Eight Feints Reported

A lone B-29 feinted at Shizuoka site of a new aircraft engine plant the Tokyo broadcast said. Eight such sorties of one plane each were conducted, the Japanese reported.

The raid was the eighth of the war and the third this month on the Musashino factory, a prime producer of fighter-plane engines.

Numerous rail lines and highways from Tokyo into northern Honshu run through Koriyama.

Twentieth Air Force headquarters in Washington termed the B-29 force "very large." This could mean as many as 300 of the Superforts participated.

Group's Second Mission

It was the second war mission over Tokyo for Mustang fighter planes based on Iwo Jima. On their first trip the raiding force ran into a terrific air battle and destroyed or damaged 278 enemy planes.

Tokyo said the raiders were over the capital for two hours.

A report on damage at the Musashino plant awaited reconnaissance.

Bohol Invaded, Last of Central Philippine Isles

Americal Division Thrusts Inland to Move to Secure Island Before Foe Rallies

MANILA, April 13 (Friday) (AP).—Veteran Americal Division troops landed Wednesday on Bohol Island, last of the central Philippines still in enemy hands, under cover of naval and air bombardment, General MacArthur reported today.

Bohol, a round island, is between the southern ends of Cebu and Leyte islands, directly north of Mindanao. Major General William H. Arnold's Americal troops landed at Tagbilaran, on the southwestern shore, and quickly drove inland "in order to secure control of the entire island before the surprised enemy could rally his strength," General MacArthur said.

Guerrilla troops were operating in co-ordination with the Americans. General MacArthur termed the invasion "another thrust in the swift campaign to clear the bewildered enemy from the Visayas."

On southern Luzon, meantime, troops of the 14th Corps swept forward thirty miles from Antimonan to Calauag, on the east coast of the Bicol Peninsula, closing a trap on Japanese forces. At Legaspi the other prong of the pincer advanced five miles to Camalig.

Eleventh Corps troops in the central sector pressed their steady reduction to fixed enemy positions int he upper Marikina River area, sealing off a number of caves. Investigation of onc cave revealed 257 enemy dead inside.

First Corps troops continued the pressure on enemy cave defenses in the Balete Pass-Villa Verde trail areas of northern Luzon.

In the air war heavy bombers swept the west coast of Formosa, destroying a coastal and smaller craft, while patrol bombers blockading the China Sea lanes strafed and damaged a small freighter off Hainan Island.

MacArthur reported that Japanese shipping lanes through the China Sea now are almost deserted.

TO FIGHT YANKS

Routed Enemy Also Turns Loose Lepers in Falling Back Under Attack.

ARTILLERY DUEL IN 8TH DAY

Nimitz Reports 423 Americans Dead, 2103 Wounded and 160 Missing Through Monday.

Okinawa, April 11 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The retreating Japanese threw open the gates of hospitals for the insane and lepers, permitting thousands of lunatics and diseased inmates to roam the Okinawa hills, Major Charles G. Sweet of the American Military Government said today, adding that more than 1,400 insane persons alone were turned loose.

Military patrols are doing their best to round up the lunatics, but language difficulties make their work hard except in the violent or the more advanced cases. Many of those released are violent, a public relations officer said.

The Japanese destroyed the records of the leprosarium, making it impossible to tell how many were released and difficult to continue treatment of those recaptured. A few lepers, mostly aged women, have been recognized by relatives and segregated, however.

Meanwhile today it was announced that all able-bodied Okinawa and Japanese civilian prisoners are being kept under close guard because of an increase in nocturnal sniping and the number of men between 18 and 45 appearing behind the American lines.

OKINAWA JAPS FREE LUNATICS

Okis Are Guarded To Curb Sniping

Okinawa, Ryukyu Islands, April 8 [AP—Delayed]—All able-bodied Okinawa and Japanese civilian prisoners are being kept under close guard because of a simultaneous increase in nocturnal sniping and the number of men between 18 and 45 appearing behind American lines.

All of these men are picked up by military police and put to nonmilitary work and placed in inclosures under guard at night.

"There has been an increase in sniping lately," explained Lieut. Col. Austin C. Shaffer, of Shelbyville, Tenn., provost marshal. "At the same time we noticed greater numbers of able-bodied males between the ages of 18 and 45. There may be no connection, but we are taking no chances."

Adult Males' Absence Noted

The absence of able-bodied adult males was one of the first things noticed when Americans landed on Okinawa. It was generally believed that Japanese troops took the men with them, willingly or unwilling. Possibly some of them are being sent back to cause as much trouble as possible.

Civilian problems are being solved as fast they they come up by Lieut. Col. Donald T. Winder, Chicago, Ill., and Washington, D.C., military government officer. He says there has been remarkably little trouble so far.

Those who are plainly docile and co-operative are being permitted to return to their homes and little truck gardens and are seemingly picking up the thread of their squalid existence unharmed by the wartime interruption.

Atimonan area in force, while on the Bicol Peninsula the 158th Regimental combat team continued to advance southwest of Duraga.

In the central section, the 6th Division's 63d Regiment stormed Mount Mataba after artillery concentration and captured the peak.

North Luzon Battle

The Japanese still were sternly defending northern Luzon, where the fighting has been bloody. The Yanks inched along, reducing hillside defenses one by one. In Balete Pass—on the Villa Verde trail area—58 caves were sealed.

On the road to Baguio, United States troops captured the village of Salat, 11 miles from the west coast, without serious opposition.

Maj. Gen. Rapp Brush's 40th Division advanced 30 miles from Fabrica on Negros Island around the northern tip to San Isidro on the east coast, trapping enemy remnants in a mountain pocket.

M'ARTHUR RETAINS STAFF FOR WIDER JOB

MANILA, April 12 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today that the same staff that served under him in the Southwest Pacific would act in his new command covering all Pacific ground forces.

The officers are:

Chief of Staff—Lieut. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland.

Assistant Chief of Staff—Brig. Gen. Matthew W. Gunner.

Personnel—Brig. Gen. Bonner F. Fellers.

Intelligence—Brig. Gen. Charles A. Willoughby.

Philippine-Based Planes Hit Indo-China

Manila, April 12 (AP)—Fifth Air Force Liberators ranging far from their Philippine base over Indo-China exploded a fourteen-car Japanese troop train with direct bomb hits Monday, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

Fellow-pilots bombed Hong Kong's Victoria docks, two radio stations and rail installations on Hainan Island and sank six small freighters in the China Sea.

United States 14th Corps troops in South Luzon, where MacArthur announced organized Japanese resistance had been broken, secured road nets south of Tayabas.

14-Mile Gain

The 1st Cavalry Division advanced 14 miles from Lucban to occupy Sampaloc and sent advance elements to Mauban, on the east coast.

Elements of the 11th Airborne Division occupied the east coast

Carrier Planes Lash Formosa, Tokyo Says

San Francisco, April 12 (AP)—About 80 Allied carrier planes raided three major cities on northern Formosa for two hours today, the Japanese Domei news agency reported.

The unconfirmed dispatch, recorded here, claimed four were shot down.

Targets were identified as Kirun (Keelung), major port, shipbuilding and repair center on the northeast coast; Taihoku, key transportation center and port on the northwest coast 15 miles from Kirun, and Shingchiku, 40 miles southwest of Taihoku.

Formosa, a daily target of Philippines-based bombers, is about 125 miles from the Ryukyu Islands in whose waters American and British naval task forces have been operating for weeks.

CALLS ON JAP FLEET TO TAKE UP SUICIDE

San Francisco, April 12 (A. P.).—The officers and men of the Japanese fleet have been called on by their commander to resolve themselves into a suicide corps, the Tokyo radio declared in a broadcast recorded by the FCC. Admiral Soemu Toyoda told his men that Japan faces "the moment when the rise or fall of our nation will be decided."

The suicidal aspect of Japan's air warfare was emphasized by Capt. Goro Takase, chief of the naval press section. In a magazine article he wrote that Japanese planes "manufactured today will immediately be in use in the battefields tomorrow." He also warned, Tokyo added, that the Allied naval force operating in the Pacific battle area includes some 1,500 and more assorted warships.

The Japanese task force led by the battleship Yamato was serving as a suicide corps when the Yamato was sunk by American aerial blows on April 7.

Jap Propagandists Exploit Sinking Report

San Francisco, April 12 (AP)—Japanese propagandists today jumped on a United States State Department announcement concerning the Japanese Awa Maru as an admission that American submarines sank the relief ship and called it an "unscrupulous and barbaric action."

The propaganda broadcasts were beamed for American consumption and recorded here. The FCC said it had heard no broadcast tell the Japanese people of the note which said a submarine sank an unlighted vessel about 40 miles from the Awa Maru's estimated position and that one survivor said it was the relief ship.

Radio Commentator Jun Yamada termed the statement a formal admission that a United States submarine sank the Awa Maru and a "brazen reply to our inquiry."

"This unscrupulous and barbaric action of the American Navy," he continued, "speaks for itself."

BRITISH FORCES DRIVE PAST THAZI

CALCUTTA, April 11—(AP) British armored units drove east today from captured Thazi in an effort to intercept Japanese troops attempting to escape eastward into Thailand from central Burma along the Thazi-Taunggyi highway. Taunggyi is 85 miles east of Thazi.

Forward elements of the British column were reported to have reached Hlainglet, a village eight miles east of Thazi, important junction on both the Mandalay-Rangoon highway and railroad.

Other British forces pushing southward from Thazi toward Rangoon, 280 miles south, established a roadblock south of Thazi on the main highway and ambushed a column of retreating Japanese troops. In a brisk engagement 200 of the invaders were killed and eight artillery pieces captured.

British Indian troops operating directly east and slightly north of the Meiktila area captured a number of guns and supply dumps and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy.

Medium bombers of the Eastern Air command attacked a Japanese supply and troop base at Kyaukpadaung, railhead of a 70-mile branch line southwest of Pyinmana. Pyinmana is 77 miles directly south of Meiktila.

Enemy troops and dug-in positions in the Arakan hills area on the west coast of Burma were attacked by Allied fighterbombers.

U. S. Isolationism Called Dead

CANBERRA, Australia, April 12 (AP).—R. J. F. Boyer, newly appointed chairman of the Australian Broadcasting Commission who recently returned from an American tour, said today he found no traces of isolationism in the Middle West. "Americans," he commented, "seem to have taken up the drive for international security as a mission with religious intensity."

Calcutta, April 12 (AP)—Tanks, artillery and infantry of the British 14th Army, in sweeping sorties Tuesday through central Burma south of Meiktila, killed 1,029 Japanese, Allied headquarters announced today.

KUNMING, China—(AP) The American Red Cross has helped prepare "walk-out kits" for the benefit of fliers who come back from missions the hard way.

The kits have been cached by the Army at isolated outposts for easy access by airmen on foot. They contain medical and first aid items supplied by the Army Medical Corps and comfort and recreational items supplied by the Red Cross.

Each kit, designed for use by five men, contains toothpaste and toothbrushes, shaving cream, razors and blades, cigarettes and matches, soap, needles and thread, assorted buttons, pocket combs, notebooks and pencils, chewing gum, hard candy and a deck of cards.

LAOHOKOW FALLS

Chungking, April 12 (A. P.).—The Chinese High Command announced tonight that Japanese troops had captured Laohokow, former advanced United States Fourteenth Air Force base, 200 miles from Hankow and 350 from Chungking. The city, which the Americans had abandoned as a base some time ago, fell yesterday morning after bitter street fighting.

Loyalist forces in Spain, has been sentenced to dismissal from the air force following conviction on four charges concerning improper disposal of about $680 worth of aircraft equipment and other articles.

'Whistleattable' Nurse First In Okinawa Flights

Honolulu, April 12 (AP)—Perhaps the most-whistled-at girl in Pacific is Ensign Jane Kendeigh, of Oberlin, Ohio.

She's a blue-eyed brunette, and she's the first flight nurse to fly to Iwo Jima and Okinawa—the two closest battlefronts to Japan.

Jane's duty is grim and heartbreaking, she vows, but the reaction of an American doughboy to a girl even when he's on his deathbed is exactly what you'd expect.

He Whistles

He perks up and whistles.

With a blush, Jane admitted: "It's almost like it would be back in the States if you walked down Main street," she asserted. "You know that sort of whistle that boys whistle when they're whistling at a girl walking down Main street."

Lieut. Emily Purvis, of Philadelphia, in charge of flight nurse headquarters, Guam, chose whistleattable Ensign Kendeigh for the honor of the first hospital plane flight to Iwo Jima and Okinawa. At Iwo the plane had to circle for 90 minutes because of the heavy artillery fire.

46 Hours To U.S.

Navy Air Transport Service officials, who operate the evacuation planes, assert it is possible for Okinawa patients to reach the United States within 46 hours.

NATS is equipped to evacuate 1,500 patients by air each month from Guam to Pearl Harbor and about 1,200 from Pearl Harbor to San Francisco.

Ensign Kendeigh is en route to California with a load of evacuees.

Ontario to Vote June 11.

Toronto, April 12 (A. P.).—Premier George Drew announced today that a general provincial election in Ontario would be held June 11. The election was brought on by the defeat of Drew's Progressive Conservative Government in the Legislature March 22 on a motion which charged negligence in preparing to meet post-war problems.

Canada Eyes Export Trade

Ottawa, April 12 (AP)—Rapid reestablishment and expansion of export trade and encouragement of private investment at home will be two of Canada's chief goals in the period between victory over Germany and the end of the war against Japan, Reconstruction Minister C. D. Howe announced in Parliament today.

"The Government proposes," Howe said, "to use appropriate means to influence expenditures" in four main channels:

1. Export Trade: The Government will "facilitate, through its wartime controls and otherwise, the re-establishment of peacetime markets for Canadian exports" in a pattern of free trade in particular collaboration with Great Britain and the United States. The Government is opposed to trade blocs.

Work For Employment

2. Private Investment: Reduction of barriers to private investment in industrial and commercial building, equipment, power and transportation facilities, development of natural resources and housing.

3. Public Investment: The Government will aim at maintaining the level of employment "while substituting private for a large part of public expenditures." The postwar employment problem "is not to be solved by huge expenditures on 'public works.'" Provincial and municipal governments are encouraged to develop their own public-works programs.

4. Government Finance: The Government will seek to maintain levels of employment and income "greatly above those ruling before the war," requiring Government expenditures and revenues above the prewar levels.

War Declaration Approved

Santiago, Chile, April 12 (AP)—The Chamber of Deputies, by a vote of 70 to 0, approved last night the Government's action in declaring war against Japan. Senate approval was given earlier this week. Congressional ratification was purely academic, since the Government acted some time ago and has already signed the United Nations pact.

BRAZIL MAKES REPAIRS

RIO DE JANEIRO—(AP) Brazil's shipping repair shops and drydock on Vianna Island in Guanabara Bay have repaired or reconstructed 187 Allied vessels since 1939. In addition Vianna Island shops have constructed corvettes and subchasers which are on duty in the South Atlantic with Brazil's navy.

Escobar Won't Return to U. S.

Buenos Aires, April 12 (A. P.).—Adrian Escobar, who worked hard for the resumption of Argentine-United States relations, will not be returned to his old post as Ambassador at Washington now that Argentina has joined the United Nations, it was learned today. He will be succeeded by a younger man who also has had an important role in shaping Argentine policy favorable to the United Nations.

U. S. CASUALTIES REACH 899,390

Washington, April 12 (A. P.).—American combat casualties since Pearl Harbor have now reached 899,390. Secretary of War Stimson today reported total Army casualties of 802,685, while the Navy set its losses at 96,705. The increase over last week's figure, 6,481, was one of the smallest weekly rises in months.

Mr. Stimson said that the Army figures reflected casualties reported through March 31 and covered operations on the war fronts through the middle of March.

A breakdown of Army casualties and similar figures through the preceding week follow: Killed, 159,267 and 156,471; wounded, 489,256 and 486,929; missing, 86,648 and 88,755; prisoners, 67,514 and 66,228. Of the wounded, 250,192 have returned to duty.

Similar figures for the Navy: Killed, 37,402 and 36,649; wounded, 44,444 and 42,988; missing, 10,605 and 10,623; prisoners, 4,254 and 4,266.

Stettinius Says U. S. View Of Spain Is Not Changed

Indicates Break With Japan Won't Alter Relations

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius jr. said today that Spain's break in relations with Japan will have no effect upon United States relations with the Franco government.

Spain severed relations with Japan yesterday, protesting Japanese atrocities against Spanish citizens in Manila.

Mr. Stettinius made his statement in reply to a request for comment at his news conference.

The United States now has diplomatic relations with Spain and is represented in Madrid by Ambassador Norman Armour. However, Washington has been critical of Spain's role during the European war, and Mr. Stettinius's reply apparently was intended to emphasize that this attitude is unchanged by Spain's action toward Japan.

France Honors Fairbanks Jr.

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—The French government today honored Lieutenant Commander Douglas E. Fairbanks jr. and Lieutenant Commander John D. Lodge, both of the United States Navy. Both received the Legion of Honor in the Degree of Chevalier by Vice-Admiral Raymond Fenard, chief of the French naval mission here. Commander Fairbanks also was given the Croix de Guerre with palm. Both men were honored for their services in connection with the invasion of southern France in August, 1944.

President Nominates 2 To Be Rear Admirals

Washington, April 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt today nominated Commodore Edmund W. Burrough and Capt. Harold Blaine Miller, to be rear admirals.

Burrough, a native of Camden, N.J., has been attached to headquarters of Fleet Commander in Chief Admiral Ernest J. King since June 25, 1943. He was appointed commodore last September 8. His permanent address is Oswego, N.Y.

Captain Miller, a native of Newton, Iowa where he still maintains his permanent home, is public relations officer on the staff of Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander in chief.

Taylor in New U. S. Post

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—Wayne C. Taylor, who resigned yesterday as Under Secretary of Commerce, today was elected President of the Export-Import Bank. Leo T. Crowley, bank board chairman, said Mr. Taylor would take over the new position immediately. He was chosen by the board and succeeds Warren Lee Pierson, who recently resigned.

Peace League May Begin Job In U.S.

APR 13 1945

Washington, April 12 (AP)—The world peace-keeping organization to be blueprinted at San Francisco may conduct its first deliberations in the United States.

Diplomats speculated on this possibility today as they awaited word on the extent of destruction in Vienna to determine whether that old world capital—now almost entirely in Russian hands—remains a likely choice as a permanent meeting site.

As soon as the league is ratified by enough countries, the first assembly meeting probably will be called. This session would elect nonpermanent members of the security council and get the organization going.

U.S. May Be "Time Clock"

Because of the necessity for Senate debate and ratification, it is generally felt that this country will be the time clock and that when America is definitely in, the agency can begin to function. Other nations can act more quickly.

Possibility of the first meeting in this country is strengthened by the devastation in Europe.

Although it is a minor question, the permanent site of the new organization is expected to be hotly debated.

Canada and several other nations may argue strongly for this hemisphere. They are expected to contend:

1. That this hemisphere has never threatened world peace.
2. That it is equally accessible from Europe and Asia.
3. That it is far enough away to provide a calmer atmosphere for consideration of Europe's political turmoils.

Vienna Seems To Head List

However, Vienna at this point seems to head the speculative list. The Russians appear to favor the Austrian capital.

In addition, Russia along with Britain and the United States promised at Moscow in 1943 to reconstitute an independent Austria. In line with this pledge, some diplomats believe that establishment of the peace organization in Vienna would go a long way toward helping that impoverished nation economically.

Another decision that must be reached is on an official language.

While this country is understood to be pushing for English alone, for purposes of simplicity, it appeared there might be four or five.

All United Nations meetings so far have been conducted in English.

KRUG DEFENDS DEAL ON CANADA ALUMINUM

APR 13 1945

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP)—Unless the war demand for aluminum decreases, the Government's stock, even under the new contract with Canada, will run out before the end of this year, Senators heard today.

War Production Board Chairman J. A. Krug told the Senate Small Business Committee investigating the aluminum situation that it may still be necessary to bring back into production two dormant aluminum facilities in California. Some way, he said, will have to be worked out to provide manpower necessary for their operation.

Mr. Krug defended the contracts with Aluminum Company of Canada, including one signed last month, as essential to production of the quantity needed for war use. W. L. Batt, WPB vice chairman, asserted that the testimony already shows that the United States got the aluminum it needed, got back the money it loaned, and he declared that the Government agencies involved "feel that they made a good deal."

Mr. Krug told the committee that before the deal was made with Canada in 1941, the domestic power situation was thoroughly canvassed. He said the Interior Department and Bonneville Power were reluctant to promise more than a limited amount of power from the Columbia River plants lest they wreck opportunities for diversification of industry in the Northwest.

He said the second contract was not made until the total maximum production of all hydroelectric plants had been canvassed and still fell short of estimated needs.

FIRST LADY SPEAKS ON JUDGING ENEMY

Washington, April 12 (A. P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today that Americans should withhold judgment about what they want done with Germany until more information is available about conditions when fighting ends.

At her news conference, the First Lady expressed the opinion that only the State and War departments have any real knowledge now of what may need to be done.

Asked when she thought the State Department should inform the public of German conditions after hostilities, Mrs. Roosevelt replied, "As soon as the State Department knows itself." She added that the people must accustom themselves to thinking of international problems in terms of joint decision and action by various United Nations.

"We must get over the habit of years when we moved alone," she said. "We must accustom ourselves to remembering that we are not the only ones to decide."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she felt that when there is a United Nations organization, occupied countries should have the right to express their opinions also.

One reporter asked for comment on a recently published statement that "the honeymoon is over" between Mrs. Roosevelt and her strictly feminine press conference. The First Lady replied, but put her remarks off the record.

Yalta Escort Flyer Missing

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., April 12 (AP).—Colonel Arthur C. Agan, twenty-nine-year-old commander of the American 1st Fighter Group and leader of the fighter escort for principals at the Yalta Conference, has been listed as missing in action over Hungary since March 31, his family was notified yesterday. The colonel's mother, Mrs. A. C. Agan, lives in Corpus Christi, his wife and three-year-old daughter in San Antonio, where Colonel Agan was born.

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP)—The Navy had 3,269,670 officers and enlisted men as of Feb. 28, including nurses but not Marines and Coast Guards. As of Dec. 31, 1944, the figure was 3,211,273.

Axler; Mrs. Rose Goldstein, sister, 125 West Tremont Avenue, New York; and S/Sgt. Bert Spencer, Mrs. Elizabeth Suwtzenich, friend, 517 East Fifty-second Street, Brooklyn.

Stettinius's Views On Italy Sought

APR 13 1945

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Congressional advocacy of full Allied status for Italy called upon the State Department today to explain this country's diplomatic intentions toward the former Axis partner.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N.Y.), author of a congressional resolution requesting the President to proclaim Italy a United Nations ally, has an appointment today with Secretary of State Stettinius to discuss Allied plans for that country.

Denied Lend-Lease Aid

Italy now is recognized as a "cobelligerent"—a status which denies her lend-lease aid and does not permit her participation in the United Nations conference at San Francisco.

"We want to find out from the State Department exactly what they have in mind for Italy," Marcantonio said at the close of day-long hearings before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He said present treatment of Italy is "completely unrealistic."

No Action Indicated

There was no indication the Foreign Affairs Committee would act immediately on the Italian resolution. Chairman Bloom (D., N.Y.), who also is a delegate to San Francisco, said he did not know whether the group would pass on the resolution before the conference opens April 25.

He declined to say whether the American delegation had discussed Italy's conference status.

SUBMARINE SCAMP IS LOST IN PACIFIC

Washington, April 12 (A. P.).—The submarine Scamp and a large support-landing craft have been lost in the Pacific, the Navy announced today.

The submarine was reported overdue from patrol and presumed lost, and the LCS (S) (3)-49 was lost in the Philippines as the result of enemy action. The normal complement of a submarine is about sixty-five officers and men and that of a landing craft of the type about forty-five. There was no report of casualties on the landing craft.

The submarine was under the command of Commander John C. Hollingsworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth of Emory University, Ga. Commander Hollingsworth is listed as missing in action.

The landing craft was skippered by Lieut. Harold W. Smith of Decatur, Ala. The Navy said that Lieut. Smith had no casualty status.

The announcement brought to 284 the total of naval vessels lost since the start of the war from all causes, including 227 sunk, forty-six overdue and presumed lost, and ten destroyed to prevent capture. The Scamp was the forty-second submarine lost, of which thirty-six have been reported overdue and presumed lost, four known sunk and two destroyed to prevent capture.

The Scamp was commissioned on September 18, 1942, and was built by the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard. The LCS (S) (3)-49 was built by the Albina Engine & Machine Works, Inc., Portland, Ore., and was commissioned on August 31, 1944.

FEAR JAP REPRISAL

Washington, April 12 (A. P.).—Possibility that an Allied submarine sank the Japanese relief ship Awa Maru raised fears today that Japan might ban further mercy shipments to Allied internees and war prisoners.

A State Department announcement said that the Navy reported the sinking of a ship April 1 about forty miles from the estimated position of the homeward-bound vessel and that a survivor said that it was the Awa Maru.

The Awa Maru was traveling under an Allied safe conduct guaranty but last night's announcement said that the ship sunk carried no lights of any kind. A communication is en route to Japan through Swiss authorities, the department added.

The supplies recently delivered to Formosa, Hongkong, Saigon, Singapore and Dutch East Indies ports by the Awa Maru were held up at Vladivostok for months before the Japanese finally agreed to the arrangement.

CLASH REPORTED ON PHILIPPINES

By JACKSON S. ELLIOTT

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP) A conflict between Interior Secretary Ickes and State Secretary Stettinius over United States representation in the Philippines today is reported in full swing.

Ickes has asked President Roosevelt for the immediate appointment of a high commissioner. The appointment has been held up, it was learned, because of the insistence of the State department that an ambassador, to take office when the independence of the Commonwealth is proclaimed, be appointed instead. Such a budget item is contained in the State department's appropriation bill.

Both Ickes and Stettinius are seeking funds from Congress for their plans. The House Appropriations committee is said to be cold to Ickes' plan to send a high commissioner to the islands right away. But Senator McKellar (D-Tenn.) of the appropriations committee and Senator Tydings (D-Md.), one of the authors of the independence act, succeeded in adding an item to the current deficiency appropriation bill which would provide for a high commissioner and a staff of experts.

It was learned today that Ickes is now urging the appointment of a high commissioner with the understanding that he will become ambassador upon the proclamation of independence. He stated last week that the full force of U. S. civil agencies must be brought to bear at once on Philippine rehabilitation problems and that the work of those agencies should be coordinated by a high commissioner.

Existing law provides for Philippine independence on July 4, 1946, or earlier, if the president so decides.

Philippine President Sergio Osmena is on record as requesting that independence be proclaimed on August 13.

MORGENTHAU'S WAR BOND AIM

He Says Pay-roll Plan Must Yield $2,500,000,000.

Washington, April 12 (A. P.).—War successes don't seem to be causing American industrial workers to neglect either their work or buying War Bonds, Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury said today. This is shown, he said, by encouraging results in the first few days of the advance pay-roll savings period of the Seventh War Loan drive.

The three-month pay-roll campaign started on Monday. The drive itself will begin on May 14.

The Secretary said at a news conference that numerous aircraft plants, shipyards and other firms already have gone over the top in pledging their quotas of pay-roll deductions. Out of the total Series E bond quota of $4,000,000,000, pay-roll deduction over the three-month period must furnish $2,500,000,000.

Normal pay roll deductions during that time will be $1,500,000,000. That means the Treasury is asking wage earners to subscribe to an extra $1,000,000,000 between now and July 7.

War-finance officials said that "it will be a real sacrifice," since the average industrial worker probably actually will take home only about 60 per cent of his pay during April, May and June, after all deductions for bonds, income taxes, social security and others. Secretary Morgenthau said that absorbing $2,500,000,000 through pay roll deductions during the three months will be "a real contribution on the anti-inflation front."

Gamble Exhorts Drive Heads.

Now that we have the prospect of victory in Europe, the Seventh War Loan must be a rallying point for every American, Ted R. Gamble, assistant to Henry Morgenthau Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, declared today at the drafting of final plans for the loan during a meeting of officials and trustees of mutual savings banks and Treasury officials in the Waldorf-Astoria.

"There never was a time when the banks of the country were called upon to perform as high a service as they surely will render in this drive," he said.

Lloyd Seidman, vice-president of the Donahue & Coe Advertising Agency, has been placed in charge of newspaper advertising for the Seventh War Loan Drive, May 14 to June 30, Irving Lesser, general chairman for the campaign in the New York area of the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, announced today.

Mr. Lesser also announced that he has appointed the following executive committee: Harry Brandt, Max Cohen, Oscar Doob, Wilbur England, Si Fabian, Malcolm Kingsberg, Harry Mandel, C. C. Moskowitz, Sam Rinzler, Edward Rugoff, Fred Schwartz, Robert S. Weitman and William White.

The borough chairmen are George C. Ritch, Manhattan; Eugene Meyers, Bronx; Helen Beckerman, Brooklyn; Fred W. Brunelle, Queens, and Louis Goldberg, Richmond.

SOMERVELL WARNS OF CRISIS IN STEEL

Also Tells Senate Committee That Civilians Will Face New Shortage in Shoes

APR 14 1945

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP)—In a review of problems developing with the imminent shift of major war activity to the Pacific theatre, Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army's Service of Supplies, and other members of the General Staff told the Senate Military Affairs Committee today that again the nation was scraping the bottom of the steel barrel.

This new crisis in steel production has developed, it was disclosed, because of the increased weight of bombs, plus needs for heavy equipment in the Pacific.

The civilian pinch in the Pacific war will be felt primarily in steel, cotton goods and shoes, the Senators heard. Steel lack may hamper the reconversion of the auto industry. Cotton is needed for lightweight uniforms. Shoes rot fast in the Pacific fighting areas. Civilians may be cut to one pair a year.

Plans have been worked out, the Senators were told, for a three-way trail of men and supplies from Europe to the Pacific. Some will go direct to the Orient. Some will come back to the United States and then go to the Pacific. Some will go direct from this country to the Japanese war zone.

The legislators were informed that the Army intended to adhere rigidly to a point system in deciding which of the fighting men in Europe should come home, which should stay there to help occupy Germany, which should go on to fight the Japanese.

The return of men and supplies to this country will be slower than the public expects, but the Army hopes to offset criticism when it publishes its point standards.

Grain ships and freighters will be fitted up to help bring troops back across the Atlantic. Throughout all the conference, the military men emphasized that shipping is the big bottleneck for the tremendous movements soon to get under way.

Congress Urged To Let Nation Join Food Pool

Wickard and Jones Say United Nations Plan Is Necessary for Stability

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—The government's top agriculture administrators asked Congress today for enabling legislation to make the United States a member of a world-wide food supply organization.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones and Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard appeared before the House Foreign Affairs committee in support of the food and agriculture organization of the United Nations which first was conceived at a world food conference in Hot Springs, Va., in 1943.

Twenty nations must subscribe to the organization—providing an international exchange of food production and supply organization—to put it in operation. Nineteen have joined.

"If levels of living are not raised all over the world—if the total economy does not expand—all our painstaking efforts after the war will add up to nothing," Secretary Wickard told the committee.

"Sooner or later the nations would slip back into the old pattern of fighting for large shares of a shrinking trade."

The world food and agriculture organization, he said, would "promote international co-operation in maintaining security and raising levels of living."

President Roosevelt recently asked Congress to ratify our participation in the organization as a double-edged weapon to raise the world level of nutrition and improve international living conditions.

Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius told the committee the responsibilities contemplated in the food organization are "intimately bound up with the success of the world organization which we hope to establish as a result of our labors at San Francisco."

His statement was read to the committee by Dean Acheson, Assistant Secretary of State, who gave the committee a technical review of the plan for an international pool of food information.

"We shall not be able to achieve a lasting peace," said the Stettinius statement, "unless the nations of the world collaborate successfully to reduce and eventually remove the economic and social causes of war."

The Secretary said the food organization comes within the framework of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals.

NAZI COLLAPSE SEEN IMMINENT

Victory Only a Few Days Off, Army Officials Tell Senators.

APR 14 1945

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP) High Army officials told Senators today the end of organized fighting in Germany probably will come within a few days.

Describing the pell-mell dash of American armies across Germany, general staff officers expressed the opinion to members of the Senate military committee that a collapse of Nazi arms is imminent.

Those who attended the conference said the Army chiefs said: Only pockets of resistance will remain to be cleaned up after this collapse.

Army Sure of Results

They feel so sure of results that orders have been drawn drastically reducing the shipments of durable equipment to Europe in preparation for reversing the flow toward the Pacific.

They hope that Hitler and his Nazi leaders will be captured, although they did not discount the possibility of escape by some.

A German broadcast heard today had Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minister, saying that "the war cannot last much longer in my opinion."

In a review of problems developing with the imminent shift of major war activity to the fight against Japan, the Senators also were told by Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army's service of supplies, and other military leaders that the nation again is scraping the bottom of the barrel on steel.

Steel Crisis Develops

This new crisis in steel production has developed, it was disclosed, because of the increased weight of bombs, plus needs for heavy equipment in the Pacific.

The civilian pinch in the Pacific war will be felt primarily in steel, cotton goods and shoes, the senators heard. Steel lack may hamper the reconversion of the auto industry. Cotton is needed for lightweight uniforms. Shoes rot fast in the Pacific fighting areas. Civilians may be cut to one pair a year.

Plans have been worked out, the Senators were told, for a three way trail of men and supplies from Europe to the Pacific. Some will go direct to the Orient. Some will come back to the United States and then go to the Pacific. Some will go direct from this country to the Japanese war zone.

The legislators were informed that the Army intends to adhere rigidly to a point system in deciding which of the fighting men in Europe shall come home, which shall stay there to help occupy Germany, which shall go on to fight the Japanese.

The return of men and supplies to this country will be slower than the public expects, but the Army hopes to offset criticism when it publishes its point standards.

Grain ships and freighters will be fitted up to help bring troops back across the Atlantic. Throughout all the conference, the military men emphasized that shipping is the big bottleneck for the tremendous movements soon to get under way.

Army Throws Aside Secrecy Covering Ultra-New Weapons

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP) Secrecy surrounding some of the Army's ultra-new weapons has been thrown aside, in evident contempt of the enemy's ability to do anything about it now.

Newsmen were invited to an exhibition at nearby Fort Myer, Va., where was assembled materiel so new that some items have not yet gone into production. Expecting to be pledged to secrecy, they were told they could write of anything they saw.

Among those things packed into one enclosure and in use or ready to use against Germany and Japan were:

1. Radar aircraft detection sets that will spot a plane 120 miles away.

2. A 90-millimeter anti-tank gun that will punch through eight inches of armor and kill a German panther tank at six and a quarter miles.

3. A radio detonator that will fire mines up to 120 miles away by dialing a combination just as in making a telephone call.

4. A new type of floating bridge of hollow aluminum beams so light they can be placed by hand and so strong they will bear a 43-ton tank.

And there were many other heretofore top secret weapons.

The warhead of the army's robot bomb was in the collection. Containing the explosive charge, it weighs 2,100 pounds. The bomb's flight is calculated and when over the target a "spoiler" device changes the angle of the stabilizing fins at the rear, putting the bomb into a dive at the target.

The 43-ton T-26 tank, with a long-tubed 90 millimeter gun, will fire a shell with a muzzle velocity of 3,750 feet a second and penetrate 14 inches of armor at 300 yards.

Displayed was the army's 10-inch mortar, capable of dropping a shell with pin-point accuracy at 9,300 yards—more than five miles—firing at the rate of a round every two minutes. This high-angle weapon is useful for punching down into deep fortifications.

The 155-millimeter gun, mounted on an M-4 tank chassis, hurls a 95-pound projectile 25,400 yards—nearly 14½ miles. Operated by an eight-man crew, it is designed to provide heavy but mobile ordnance for rapidly advancing ground forces.

Also to contribute to the heavy ordnance support for forward moving troops is the eight-inch, 4½-ton howitzer, mounted on an M-4 chassis and having a range of 18,500 yards—more than 10 miles.

The army displayed its largest mobile anti-aircraft gun firing a completely assembled (projectile and propellant) shell, the 105-millimeter weapon. Weighing 46,000 pounds, the gun has a muzzle velocity of 3,000 feet per second with shell bursts at 46,000 feet.

(The largest mobile AA gun used by the Army is a 120 millimeter weapon, but the projectile and propellant are loaded separately.)

This gun can be controlled either manually by the gun crew stationed at the weapon or linked to the T-38 anti-aircraft battery director, an amazing piece of almost human equipment also exhibited.

The director, composed of multiple but interconnected equipment, searches the sky with a scanning disc for enemy aircraft, can pick up a target at 130 miles, track it automatically while at the same time computing for the lead necessary to hit the target, the fuse setting and other necessary factors of fire control.

Radar Detector Portable

The radar detector with the 120 mile range (when the scanner is located at a 50-foot altitude) is so highly portable and compact that the equipment, except for the aerial, can be taken into a foxhole.

Another electrically operated locator is linked to a searchlight battery, automatically keeping the lights trained on aircraft for purposes of identification and anti-aircraft fire at night.

A "sound locator" is a valuable item for ground forces seeking to determine the exact position from which enemy mortar or other artillery fire is coming. This equipment is used singly or in pairs, the latter for triangulation to enable counter-battery action against the enemy position. An enemy gun position can be located for counter-battery fire within five minutes.

The "radar detonator" for firing mines, either on land or in the water, is a refinement in the long-used method of leading wires to a land or sea mine to detonate it in the path of an advancing enemy troop movement or ships.

A dial, almost identical in appearance with the common telephone dial, is used. A three-digit code (21,000 different codes are possible) is dialed to fire a mine with the same code frequency. The range of radio detonator is eight miles over land and 20 miles over water.

In the field of engineering, supply and communication, all material is geared, like weapons, to a war of movement. Lightness, compactness, the ability to handle heavy equipment in transit are emphasized.

New Type Floating Bridge

The new type of floating bridge although in production has yet to reach any of the theaters. The flooring and spans are of one element—a series of balks or hollow square beams of aluminum alloy. The beams lock together with pins, resting on pontoon boats of 60-foot length, divided in half for handling ease.

Of prime value in jungle fighting is the light model of the 37 millimeter gun, which can be broken in to five parts and packed on the backs of soldiers. Among the projectiles fired by this weapon is a cannister shell, which sprays slugs over a wide area, searching out hidden enemy soldiers in the jungle.

Less spectacular than weapons but of equal importance in fighting a war far from home were the multitude of service items.

WAR SECRETS BILL BLOCKED

Ferguson Asks Restudy of Senate Measure.

APR 14 1945

Washington, April 12 (A. P.).—A war secrets bill which Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) contends might cut off information from Congress and possibly affect the press has been blocked in the Senate on Mr. Ferguson's motion.

On Monday the bill, bearing approval of the military committee, was passed by the Senate in routine fashion. Yesterday, Senator Ferguson entered a motion for reconsideration of this action. He told his colleagues the measure should be amended before going to the House.

In his view, he told reporters, the bill which provides fines and imprisonment for persons divulging information from coded Government messages, might prevent congressional committees from obtaining information on the events leading up to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

He also contended the measure might be so applied that it would affect newspapers and wire services which transmitted information derived from coded messages. The bill empowers the President to designate types of messages which would be considered secret information. Others not so designated could be published.

Vice-President Truman said in an interview that the Ferguson motion effectively would hold the bill in the Senate until the Michigan Senator or some other member asks for action. If no action of that nature is taken, the measure would not reach the House.

"I'm wondering if the bill is as broad as it is pictured," Mr. Truman said. "If it is, I don't see how it got by the Military Affairs Committee. I'm sure no congressional committee wants to shut off any information the public should have."

Will Ask Amendments.

Senator Ferguson told a reporter he would ask the Senate Military Committee to draft amendments to narrow the scope of powers conferred on the President in the bill. He said that if Congress passes the measure in its present form "we would place in the hands of the President the writing of the history of the war."

"I certainly have no objection to keeping secret information dealing with the kinds of materials and how the war machine works," he said. "But as soon as the need for security ends with the close of the war, it is the right of history to know exactly what has happened." He said it would be possible to "conceal information" for political reasons, instead of security reasons," under the measure's terms.

Declaring that the American press "has done a good job under voluntary censorship," the Senator added that the bill could be so construed as to clamp a Government lid on diplomatic, as well as war information, preventing publication of facts contained in coded messages.

While Chairman Thomas (D.-Utah) was not immediately available for comment, other members said the military committee undoubtedly will consider amendments to be offered when the reconsideration motion is called up for action.

U. S. Protests on War Prisoners

Washington, April 12 (A. P.).—The Government accused the Nazis today of shocking atrocities against American prisoners of war amid indications of a stiffening attitude toward German prisoners in this country. A joint statement by Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of State Stettinius, charging Germany with "steadily increasing failure" to live up to the Geneva Convention in treatment of prisoners, declared that in general "conditions under which American prisoners are held in Germany today are deplorable."

Meanwhile, Col. A. H. Brawner asserted in Chicago that German war prisoners in the Sixth Service Command "never have been granted extra meals, between meals snacks, or luxuries of any kind." Col. Brawner was commenting on complaints voiced by C. I. O. and A. F. of L. leaders at Granite City, Ill., that German prisoners working there had been allowed extra meals and other favors.

The War Department said that there is no general policy providing for snacks for prisoners, but it was learned that a "general tightening up" is under way at various camps, and that German prisoners are going to lose some privileges which they have had. It was emphasized, however, that their treatment will conform to the Geneva Convention.

Bread and Water Diet.

One indication of sterner handling came from Belle Glade, Fla., where 250 prisoners at a cannery were put on a bread and water diet after they had gone on a two-day strike in protest against a delay in the arrival of their allotment of cigarettes, and Representative Cliff Davis (D.-Tenn), a member of the House Military Committee, says that he will move for an investigation of conditions at prisoner-of-war camps in this country. The statement by Secretaries Stimson and Stettinius told of efforts to help relieve the plight of American prisoners in Germany, but emphasized the fact that the big problem was the shipment of Red Cross supplies to the camps.

The Joint Statement.

The text of the joint statement follows:

"Since the beginning of this year there has been a steadily increasing failure on the part of the German Government to provide according to the standards established by the Geneva Convention for American prisoners of war in German custody. Accordingly, the Government of the United States, with the co-operation of the Swiss Government as protecting power, the Swedish Government, the American Red Cross, and the International Red Cross, has been and is doing everything within its power to get food and other supplies to these men.

"In general, conditions under which American prisoners are held in Germany today are deplorable. The offensives of the Allied armies on the east and on the west have overrun twenty-seven of the prisoner of war camps and hospitals out of the seventy-eight in which American soldiers were known to be held. These military operations have resulted in the liberation of approximately 15,000 Americans on the eastern and western fronts. However, the German Government has hastily evacuated 36,000 American prisoners into the interior of Germany, where 34,000 others were already being held.

"The conditions under which many of these 70,000 men are living today are due to a large extent to Germany's [illegible] less [illegible] with [illegible] military defeat. [illegible] inter[illegible] bases, [illegible] any [illegible] hospital [illegible] her transport system is demoralized, administrative chaos has resulted and there has been a loss of effective central control.

"The movement of these 36,000 American prisoners into the interior of Germany, together with thousands of other Allied prisoners, and millions of civilians, was accomplished in many cases on foot. The German Government made little or no preparation to provide food, shelter and medical care for these prisoners, who were marched long distances under extreme weather conditions. Many of them arrived at their destinations exhausted and sick. Those who were unable to complete the marches were eventually transported to railheads, from which they were moved by freight trains to prisoner-of-war camps deeper in Germany.

"The constant compressing of these prisoners into camps in an ever-narrowing area has resulted in extreme hardship. Food and sanitary provisions have suffered, and disrupted transport facilities have resulted in a shortage of Red Cross supplies in many places.

"In an effort to relieve this situation, large central supply depots of Red Cross stocks were established in areas where there were large concentrations of Allied prisoners. In northern Germany Lubeck was the German port of entry for materials shipped via Sweden. Moosburg, in Bavaria, was the railhead for delivery of supplies from Switzerland. The locations of these depots may be changed in accordance with changes in prisoner concentrations and changes in the operational situation.

Ample Food Available.

APR 14 1945

"Ample stocks are available in Sweden and Switzerland to keep these depots provided. At present, a total of 163,580 tons of Red Cross supplies, including millions of individual food parcels, are either available in Lubeck and Moosburg for transshipment into Germany or are awaiting shipment in Switzerland and at the ports of Toulon, Goteberg, Lisbon, Marseilles and Barcelona.

"Supplies are moved constantly from Sweden to Lubeck in small Swedish coastal vessels. Railroad cars have been made available for an international Red Cross pool for the carriage of supplies from Switzerland into Germany. A total of 525 railroad cars have been supplied for this service from non-German sources. During the first twelve days of March, Germany provided forty-four railroad cars for the transport of 500 tons of Red Cross supplies from Switzerland.

"The principal problem is that of transporting these supplies to the prisoner-of-war camps after they have arrived in Germany. Recourse is being had to truck convoys. These have been furnished, together with fuel, from Allied governmental and military sources. They are operated by the International Red Cross. Approximately 250 trucks are reported to be operating at present in this service in southern Germany, and sixty-eight in northern Germany. Additional trucks are being assembled and put into service as soon as available.

Prisoners Driving Trucks.

"In many cases, Allied prisoners of war are driving the relief trucks. Military authorities report, with particular reference to the southern area, that the facilities for moving the supplies are improving.

"Despite chaotic conditions inside Germany, there is evidence that supplies are reaching some of the prisoner camps. Efforts to get supplies to all of the remaining camps will continue unremittingly.

"These facts are presented so that the American people may have authoritative information regarding the conditions under which American prisoners are being held in Germany and knowledge of the efforts being made to ameliorate those conditions.

"In addition to the suffering caused by the conditions here described, instances are being daily uncovered of deliberate neglect, indifference and cruelty in the treatment of American prisoners, actions which have shocked the entire civilized world. These atrocities are documented by the pitiable condition of liberated American soldiers, the American nation will not forget them. It is our relentless determination that the perpetrators of the heinous crimes against American citizens and against civilization itself will be brought to justice."

Ships In Convoy Crash; 5 Lost

New York, April 12 (AP)—Seared lips scarcely moving beneath bandages, a survivor of last Monday's tanker collision and fire in which four men were killed and 27 still are missing, today thanked two shipmates for saving his life after he had tried in desperation to drown.

"I was swallowing water, hoping to drown rather than drift into the flames," said Alfred Kemp, 37, of Baton Rouge, La., second assistant on the tanker St. Mihiel, and one of ten survivors at the Marine Hospital on Staten Island.

The collision, the War Shipping Administration reported earlier, occurred 700 miles at sea, when the gasoline-laden St. Mihiel on its maiden voyage collided with the tanker Nashbulk in the twilight. Both were part of an Allied convoy.

APR 14 1945

Abandon-Ship Order Given

The St. Mihiel, which was carrying 180,000 barrels of 80-octane gasoline, burst into flames immediately, the WSA said, and the blaze was not brought under control until abandon-ship orders had been given.

All except one of the dead and missing were crew members of the St. Mihiel, the WSA reported.

Kemp said his rescuers were Second Cook George H. Chapman, 20, of Espyville, Pa., who kept him afloat after he lost consciousness, and Philip Shera, 18, a wiper, of Columbus, Ohio, who pulled Kemp aboard a smoldering life raft.

The "real hero," said Lieut. (jg) Donald Murray, of the Bronx, New York city, was Chief Engineer Ralph E. Jamieson, also of New York.

"He did everything," declared Murray. "He stayed aboard the St. Mihiel to the last—kept steam pressure up, kept steam going into the gasoline tanks to smother flames, and made the plant secure.

"He was one guy in a million—he's the guy who saved the ship."

Quartermaster Frank Boeing, 22, of Milwaukee, said the man at the wheel and the man on watch of the St. Mihiel had no time to find life jackets. "They drowned almost immediately," he said. "They didn't have a chance."

Boeing said he clung to a life jacket with a dead man inside it part of the four hours he was afloat.

Robert Corda, 20, the quartermaster, of Leominster, Mass., said he and three others floated two and one half hours on a log before they were picked up.

Crash Occurs During Rain

The crash occurred, survivors said, shortly before 8 P.M. in a light rain.

Shera said he felt a "crunching or scraping," pulled on pants and shirt, jumped overboard, lost his life jacket and paddled helplessly for a while five feet below the intense flames.

He said the life raft bumped into him a few moments after he began praying for anything that would keep him from sinking. For a while he used an ordinary seaman's jacket as a sort of life preserver.

Of the six survivors interviewed, Kemp was the only one seriously injured. The St. Mihiel's captain, R. E. Porter, of Nova Scotia, was reported to have been burned fatally.

German Prisoner of War Shot.

Dermott, Ark., April 12 (A. P.).—A German prisoner of war was shot and killed by a guard yesterday at the prisoner of war camp here.

BIG BRITISH SHIP ATTACKS IN INDIES

San Francisco, April 12 (A. P.).—A small task force including a British battleship of the Queen Elizabeth type yesterday attacked Sabang, on We Island, off the northwestern tip of Sumatra, Domei, the Japanese official news agency, declared in a broadcast picked up by the FCC.

The task force was built around two converted carriers and two battleships, the British-er, and what was believed to be the French battleship Richelieu, Domei said, adding that while the attack was in progress a small force of destroyers shelled Keeta Radja on the Sumatra mainland.

Calcutta, April 12 (A. P.).—Tanks, artillery and infantry of the British Fourteenth Army, in sweeping sorties on Tuesday through central Burma south of Meiktila, killed 1,029 Japanese, Allied headquarters announced today.

During the twenty-four-hour action, the British and Indian troops destroyed or damaged ten Japanese guns, six medium tanks and two light tanks. During the three days from April 8 to 10, inclusive, the Allied forces killed a total of 2,000 Japanese and knocked out thirty-one guns.

WEST FRONT DRIVES BY U. S. DIVISIONS

LONDON, APRIL 12-(AP)-RUSSIAN TANKS, DRIVING SWIFTLY FOR THE BAVARIAN FRONTIER WERE REPORTED TO HAVE REACHED THE DANUBE BEND 42 MILES WEST OF VIENNA TODAY AS OTHER SOVIET TROOPS VIRTUALLY COMPLETED OCCUPATION OF THE HISTORIC AUSTRIAN CAPITAL.

THE BERLIN RADIO SAID SOVIET ARMOR REACHED A POIN BETWEEN KREMS AND MELK, 50 MILES FROM LINZ, 75 MILES FROM BAVARIA AND LITTLE MORE THAN 115 MILES FROM BERCHTESGADEN, MOUNTAINTOP RETREAT OF ADOLF HITLER.

FALL OF VIENNA APPEARED TO BE ONLY A MATTER OF HOURS AS MOPPING UP OF THE LAST ENEMY RESISTANCE PROGRESSED RAPIDLY INSIDE THE VITAL COMMUNICATIONS HUB AND SECOND CITY OF THE GREATER REICH.

RUSSIAN SHOCK TROOPS YESTERDAY STORMED ACROSS THE DANUBE CANAL INSIDE THE CAPITAL, GAINING CONTROL OF HALF THE NINE-MILE-LONG ISLAND BETWEEN THE CANAL AND THE RIVER WHERE THE NAZIS WERE MAKING A FINAL STAND.

NINE-TENTHS OF THE MAJOR PART OF THE CITY SOUTH OF THE DANUBE ALREADY WAS IN RUSSIAN HANDS.

NORTHEAST OF THE CAPITAL THE RUSSIANS SLASHED ONE OF THE LAST GERMAN ESCAPE ROUTES--A SECONDARY RAILROAD RUNNING NORTH TO LUNDENBURG AND THE CZECHOSLOVAK CITY OF BRUENN (BRNO).

A GREAT TANK BATTLE RAGED IN THAT AREA AS THE GERMANS TRIED DESPERATELY TO CHECK THE WESTWARD DRIVE OF MARSHAL IVAN S. MALINOVSKY'S SECOND UKRAINIAN ARMY FOR A LINKUP WITH MARSHAL FEODOR I. TOLBUKHIN'S THIRD UKRAINIAN TROOPS SWEEPING THROUGH AND BEYOND VIENNA FROM THE SOUTH.

IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA, MEANWHILE, THE SECOND AND FOURTH UKRAINIAN ARMIES LINKED UP IN THE CARPATHIAN MOUNTAINS AND CLEARED A SUPPLY ROAD FROM POLAND TO THE VIENNA FRONT.

TOLBUKHIN'S FORCES CAPTURED ONE OF THE DANUBE CANAL BRIDGES INTACT AND RACED ACROSS UNDER NAZI MORTAR FIRE, QUICKLY SEIZING THE VIENNA ELECTRIC POWER STATION AND CLEARING THE ENTIRE PRATER PARK AREA, CHIEF AMUSEMENT CENTER OF THE FAMED CITY.

PRESSING FARTHER ALONG THE NARROW ISLAND, THE RUSSIANS ENGAGED A HETEROGENEOUS NAZI GARRISON, WHICH INCLUDED LUFTWAFFE PILOTS, SAILORS, VOLKSSTURMERS, SS MEN AND EVEN BOYS FROM JUNKERS SCHOOLS, AND THEN BROKE INTO THE JEWISH QUARTER OF LEOPOLDSTADT, ONE OF THE LAST THREE DISTRICTS HELD BY THE GERMANS.

BERLIN REPORTED THAT SOVIET MARINES HAD LANDED ON BOTH THE NORTH AND SOUTH BANKS OF THE DANUBE RIVER FROM GUNBOATS SEVERAL KILOMETERS SOUTH OF THE REICHS BRIDGE--ONE OF FIVE SPANS LINKING THE CAPITAL PROPER WITH FLORIDSDORF, VIENNA'S 21ST DISTRICT, ON THE NORTH BANK.

THE REICHS BRIDGE--ONE OF THE FOUR SPANS REMAINING IN GERMAN HANDS OVER WHICH THE COMPRESSED GERMAN GARRISON ON THE DANUBE'S SOUTH BANK CAN FLEE ACROSS THE RIVER--RUNS INTO COMMERCIAL LEOPOLDSTADT, ONE OF THE THREE LAST DISTRICTS HELD BY THE GERMANS.

THE DNB AGENCY SAID THAT SIX SOVIET GUNBOATS BEGAN LANDING OPERATIONS IN FLORIDSDORF AND LEOPOLDSTADT WHILE GERMAN DEFENDERS OF LEOPOLDSTADT STILL WERE WARDING OFF SOVIET ATTACKS FROM ADJACENT PRATER PARK. DNB CLAIMED THAT FOUR SOVIET GUNBOATS HAD BEEN SET AFIRE AND THAT FORCES LANDED ON THE NORTH BANK WERE "BEING ENGAGED."

PARIS, APRIL 12. --(AP) -- SO FAR AS IT HAS BEEN POSSIBLE TO DETECT THEM, NOT A SINGLE NAZI OR NAZI SYMPATHIZER NOW IS LEFT IN OFFICE IN GERMAN MUNICIPALITIES AND CITIES UNDER THE ALLIED MILITARY GOVERNMENT

IN OCCUPIED AREAS OF [redacted] GERMANY, A HEADQUARTERS SPOKESMAN SAID TODAY.

THE SPOKESMAN TOLD CORRESPONDENTS THAT SOME NAZIS [redacted] UNAVOIDABLY HAD [redacted] REMAINED IN CITY SET-UPS AT FIRST. THAT WAS WHILE MILITARY CONSIDERATIONS REQUIRED THAT WHOEVER BEST COULD KEEP THE LIGHTS ON AND THE WATER RUNNING AND ESSENTIAL FUNCTIONS IN OPERATION SHOULD BE KEPT ON THE JOB.

APR 14 1945

BUT AS [redacted] FAST AS THE BATTLE MOVED EAST AND THERE WAS TIME TO SCOUR CITIES FOR NON-NAZI PROSPECTS AND SCREEN THEM MINUTELY, THE OTHERS WERE KICKED OUT OF THEIR JOBS.

THE SPOKESMAN SAID IT HAD NOT ALWAYS BEEN EASY TO FILL THE NAZIS' PLACES. THE GERMANS BROADCAST THE REGENT MURDER OF THE MAYOR OF AACHEN AND WARNED THAT OTHERS WOULD SHARE THE SAME FATE. BUT SO FAR, CORRESPONDENT SWERS TOLD, THERE HAS BEEN NO SERIOUS DIFFICULTY IN FINDING NON-NAZIS WHO COULD [redacted] DO THE JOBS.

NIGHT CABLE

THE SPOKESMAN SAID THAT THE ALLIES ADMITTEDLY WERE BADLY SHORT-HANDED AT THE PRESENT FOR THE TERRIFIC AND GROWING DUAL JOB OF MILITARY GOVERNMENT AND THE ALLIED TASK OF HANDLING TENS OF THOUSANDS OF "DISPLACED PERSONS" AND THE EVEN GREATER NUMBERS OF GERMAN REFUGEES.

SO FAR IT IS 100 PER CENT AN ARMY JOB — AND UNTIL THE FINAL COLLAPSE OF GERMAN RESISTANCE, THE ARMY NEEDS MANPOWER MORE TO WIN THE VICTORY AND TO CONTROL THE REAR AREA, THE SPOKESMAN SAID.

THE UNITED NATIONS RELIEF AND REHABILITATION ADMINISTRATION HAS SOME TEAMS UP FRONT AND 100 OR MORE ON WERE SAID TO BE ON THEIR WAY. UNRRA, HOWEVER, STILL IS WELL SHORT OF THE 400 15-MAN TEAMS THE ARMY NEEDS AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

THE PROBLEM IS GREAT. ASIDE FROM THOUSANDS OF "DISPLACED PERSONS", IT IS ESTIMATED THAT 8,000,000 TO 10,000,000 GERMAN REFUGEES FROM EASTERN GERMANY FLED TO THE WEST WHERE THEY NOW HAVE BEEN OVERRUN OR ARE BEING BROUGHT INTO THE AMERICAN ZONE OF OCCUPATION.

SO FAR NO FOOD FROM ALLIED COUNTRIES HAS BEEN BROUGHT INTO GERMANY FOR THE GERMANS OR FOR DISPLACED PERSONS. THE GERMANS ARE BEING FORCED TO FEED THEMSELVES AND PROVIDE FOOD FOR THEIR FORMER SLAVE LABORERS.

BY WINTER, THE SHAEF SPOKESMAN SAID, GERMANY WOULD HAVE AN ACUTE FOOD SHORTAGE. "THERE WILL BE A WORLD FOOD SHORTAGE," HE ADDED,

NIGHT CABLE

"AND GERMANY CERTAINLY WILL NOT BE THE FAVORED NATION IN GETTING ANY GRAIN ANY SURPLUS."

WITH THE IDEA BEING TO FORCE GERMANY TO FEED HERSELF, EVERY EFFORT IS BEING MADE TO GET THE GERMANS TO PLANT EVERY AVAILABLE PLOT OF GROUND, BUT THE SHORTAGE OF MANPOWER AND THE UTTER LACK OF POWER, EITHER TRACTOR OR HORSE, IS MAKING THE TASK DIFFICULT.

TO SPREAD THE STOCKS FOUND ON HAND WHEN TERRITORY IS OCCUPIED, THE GERMANS NOW ARE BEING RATIONED TO 1,150 CALORIES PER DAY. THE SPOKESMAN SAID.

THAT IS WELL UNDER THE RATION OF LIBERATED COUNTRIES, HE SAID.

THE SPOKESMAN SAID THAT TYPHUS WAS BEING FOUND EVERYWHERE ON OCCUPIED GERMAN TERRITORY. HE SAID, HOWEVER, THAT ONLY 467 ACTUE CASES HAVE ACTUALLY REPORTED AND THAT THIS WAS SCATTERED AND NOWHERE

WITH INFANTRY FORCES APPROACHING LEIPZIG, Apr. 12--(AP)-- APR 14 1945

American doughboys moving toward Berlin at the rate of 30 to 40 miles per day over the old battlefields of Frederick the Great have picked up a new class of camp followers -- Russian men and women slave workers who have turned about and are now plodding toward the east, hoping to return directly to their homeland after the link up of American and Soviet troops.

Lt. Col. Gordon Ingraham, Santa Barbara, Calif., said that "at first these Russian refugees used to move toward the Rhine, but now as soon as we free them they fall in behind our columns and start hiking for home."

The U.S. First army's advance picked up so much speed as the result of the collapse of the Wehrmacht defense line at the Weser river that the infantrymen were unable to keep up the pace on foot and have be motorized.

The American columns are moving so [redacted] fast that scattered units of German resistance are able to do NO more than blow a few bridges in the path of the advance or snipe at the moving troops from the hills.

Startled civilians in small villages along the way run gaping to their windows or flee to cellar hiding places as the tanks and truckloads of soldiers wheel through the streets. They are amazed to see the Americans. They thought the Americans were 50 or 100 miles away It's a new kind of warfare to these folk, who haven't been blitzed since Frederick the Great came this way.

APR 14 1945

The first reaction of many of these people is absolute panic. These are the ones who have believed the Nazi propaganda that Americans were a race of uncultured barbarians who would kill and rape their way across Germany.

In one village everyone ran into their homes, pulled down the blinds and locked the doors.

Capt. Manuel Shapiro, formerly of 10 Park Ave., New York City, said "they were scared stiff."

"I beckoned for them to come out so I could order them to surrender any German soldiers hiding in the town," he added, "but they were too afraid to even come outdoors. They thought we were going to shoot them all." "

APR 14 1945

The advance is so swift that one column will occasionally do a little "poaching" in a neighboring column's territory. One American Third army tank outfit -- the Sixth armored division -- went seven miles into First Army territory to take a village.

"I guess they skidded that far over the border when they put on their brakes," one officer laughed.

Standing in a high-ceilinged command post set up in the dining room of a dry-moated castle owned by Capt. von Loebe, a German cavalry officer, Capt. Willard Tubb, 290 West Tupper, Buffalo, N.Y., described the difficulties of this "har and hound" chase toward Berlin.

"Our advance columns are moving so far and so fast we simply can't tell where they are except by flying our artillery observation cub planes over the roads ahead," he said.

SCHLOTHEIM, Germany, Apr. 12--(AP)-- Two American soldiers on the road to Berlin halted long enough to play cupid by arranging a marriage between a French slave laborer and a German girl.

"They stopped us as we were rolling through town and asked us if we would please help them get married," said Sgt. Gerald E. Herrnstadt 610 West 142nd St., New York City.

"The Frenchman was Jacques Rousseau, 24, of Ligneville, France. He wanted to marry a German girl -- she was named Erna Gindler and was 22 years old -- because she had brought him food for the last four years while he was compelled to do forced labor.

"It was really a love match -- and she was a real good-looking girl, slim and blonde. We told them that we would do what we could for the

The Frenchman explained that they had tried repeatedly to get married but that the burgomeister had refused to sanction the ceremony because such marriages were frowned upon by the Nazi party.

Finally, the local Nazi party bigwig agreed to let them marry He granted his permission in a letter which stipulated:

"If a German woman sinks so low as to marry a Ffenchman, the Frenchman must prove he is worthy of her by serving in the German armed forces."

APR 14 1945

But the German girl, called "swine of French" by her neighbors refused to let her lover enter a German SS (elite Guard) unit.

"If you do I won't marry you," she stated firmly.

That was the status of the case when the American army arrived on the scene.

"Let's go to a priest," said Herrnstadt and Lt. Richard E.

Artschwagner, who lives at a village near Santa Cruz, N.M.

The priest agreed to perform the ceremony although the girl was a protestant and married the couple at once.

Afterward, the happy couple took a handsome radio liberated from an overrun Nazi party office, as a wedding gift.

APR 14 1945

For a good honeymoon, they moved right in the burgomeister's apartment. The burgomeister seemed very glad to do anything to oblige them.

AMERICAN TROOPS HAVE USED EVERYTHING TO ROOT THE ENEMY FROM THE CAVE POSITIONS, MOST OF THEM WELL UP ON CLIFF FACES. SEALING OFF OF 58 MORE OF THESE CAVES IN THE BALETE PASS-VILLA VERDE TRAIL AREAS WAS ANNOUNCED IN THURSDAY'S COMMUNIQUE.

CANNON AND HOWITZER WINCHED UP MOUNTAIN SIDES COLLAPSED MANY OF THE CAVES. DIVE BOMBERS HAVE FLUNG THEIR MISSLES INTO SOME. FIRE-BOMBS HAVE ERADICATED THE OCCUPANTS OF OTHERS. BUT THERE ALWAYS ARE MANY LEFT WHEN THE DOUGHBOYS MOVE IN FOR THE FINAL LIQUIDATION IN HAND-TO-HAND COMBAT.

SLOW PROGRESS IN THE BALETE AREA CONTRASTED WITH THE RAPID CLEANUP IN SOUTHERN LUZON, WHERE JAPANESE RESISTANCE HAS COLLAPSED. HEADQUARTERS REPORTED THURSDAY THAT THE LIBERATION FORCES WERE EXPLOITING THIS DISORGANIZATION.

RAPID PROGRESS IN FREEZING NEGROS ISLAND, IN THE VISAYAN GROUP, ALSO WAS REPORTED YESTERDAY. CIVIL GOVERNMENT IS BEING RESTORED THROUGHOUT THE ISLAND, WHERE THE ENEMY HAS BEEN ISOLATED IN A NARROW, HILLY SECTOR.

ROOSEVELT RITES IN WHITE HOUSE TODAY; TRUMAN TURNS TO CONGRESS AND BYRNES;

FUNERAL TRAIN WILL ARRIVE IN CAPITAL AT 10 A.M.

Friends, Relatives Speed North with Body of Chief Executive.

UNDER MILITARY GUARD

Silent Crowds Watch Train Go Slowly by Depots on Way to Washington.

ABOARD ROOSEVELT FUNERAL TRAIN EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP) Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who gave his life to help restore the world to NIGHT lasting peace, was en route home today to receive the final tributes of a grateful nation.

His body was put aboard the train at Warm Springs, Ga., shortly after 11 a. m., Eastern War Time, for a 23-hour run to Washington after an impressive military procession from his Pine Mountain cottage. The train was due in Washington at 10 a. m. tomorrow morning.

Hundreds of persons lined railroad tracks and viaducts as the train arrived in Atlanta for a 40 minute operating stop. Soldiers formed a line on either side of the tracks at the station and presented arms as the train approached.

When the train reached Charlotte, N. C., shortly before 10:30 p. m., thousands jammed the depot and streets leading to it. Adults joined hundreds of boy and girl scouts in singing "Onward Christian Soldier," in a tremendous chorus as the train rolled slowly by without stopping.

With Mrs. Roosevelt and other relatives, friends and associates near him, the body of the fourth term Chief Executive, who died suddenly of a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday afternoon in his cottage bedrooms, was under constant military guard in the last car of a ten-car special train.

Enlisted Men Stand Guard

Standing at the four corners of the flag-draped casket, groups of four enlisted men from the Army, Navy and Marines took turns at their solemn posts for the entire trip home.

Simple funeral services will be held at 4 p. m., in the East Room of the White House tomorrow. At 10 p. m., the final trip to his boyhood home at Hyde Park, N. Y., will begin. Burial will be in the family garden at 10 a. m., Sunday.

Mrs. Roosevelt was described by Secretary Stephen T. Early as bearing up wonderfully. Dressed in a two-piece suit, with hat, stockings and shoes to match, and silver fox furs around her shoulders, she walked to the train ahead of the casket and on the arm of Early and Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Navy surgeon general and White House physician.

"She was wonderful," Early said. "I have never met a braver woman. I have never seen a woman under similar circumstances so heroic, so calm, so courageous."

Villagers crowded the little Warm Springs depot to witness the sorrowful departure. Other crowds watched the train go slowly by depots en route. There was no hand-waving this time, only silent and motionless groups, Negroes and whites.

Two thousand troops from the Fort Benning, Ga., infantry and parachute schools were rushed to Warm Springs after midnight to do final honors in the state Mr. Roosevelt called his second home.

Battalions Stand At Attention

Two battalions stood at attention on the highway leading from the Warm Spring Infantile Paralysis Foundation to the village station. Fifty picked military police kept the crowds orderly at the depot. The others made up a close-ranked file that headed the cortege down the winding dirt road from the Roosevelt cottage, past scores of crippled children, and on to the train.

It was a sweltering day and one airborne trooper dropped in his tracks as the lone press car passed his station on the highway.

Preceded by the 99th army ground forces band from Benning, the procession got under way from the "Little White House" at 10:25 a. m., E.W.T. The casket was placed in a motor hearse. Eight body-bearers—four soldiers, and two each from the Navy and Marines—carried the casket from the bungalow through a portico framed with climbing red roses.

Mrs. Roosevelt rode with Miss Grace Tully, confidential secretary to her late husband; and two of his cousins from Hyde Park, Miss Laura Delano and Miss Margaret Suckley.

Just behind the hearse were the body-bearers on foot, followed by high ranking officers of the three armed services also marching.

At the Foundation administration building where the late President always had stopped on his visits to and from his cottage, the cortege stopped momentarily before the crippled children and Foundation workers as if in a final gesture to the folks he loved and helped to walk again.

Many of the wheel-chair patients and foundation attaches were in tears. The flag on the little dirt plaza pole in front of the nerve center of the foundation stood at half-staff. Graham Jackson, Atlanta Negro musician who had entertained Mr. Roosevelt on many occasions, stood with the polio victims and played the soft strains of "Going Home" on an accordion.

The military was represented by Major General Fred L. Walker, commandant of the Fort Benning Infantry school and former commanding general of the 36th division in Italy; Rear Admiral Jules James, of the 6th Naval district at Charleston, S. C.; Brig. General William Walker, commanding general, Infantry school, Benning; Brig. Gen. Sidney Erickson, chief of staff, 4th Service command, Atlanta and Brig. Gen. Joseph Battley, deputy chief of staff for service commands, Army service forces, Washington.

Whereas only three newsmen—representatives of the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service—accompanied Mr. Roosevelt on his last trip to Warm Springs, several photographers and radio men were allowed to make the return journey to Washington.

There was no more "off the record" journeying for the man who broke all the rules in the book in shattering American political tradition and flying across the Atlantic three times in war to plot the end of the second world conflict and the beginning of an historic era aimed at perpetual peace.

Except for a few trips during his fourth term campaign last fall, Mr. Roosevelt traveled secretly since the start of the war for reasons of personal security.

FUNERAL SERVICE IS SET FOR 4 P.M.

Burial to Take Place Sunday in Family Garden in Hyde Park.

WASHINGTON, April 13—(AP) Simple funeral services will be held tomorrow for a world leader in the great White House east room, scene of state functions and the writing of long history.

The next day a country squire will be buried in the seclusion of a hedge-walled family garden at the Hyde Park, N. Y., home to which he had said he wanted to retire when duty permitted.

That will be the nation's and the world's farewell to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In line with the wartime regimen the President followed in life, such simplicity as the office permits will mark both observances. The White House requested that no flowers be sent.

Arriving here by train at 10 a. m., tomorrow, the body will not lie in state. This is in accordance with the family's wishes. Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. There will be no state funeral.

Only such officials and friends as can be accommodated in the East Room, overlooking the lawns and gardens of the White House grounds, will take part in the tribute. President Truman will attend.

Officiating at the brief service will be Bishop Angus Dun of Washington Episcopal cathedral, assisted by the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson of St. Thomas church and the Rev. John G. McGee of St. John's church.

The President had attended inauguration day services at St. Johns across Lafayette square from the White House, until the war years when the day's services were held in the East Room, scene of the funeral.

A few hours later the funeral party will entrain for Hyde Park where the Rev. Dr. George W. Anthony, new rector of St. James church, will hold the private burial service.

The four-term president's last resting place is a flower garden, enclosed by a high hedge, between the family home overlooking the Hudson and the Roosevelt library on the estate.

The pomp of high office is being reserved almost exclusively for actual transportation of the body from one spot to another.

Marines and soldiers stood vigil along the route of the 22-hour train passage from Warm Springs, Ga., where the President died at 4:35 p. m., Eastern War Time yesterday, to Washington. Relays of men from the various armed services stood guard over the casket.

Upon arrival here President Truman will meet the funeral party, and later accompany it to Hyde Park.

Also meeting the body here will be representatives of the cabinet, judiciary and legislative departments.

They will take part in a ceremonial procession to the White House, with a guard of honor around the caisson bearing the casket. The route—from the Union Station via Delaware avenue, Constitution avenue, 15th street and Pennsylvania avenue to the northwest gate of the White House, will be lined with troops from all services, stationed at intervals.

Pall bearers here will be two non-commissioned officers each from the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps, commanded by the retiring secretary, Stephen T. Early, as bearing up wonderfully. Dressed in a black two-piece suit, with hat, stockings and shoes to match, and silver fox furs around her shoulders, she walked to the train ahead of the casket and on the arm of Mr. Early and Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, navy surgeon general and White House physician.

"She was wonderful," Mr. Early said. "I have never met a braver woman. I have never seen a woman under similar circumstances so heroic, so calm, so courageous."

Officers Walk

Just behind the hearse were the body-bearers on foot, followed by high-ranking officers of the three armed services, also marching.

At the foundation administration building where the late President always had stopped on his visits to and from his cottage, the cortege stopped momentarily before the crippled children and foundation workers as if in a final gesture to the folks he loved and helped to walk again.

Many of the wheel-chair patients and foundation attachés were in tears. The flag on the pole in the little dirt plaza in front of the foundation stood at half-staff. Graham Jackson, Atlanta Negro musician who had entertained Mr. Roosevelt on many occasions, stood with the polio victims and played the soft strains of "Going Home" on an accordion.

Representing Military

The military was represented by Maj. Gen. Fred L. Walker, commandant of the Fort Benning Infantry School and former commanding general of the 36th Division in Italy; Rear Admiral Jules James, of the 6th Naval District at Charleston, S.C.; Brig. Gen. William Walker, commanding general, infantry school, Benning; Brig. Gen. Sidney Erickson, chief of staff, 4th Service Command, Atlanta, and Brig. Gen. Whereas only three newsmen—representatives of the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service—accompanied Mr. Roosevelt on his last trip to Warm Springs, several photographers and radio men were allowed to make the return journey to Washington.

No More "Off Record" Journeys

There was no more "off-the-record" journeying for the man who broke all the rules in the book in shattering American political tradition and flying across the Atlatnic three times in war to plot the end of the second world conflict and the beginning of an historic era aimed at perpetual peace.

Except for a few trips during his fourth-term campaign last fall, Mr. Roosevelt had traveled secretly since the start of the war for reasons of personal security.

After leaving Atlanta, where the train was serviced and some crews changed, the special sped across northeast Georgia past many more small towns where railroad men and other workers and their wives lined the banks of the right of way and the little depots.

WAVES At Salute

At Gainesville, Ga., which was reached an hour later, a group of WAVES standing at salute greeted the special. Also near by was a score of Negro schoolchildren each holding an American flag.

It was at Gainesville that Roosevelt visited in 1936 shortly after a destructive tornado hit the town. He was instrumental in getting Federal relief for the homeless. Later the citizenry named the town square after him.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts were prominent among depot crowds.

Another sprinkling of townsfolk turned out at Westminster, S.C.

Cadets Turn Out

Cadets at Clemson College were turned out as the train swept past their little South Carolina depot.

The largest crowd of the trip up to that point was out at Greenville, S.C.

Many thousands jammed the concourse, lined with soldiers on each side of the special for its entire length. They stood at "parade rest" during the fifteen-minute stop. Two new engines were put on the special here, the lead engine carrying an American flag on the pilot.

LAST FAREWELL GIVEN ROOSEVELT BY WARM SPRINGS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., April 13—(AP) The crippled Warm Springs friends of Franklin Delano Roosevelt—dear to his heart—bade him a last, silent and sorrowful farewell today.

In wheel chairs, the Warm Springs foundation patients who are using the tepid spring waters to help them use their legs again, stood with heads bowed as the caisson bearing the body of the President paused on its way to the train.

Watch Caisson Pass

They formed a semi-cricle in front of the white columned portico of the Foundation's big administration building in the heart of the shady, cottage-studded reservation.

More than a hundred of the 128 patients were there. Some of them had their legs in casts or braces. A few cases could not leave their beds. But all who could possibly be wheeled out were there.

An intent and sad faced group, from tiny tots to a few years to middle aged men and women, victims of the same malady—about which medical science knows little—that struck the late President years ago.

Among them, in Naval and Army uniforms, were a springling of service men, victims of polio too.

In the brilliant morning sunshine, against a backdrop of the gleaming white building and the spring-verdant trees, the procession moved slowly to the tempo of 2,000 combat troops from nearby Fort Benning which led the cortege.

The crunch of the soldiers' boots on the gravel of the semi-circular drive way hushed. The black caisson halted before the building. It was just that—a moment and goodbye.

On the concrete highway to Warm Springs, troops at attention formed a line on each side of the road all the way to the squat grey railroad station.

Military Band Plays

There, while a military band with its drums draped in black kept up its music, the casket was borne onto the last car of the special train, which had stood on the track, its steam up, since shortly after midnight.

The train moved out shortly after 10 a. m. while hundreds of Warm Spring citizens, together with school children, stood at a distance on sloping red hillsides in reverent silence.

Except for the sadness, the military atmosphere and the size of the crowd, the departure of Mr. Roosevelt from his "second home" was not a great deal different from former occasions. Over many years, the coming and going of the President was a familiar sight here.

Every time, upon his arrival at Warm Springs, he would drive up in front of the Foundation's administration building, and wave to the patients.

And every time he went back to Washington, he drove by again waving his well known farewell. And the patients knew that it was "goodbye"—until he should come again—which was never long.

So ended the last sojourn of the late President at Warm Springs—the last of the many visits here which began in 1925.

NEW PRESIDENT TO ATTEND BURIAL

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—President Truman will attend the burial services for President Roosevelt at Hyde Park on Sunday, the White House announced today. Jonathan Daniels, a presidential secretary, told a news conference that security rules on the travels of the President will have to be cast aside for this occasion.

While lacking full details of plans for the White House funeral rites tomorrow, Mr. Daniels said that they would be simple and dignified. He added that no photographers would be permitted in the East Room for the ceremony and that there would be no radio broadcast of the actual services.

Most of President Roosevelt's family will gather here for the funeral, probably including Elliott and James, two of his sons who are in the fighting forces.

Mr. Daniels announced that Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's confidential adviser, will fly here from the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., where he has been under treatment. He will return there immediately after the services.

The presidential secretary said Mrs. Roosevelt had expressed the wish not to have flowers sent. There is a profusion of flowers available both at the White House and at Hyde Park.

MOURNING SET BY GOV. DEWEY

He Decrees 30-day Period Throughout State.

Albany, April 13 (A. P.).—Gov. Dewey today declared a thirty-day period of mourning throughout the State in memory of President Roosevelt and directed that flags on all public buildings be flown at half-staff during that time. He also ordered the closing of all State offices tomorrow, the day of Mr. Roosevelt's funeral. His proclamation follows:

"In the tragic loss of Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, the State of New York has lost its most distinguished citizen, who was twice its Governor.

"Elected President of the United States at a critical period of our economic life, Franklin Roosevelt brought high courage and indomitable spirit to the task of meeting the most difficult of national problems, inspiring the people with fresh confidence and establishing basic liberal reforms.

Says He Built for Peace.

"As one who early recognized the threat of Fascism, he opposed those who would spread tyranny through the earth and rallied the nation to total war against the Axis Powers. Even as the war was being waged, he built boldly for the future peace of the world, bringing central purpose to the permanent objectives of the United Nations.

"The people of the State of New York, together with all other Americans and the liberty-loving peoples of the world, mourn the loss of their first citizen.

"Now, therefore, I, Thomas E. Dewey, Governor of the State of New York, do hereby direct that all flags on public buildings in the State be flown at half-mast for the thirty days next ensuing, and I designate that period as one of public mourning for the deceased President of the United States; and I do further direct that all State offices be closed on Saturday, April 14, 1945, the day of the funeral services."

Pledge to Truman.

Gov. Dewey today pledged to President Truman "my fullest support in every action you may take in the interest of the winning of the war and the establishment of a sound and permanent peace."

The 1944 Republican presidential nominee sent the following letter to Mr. Truman:

"Permit me to extend to you my deep sympathy in our great loss in the death of President Roosevelt and my very best wishes for your every success in leading the United States through the difficult years ahead.

"In your every effort on behalf of our country and of the peace of the world," Gov. Dewey told Mr. Truman, "you will have the fullest possible support of the government of the State of New York. Moreover, I shall give you my fullest support in every action you may take in the interest of the winning of the war and the establishment of a sound and permanent peace.

"With my kindest personal regards, I am,

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) THOMAS E. DEWEY."

Whole Nation Mourns Today for Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, April 13 — (AP) Saturday was set aside today as a day of national mourning, modified by the grim necessities of war, for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

President Truman, in his first proclamation, set the tone for the occasion by urging all Americans to gather during the day at their places of worship and pay homage to the memory of his predecessor. The new President, in that document, summed up his own tribute:

"The courage of great men outlives them to become the courage of their people and the peoples of the world. It lives beyond them and upholds their purposes and brings their hopes to pass."

Sorrow Spreads Over World

Similar in tone was the spontaneous reaction of sorrow and grimmer determination that spread over the world except in Japan and Germany.

A British Parliament adjourned by Prime Minister Churchill out of respect to a man of "immortal renown;" three days of official mourning, public and private, throughout Mexico; battle flags at half staff on bloody Okinawa as Americans drove forward against the enemy; General Dwight D. Eisenhower's message to Mr. Truman: "American armies in Europe pledge to you our new commander in chief our unremitting efforts for the achievement of final victory;" a three-minute silence period proclaimed for Monday in China, the same tribute the Chinese pay weekly to their greatest national figure, Sun Yat-Sen — these samplings showed how the world has moved.

Vague enemy mouthings of hope for "serious" effects on the war conduct and world politics from Mr. Roosevelt's death, quickly coupled with warnings to their peoples that their fate lies on battlefields, showed the trend in Tokyo and Berlin.

At home government offices will close tomorrow afternoon, the time of the funeral, but Chairman J. A. Krug of the War Production board asked war plant workers to stay on the job turning out munitions as the best way to pay their tribute.

Flags will fly at half-staff for 30 days at home and wherever the armed forces are deployed around the world. But most formalities of mourning were set aside in official orders on account of war conditions. Even memorial services for the armed forces were limited to those times and places where war conditions permit.

The Presidential proclamation said of Mr. Roosevelt:

"The leader of his people in a great war, he lived to see the assurance of the victory, but not to share it. He lived to see the first foundations of the free and peaceful world to which his life was dedicated, but not to enter on that world himself.

"His fellow countrymen will sorely miss his fortitude and faith and courage in the time to come.

"The peoples of the earth who love th eways of freedom and hope will mourn for him.

"But though his voice is silent, his courage is not spent, his faith is not extinguished."

Faith, Courage to Live On

The new President then voiced his confidence that that faith and courage will live on in the hearts of the people and concluded:

"Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do appoint Saturday next, April 14, the day of the funeral service for the dead President, as a day of mourning and prayer through the United States. I earnestly recommend the people to assemble on that day in their respective places of divine worship, there to bow down in submission to the will of Almighty God, and to pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the memory of the great and good man whose death they mourn."

The proclamation was issued through Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, who added an order closing government offices for the afternoon and setting the month of mourning in civilian government agencies to start from that time.

There was no reference to closing of private business.

Krug quickly followed up with his request for uninterrupted production, which he said was "pursuant to wishes expressed this morning by President Truman." He wired all WPB field offices:

"American workers and management can pay their tribute to Franklin D. Roosevelt in no better way than by staying on the job to maintain an unbroken production of war goods."

Krug said commemorative services "might well be held" wherever plants so desire. Some large concerns already have advised their branches that memoria lservices may be hel dat 4 p.m. (Eastern War Time), the hour of the funeral.

Secretary Stimson, setting the 30-day mourning period for the Army, directed that wearing of mourning bands, draping of colors and firing of salutes be dispensed with. Memorial services were ordered for Sunday, the day of the President's burial, but only at stations where war operations will permit.

war operations permitting."

Brief prayer services were arranged for noon in the center court of the Pentagon, Army headquarters, with all personnel to be in attendance and those who can be "spared without detriment to the war effort" to be excused for the rest of the day.

To Have Prayer Period

The Army and Navy in supplemental orders late today directed that a five minute silent prayer period be observed at 4 p.m. Saturday in all service activities in the continental United States, "war operations permitting," with commanders elsewhere setting their own time.

Although there was no Washington call for such a movement, locally promoted observances by business were reported from all parts of the country.

Typical was the case of Tennessee. Nashville retailers were asked by their association to close for the day at 3 p.m. and movie houses there arranged to go dark for two hours. Members of the Memphis Retail association planned to close all day Saturday and there will be no courts i noperation. Schools were out today after memorial services.

The former President's neighbor children at Hyde Park were excused after brief services today.

Georgia liquor stores will close for the day and in many cities retailers will follow suit, others closing for the funeral hour. Schools there held special exercises today.

Most stores in the Capital will be closed all day.

Gov. Clarence W. Meadows of West Virginia proclaimed Saturday a day of prayerful mourning with one minute of silence at 4 p.m. business places will close for the funeral hour. Maryland reported parallel plans, with state offices also closing.

Much the same thing went on in the rest of the country.

HYDE PARK WAITS FOR NATIVE SON

HYDE PARK, N. Y., April 13.—(AP) This Hudson valley village waited today, silent and grieving, for its neighbor, Franklin D. Roosevelt, to come for the last time.

Schools let out after brief, spontaneous memorial exercises, and flags dropped to half staff. Otherwise, Hyde Park's sorrow could be read only in the set, still hardly believing expressions on the faces of its residents.

They understood the funeral train would come up the mist-shrouded Hudson, on its way from Washington, Sunday morning, and that there would be a burial service on the Roosevelt crumb elbow estate at 10 a. m. (EWT).

"I do not even know that officially," said the Rev. W. George Anthony, rector of St. James Episcopal church, named in Washington as the clergyman who would conduct the burial service.

"Of course I would serve if requested," he added. "The committal service would be brief and simple, exactly as for any churchman.

"And President Roosevelt was a churchman. He was 40 years on the vestry of this church and for the past 15 years has been senior warden."

Unlike his parents and other members of the family, Mr. Roosevelt will be buried in the hemlock bordered garden between the stone and stucco house, where he was born, and the new Franklin D. Roosevelt library.

The others lie in the beech-shaded graveyard of 134-year-old St. James church. The President's mother was buried there less than three years ago.

Most of the 1,200 residents of this quiet, scattered community knew Mr. Roosevelt. Most of them liked him, although they gave his Republican opponent a majority in each of his four presidential campaigns.

"He was the best friend that I ever had and that millions of others had," said Moses Smith, tenant farmer on the Roosevelt estate for 25 years.

"This is a most heartfelt loss," said Postmaster Charles Lavery, who tolled the post office bell last night when the news came from Warm Springs, Ga. Lavery's voice broke before he could continue.

State and military police kept everyone away from the Roosevelt estate today. Hyde Park's townspeople hoped they would be admitted to the burial in the garden where roses will bloom later in the year, but said they would understand if they weren't.

"He didn't belong to us any more," they said. "He belonged to the country—or the world. But he always came home. Always."

ROOSEVELT DEATH COMMENT

The American Press

[By the Associated Press]

Following is comment from editorials in newspapers in the United States on the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt:

KANSAS CITY Star—A great national and world leader of rare capacity has been lost at a time when his guidance had appeared in more urgent demand than ever before. . . . Tremendous responsibilities now fall upon the man suddenly called to the high office. . . . Mr. Truman will have the earnest and prayerful support of the American people, to the end that the ideals and plans of the man he has so unexpectedly been called upon to succeed may be carried forward to their complete fulfillment.

TULSA Daily World—His (Roosevelt's) death changes many things and comes at a very tense moment in world affairs. The war is at its most critical stage. Conferences involving the destiny of peoples and nations are soon to begin. Mr. Roosevelt, and no one else, possessed the facts about them that involve this country. His passing creates a vacuum. Time only can give the answer.

OKLAHOMA CITY Daily Oklahoman—Mr. Roosevelt is now beyond praise or censure, but his successor is not. No man in the annals of the Republic ever needed the sympathy and support of the American people more than our country's new President, Harry S. Truman.

SPOKANE (WASH.) Chronicle—Franklin D. Roosevelt has gone the way of mortals, but the cause in which he wrought so long and at so great a price is a living cause. It will survive and unto the unborn generations will go the story of the man who died working, contriving, sacrificing in its defense.

TUCSON (ARIZ.) Daily Star—In the midst of our grief and apprehension we can do one thing that President Roosevelt would have us do. We can unite solidly behind

London, April 13 (AP) — British press comment on the death of President Roosevelt:

Daily Herald: "We have lost a loyal friend, dauntless comrade in arms and steadfast champion of those causes which called the British people to war. . . . He has died, alas, too soon to give mankind the benefit of his wisdom in the difficult task of peacemaking which is about to begin."

Yorkshire Post: "The thought that we had a stout-hearted friend in the President of the United States sustained us in our struggle against a menacing tyranny. We were justified in our faith. Franklin Delano Roosevelt was an Abraham Lincoln for courage and leadership."

Daily Telegraph—"He'll be remembered with Abraham Lincoln as a leader who set and kept his

Following is comment made upon the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt:

GOV. THOMAS E. DEWEY, 1944 Republican Presidential candidate: "It remains for all of us to preserve and strengthen our national unity in waging the war to total, uncompromising victory over all our enemies.

"Coming to leadership of the nation at a critical period in our economic life he (President Roosevelt) brought his courage and indomitable spirit to the task of meeting the most difficult of national problems, inspiring the people with fresh confidence and establishing basic liberal reforms."

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL, Army Chief of Staff: "We have lost a great leader. . . . His farseeing wisdom in military counsel has been a constant source of courage to all of us who have worked side by side with him from the dark days of the war's beginning. No tribute from the Army could be so eloquent as the hourly record of the victories of the past few weeks."

JAMES M. COX, former Governor of Ohio and Democratic Presidential candidate: "The saddest thing of it all is that death had to deny to the President the hours of what would have been his two greatest

Around the world, the humble and the great paid tribute today to Franklin Delano Roosevelt in words of praise and sorrow.

The flags of virtually all nations flew at half mast. Many governments decreed a period of mourning. Expressions of sympathy streamed into the White House from world capitals.

Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Stalin and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek sent messages of condolence to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Great Loss, Churchill Says

Churchill, declaring he personally had lost a "cherished friendship," said the President's death was "the loss of the British nation and of the cause of freedom in every land."

Stalin said the Russians "highly valued President Roosevelt as a great organizer of the struggles of freedom-loving nations against the common enemy and as the leader in the cause of ensuring the security of the whole world."

Chiang said the President's name would be a "beacon light to humanity for centuries to come" and declared China's sorrow was intensified by the gratitude she owed him.

The news that the President had died was flashed quickly to troops in the field and sailors at sea. They, like the people at home, were shocked and unbelieving.

One soldier in Britain, en route back to the Western front after a period in hospital, declared:

"We men up there really felt the President was our commander. His loss will be felt by all of us."

Berlin, Tokyo Comment

The American Broadcasting Station in Europe, informing the peoples of Europe in a special broadcast, declared "the world has lost its greatest champion for peace."

Daily Express: "He gave his life for his country and for the world as freely and willingly as the finest young American who goes into battle risking all this day. Such was his prestige, such was his influence, such was the luster attached to his name that his passing will dim the glory of this hour. He was loved in England as much as our own great warrior Churchill."

triumphs—victory to our arms and lasting peace for the peoples of the earth. He was so much a part of both and carried them so near to completion that history will ascribe them largely to his genius and humanity."

FORMER PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER: "The nation sorrows at the passing of its President. Whatever differences there may have been, they end in the regret of death. It is fortunate that in this great crisis of war our armies and navies are under such magnificent leadership that we shall not hesitate. The new President will have the backing of the country. While we mourn Mr. Roosevelt's death, we shall march forward."

FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL: "No greater tragedy could have befallen our country and the world at this time. His inspiring vision, his high statesmanship and his superb leadership were factors without which the United Nations could not have come to the present phase of the war with victory just in sight."

NORMAN THOMAS, Socialist Presidential candidate in the past five elections: "I heard the news of President Roosevelt's sudden death with sorrow and a sense of shock that most of the world will share. It is too early to appraise his many layed straight news accounts to their people, then later expressed bitter comment.

The German radio asserted the President "will go down in history as the man upon whose instigation the present war turned into the second world war." Tokyo said no Japanese "harbors any fond hopes for a sudden drop in the fighting power of America," and then, in a propaganda vein, added: "we consider Roosevelt a very fortunate person indeed to have died before conditions became unfavorable."

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, President of the Provisional Government of France, ordered all flags on official buildings throughout the French empire placed at half staff immediately. In a telegram to President Truman he called Mr. Roosevelt "the symbolic champion of the cause of liberty. . . . France admired and loved him."

Canada Pays Tribute

Pope Pius XII sent condolences to the President's family and the United States Government. Italian Premier Ivanoe Bonomi expressed "profound sorrow" on behalf of the Italian people.

In Canada, where Mr. Roosevelt often was referred to as "the best President Canada ever had," the House of Commons at Ottawa stood for a minute of silence last night and then adjourned until this afternoon.

Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King, in moving the adjournment, said the President was "so close a neighbor, so great and true a friend of the Canadian people, that the word when received was as if one of our very own had passed away. . . . The death of President Roosevelt is in truth a loss to the whole of mankind."

Mourning Decreed

The Chinese Government ordered all flags at half mast, as did Prime to our great grief must be a solemn commitment to a unity from which all traces of partisanship have been eliminated.

CHICAGO Daily Times—The hosts of righteousness throughout the world have lost the one man they needed most to carry on. The sword of war and the torch of peace pass on to others. The burdens he carried are now distributed among us all. And all Americans, particularly members of Congress, must give President Truman the unity and loyalty our soldiers give to a new commander when his predecessor has died in the line of duty.

NEW YORK Daily Mirror—Mr. Roosevelt has fallen as a casualty in this terrible war, even as the unknown boy whose life ebbs out on a distant battlefield.

He has given his life for his country.

He loved his country above all else and labored in its service with utter disregard of his own well-being, of his own comforts and conveniences, of life itself.

NEW YORK World-Telegram—The nation has lost its leader. It had honored him with its highest office beyond the tenure of any President Truman. We can and must show the world a united and determined nation that will make war with increased fury and seek a peace that President Roosevelt would approve.

SAN FRANCISCO Chronicle—We are thankful to him that he saw the evil forces bearing down upon us and that he fought them unswervingly even to the eleventh hour, the eve of triumph.

LOS ANGELES Examiner—America has suffered an incalculable and irreplaceable loss in the death of President Roosevelt. But in being a nation so faithfully served as he and all the other casualties of this war have served, so gladly served and so worth serving, it measures up to their sacrifice.

DETROIT News—Courage stayed with him to the end. He was as truly a war casualty as any man who stepped into a withering fire at Iwo or the beaches of Anzio or Normandy. And let us here, in all reverence, propose that the Congress of the United States vote him posthumously the highest award for valor in its gift, the Medal of Honor.

ST. PAUL Pioneer Press—The full significance of the death of President Roosevelt is not to be grasped at once. The event comes too suddenly upon a nation unprepared for it. The people of the nation, however, must know that they have been privileged to see in their time one of the great figures of their national history. One may quarrel with much that has gone into the making of the three terms and part of the fourth and yet not dispute his high place in that history.

MINNEAPOLIS Tribune—Scores of millions of people the world over will mourn Mr. Roosevelt's passing with deep sincerity and not a few with grave anxiety as they contemplate the many portentious problems that face the world. . . . For us in this country the first reaction

JOHN FOSTER DULLES, adviser to the United States delegation at the forthcoming San Francisco conference: "President Roosevelt lived to see victory assured. Also he lived to lay a foundation for what can be lasting peace."

EARL BROWDER, on behalf of the National Committee of the Communist Political Association: "His body was broken by the superhuman burden he carried, but his spirit never faltered. His vision never faded—and these he has left to his country as an imperishable legacy."

CHARLES EDISON, former Secretary of the Navy: "I think, if we could hear Franklin Delano Roosevelt now, he would be saying, 'Steady, everybody—steady! There is a job to finish.'"

Minister John Curtin in Australia. Many nations of Latin America decreed periods of mourning for the man who inaugurated the "good neighbor" policy.

Prime Minister Curtin, paying tribute to Mr. Roosevelt, asserted that he was one of the greatest men of all time.

Australia will not forget Roosevelt for his sympathy and understanding and great help in the dark days of its trial, he declared.

He, with Prime Minister Churchill, gave all peoples the Atlantic Charter, which might well be his epitaph, Curtin added.

In New Zealand, Acting Prime Minister Nash ordered flags on all public buildings throughout the dominion flown at half staff.

"All of the United Nations lost a warm-hearted champion of the poor and oppressed," Nash said. "President Roosevelt's death was so untimely it was a universal tragedy.

"President Roosevelt would rank with Lincoln in American history and in world history his name will be cherished as that of the greatest Democrat of them all. New Zealand, along with other United Nations, lost a generous friend."

President Edelmiro Farrell of Argentina, whose country declared war on the Axis nations only last week, commented that "with the death of Roosevelt America loses one of the most outstanding figures in its history." Argentine radio stations canceled all regular programs last night.

President Vargas of Brazil announced that his nation would go into mourning for three days. Similar proclamations were issued in Cuba, Peru, Guatemala and Costa Rica. Flags were at half mast in Mexico City and public functions were canceled.

Roosevelt 'A Battle Casualty', Admiral Says

Aboard Admiral Turner's Flagship, off Okinawa, April 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt, "who spent himself so freely in this struggle . . . was a battle casualty in exactly the same sense as those who give their lives in battle," Vice Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, commander of amphibious forces in the Pacific, said today.

"The President's death is a great loss to the country and especially it is a loss to the war effort, of which he was the firm and unquestioned leader. Undoubtedly, the fact that President Roosevelt personally spent himself so freely in this struggle was the underlying cause of his death. Thus he is a battle casualty in exactly the same sense as those who give their lives in battle out here."

"Inspired Us All"

Lieut. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, Jr., commander of the 10th Army of Okinawa, said:

"We deeply mourn the loss of our Commander in Chief, who, like a good soldier, did his duty to the last and inspired us all to do ours. "Resolved, that the Senate tender its deep sympathy to the members of the family of the late President in their sad bereavement.

"Resolved, that the secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the late President.

"Resolved, that as a further mark of respect to the late President, the Senate do now adjourn until Monday next."

Motion-Picture Industry Mourns Roosevelt

Hollywood, April 13 (AP)—This tribute to President Roosevelt came from the Association of Motion Picture Producers:

"With all of America and all of the civilized world, the motion picture industry mourns the loss of a great leader. In tribute to his memory the industry rededicates itself to the services of our country and world democracy in this critical hour. To the new President and Commander in Chief this pledge is given."

Jefferson Day Dinners Postponed

Washington, April 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt's death brought orders from the Democratic National Committee for indefinite postponement of an elaborate series of Jefferson Day dinners planned for tonight.

The celebrations, by means of which party leaders hoped to raise hundreds of thousands of dollars for the 1946 congressional campaigns, were scheduled in about 500 communities.

The programs had called for a radio address by Mr. Roosevelt from Warm Springs.

Mrs. Roosevelt had planned to attend the dinner here, at which Harry S. Truman was to have been one of the speakers.

Eisenhower Decrees Mourning For Troops

London, April 13 (AP)—General Eisenhower issued a general order today decreeing 30 days of mourning for American troops in the European theater in connection with the death of President Roosevelt.

A shortage of materials, however, will prevent the men from wearing black armbands.

Roosevelt Looked in Good Health Before Becoming Ill, Artist Says

DANVILLE, Va., April 14—(AP) Mrs. Elizabeth Schoumatoff, the artist who was sketching President Roosevelt when he was fatally stricken at Warm Springs, Ga., said here tonight that the President was apparently in good health and looked well immediately before he became ill.

Mrs. Schoumatoff, who arrived here tonight by car en route to her home in Locust Valley, N. Y., declined any further comment on events immediately preceding the time when President Roosevelt was seized with a cerebral hemorrhage except to say that she was not alone in the room at the time.

She said two of the President's cousins were in the room where she was sketching Mr. Roosevelt's portrait. Mrs. Schoumatoff said she was tired after the long trip from Warm Springs and did not feel like talking tonight.

The artist, a native of Russia, said she came to the United States in 1917 with her husband Leo Schoumatoff who was sent to Washington as a representative of the Kerensky government.

She said her brother, Andrei Avinoff, is curator of the Carnegie Museum at Pittsburgh.

ALL FLAGS SHOULD FLY AT HALF MAST

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—The proper manner to display the flag in memory of President Roosevelt is at half-mast, from sunrise to sunset.

"Half masting of flags should only be done when a nation is in mourning," the Library of Congress said today. "Quite obviously that applies now."

Regulations adopted by Congress governing display and use of the American flag specify that it should be "first hoisted to the peak" of the staff for an instant and then lowered to the half-mast position. Similarly, the flag should be raised to the peak before it is lowered for the day. This applies to both public buildings and private homes.

Use of crepe streamers or wrappings on the flag is specifically disapproved in the regulations, but "crepe streamers may be affixed to spearheads or flagstaffs in a parade . . . by order of the President," presumably at a State funeral.

There is no special mention of rules for the flag's display in event of death of a President. The regulations say the flag should never be used as drapery, as on a picture, though red, white and blue bunting may be so utilized.

The War and Navy Departments said the Army-Navy E award pennant is not an official flag and there are no particular regulations covering its display at such a time as this.

Sunny Hyde Park Garden To Be 'Squire's' Crypt

HYDE PARK, N. Y., April 13 (AP)—Franklin Delano Roosevelt's last resting place will be a sunny garden, surrounded by a 100-year-old hedge, on the Hyde Park estate he loved.

The ten-foot hedge is visible from both the Roosevelt Memorial Library and the ancestral home of the "squire" of Hyde Park. It is situated between them, and a connecting roadway skirts one side.

The grave is being prepared in the middle of a one-fourth acre garden plot. One side of the enclosure is "all roses" with more than twenty-five beds growing there. At two ends are banks of flowers, where pansies and daffodils are blooming now.

"This is a beautiful spot and will be an appropriate last resting place for him," said Mrs. William Plog, wife of the chief gardener.

The hedge completely veils activity within the enclosure.

Roosevelt's Last Message

APR 14 1945

Atlanta, April 13 (AP)—Franklin Delano Roosevelt would have told the nation tonight, had he lived:

"If civilization is to survive, we must cultivate the science of human relationships—the ability of all peoples, of all kinds, to live together and work together, in the same world, at peace."

As President of the United States he would have broadcast those words to 350 Jefferson Day dinners throughout the land tonight.

But the dinners were canceled after death intervened and only type remained to transmit his message. The text was made public here by Presidential Secretary Steve Early as the funeral train passed through, en route to Washington.

Early said Mr. Roosevelt would have delivered the speech without disclosing that he was in Warm Springs.

Citizen Of The World

The text follows:

"Americans are gathered together this evening in communities all over the country to pay tribute to the living memory of Thomas Jefferson—one of the greatest of all democrats; and I want to make it clear that I am spelling that word 'democrats' with a small 'd.'

"I wish I had the power, just for this evening, to be present at all of these gatherings.

"In this historic year, more than ever before, we do well to consider the character of Thomas Jefferson as an American citizen of the world.

"As Minister to France, then as our first Secretary of State and as our third President, Jefferson was instrumental in the establishment of the United States as a vital factor in international affairs.

Refers To Navy

"It was he who first sent our Navy into far distant waters to defend our rights. And the promulgation of the Monroe Doctrine was the logical development of Jefferson's far-seeing foreign policy.

"Today this nation which Jefferson helped so greatly to build is playing a tremendous part in the battle for the rights of man all over the world.

"Today we are part of the vast Allied force—a force composed of flesh and blood and steel and spirit—which is today destroying the makers of war, the breeders of hate, in Europe and in Asia.

"In Jefferson's time our Navy consisted of only a handful of frigates—but that tiny navy taught nations across the Atlantic that piracy in the Mediterranean—acts of aggression against peaceful commerce and the enslavement of their crews was one of those things which, among neighbors, simply was not done.

"Today we have learned in the agony of war that great power involves great responsibility. Today we can no more escape the consequence of German and Japanese aggression than could he avoid the consequences of attacks by the Barbary Corsairs a century and a half before.

Enduring Peace Sought

"We as Americans do not choose to deny our responsibility.

"Nor, do we intend to abandon our determination that, within the lives of our children and our children's children, there will not be a third world war.

"We seek peace—enduring peace. More than an end to war, we want an end to the beginnings of all wars—yes, an end to this brutal, inhuman and thoroughly impractical method of settling the differences between governments.

"The once powerful, malignant Nazi state is crumbling, the Japanese war lords are receiving, in their own home land, the retribution for which they asked when they attacked Pearl Harbor.

"But the mere conquest of our enemies is not enough.

"We must go on to do all in our power to conquer the doubts and the fears, the ignorance and the greed, which made this horror possible.

Millions Pull Together

"Thomas Jefferson, himself a distinguished scientist, once spoke of the 'brotherly spirit of science, which unites into one family all its votaries of whatever grade, and however widely dispersed throughout the different quarters of the globe.'

"Today, science has brought all the different quarters of the globe so close together that it is impossible to isolate them one from another.

"Today we are faced with the pre-eminent fact that, if civilization is to survive, we must cultivate the science of human relationships—the ability of all peoples, of all kinds, to live together and work together, in the same world, at peace.

"Let me assure you that my hand is the steadier for the work that is to be done, that I move more firmly into the task, knowing that you—millions and millions of you—are joined with me in the resolve to make this work endure.

"The work, my friends, is peace; more than an end of this war—an end to the beginnings of all wars; yes, an end, forever, to this impractical, unrealistic settlement of the differences between governments by the mass killing of peoples.

"Today as we move against the terrible scourge of war—as we go forward toward the greatest contribution that any generation of human beings can make in this world—the contribution of lasting peace—I ask you to keep up your faith. I measure the sound, solid achievement that can be made at this time by the straight edge of your own confidence and your resolve. And to you, and to all Americans who dedicate themselves with us to the making of an abiding peace, I say:

"The only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today. Let us move forward with strong and active faith."

ROOSEVELT SAW FREEDOM NEAR IN PHILIPPINES

Last Word to Press Was Hope It Might Occur by Autumn.

OSMENA WAS AT CONFERENCE

President Said the United Nations Should Take Over Japanese Mandated Territory.

Warm Springs, Ga. April 13 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt's last word to the press was an expression of hope for complete Philippine independence by autumn.

He voiced it at a news conference at his Pine Mountain cabin near here a week ago yesterday. Security restrictions were to have held up its publication until his return to Washington.

Now it can be told.

President Sergio Osmena of the Philippine Commonwealth sat in on the conference. It was the 998th gathering with reporters Mr. Roosevelt had held in the dozen years of his presidency.

Sitting behind a small desk in the living room of his cottage Mr. Roosevelt talked hopefully of current and future moves in the Pacific while his Scottie, Fala, and a big Irish setter rubbed against the trouser legs of the three newsmen.

Expected End of Resistance.

Mr. Roosevelt, who had just talked privately with Mr. Osmena, said he expected organized Japanese resistance in the islands to end within six months. He conceded, however, that Nipponese guerrillas might be active for several years.

Congress ten years ago provided for complete Philippine independence July 4, 1946. Last June, however, the law was amended to authorize the American President to proclaim independence earlier if he determined that constitutional processes and normal functions of government had been restored.

In his meeting with reporters here Mr. Roosevelt also declared that:

1. The United States should help the island commonwealth get back on its feet economically, providing needed technical assistance and relief.

2. This nation should play an expanding part in the Western Pacific after defeat of the Japanese.

3. The United Nations—including the U. S. A.—must take over trusteeship of Japanese mandates, building new air and naval bases in a determined effort to prevent new Nipponese aggression.

Wanted Japan Policed.

Mr. Roosevelt said that Japan as well as Germany should be policed internally and externally.

One of the ways he proposed for the United States to help the Philippines was to continue preferential tariff treatment for the commonwealth until it has an opportunity to rebuild itself economically.

On the sentimental side, he suggested this nation should restore St. Dominick's Cathedral in Manila.

Mr. Osmena, who came up from Florida, where he had been recuperating from an operation, was Mr. Roosevelt's next-to-the-last official visitor. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau saw the President Wednesday.

President Truman Sees War Aides, Stettinius

Washington, April 13 (AP) — President Harry S. Truman proclaimed today that tomorrow should be a day of mourning for Franklin D. Roosevelt throughout the United States.

APR 14 1945

Washington, April 13 (AP)—President Truman will attend burial services for President Roosevelt at Hyde Park Sunday, the White House announced today.

Washington, April 13 (AP)—Chiefs of state and military affairs assembled at the White House today to help President Harry S. Truman assume wartime leadership of the Government.

Secretary of State Stettinius, whose knowledge of the international situation was second only to that of the late President Roosevelt, arrived to join Mr. Truman at 10.15 A.M. Top military commanders were due minutes later.

Stettinius immediately was ushered into the oval room where President Truman was working.

At 10.53 War Secretary Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, arrived with Lieut. Gen. Barney M. Giles, of the Army Air Forces. They were followed closely by Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King and a moment later by Navy Secretary Forrestal. All of the military group were solemn and silent.

Congress Talk Hinted

The new President announced at the outset that he would try to carry on the Roosevelt policies. He asked the Cabinet to stay on, and gave assurance that the United Nations Conference will open in San Francisco April 25 on schedule.

There were reports at the White House, not yet official, that Mr. Truman may address a joint session of Congress next week, possibly Tuesday.

After a 20-minute conferences with the new President, Stettinius left hurriedly for the State Department. Striding through a crowd of reporters, Stettinius said:

"No comment. Sorry, No comment."

Oath Taken Last Night

Mr. Truman's first conferences apparently gave immediate direction to his statement after taking the oath last night that one of his prime tasks would be to prosecute the war vigorously on all fronts.

The White House indicated that the new Chief Executive would devote the major portion of his day to familiarizing himself with military conditions all over the world.

As one of his first official acts, President Truman was putting the finishing touches to a proclamation calling for a national day of mourning tomorrow in tribute to the memory of his predecessor, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

In Solemn Mood

Earlier, Mr. Truman talked solemnly of the responsibilities ahead of him. He emphasized that stepping into the post of the man he regarded as one of the greatest Americans of all times was a matter to inspire anyone in any work.

Hugh Fulton, New York attorney and a personal friend, chatted briefly with Mr. Truman at his apartment before the President left for the White House.

Later Fulton told a reporter that the new President had spent a restful night. Mrs. Truman showed more outward effects of the strain than the President himself.

Asked To White House

Fulton, who has been mentioned prominently as a likely choice for attorney general if Cabinet changes are made eventually declined to comment on any prospective appointment. He formerly was chief counsel for the Senate War Investigating Committee, then under Mr. Truman's chairmanship.

Fulton, who arrived at the White House at 9.30 A.M., said President Truman had asked him to come in and confer with him. The attorney said he knew of nothing important pending on which his advice might be sought, but was glad to offer any help he could.

Crowds Are Solemn

As President Truman arrived at the White House solemn groups which had gathered near his residence and in the vicinity of the Executive Mansion watched him as eh made the trip from his apartment at 4701 Connecticut avenue.

There were no cheers, only waves of greeting.

Truman went to the White House accompanied by Lieut. Col. A. E. Holland, of the Office of International Affairs, an old friend, and Ernest B. Vaccaro, a member of the Associated Press Senate staff who covered Truman's transcontinental campaign trip for the Vice Presidency.

The White House announced, meanwhile, that President Truman would not officially see the press until Monday.

Eyes Of World On Him

Meanwhile, a dazed world watched Truman pick up the banners of war and peace that slipped yesterday from the lifeless fingers of Mr. Roosevelt.

Stunned by the shock of its leader's passing, a mourning nation gave solid backing to the man who became President of the United States at 7.09 P.M. last night, two hours and 34 minutes after Mr. Roosevelt died.

Said Senate Democratic Leader Barkley (Ky.): "We've got to help the new President all we can." Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.), who criticized Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policies, said: "I think Mr. Truman will make a good President."

The Chicago Tribune, also critical of Mr. Roosevelt's dealings with other nations, said editorially of Mr. Truman: "He will receive the support of all of us."

Arranging Burial

To the 60-year-old new President fell the immediate task of burying a Chief Executive for whom he had boundless admiration and unfaltering loyalty.

To the fighting men there was reassurance in the Truman statement:

"The world may be sure that we will prosecute the war on both fronts, east and west, with all the vigor we possess, to a successful conclusion."

Leaders Take Heart

To the Allied and neutral world there also was hope in declaration by Stephen Early, a White House secretary, that Mr. Truman "wants to say that it will be his effort to carry on as he believes the President would have done and to that end he has asked the Cabinet to stay on with him."

Secretary of Interior Ickes said the request for Cabinet members to remain at their posts was made informally, that no one answered.

"I believe he meant it," Ickes said.

United Nations leaders took heart, too, at Mr. Truman's decision that the San Francisco conference go on without delay.

These things were fairly tangible, but there remained a thousand questions to be answered only by time. Some of these:

Will Mr. Truman continue indefinitely without alteration Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policies? The new President's intimates think there will be slight, if any, changes in over-all policy.

Military Problem

Can he acquire the background to meet soon such pressing issues as raised in connection with the projected new coalition government for Poland?

Will he, a World War artillery officer who wanted to get into this fight but was advised to stay on the job in the Senate, want a strong hand in determining military strategy? Most observers think the purely military decisions will remain in the hands of Marshal and King.

Will he hold a domestic course "a little left of center," as President Roosevelt described it?

Byrnes Offers Aid

Is Harry Hopkins out as international and domestic adviser? Few think he will have much future White House influence. They believe men like former War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes, who flew to Washington from Spartanburg, S.C., to offer his help, will be consulted.

Will Truman be more able than his predecessor to get desired legislation through Congress? President Roosevelt had his troubles in late years. Truman knows the value of compromise.

HOLDS WAR COUNCIL WITH TOP LEADERS

APR 14 1945

Nation Gives New President Solid Backing—He Says Conference at San Francisco Will Be Held on Schedule.

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—Harry S. Truman seized immediately on the grim problems of winning the war and securing the peace today as he shouldered the responsibilities of the presidency.

President Truman told Senators that he would outline his foredign policies briefly at a joint session of Congress at 1 P. M., Eastern wartime, on Monday. He will speak to the nation's armed forces by radio on Tuesday night. Senators who attended an unprecedented luncheon with the new President at the Capitol said he told them that he is 100 per cent for President Roosevelt's foreign policies.

Leaving his modest Connecticut avenue apartment early for the White House, the new President:

1. Held an emergency war council with his top military commanders.

2. Reviewed world political problems in a twenty-minute conference with Secretary of State Stettinius.

3. Issued a proclamation setting aside tomorrow as a national day of mourning for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

4. Conferred with Hugh Fulton, a close lawyer friend, who has been mentioned for a post if any Cabinet changes are made.

5. Made an immediate and probably unprecedented trip to Capitol Hill, where he lunched with congressional leaders.

6. Announced that he would attend burial services at Hyde Park on Sunday for Mr. Roosevelt, whose body was en route to Washington from Warm Springs.

Republicans Pledge Support.

Heartened by a formal pledge of support from the Senate Republican delegation, Mr. Truman began the day by declaring, "My schedule will be a busy one every day."

The military chieftains summoned were Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, the late President's military adviser; Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, Chief of the Navy; Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff; Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary Forrestal of the Navy.

He conferred forty-eight minutes with the military group. On leaving the conference, Gen. Marshall referred all inquiries to th President himself, asserting "I'm not free to say anything."

Secretaries Stimson and Forrestal were solemn-faced as they left the Executive offices in the Oval Room. They declined to talk with reporters.

Lieut.-Gen. Barney M. Giles of the Army Air Forces also participated in the hurriedly called session. President Truman had called in the military officials to bring himself up to date as completely as possible on the war fronts in every theater.

Immediately after the military conference, Mr. Truman left the White House for the Capitol for lunch with old friends.

In the radio address on Tuesday night, which will be beamed to members of the armed forces all over the world, Mr. Truman is exppected to pay tribute to President Roosevelt and to urge that the war be carried forth vigorously on al fronts with victory as a potential memorial for his late chief.

When he returned to the White House, he found James F. Byrnes, former Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion, who had come back from South Carolina to offer his services. The former South Carolina Senator and later Supreme Court Justice had no comment to make as he entered the executive offices.

His arrival raised speculation whether he might be asked by President Truman to return to the White House to work with the new President during the early days of his administration. Earlier in the day, Mr. Truman had reiterated his admiration and affection for Mr. Byrnes, whose nomination for the vice-presidency he had championed at the Democratic national convention until former President Roosevelt took Mr. Byrnes out of the running. Mr. Byrnes recently stepped down as war mobilizer because of what he said was his desire to return to private life in South Carolina.

The new President announced at the outset that he would try to carry on the Rooseveltian policies. He asked the Cabinet to stay on, and gave assurance that the United Nations Conference will open in San Francisco on April 25, as scheduled.

After a twenty-minute conference with the new President, Secretary Stettinius left hurriedly for the State Department. Striding through a crowd of reporters, he said: "No comment. Sorry. No comment."

No Other Visits Scheduled.

Earlier, as one of his first official acts, President Truman was putting the finishing touches to a proclamation calling for a national day of mourning tomorrow in tribute to the memory of his predecessor, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who died at Warm Springs, Ga., yesterday.

As Mr. Truman began his first full day in the office to which he ascended from the vice-presidency, he summoned Mr. Fulton, New York and Washington lawyer, to work with him in the executive offices. Mr. Fulton had been counsel for the Senate War Investigating Committee, of which President Truman once was chairman.

The President wore a gray suit with his favorite gray hat, a blue bow tie and a matching blue handkerchief. Still stunned by the sudden death of Mr. Roosevelt, he talked solemnly of the responsibilities ahead of him. He emphasized that stepping into the post of the man he regarded as one of the greatest Americans of all times was a matter to inspire any one in any work.

Fulton Is Called In.

Mr. Fulton chatted briefly with Mr. Truman at his apartment before the President left for the White House. Later Mr. Fulton told a reporter that the new President had spent a restful night despite the worries thrust upon him. Mrs. Truman showed more outward effects of the strain than the President himself.

Mr. Fulton declined to comment on any prospective appointment. He said that President Truman had asked him to come in and confer with him. The New York attorney said that he knew of nothing important pending on which his advice might be sought, but was glad to offer any help he could.

Long since, Mr. Truman had been sworn in by Chief Justice Stone in the Cabinet Room. Placing his hand on a red-edged Bible, the new President repeated the oath, reading from a small slip of paper.

He, his wife and their daughter, Margaret, left from a rear entrance for their apartment home, where they spent the night, guarded closely by the Secret Service and police.

To the fighting men there was reassurance in the Truman statement:

To the Allied and neutral world there also was hope in a declaration by Stephen Early, a White House secretary, that Mr. Truman "wants to say that it will be his effort to carry on as he believes the President would have done and to that end he has asked the Cabinet to stay on with him."

"I believe he meant it," Mr. Ickes told a reporter.

United Nations leaders took heart, too, at Mr. Truman's decision that the San Francisco conference go on without delay.

Truman May Make Shift In Presidential Advisers

WASHINGTON, April 13—(AP) A shift in presidential advisers seemed in the making today as President Truman completed his first busy day at the White House and capitol.

Gone permanently from the scene is Harry Hopkins, who began with President Roosevelt in 1932 and climbed the ladder from WPA administrator to the point where he became the late President's closet adviser.

Hopkins Not to Continue

Friends said the ailing Hopkins, flying here tomorrow for his chief's funeral services in the White House, has no inclination to continue under President Truman the role he filled under his predecessor.

In his stead, a 36 year old New York and Washington attorney, Hugh Fulton, appeared at this point most likely to be in the innermost circle of presidential advisers.

Significantly, Fulton was closeted with President Truman for an hour today. The husky, blond, florid-faced attorney went away from the White House saying that he was seeking no official post, but would be glad to help in any way he could.

The Truman-Fulton association began back in the days when Harry S Truman, then a relatively obscure Senator from Missouri, was looking around for a counsel for the Senate Defense Investigating committee of which he surprisingly had been named chairman.

Mr. Truman picked Fulton, who as a special assistant attorney general had investigated the Associated Gas & Electric Company case.

Slow talking, soft spoken Fulton looked at the start as though he might get lost in the involved and important matters dealt with by the committee.

But he displayed a talent for painstaking research and his staff investigations were the pride of the senators.

There was born between Mr. Truman and Fulton a friendship that has grown warmer as time went along. When the Senator resigned the chairmanship of the committee to campaign for vice president, Fulton quit too. He went along on campaign trips, contributing to the writing of the Truman speeches.

Now Fulton is in private law practice. Whether he eventually is named attorney general, as rumored, or remains a private citizen, he will be in the inner circle of Truman advisers.

Byrnes May Help Out

In that circle also is likely to be private citizen James F. Byrnes, as the former War Mobilizer dubbed himself after he came out of a conference with the new chief executive today.

Byrnes might have been president today if Mr. Roosevelt had not acceded to the demands of organized labor at the 1944 Chicago convention and asked his "assistant president" to withdraw.

But Byrnes holds no animosity to Mr. Truman for the chain of events that led the Missourian to the presidential chair.

As War Mobilizer, Byrnes became familiar with virtually every part of home front problems. He also gained invaluable knowledge of foreign affairs on his trip with President Roosevelt to the big three conference at Yalta.

Byrnes has offered to help out in an unofficial capacity. President Truman, who looked upon Byrnes as an ideal Senator and a public servant, will dip deeply in the Byrnes fund of knowledge.

But Byrnes seems likely to be the only one of the inner White House circle of the Roosevelt regime whose influence will be felt with the new president. A possible exception is Bernard M. Baruch, aging financier, whom Mr. Truman admires.

There seems little doubt that Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, long an adviser to President Roosevelt, will soon return to private life. Dimmed also will be the influence of Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter of the Supreme court.

Politically, President Truman appears ready to lean on the advice of Robert E. Hannegan, Democratic national chairman, who is a long time friend.

EXPECT TRUMAN TO SELECT HIS OWN ADVISERS

Observers Believe Fulton, New in Politics, May Be Attorney-General.

BYRNES IS A CLOSE FRIEND

Hannegan, Kaiser and Higgins Also Are Among Intimates—Close Tie to Capitol Seen.

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—President Truman, who says he "won't be pressured," is expected to turn to advisers of his own inner circle in formulating new White House policy.

Men like former War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes, Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan and a newcomer to politics, Hugh Fulton, 37-year-old lawyer, are high on his list of friends.

Whomever he picks to help him guide the destiny of a war-torn nation, the new President is expected to follow the ultimatum he announced to this reporter just a few days before President Roosevelt's death sent him into the White House.

"There's no use in any one trying to apply pressure to me," he said in this interview. "I'm going to do my duty as I see fit and let my conscience rule."

It was shortly after a group of men representing thirty-one C. I. O. locals from his home State of Missouri had filed into Mr. Truman's office to urge him to his "influence" at the White House to get the Little Steel formula revised upward.

He smiled at them, but said, "No"—flatly.

Frank speaking was the rule throughout his 10,000-mile vice-presidential campaign tour.

Denied Ku Klux Klan Tie.

One thing he resented was an attempt by political opponents to link him with the Ku Klux Klan in the early days of his political career in Missouri. He called that story "a lie."

He never dodged a question, even if he thought it might cost votes. The reporters who accompanied him were amazed when he frequently admitted he didn't have some of the answers to the questions asked.

Byrnes, Hannegan and Fulton are among his closet friends.

Mr. Truman always insisted he gave his full support to Byrnes for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination last summer until the latter was turned down by labor and the party leadership.

Mr. Truman engineered Hannegan's nomination as Commissioner of Internal Revenue last year and later helped move him up into the party's chairmanship.

Fulton's case is different. Yet those close to the new President say that somewhere in the line-up there will be a place for the former Chief Counsel to the Senate War Investigating (Truman) Committee. Some say he may eventually be Attorney-General, if he wants it. He now enjoys a lucrative Washington and New York practice.

Met Four Years Ago.

Messrs. Truman and Fulton met for the first time a little more than four years ago. At that time, in response to an appeal to the Attorney-General for a "good man," Fulton walked into Mr. Truman's office to talk over the job of Chief Counsel for the Truman Committee.

Fulton, a special assistant to the Attorney-General and a rising young prosecutor at the time, took the post at a salary sacrifice after Mr. Truman told him:

"I don't want to smear any one. I do not want to whitewash any one. If you can take the job on that basis, I can tell you now you'll have my full support in all that you undertake."

Out of that interview grew one of the broadest, most applauded congressional investigations in all history, and an enduring friendship.

A list of Mr. Truman's intimate friends alone would run into the hundreds, for he's a sociable man. He likes people. All during his long campaign trip, he never tired of the handshaking that was such a big part of it.

Friend of Kaiser and Higgins.

In the field of business, he has close friends like Henry J. Kaiser, and Andrew Jackson Higgins, the West Coast and New Orleans shipbuilders.

Speculation already is under way as to the place of Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's close adviser, in the new setup. There are many who think Hopkins probably will play a less conspicuous part in the new regime.

Whatever figures his own "kitchen cabinet" may contain, no one doubts that the new President will turn frequently to his ex-colleagues on the Hill before

Truman Faces Possible International Crises

APR 14 1945

Washington, April 13 (AP)—Official word that the European war may end in a few days promises to plunge President Truman into a series of international crises before he has been two weeks in the in the White House.

The capital is certain that the broad war and peace policies laid down by President Roosevelt will be continued by Mr. Truman. Yet there is a wait-and-see attitude about how he will put them into effect.

Close To Senators

Mr. Truman's initial strength in foreign affairs probably will lie in his close relations with the Senate. He is expected to build on this, seeking the views of Senate leaders whose task it may be a few months hence to advocate ratification of American membership in a world organization to keep the peace.

Shortly after he became President last night, the White House issued three statements pointing to what his policies will be:

1. MILITARY—"The world may be sure that we will prosecute the war on both fronts, east and west, with all the vigor we possess, to a successful conclusion."

2. GENERAL POLICY—"Mr. Truman wants to say it will be his effort to carry on as he believes the President would have done, and to that end he has asked the Cabinet to stay on with him."

3. PEACE ORGANIZATION—"President Truman authorized Secretary Stettinius to say that the San Francisco conference will meet on schedule."

Parley Trip Doubtful

Mr. Roosevelt had planned to attend the parley, probably at the opening session April 25. With that date less than two weeks off and a multitude of problems pressing for his attention, it was an open question whether Mr. Truman would go.

The military and diplomatic urgencies of the hour leave the new Chief Executive little time to gain experience. Hence it is considered certain he must rely heavily on his Cabinet and other advisers. Secretary of State Stettinius, whose handling of foreign affairs had been based upon President Roosevelt's leadership, is projected more than any other Cabinet officer into a new and highly responsible role.

V-E And New Tasks

Word of the speed with which victory is approaching in Europe came from members of the Senate. They were told by high Army officials yesterday that the end of organized fighting in Germany probably will come within a few days.

This will mean putting into effect all the complex machinery for joint Anglo-American-Soviet-French occupation of Germany.

It will raise new problems of feeding and clothing liberated Europe.

It will sharpen Big Three controversies over Poland, Romania and other liberated or ex-enemy satellite countries.

It will remove the greatest single force which has bound all the Allies together since the war began—the common need to defeat Hitler.

Only Two Can Answer

All these are foreign-policy questions that can be answered decisively only by the President and his Secretary of State. They are matched in the strictly military field by another set of equally urgent questions:

How to shift the full American military power from Europe to the Pacific while maintaining a high level of morale among war-weary troops and of home-front support; how to continue the combined efforts of Allied arms in the Pacific with the same degree of co-operation obtained in Europe; how to complete the political arrangements for the occupation and long-time control of Japan.

Personalized Diplomacy

With President Roosevelt the settlement of many such issues among the leading Allies often came down to a personal telephone call to Churchill or a personal message to Stalin. Even with the large staff of advisers he took to Yalta in February, Mr. Roosevelt had at least two sessions with the British and Soviet leaders at which no others were present except interpreters.

Stettinius has said that except for military decisions the Yalta agreements now have been made public. What informal understandings may have been behind some of the political decisions, however, is known only to the highest officials and may in some instances have been clearly and fully known only to Mr. Roosevelt himself.

Polish Issue Persists

The agreement on reorganizing the Warsaw Government of Poland, which was supposed to have been accomplished weeks ago, recently bogged down in misunderstandings between Anglo-American and Russian diplomats. Mr. Roosevelt intervened with Churchill and Stalin, and the last hope for an early settlement thus depended on their personal diplomacy.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's cardinal principles was that the organization of peace, like the strategy of war, must be built around the continued co-operation of the leading Allied nations, including China and France, as well as the United States, Britain and Russia.

Also Advocated By Truman

Mr. Truman in his speeches has advocated the same principle. And, like Mr. Roosevelt, he has insisted that smaller nations also must be given equality of treatment with the great and powerful. These policies have become basic to United States preparations for the San Francisco conference.

This was behind Mr. Roosevelt's decision a week ago that the United States should not ask for three votes in the proposed world assembly of nations to match the extra ballots Russia would get if the conference agreed to take in the Ukrainian and White Russian Soviets.

At Yalta, Mr. Roosevelt promised to support a Russian request for those two additional seats, and it is considered certain in diplomatic quarters here that Mr. Truman will consider himself obligated to uphold that agreement.

Other delicate issues which will confront the American delegation to the conference include the creation of a system of trusteeships for ex-enemy colonial territories of the present and previous world wars. This is a potential trouble-maker among this country, Britain and France.

Roosevelt's Compromises

Mr. Roosevelt's task primarily was to reach a compromise solution on such issues between what other countries demanded and what, in his opinion, the American people would support and the Senate would approve.

TRUMAN FACING BIG 3 MEETING IN NEAR FUTURE

New President Is Placed in One of Toughest of Diplomatic Spots.

LONDON PARLEY LIES AHEAD

To Deal With Two of World's Shrewdest Statesmen in Churchill and Stalin.

London, April 13 (A. P.).—The thorny problems of liberated Europe and the possibility of Russia's entry into the Pacific war may force a new meeting within a few months of top Russian, British and American leaders to acquaint President Truman with the Big Three's plans—some of them secret.

Some quarters believed President Truman might accompany Secretary of State Stettinius here for the conference of Anglo-American-Soviet foreign ministers scheduled to follow the San Francisco meeting.

On one of the toughest diplomatic spots in history, President Truman faced the problem of representing the United States in dealing with two of the world's shrewdest statesmen, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

This world crossroads of diplomatic channels developed the opinion that Mr. Truman would want to establish as soon as possible the same type of first-hand contact with Stalin and Churchill which Mr. Roosevelt had developed.

Back of this reasoning was the argument that the Big Three's close relationship eliminated a vast amount of red tape and made possible quick policy decisions on issues which may have their counterpart during coming months in the Pacific campaign.

Long Delay Possible.

It was expected, however, that some weeks would intervene before such a get-together, a delay necessitated by the immediate job of the new Chief Executive to consult with Mr. Roosevelt's personal advisers and co-ordinate their information.

Some of these advisers—whom Mr. Roosevelt used to call his eyes and ears—are in Europe. Among them are Elmer Davis, chief of the OWI; Justice Samuel N. Rosenman, Bernard M. Baruch and Edward Flynn, former Democratic national chairman. All were on special missions for the White House.

High in speculation here was how well Mr. Roosevelt had kept his intimate advisers informed on secret agreements which he acknowledged were made at Yalta and kept guarded for security reasons.

Although there was no tendency here to regard Mr. Roosevelt's death as a permanent blow to the future of the grand alliance, there was speculation that the death might slow a solution of some ticklish political issues such as that involving formation of a new Polish government.

But it was believed it would have little impact in prosecution of the war, either in the east or west since both have emerged from the planning stage and are now in the hands of military and production chiefs.

fellows ever had a load of hay or a bull fall on him," he said. "But last night the whole weight of the moon and stars fell on me. I feel a tremendous responsibility. x x x

"Please pray for me! I mean that!"

Mr. Truman's first executive proclamation was a paper setting aside tomorrow as a day of national mourning for Mr. Roosevelt, stricken yesterday at "the little White House" in Warm Springs, Ga.

The proclamation called upon the nation:

"To pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the memory of the great and good man whose death they mourn."

At about the time the President was writing the proclamation the body of Mr. Roosevelt was leaving Warm Springs for Washington funeral services tomorrow and burial at Hyde Park, N. Y., Sunday.

The body of the dead President was taken to the ten-car funeral train on a motor-hauled army caisson which rolled through twin lanes of soldiers from Ft. Benning, Ga.

Aboard the train were close friends and associates of Mr. Roosevelt, people who hastened to Warm Springs yesterday upon the startling announcement of his death.

Grief and mourning were worldwide.

Messages of condolence streamed in from every quarter of the globe.

The battle flags flew at half-mast over Okinawa.

In Washington congressional leaders, stunned and distraught, abandoned routine business and old friends—Lt. Col. A. E. Holland of the Office of Inter-American Affairs, and Ernest B. Vaccaro, the Associated Press reporter who covered his vice presidential campaign.

"I just want the folks I love to know that if we can't get together in the old informal way it is not of my choosing," he told Vaccaro a bit wistfully. "Tell them that, will you?"

The car rolled up the White House drive and Mr. Truman turned immediately to the worry-laden tasks which fell to him so unexpectedly.

He went into immediate conference with white haired Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr. Minutes later the Secretary strode out of the White House oval room where the new President worked, and Mr. Truman closeted himself in a 48-minute conference with these war leaders:

Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy who was Mr. Roosevelt's chief of staff; Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, Chief of the Navy; General George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Lt. Gen. Barney M. Giles of the Army Air forces and Secretaries Stimson of the War department and Forrestal of the Navy.

TRUMAN TO SPEAK TO CONGRESS AT SESSION MONDAY

APR 14 1945

Exchanges Solemn Pledge of Cooperation with Congressional Heads.

MEETS HOUSE LEADERS

Makes Friendly Gesture by Going to Capitol to Discuss Plans.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP) President Truman and Congress leaders exchanged solemn pledges of cooperation today. They then arranged a joint Senate-House session for Monday when the new Chief Executive will speak of his hopes for the difficult period just ahead.

The session will begin at 1 p. m. (Eastern War Time) and Mr. Truman will speak for about 15 minutes. The address will be broadcast. On Tuesday night, he will go on the radio at an hour not yet decided with a message beamed to the armed forces whose commander in chief he has now become.

Makes Cooperative Gesture

Moving swiftly to weld his ties with Congress, the former vice president made the precedent-shattering gesture of going to the Capitol to talk over his plans.

He arranged a luncheon in the office of Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate, and invited in Democratic and Republican leaders, Senator LaFollette (Prog.-Wis.) and Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) who was long at odds with the Roosevelt administration over foreign policy.

He was reported to have told the group he intended to cooperate with Congress and needed and hoped for their cooperation. In turn, all of those present gave his assurances of their personal cooperation.

Earlier, Senate Republicans had dispatched a telegram to the new President saying:

"In this critical and sorrowing hour when you are called to the supreme responsibility of the republic, we send you this expression of our faith and trust in you and the assurance of our sustaining prayers.

"We shall cooperate with you for the winning of the war and a successful peace at home and abroad. We have directed a committee to call upon you at your convenience to advise with you."

And, following an unprecedented luncheon conference of House leaders of both parties, Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts (Maine), Speaker Sam Rayburn, (Tex.), Rep. Martin, Rep. Ramspeck (D-Ga.), Senator Connally (D-Tex.), Senator Austin (R-Vt.), Senator Hill (D-Ala.), Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), Senators George (D-Ga.), O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), Magnuson (D-Wash.), Hatch (D-Wyo.), Pepper (D-Fla.), and La-Follette and Wheeler.

G. O. P. Senators Back Truman

Pledge 'Faith and Trust' in Him—Chamber Hears Stirring Eulogies of Roosevelt.

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—The Republican Senate conference representing forty of the body's ninety-six members pledged their "faith and trust" in President Truman today.

They gave their pledge as grief-stricken congressional leaders canceled routine business and met instead to arrange memorial services to the memory of President Roosevelt.

This is the resolution the Republicans adopted at an emergency meeting called an hour before the Senate met for the first time in the Truman administration:

"In this critical and sorrowing hour when you are called to the supreme responsibility of the Republic, we send you this expression of our faith and trust in you and the assurance of our sustaining prayers.

"We shall co-operate with you for the winning of the war and a successful peace at home and abroad. We have directed a committee to call upon you at your convenience to advise with you."

Their expression of unity was telegraphed to the new President at the White House. The message was signed by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, conference chairman, and Senator Burton of Ohio, secretary.

Eulogy in the Senate.

President Roosevelt was eulogized in the Senate as one whose name will be forever cherished wherever men love liberty.

Galleries were packed to standing room only and Capital employees stood against the wall of the chamber as Senator after Senator spoke in tribute to the fallen Chief Executive. Majority leader Barkley of Kentucky said the President's death had made hearts heavy and had depressed spirits throughout the Allied world.

"We honor him as a citizen of the world in the true sense," Mr. Barkley said. "Wherever men fight for liberty, wherever men die for freedom his name will be cherished and revered.

"He had great qualities. He did not enjoy those great qualities without great faults—for God did not design mankind to be without faults. Washington had them, Jefferson had them, Lincoln had them, Woodrow Wilson had them. Franklin D. Roosevelt had them.

"But in the magnitude of his influence, in the magnitude of the reverence and respect in which he was held throughout the world, today those faults are swallowed up."

Mr. Barkley's brows gathered and tears shone in his eyes.

Genius Unmatched, Says White.

On his motion, the Senate unanimously adopted a resolution of respect and sympathy.

Senator White (R.-Me.), the minority leader, declared that no other President since Lincoln had had to deal with such complex problems.

"His genius and leadership are unmatched in the political life of our nation," Mr. White said. "He had magnificent courage which lifted him above physical infirmities."

A joint session of both the Senate and House will be held probably next week. Some members wanted the tribute arranged for Monday but Senator Barkley, the majority leader, told reporters that seemed a little too soon.

The House was in recess today. Its leaders scratched all committee meetings—the only scheduled business—out of respect to the dead President.

The Senate had a formal session, set yesterday before Mr. Roosevelt's death, but no business was transacted. All but two committee meetings were

Truman Begins Term with Tearful Plea, 'Pray for Me'

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP) With a tearful plea — "pray for me!" Harry S. Truman gathered up the presidential reins of a nation at war today as millions the world over mourned the passing of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The new President went quickly to work, conferring with the heads of the State and Military departments of government.

But the emotional weight of his new responsibilities came down upon him at noon as he returned to his old haunts at the Capitol to confer with Congressional leaders.

Tears welled in his eyes when he saw the familiar faces of Capitol newsmen. He reverted to the language of his Missouri farm youth to describe the crushing weight of his new job.

"I don't know if any of you conferred instead on arranging a memorial service to the dead President. It probably will be next week.

All major Congressional committee meetings were chalked off. The House stood in recess. The Senate, previously committed to a session, transacted no business.

But Mr. Truman's first day at the White House followed the pattern he set for himself last night upon assuming the presidency: to follow the Roosevelt policies and press the war on all fronts.

Under dreary Washington skies the new President motored to the White House from his Washington apartment at 9 a. m., today to start his career as chief executive. He wore a grey suit and blue bow tie.

made this statement:

Republicans to Back Truman

"All Republicans are behind President Truman in the war effort and any other efforts which mean permanent security after the war. This little luncheon is an indication that we want to work with him."

Fulton, 36-Year-Old Attorney, Seen Leading Truman Adviser

Washington, April 13 (AP)—A shift in presidential advisers seemed in the making today as President Truman completed his first busy day at the White House and Capitol.

A 36-year-old New York and Washington attorney, Hugh Fulton, appeared at this point most likely to be in the innermost circle of presidential advisers.

Significantly, Fulton was closeted with President Truman for an hour today. The husky, blond, florid-faced attorney went away from the White House saying he was seeking no official post, but would be glad to help in any way he could.

Truman Sought Counsel

The Truman-Fulton association began back in the days when Harry S. Truman, then a relatively obscure Senator from Missouri, was looking around for a counsel for the Senate Defense Investigating Committee, of which he surprisingly had been named chairman.

Mr. Truman picked Fulton, who, as a special Assistant Attorney General, had investigated the Associated Gas and Electric Company case.

Slow-talking, soft-spoken Fulton looked at the start as though he might get lost in the involved and important matters dealt with by the committee.

Talent For Research

But he displayed a talent for painstaking research, and his staff investigations were the pride of the senators.

There was born between Mr. Truman and Fulton a friendship that has grown warmer as time went along. When the Senator resigned the chairmanship of the committee to campaign for the vice presidency, Fulton quit too. He went along on campaign trips, contributing to the writing of the Truman speeches.

Now Fulton is in private law practice. Whether he eventually will be named Attorney General, as rumored, or will remain a private citizen, he will be in the inner circle of Truman advisers.

Truman Proclaims Mourning

APR 14 1945

But Workers Are Asked to Pay Tribute to Roosevelt by Keeping Up Output.

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—President Harry S. Truman today proclaimed tomorrow as a national day of mourning for Franklin D. Roosevelt, but there will be no general interruption in the flow of supplies to the fighting fronts.

Shortly after the new Chief Executive issued his proclamation asking that the country observe the day of Mr. Roosevelt's funeral services at the White House by visiting the churches in their respective communities, War Production Board Chief J. A. Krug issued a call to all war plants to work full schedules today and tomorrow. This, said Mr. Krug was "pursuant to wishes expressed this morning by President Truman."

"American workers and management can pay their tribute to Franklin Roosevelt in no better way than by staying on the job to maintain an unbroken production of war goods," Krug said in telegrams sent to all WPB field offices.

Commemorative services "might well be held" wherever plants desire to do so, Krug stated.

Some large corporations already have sent word to their plants and offices that memorial observances may be held at 4 P. M., the hour of the presidential rites.

Army Mourning Ordered.

Secretary of War Stimson meanwhile officially proclaimed a thirty-day period of mourning for the Army.

In a general order he directed that memorial services be held on Sunday, the day of the President's burial, at all posts, camps and stations where war operations will permit. At that time his official order will be read.

Mr. Stimson's general order set aside War Department regulations and directed that the wearing of mourning bands, the draping of colors and firing of salutes be dispensed with "because of war conditions."

Naval ships and stations around the globe were flying the ensign at half mast today on orders from Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, who similarly designated a thirty-day period of mourning for the sea services.

"Memorial services shall be held on the day of the funeral at all yards and stations and on board all vessels of the Navy, war operations permitting," the Navy order read.

No Navy Mourning Badges.

Mr. Forrestal's order also dispensed with the wearing of mourning badges and firing of salutes.

President Truman's proclamation, issued at the State Department, formally announced the late President's death.

Mr. Truman recommended that the people of the country assemble tomorrow "in their respective places of divine worship, there to bow down in submission to the will of Almighty God, and to pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the memory of the great and good man whose death they mourn."

Secretary of State Stettinius also issued an order of the President closing all Government executive departments and agencies tomorrow afternoon. There was no specific reference to private business.

The order, however, set one month as the nation's formal mourning period for the late President, starting from tomorrow, the day of his funeral.

The order read, "by order of the President, flags will remain at half staff on all public buildings of the United States until the close of Monday, May 14."

Truman's Proclamation.

The text of the proclamation read:

"By the President of the United States of America

"A proclamation

"To the people of the United States:

"It has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to take from us the immortal spirit of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the thirty-second President of the United States.

"The leader of his people in a great war, he lived to see the assurance of the victory but not to share it. He lived to see the first foundations of the free and peaceful world to which his life was dedicated, but not to enter on that world himself.

"His fellow countrymen will sorely miss his fortitude and faith and courage in the time to come.

"The peoples of the earth who love the ways of freedom and of hope will mourn for him.

"But though his voice is silent, his courage is not spent, his faith is not extinguished. The courage of great men outlives them to become the courage of their people and the peoples of the world. It lives beyond them and upholds their purposes and brings their hopes to pass.

"Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do appoint Saturday next, April 14, the day of the funeral service for the dead President, as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States. I earnestly recommend the people to assemble on that day in their respective places of divine worship, there to bow down in submission to the will of Almighty God and to pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the memory of the great and good man whose death they mourn.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington, the thirteenth day of April, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and sixty-ninth.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

EDWARD R. STETTINIUS JR.,

Secretary of State.

The White House, Washington, April 13, 1945."

TRUMAN'S HOME TOWN SOBERED

Proud, but Sorry for Him Over Burdens He Faces.

Independence, Mo., April 13 (A. P.).—Relatives and friends of Harry S. Truman in his home town foresee a "hard job" ahead for the former farm boy, but expressed confidence in his ability to lead the nation. George P. Wallace, brother-in-law of Mr. Truman, spoke the sentiments of many when he said, "We are so proud of Harry but we feel sorry for him."

A cousin, Miss Nellie Noland, said she was just walking out to her car when a boy came up with the news that "the President is dead." "My first thought," she said, "was that Harry is President and we didn't want him to be. It is a terrible responsibility to place on any man and we couldn't help but feel sorry that this had to happen. Harry is so conscientious and such a hard worker and we know he will do a good job."

Many friends and all of the relatives of the Trumans telephoned them last night. Mr. Truman had given instructions to the Secret Service that all calls from Kansas City be put through immediately.

Mayor Sees Safety in Truman.

Mayor Roger Sermon issued a statement saying:

"The death of President Roosevelt comes as a great shock to all of us. The nation mourns the loss of our great leader. The people of the United States can be assured that our nation will be safe under the leadership of Harry Truman.

"Harry Truman has been a deep student of politics and government for many years. His service in the United States Senate has given him a broad experience in national affairs and has equipped him to assume the duties ahead. I have entire confidence in his personal and intellectual integrity and fundamental ability. I'm sure he will direct this nation safely through the critical years ahead."

William Southern Jr., editor and publisher of the Independence Examiner, a friend of the Trumans for years, said: "Harry Truman will handle the situation and do it well." The newspaper was unable to issue an extra because of the newsprint shortage, but painted the message "President Roosevelt Is Dead" on the front window of the office.

New President Phones Mother.

Prsident Truman telephoned his aged mother at Grandview, Mo., and told her that he was "terribly busy" and said, "you probably won't hear from me for some time.'

Visitors were not allowed to talk with 92-year-old Mrs. Truman because, her son Vivian said, "Mama is in good health and we are trying to keep it that way. I am afraid too much excitement might not be good for her."

Mrs. Truman was informed of the President's death and her son's succession to the office by a neighbor, Mrs. Floyd Morris. She immediately turned on the radio to listen to the bulletins. She had her dinner served there so she would not miss anything.

denly thrust upon him, rather than to any lack of enthusiasm for the work of the conference.

A statement reflecting the President's foreign policy views was issued by Secretary of State Stettinius upon authority of Mr. Truman. It emphasized the Chief Executive's support for the plan to organize a world system aimed at keeping the peace as well as his determination to maintain in force the other basic foreign policies of his predecessor.

"There will be no change of purpose or break of continuity in the foreign policy of the United States government," the statement said. It evidently was intended to end uncertainty among foreign diplomats and leaders who knew little about Mr. Truman.

The President will expand on the brief, general statement Monday when he outlines his international policies to Congress — and to the world by radio.

Stettinius said there would be no faltering in the accomplishment of victory and peace ends "for which Franklin D. Roosevelt gave his life."

"We shall press forward with the other United Nations toward a victory whose terms will deprive Germany and Japan of the means with which to commit aggression ever again, and toward the establishment of a world organization endowed with strength to keep the peace for generations and to give security and wider opportunity to all men."

The decision to speak Monday on foreign policy constituted recognition by the President that his most urgent problems confront him in the field with which he is least familiar.

Pending his readiness to speak out on critical questions in this field policy decisions of utmost importance on specific issues were impossible and diplomacy was limited to procedural details and broad generalizations of principle.

To Confer with Stettinius

Mr. Truman was expected to see as much as possible of Stettinius in the crowded, sorrowful week-end at hand in order to gain what familiarity he can. It was evident that in preparing the Monday speech he would rely heavily on

Truman Will Not Attend United Nations Conference

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP) President Truman decided today that he probably cannot attend the San Francisco conference, but he emphasized anew that he will follow the Roosevelt foreign policies.

The late President Roosevelt had planned to address the Golden Gate conference, called to draft a plan for a world organization. It became known that Mr. Truman does not expect to attend.

Has Many New Duties

This decision was attributed to the tremendous new duties so sud-

State department advice and that of his old Senate colelagues. It was likewise apparent that his primary purpose, as in today's statement, would be to reassure foreign governments about continuing United States friendship and cooperation.

In two public comments, last night and today, Russian Ambassador Andrei Gromyko emphasized his hope that the American people would carry forward the plans and policies of President Roosevelt in winding up the war and trying to organize peace. An undercurrent of uncertainty as to whether they actually would do so threaded through his remarks.

The same attitude was common though less intense all along embassy row and among delegates gathering here en route to San Francisco. No one doubted that Mr. Truman would endorse Mr. Roosevelt's policies again Monday but no one knew how he would go about carrying them out.

UNIONS PROMISE TO BACK TRUMAN

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP) Many labor unions swung quickly behind President Harry S. Truman today with official and unofficial statements pledging support to Franklin D. Roosevelt's successor.

AFL President William Green said Mr. Roosevelt was a President of all the people, and that Mr. Truman would be, also.

The CIO, which supported Henry A. Wallace as its first choice for vice president at the Democratic National convention last Summer, likewise sprang to Truman's support.

John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, had no immediate comment but his attitude toward Truman was likely to be more cordial than toward Roosevelt. Lewis and FDR fell out in 1938 and 1939, and thereafter the miners' boss was one of the late President's most bitter critics.

The Railroad Brotherhoods have supported Truman in his Senatorial contests. The AFL, which backed him for the vice presidency from the start, in preference to Wallace, praised his record as chairman of the War Investigating committee and used excerpts from many of his committee's reports to prove labor's share in the war effort.

AFL President Green told a radio audience today: "The American people must now give their full support to President Truman who has pledged himself at the outset of his administration to carry out the policies of Roosevelt to a successful conclusion."

Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO's Political Action committee, urged all workers to get behind Truman. When Hillman's group failed to make Wallace vice president again, it accepted Truman as labor's second best bet for that office.

One other CIO leader said, "We must take a hitch in our belts, spit on our hands and get to work for the new President."

Truman's Wife, Daughter Due For Spotlight Role

Washington, April 13 (AP)—Mrs. Harry S. Truman, little known to the people of America, today faces the glare of the spotlight constantly trained on the nation's Presidential family.

So also does the next White House "princess," blond Mary Margaret Truman, now 21, who was not old enough last November to vote for her father.

Succeeding to a dozen years of precedent-shattering activities by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the new First Lady may find the spotlight uncomfortably bright.

Until her husband's nomination eight months ago as President Roosevelt's fourth-term running mate, Bess Wallace Truman was just another Senator's wife.

Got Family Breakfast

She rose early each morning to get breakfast for him and their university student daughter.

Mother and daughter did all the housework in the Truman's five-room, $120-a-month apartment.

Mrs. Truman served as secretary for her husband. He has said that he never made a speech or drew up a report without her "editing."

At that time the Trumans usually spent evenings quietly at home. He would work. Or he and Margaret would play piano duets.

Mrs. Truman got her first sample of the arduous obligations of the nation's first families at inaugural functions January 20. For literally hours she stood beside Mrs. Roosevelt to greet more than 2,500 people.

Exhausting Occasion

Although Mrs. Roosevelt showed Mrs. Truman a trick of knee-flexing to spare her fatigue, the new Vice President's wife found the occasion exhausting.

Recent signs indicate that Mrs. Truman may take the role of First Lady—as it was known before 1933—in stride.

Apparently she's become accustomed to being ranking guest at formal and semi-formal functions.

Blessed with a good memory for faces, she tries to remember the hundreds of unfamiliar ones she has encountered recently.

She's been seen at the Capital's smart gathering places with various groups.

Handled Press Well

The week of inauguration Mrs. Truman not only answered at length reporters' questions, but later telephoned this reporter to offer more information which she thought might be useful.

Last night the wife of the new President sent no answer to a request for an interview.

Yet she may be willing to receive the press occasionally, if not as frequently as did Mrs. Roosevelt, who established the precedent of a First Lady's news conferences. Women reporters recall that the morning after Mr. Truman was nominated for the vice presidency his wife held her first news conference in a Chicago hotel room.

But let no one expect Bess Wallace Truman to be another Eleanor Roosevelt.

College Festivities Seen

Although fewer people may have access to the First Lady, the White House from now on is likely to be the scene of many parties among the college crowd at George Washington University and young servicemen.

Margaret, frequently called "Baby" by her father, is a popular member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority chapter, is active in college musical organizations and events and does not lack for fun.

She aspires to a musical career. Her soprano voice has been heard in summer season productions of the Denver Opera Company.

It's an even bet that Mary Margaret Truman may be the first President's daughter to be a White House bride since President Wilson's time.

Aspirants for her hand—or economists—might like to know that her father has taught her to account for her every penny.

The Trumans used to spend long summer vacations at their Missouri home, built by Mrs. Truman's grandfather. That may not be so feasible now.

M'KELLAR NOW HOLDS HIGH SPOT IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 13—(AP) Elevation of Vice President Truman to the presidency today put Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Memphis, Tenn., in one of the most powerful positions any man ever held in the Senate.

The 76-year-old Tennessee Democrat holds the purse strings of the Senate as acting chairman of the Appropriations committee. He also is chairman of the important post office and post roads committee.

Now as President pro tempore he takes over the gavel as the regular presiding officer of the body.

There will be no vice president until 1949, because there is no constitutional provision for a special election to fill that position.

But McKellar will perform the vice president's duty of presiding over the Senate and his salary will go up from $10,000 to $15,000. He also retains his status as a Senator.

Parliamentarians said there is no rule or law requiring McKellar to drop any of his chairmanships or committee assignments.

Truman Repays Page Who Offered Him Job

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 13—As President Truman left Senate Secretary Leslie L. Biffle's office today he paused to sign the autograph book of John Bunch, 16-year-old Senate page of Statesville, N. C.

"This is the boy that remembered me," he said.

John told a reporter that Mr. Truman referred to the short time after he resigned as Senator before he took the oath as Vice President.

"For a couple of days he was without a job," said the page. "I asked him if he'd like to come to work for me."

TRUMAN HAS ONLY MIDDLE INITIAL

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—President Truman's middle initial "S" is just an initial—it has no name significance. It represents a compromise by his parents. One of his grandfathers had the first name Solomon, the other Shippe. Not wanting to play favorites between the two, the President's parents decided on the "S."

Missouri Editor Says Truman Can Handle Job

Washington, April 13 (AP)—Roy Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, called at the White House this afternoon to talk with President Truman.

Another caller was Ed McKim, Omaha (Neb.) insurance man who accompanied Truman on his Vice Presidential campaign last fall.

Roberts said he had stopped over in Washington on his way to the annual meeting of the Associated Press in New York and called simply to pay his respects to the President.

As he left the White House, Roberts told reporters:

"I think President Truman will do a fine, common sense job, and that the country will rally behind him. I've got confidence in him."

Mrs. Truman Spends Day In Seclusion

Washington, April 13 (AP)—Mrs. Mary S. Truman today secluded herself in the modest apartment which she soon must leave to assume the role of mistress of the White House.

Reported thoroughly upset over the tragic death of President Roosevelt and the suddenness of becoming First Lady, Mrs. Trauman declined to see anyone.

Guarded by secret service men, the "plain-folks" woman from Missouri spent the day with her daughter, 21-year-old Mary Margaret, and her mother, Mrs. D. W. Wallace, of Independence, Mo.

NATIVE OF MISSOURI

Independence, Mo., April 13 (A. P.).—Harry S. Truman, successor to President Roosevelt, is the first native Missourian to become the nation's chief executive and except for Herbert Hoover, native of Iowa and a resident of California, is the only President from West of the Mississippi River.

Now approaching his sixty-first birthday Truman was born at Lamar, Mo., on May 8 1884. Lamar is a town of 2,300 population.

Truman Designates Himself 33d President

Washington, April 13 (AP)—President Truman gave the official verdict today—he is the thirty-third President.

His proclamation of a mourning period for Franklin D. Roosevelt named the dead Executive as "the thirty-second President of the United States."

Actually, Mr. Roosevelt was the thirty-first man to hold the office.

To reach the higher number Grover Cleveland is counted twice, his two terms having been separated.

The argument over the count is one of long standing.

Still 'Neighborly,' Truman Says

By Ernest B. Vaccaro

Mr. Vaccaro covered Harry Truman's campaign for the Vice Presidency. Today, when Mr. Truman rode to the White House to take up his duties as President, Vaccaro was one of two personal friends who accompanied him.

Washington, April 13 (AP)—Harry S. Truman asked me today to let his old friends know that his sudden elevation to the Presidency hasn't changed his neighborly spirit.

If he can't get together informally with his pals—especially the boys of the old 129th with which he served during World War I—it's because of the duties of his new job and not because Truman wants it that way.

Rode To White House

The President asked me to pass that word along as we rode to the White House this morning from his modest Connecticut avenue apartment.

There were two of us with the President, the other being Lieut. Col. A. E. Holland, of the Office of Inter-American Affairs, an old friend.

"You know, if I could have my way," the new President said, and there was a plaintive note in his voice, "I'd have them all come in without knocking."

His Door Wide Open

The door to Truman's Vice Presidential office at the Capitol was always wide open and people came in droves to shake his hand—reporters, old war "buddies" and countless others.

There were always school kids, privates, yeomen and folk of every description.

"I'm going to miss all of that," Mr. Truman said.

And he meant it, for President Truman likes people. He enjoys talking and joking with them.

Miss Boys Of Old 129th

Particularly, the President said, he will miss seeing the boys of the old 129th. They were always dropping by for little visits.

"You know how it will be," the President explained. "My schedule will be a busy one every day. It will be crowded with official appointments. I'll have all I can do to see everyone I must see in the course of these duties.

FOREIGN POLICY TO REMAIN SAME

WASHINGTON, April 13 — (AP) Secretary of State Stettinius said in a formal statement today the change in the presidency involves "no change of purpose or break of continuity in the foreign policy of the United States government."

The text of his statement:

"I know I speak for all Americans when I say we are united in our resolve to give to President Truman our full support in the momentous tasks of carrying this war to a victorious conclusion and in establishing a secure peace. Under President Truman's leadership we shall not falter, either as a government or a people, in the accomplishment of these ends, for which Franklin D. Roosevelt gave his life.

"Final preparations for the United Nations conference at San Francisco are being completed on schedule. The conference will begin on April 25, as planned.

"President Truman has authorized me to say that there will be no change of purpose of break of continuity in the foreign policy of the United States government. We shall press forward with the other United Nations toward a victory whose terms will deprive Germany and Japan of the means with which to commit aggression ever again, and toward the establishment of a world organization endowed with strength to keep the peace for generations and to give security and wider opportunity to all men."

Briton Calls Him a Man of Immortal Fame —Eden to Fly Here for Funeral.

London, April 13 (A. P.).—A solemnly hushed House of Commons adjourned five minutes after it convened today in respect to the memory of President Roosevelt.

His shoulders bowed and his face pale, Prime Minister Churchill informed the House of "this great departed statesman and war leader," this "dear and cherished" friend.

All Great Britain—the King, the Prime Minister and the man in the street—mourned that the President, their friend in the darkest days of their history, had been denied almost on the eve of victory the triumph of his war leadership. The swelling chorus of tributes to the man who helped turn the tide of war by bracing Britain when she stood alone was mingled with widespread curiosity over the personality and policy of President Truman and expressions of satisfaction over his intention to carry on the administration's aims.

Looks Tired and Worn.

There was conjecture in the British press whether Mr. Churchill might fly to the funeral, but the Press Association said that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden would attend as the British Government's representative.

Looking tired and worn—there were reports that he had been in lengthy conversation with Washington by telephone during the night—Mr. Churchill came before the House and asked that it adjourn out of respect to a man of immortal renown. Speaking with considerable emotion, he said that it was not fitting that they should continue their work this day. He proposed that next Tuesday be set aside for tribute to the President by the leaders of all parties. His few phrases were spoken in a voice that was hardly audible in the galleries above.

Sitting on the Government bench were the members of the Cabinet led by Mr. Eden. All wore black ties. An unusually large number of Americans were in the visitors' gallery.

In addressing the House, Mr. Churchill said:

"The House will have learned with deepest sorrow the grievous news which has come to us from across the Atlantic, and which conveys to us the loss of the famous President of the United States, whose friendship for the cause of freedom and for the causes of the weak and poor have won him immortal renown.

"It is not fitting that we should continue our work this day, I feel that the House will wish to render its token of respect to the memory of this great departed statesman and war leader by adjourning immediately.

"I should propose that on Tuesday next tributes should be paid when we are assembled here by the leaders of the various parties in the House and that we should afterward proceed with the business already announced."

Slowly the members filed from the chamber where Great Britain had hoped to honor the President this spring. Hundreds of Americans, many of them in uniform, had thronged to the hall, expecting that the day would be set apart for eulogies. A guard turned to an American major and said simply, "Soldier, we're sorry, too." In the lobby a white-haired Member of Parliament, leaning on a cane, commented: "He was a great man."

The King's Tribute.

King George VI expressed his grief and shock over the death of President Roosevelt in a message to Mrs. Roosevelt today.

"The Queen and I are deeply grieved and shocked by the news of President Roosevelt's death," he wrote. "In him humanity has lost a great figure and we have lost a true and honored friend.

"On behalf of all my people I send our most heartfelt sympathy to you and to the members of your family."

Subsequently the King sent the following message to President Truman:

"I hasten to convey to you, Mr. President, my deepest sympathy in this great loss which has befallen the people of United States. This regret will be shared by all people who have long felt that under President Roosevelt's wise and understanding leadership the problems of war and of the peace that is to follow were in the hands of one who had proved himself in so signal a manner to have in his heart the welfare of mankind.

"It is especially grievous that at this moment when the forces of the Allies are bringing to a close the evil which has for so long overshadowed the continent of Europe, the knowledge and wise counsel of President Roosevelt should have been taken from us. But his knowledge, wise counsel and decisive action will forever be remembered, and the people of the United States may rest assured that his name will find a lasting place in the hearts of all my people."

Mr. Roosevelt's death cast a dark cloud over the people of this whole land. Britain's first reaction to the news was one of stunned incredulity, which gave way gradually to a sober sense of deep loss. Few were so profoundly moved as Mr. Churchill himself when the word was given to him shortly after midnight. The Prime Minister, who had not yet retired, immediately dispatched the following message to Mrs. Roosevelt:

"I send my most profound sympathy in your grievous loss. It is also the loss of the British nation and of the cause of freedom in every land. I feel so deeply for you all. As for myself, I have lost a dear and cherished friendship which was forged in the fire of war. I trust you may find consolation in the glory of his name and the magnitude of his work."

American Soldiers Get News.

The British public got their first news of the President's death in a midnight BBC broadcast.

The word spread quickly to entertainment centers thronged with American and Allied soldiers, placing a sudden damper on spirits keyed to the victorious advance of the American and British troops on the western front. The news drove the war off the front pages of the late editions of the London morning newspapers, which carried lengthy articles on the President's life and career, illustrated with photos.

The afternoon papers followed suit.

Said the Evening News: "He was the friend who put rifles in our hands, who let the Royal Navy hoist the White Ensign on American destroyers." The Star declared: "He had worn himself out in the service of his country and of all the peoples striving for liberty." The Evening Standard pronounced him the "Greatest American."

Britain's sense of loss was obviously sincere, tempered only by curiosity concerning the immediate results of the President's death. A widely heard question was: "Will it throw the country into a new general election?" Innumerable questions were asked about President Truman.

George Muff, a Laborite Member of Parliament, who is personally acquainted with Mr. Truman, was quoted in the press as saying, "Truman by name, a truman by nature, and a true friend of this country."

EDEN IS EN ROUTE TO U.S. BY PLANE

Churchill Sends Foreign Secretary to Represent Britain at Services.

LONDON, Saturday, April 14—(AP) Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was en route to the United States by plane this morning to attend President Roosevelt's funeral as Prime Minister Churchill reluctantly stayed on the job in anticipation of a possible end of organized German resistance.

Grieved at the death of his "dear and cherished friend," Churchill sent Eden as representative of Britain and himself. The Foreign Secretary left yesterday while the Prime Minister awaited in expectation of imminent military developments.

The Prime Minister, who had appeared tired and worn earlier in the day as he briefly eulogized "this great departed statesman" before a hushed House of Commons, was reported to have decided against flying to Washington only after becoming convinced that the military situation required his hour by hour presence here.

There was speculation that it would be necessary for Churchill and Premier Stalin of Russia to meet soon with President Truman to acquaint the new American leader with the Big Three's plans for liberated Europe. It was felt that Truman would want to establish as quickly as possible the intimate association with Churchill and Stalin that Roosevelt had developed.

All Britain and thousands of Americans here on military duty shared the shock and sorrow of the President's death.

Flags on all British government buildings throughout the world will be flown at half-staff tomorrow. Next Tuesday was set aside for tributes to the President by the leaders of all parties in Parliament.

Commons adjourned five minutes after it had convened, after hearing Churchill, speaking in a voice scarcely audible in the galleries, say it was "not fitting that we should continue our work this day" and then ask for an adjournment out of respect.

Speaking with emotion, he said:

"The House will have learned with deepest sorrow the grievous news which has come to us from across the Atlantic and which conveys to us the loss of a famous president of the United States, whose friendship for the cause of freedom and for the causes of the weak and poor have won him immortal renown.

The British public got its first news of the President's death in a midnight BBC broadcast. The first reaction was one of stunned incredulity, followed by a sober sense of deep loss to many Britons the President was as great a hero as Churchill. The shocking news drove the war off the front pages of the late editions of morning newspapers.

King George VI sent a message to Mrs. Roosevelt expressing deep grief and shock. He ordered a week of court mourning and cancelled plans to see an international football match at Glasgow tomorrow.

Queen, King Grieved

"The Queen and I are deeply grieved and shocked by the news of President Roosevelt's death," he wrote. "In him humanity has lost a great figure and we have lost a true and honored friend. On behalf of all my peoples I send our most heartfelt sympathy to you and to the members of your family."

Virtually every ambassador to the court of St. James's called at the U. S. Embassy to express to Ambassador Winant their deep feeling of loss.

The Dean of Westminster Abbey offered that British shrine to American forces for a memorial service, saying that Roosevelt's death "leaves behind the memory of a life which in unselfish service to humanity can have few equals in our own or any time."

Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, commander of an Eighth Air Force reconnaissance wing, was visiting friends in London when he heard the news in the midnight BBC broadcast. He left on a special Army plane this morning for Washington.

Accompanying Britain's deep sorrow was widespread curiosity over President Truman and what his policies would mean to Britain and to world affairs. London's evening papers reflected the speculation by printing lengthy laudatory accounts of Trumans' career and personality, stressing the "log cabin to White House" theme.

It was felt that Truman was in one of the toughest diplomatic spots in history in his impending dealings with two of the world's shrewdest statesmen, Churchill and Stalin. There was speculation on how well Roosevelt had kept his intimate advisors informed on secret agreements which he acknowledged were made at Yalta.

For the first time in history the death of the head of a state who was not related to the British royal family was noted on tonight's court circular. It said:

"The King has with profound regret received news of the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the president of the United States. His majesty mourns the loss of a staunch ally and a great personal friend."

MILITARY MEN VOICE SORROW

Will Intensify War Efforts, Eisenhower Says

Paris, April 13 (AP)—Allied military leaders today expressed their deep sorrow at the death of President Roosevelt, and General Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander, declared that war efforts would be intensified to "insure that the great task which he undertook is fulfilled in complete victory."

Wherever battle conditions permitted, flags flew at half-staff, and will continue to be lowered in mourning for a period of 30 days. Expressions of grief came from every front, from generals down to privates.

Eisenhower sent messages both to Mrs. Roosevelt and to President Truman. To the new President he said "the American armies in Europe pledge to you, our new Commander in Chief, unremitted efforts for the achievement of final victory."

Minute Of Silent Tribute

Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, in a message to Eisenhower, expressed the "sincere regret" of British land forces on the Western front and declared that President Roosevelt "was a great man and a great champion of freedom and his loss at this time is a shattering blow."

Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of the 6th Army Group, said that "no greater loss, no grief more profound could come to the civilized world than the death of the man whose foresight, leadership and courage was primarily responsible for the inevitable defeat of the Axis powers." He added that

Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, commander of the American 7th Army, said the President had "just as surely given his life in the service of his country as any soldier on the far-flung battlefronts."

Because of war conditions, no military salutes will be fired by troops in the European theater and no black bands of mourning will be worn, supreme Allied headquarters announced. In so far as conditions permit, however, memorial services will be held tomorrow at all American camps and stations.

Reports from all the army fronts said that the news of the President's death, which reached American troops by all manner of means—radio, dispatch riders, ration truck drivers—was universally received in shocked silence and momentary disbelief.

On behalf of Red Cross personnel in Europe, Commissioner Harvey D. Gibson said that the President's death "with victory in sight is a crushing blow."

Wonder About Peace Plans

Front-line correspondents reported that tough combat troops were visibly affected by the news of the President's death.

Typical comment came from Private Ray Vaughn, Harvey, Ill.:

Stalin Voices Grief; Desires Continued Collaboration

APR 14 1945

Moscow, April 13 (AP)—Premier Marshal Stalin led the Russian people today in expressing deep personal grief at the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt and in making plain that the Russian nation desired continued Russian-American collaboration along the lines laid down by the late President.

All Russia mourned at the loss of a man regarded here as having been the Soviet Union's greatest friend in America.

Memorial Broadcast

The Soviet press printed two-column photographs of Roosevelt, bordered in black, on the front pages, along with Premier Stalin's condolences to Mrs. Roosevelt and his personal note to President Truman.

The Moscow radio broadcast an official memorial.

Every Russian credited Roosevelt with bringing about diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, and the speed with which he dispatched aid when Germany attacked Russia while the United States was not yet at war with the Reich endeared him to the people of this country.

That continuation of the President's policy toward Russia and in building a world-security organization are of highest concern here was evidenced by Stalin's quick assurance to Truman of his desire for continued co-operation.

Text Of Message

The Russians were firmly convinced by Roosevelt's election to a fourth term that the American people wished close relations with Russia in building peace and security after the war and will look for every sign that his program will be continued without interruption.

In a message to Mrs. Roosevelt, Stalin said:

"The Soviet people highly valued President Roosevelt as a great organizer of the struggles of freedom-loving nations against the common enemy and as the leader in the cause of insuring the security of the whole world."

Stalin's message was broadcast over the Moscow radio and contents of a personal note sent to President Truman also were broadcast.

Sympathy Expressed

"The Government of the Soviet Union expresses sincere sympathy to the American people in their great loss and convictions that the policy of friendship between the great powers who are shouldering the main burden of war against the common enemy will continue in the future," Stalin said in part.

Other Leaders Shocked

Other Soviet leaders were reported profoundly shocked by Roosevelt's sudden death. Foreign Minister Vyacheslov Molotov made a special trip to convey personal condolences to American Ambassador W. Averill Harriman. In a message to Secretary of State Stettinius, Molotov stressed his personal grief and added: "It is not only a tremendous loss for the United States but for all the United Nations. The Soviet people know full well his undivided attention to the interests of future peace."

Throughout Moscow today there were scenes that demonstrated the affection of the Russians for Roosevelt. In subways riding to work people sat sadly shaking their heads and saying: "What a pity. What a pity." There were plain people who talked to you with tears in their eyes.

Soviet President Mikhail Kalinin sent the following message to Truman:

"I am grieving deeply over the passing of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The Soviet people have always valued the friendly respect of the United States and Roosevelt's efforts to strengthen this friendship. Accept my sincere sympathy."

Moscow, April 13 (AP)—An American army sergeant will conduct special memorial services for President Roosevelt here tomorrow, and high Russian officials were expected to attend the simple ceremony at the home of the United States Ambassador, W. Averell Harriman.

Deeply moved by the death of the American President, hailed today throughout Russia as a great and beloved friend of the Soviet Union, Moscow officialdom, along with the heads of Moscow's diplomatic and military missions, was expected to attend the services.

Sergt. George E. Thomas, Chicago, former pastor of Austin Square Baptist Church at Lynn, Mass., will lead the services.

Molotov Pays Tribute

Harriman, a close personal friend of the late President, specified his home rather than the American Embassy for the memorial gathering.

Hundreds of persons, including Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov, expressed to the American Ambassador today their deep personal sorrow at America's loss.

[Moscow radio announced that the Council of People's Commissars had ordered mourning flags from all Soviet state and official buildings Saturday and Sunday in an expression of national grief.]

In a message to Edward R. Stettinius, United States Secretary of State, Molotov stated that Mr. Roosevelt's death was "not only a tremendous loss for the United States but for all the United Nations."

Sentiment Of Russia's Millions

The feelings of the Soviet Union's millions of farmers and workers were perhaps expressed by President Mikhail Kalinin, himself of peasant stock, who said that the people of Russia "have always valued the friendly aspect of the United States and (the President's) efforts to strengthen this friendship."

Premier Marshal Stalin sent messages of regret to Mrs. Roosevelt and to President Truman.

Stalin was quick to assure President Truman of his sincere desire for and his confidence in continued co-operation between the two nations.

Although it was too early for the Soviet press to comment on continuation of Roosevelt policies, the importance the Russians attach to such a continuation was emphasized by the fact that it was among the first things Stalin mentioned.

Mexico In Mourning.

Mexico City, April 13 (A. P.).—Mexico today began three days of mourning for President Roosevelt. The observance was both public and private.

Every motion picture house was closed for the day as were also the night clubs. Concerts, banquets and even the musical celebration of The Day of America were canceled. Newspapers published customary paid advertisements in which their sympathy was expressed by the Government, the railroads, labor unions and business firms.

Other Tributes.

Other tributes to President Roosevelt poured in from all over the world.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, President of the provisional government of France, ordered all flags on official buildings throughout the French Empire placed at half staff immediately. In a telegram to President Truman he called the late President "the symbolic champion of the cause of liberty. France admired and loved him."

In Canada, where President Roosevelt often was referred to as "the best President Canada ever had," the House of Commons at Ottawa stood for a minute of silence last night and then adjourned until this afternoon.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, in moving the adjournment, said that the President was "so close a neighbor, so great and true a friend of the Canadian people, that the word when received was as if one of our very own had passed away. The death of President Roosevelt is in truth a loss to the whole of mankind."

Dutch Queen's Tribute.

Queen Wilhelmina and Princess Juliana of the Netherlands sent messages of condolence to Mrs. Roosevelt, and the Queen cabled President Truman that "my people and I fully share" in the American people's loss, adding: "He gave his life for our common cause, and the Netherlands will ever cherish his name."

Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, former Premier of the Polish Government in Exile, cabled to Mrs. Roosevelt his "deepest sympathy on the untimely death of President Roosevelt, a great man and a great champion of peace among the nations of the world, and a defender of the four freedoms for mankind." He sent a similar message to President Truman.

President Edelmiro Farrell of Argentina, whose country declared war on the Axis nations only last week, commented that "with the death of Roosevelt America loses one of the most outstanding figures in its history." Argentine radio stations canceled all regular programs last night.

President Vargas of Brazil announced that his nation would go into mourning for three days. Similar proclamations were issued in Cuba, Peru, Guatemala and Costa Rica. Flags were at half mast in Mexico City and public functions were canceled.

Chiang Asserts All China Feels Profound Grief

Message to Mrs. Roosevelt Calls Sorrow Increased by 'Sense of Gratitude'

CHUNGKING, April 13 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek declared today that the profound sorrow felt by the Chinese people at the death of President Roosevelt "is intensified by the deep sense of gratitude they bear him."

In a message to Mrs. Roosevelt, Generalissimo Chiang said:

"I am extremely grieved to learn of the tragic death of President Roosevelt. This indeed is a great loss to the civilized world. President Roosevelt's achievements will be remembered not only by your own people, but will also live in the memory of the Chinese nation.

"His name and his ideals will be a beacon of light to humanity for centuries to come.

"Just as there are no words adequate to praise his contributions to the world, so we find ourselves devoid of expression in mourning his loss.

"The profound sorrow of the Chinese people is intensified by the deep sense of gratitude they bear for him.

"President Roosevelt has firmly laid a foundation for a lasting peace as well as for the ultimate victory of the Allied forces. I am confident his unfinished tasks will be faithfully carried on and soon completed by his successor and the great people of America with the support of the Allied nations. May I pray that you find consolation in this faith of mine?

"I am asking my wife to convey to you our condolences in person."

Many Chinese learned of the death of President Roosevelt through extras written with Chinese brush and ink which were placarded in busy thoroughfares.

Even the illiterate and uninformed who had never heard of Mr. Roosevelt somehow learned that a great man who was a friend of China had died across the vaguely pictured seas.

The national government ordered three minutes of silence at all meetings of government and army organizations throughout China at 9 a. m. Monday. Such meetings are held every Monday in honor of Sun Yat-sen.

Message of Consul General

Dr. Tsune-chi Yu, the Chinese Consul General in New York, sent today the following message of condolence to Mrs. Roosevelt:

"In the passing of President Roosevelt China has lost a great friend and the world a great leader. His immortal principles and ideals will continue to be a living force to all those who are left behind to bind humanity's wound and to complete his task of international co-operation. I offer you and your family my heartfelt sympathy."

Dr. C. L. Hsia, director of Chinese News Service and representative in America of the Chinese Ministry of Information, issued a statement in tribute to Mr. Roosevelt.

Japs See War Affected.

San Francisco, April 13 (A. P.)—The Japanese Domei News Agency said today that "authoritative military quarters" believe President Roosevelt's unexpected death "will seriously affect the enemy's future conduct of the war."

In a broadcast beamed to the United States and recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, a commentator said "We Japanese had ample respect for Roosevelt as a great statesman."

Nazis Assail Roosevelt.

The German DNB agency, in a dispatch recorded today by the Federal Communications Commission, bitterly characterized President Roosevelt as "nothing but a dictator . . . world incendiary No. 1 . . . chief war criminal."

"We have known for a very long time the part which Roosevelt played in preparing this war, in intensifying it to an almost unimaginable degree with the result that now masses of material are employed against humanity," DNB said. "The cold and incorruptible hand of fate has checkmated one of the principal figures of the great political events of our times, thus ending a life which has brought untold disaster to the world and through whose destructive character his own country, misled rather than led by this ambitious statesman, was to no lesser extent steered toward catastrophe."

DNB said that Mr. Roosevelt's death "may have far-reaching political consequences" both at home and abroad but cautioned the German people against being deluded by political mirages or allowing themselves to be "caught up in speculation of any kind." Their fate, it said, would be decided by "hard military realities" on Germany's battlefields.

Be Calm, Germans Told

One of the first German broadcasts after the news was announced said Roosevelt "will go down in history as the man upon whose instigation the present war turned into the second world war."

DNB said that "though the event came as an unspeakable shock to our enemies we merely take note of it," adding:

"We are responsible for our own fate. We must remain completely uninfluenced by events such as the death of President Roosevelt. Our interests must remain on our own battlefields where our future is being fought for. We must cling to the hard reality, sorrowful though it be."

"Destructive Character"

"The cold and incorruptible hand of fate has checkmated one of the principal figures of the great political events of our times, thus ending a life which has brought untold disaster to the world and through whose destructive character his own country, misled rather than led by this ambitious statesman, was to no lesser extent steered toward catastrophe."

Hope For Change

Both the Germans and Japanese expressed hope today for a change in American war policy because of President Roosevelt's death, but Berlin admitted it was a slim one.

A Tokyo Government spokesman, Sadeo Iguchi, asserted the Roosevelt policy had plunged the United States into the war and added:

"It may well be that with his death American war policy will be reconsidered and revised."

"Uneasiness In London"

[A Tokyo broadcast heard by the FCC said that no Japanese "harbors any fond hopes for a sudden drop in the fighting power of America" because of the President's death.]

The DNB observed that "Truman is not Roosevelt and the change of presidency may have important repercussions upon the war itself." It professed to see "some uneasiness in London at the unexpected news" but said "there may in fact be no political changes whatever as a result of President Roosevelt's death."

Canada Tells Truman It Will Maintain Ties

Ottawa, April 13 (AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, whose close personal relationship with President Roosevelt had much to do with the strengthening of the ties between their two countries, hastened to assure President Truman today of Canada's determination to maintain these ties.

"As you assume the great responsibilities of your high office at this critical period in world affairs," the Prime Minister said in a message to the new President, "we wish to assure you of the firm resolve of all Canada to maintain and strengthen the ever-deepening friendship and ever-widening cooperation of our two countries in matters of common interest and in the cause of world security and peace."

TO SPLIT GERMANY

Patton's Troops Strike Within 90 Miles of Russian Lines.

Doughboys Roll Across Elbe to Push to 45 Miles of Berlin.

PARIS, Saturday, April 14—(AP) The U. S. Third army severed all direct roads and railways between Berlin and southern Germany yesterday with a dazzling 32-mile eastward drive that all but split the Reich in half.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., struck with all his accustomed fury, cutting the Munich-Berlin superhighway and two railways and driving a wedge of steel within 90 miles of the Russian lines and 38 miles of the Saxon capital of Dresden.

Berlin Outflanked

The Third army was outflanking both Berlin and the Czechoslovakian munitions city of Pilsen, and driving hard against the last lines of retreat over which the Germans were reported streaming southward for Bavaria and the final big battle of the war.

Patton's columns, their exact positions masked in secrecy, were believed already 30 miles east of the western tip of Czechoslovakia and racing unopposed across the waist of Germany about 32 miles north of that Balkan democracy's northern frontier.

Rocketing eastward almost unopposed, the Fourth Armored division hurdled the Mulde river 10 miles northwest of the big communications center of Chemnitz.

Farther north, his Sixth armored division was outflanking Berlin itself, reaching the Mulde river southeast of embattled Leipzig and about 85 miles due south of Berlin.

German positions in the west were disintegrating fast.

The U. S. Ninth army rolled up to the Elbe river on a 100-mile front—thrust within 45 miles of Berlin—and fought a roaring battle on the east bank.

Open Leipzig Battle

The U. S. First army opened the battle of Leipzig, now by-passed by the Third army, and charged eight miles through its stiff defenses to within seven miles of the city, where an estimated 1,000,000 persons, many of them bombed out refugees from Berlin, cowered in air raid shelters and basements.

The U. S. Ninth army was about 95 miles from the Russians, and the First army was 115 miles away.

Patton's troops were believed to be cutting straight across Germany 32 miles north of the Czechoslovak border, and 115 miles above the big Skoda munitions town of Pilsen.

Pilots reported Germans on the north German plain in retreat eastward from as far away as Luebeck, 135 miles northwest of Berlin.

The enemy on the north German plain was in the greatest immediate peril from the U. S. Ninth army, which after crossing the Elbe Thursday, brought up a steel fist with one tremendous 60-mile drive that reached the river north of the crossings and much closer to Berlin.

The Elbe bridgehead, 57 miles from the capital, was being built up swiftly as the Germans turned and rained blows on the American positions, trying to drive them back into the river. A field dispatch said despite the resistance, the Berlin drive would be resumed shortly.

Yanks Seize Jena

Back of racing Third army tank columns, historic Jena, where Napoleon won one of his greatest victories, fell after a short, fierce skirmish.

The Third army seemed to be racing with the U. S. Seventh army for the last Munich-Berlin superhighway, life line between north and south Germany. One of the big six-line highways already had been denly vanished, bolstering reports on that front that the German air force had revolted and that hundreds of its pilots had been slaughtered by SS (elite) troopers.

From the First army front came a story of an abortive revolt in Berlin early in March, a German woman refugee from the capital saying 5,000 Volkssturm troops had turned their newly-issued weapons on their masters and had been mowed down.

Everywhere, signs of German collapse were multiplying.

Duisburg, city of 431,000 in the Ruhr and Germany's greatest river port, fell as the U. S. First and Ninth armies methodically caved in the sides of the Ruhr trap, from which 84,585 prisoners of an estimated force of 150,000 already have been flushed.

Even on the stout British-Canadian front there were portents of weakness where there had been plenty of strength before.

The Canadian First army drove six miles beyond the Issel river—German bulwark guarding Rotterdam and Amsterdam—and battled into the center of Arnhem, where the British airborne operation ended in heroic defeat last September.

The British Second army found a soft spot on the north German plain beyond the Weser river and drove 10 miles northeast to a point 45 miles from the Elbe river south east of Hamburg.

Seal Off Denmark

Thus the British Second and the U. S. Ninth armies were sealing off Denmark and the north German ports.

The Elbe river line was cleared buckling, despite the bitter resistance met on the east bank by the Second Armored division at Magdeburg.

The Second Armored division was pouring across reinforcements and supplies and building up its forces for the last smash toward rubbled Berlin.

The Fifth Armored division in its record-breaking 60-mile dash reached the river at Tangermuende, 30 miles northeast of Magdeburg and 45 miles west of the outskirts of greater Berlin.

Other elements of the division reached the Elbe at Seerhausen five miles farther north.

At the opposite end of the curving river line, the 83rd Infantry reached the Elbe at Barby, 13 miles southeast of Magdeburg.

The Third army was about 10 miles from the speedway, while the Seventh army farther south was possibly 15 miles away from crossing the river Main on a broad front north of Bamberg.

cent of steel, still held out on the west bank but was being steadily reduced.

The Fifth Armored division, streaking advance eclipsed the 50-mile mark set by the U. S. First Army's Third Armored division when it cut off the Ruhr basin from the east.

Back in the Ruhr, the 75th Infantry Division captured Duisburg, a city of 431,000 and Europe's greatest river port, after German civilians twice tried to surrender the city in defiance of their Nazi overlords.

Farther east, the 75th Infantry Division drove deeper into Dortmund, with a population normally of 537,000 and the largest Ruhr city still in enemy hands.

BATTLE FOR LEIPZIG OPENS

First and Third Armies Close In—Hodges Men Only 7 Miles Away.

Paris, April 13 (A. P.).—The Ninth Army closed to within forty-five miles of Berlin today, and the First Army opened the battle for Leipzig, driving to within seven miles of the city where a million Germans were believed huddled in cellars and shelters.

A tank column of the Third Army drove into Pagau, eleven miles south of Leipzig, and another battered to within sixteen miles of Bayreuth.

The Ninth Armored Division of the First Army advanced into the Leipzig defenses in the village of Dalzig, seven miles southwest of the big Saxony center. Tanks raced on eastward in a move to isolate the city. They were within ninety-five miles of Russian lines.

The Fifth Armored Division of the Ninth Army reached the already-crossed Elbe River after a record sixty-mile armored advance, outflanking Denmark, Hamburg and Luebeck. Nearly a hundred miles of the Elbe banks were patrolled by Ninth Army troops tonight. The Americans stood within ninety miles of Russian siege lines east of the capital. The nearest approach to the city was in a bend of the river just south of Tangermuende, where the Germans blew up the bridges.

Duisburg, Europe's greatest inland port and Germany's fourteenth city, fell to the Ninth Army in the shrinking and by-passed Ruhr pocket. The Third Army captured Erfurt, and also captured Jena, and were eighteen miles from Leipzig and thirty-four from Czecho-Slovakia.

The Hells-on-Wheels (Second) Armored Division, which crossed the Elbe at Magdeburg yesterday, was meeting stiff opposition on the eastern bank of that last river barrier before Berlin. Reinforcements and supplies poured across the Elbe as the division gathered strength for the final push on Berlin, expected to start within a day or so.

[The frequently unreliable Paris radio reported that advanced columns of the Ninth Army have established contact with the airborne troops less than fifteen miles from Berlin. CBS recorded the broadcast.]

The Elbe bends eastward to the north of Magdeburg and then swings back along a northwesterly course through Hamburg to the North Sea. Tangermuende is in the bend and closest to Berlin, although troops there are on the west bank of the 450 to 1,000-foot wide stream.

The 3d Army, driving down the last 18 miles to Leipzig in a thrust aimed at cutting Germany in two, joining the Russians and barring access from the north to the redoubt in the Bavarian Alps. The Germans said American tanks were fighting in Halle, 15 miles from Leipzig, after bypassing the medieval cathedral city of Merseburg.

At Elbe For 85 Miles

Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's 9th Army closed up to the Elbe along a 95-mile front. His Hell on Wheels (2d) Armored Division crossed the river in the Magdeburg sector yesterday.

The 5th Armored Division reached the river at Seehausen and the 83d Division closed up to the stream at Barby, outflanking Magdeburg 14 miles to the northwest. Barby lies 58 miles southwest of Berlin.

Czech Border Neared

The 3d Army, racing across eastern Germany virtually unopposed, advanced within 34 miles of Czechoslovakia, drove into the streets of Napoleon's old battle site of Jena and captured Erfurt. It was approaching Leipzig from the southwest and was within 72 miles of the Saxony capital of Dresden.

At the same time, the 1st Army was moving on Leipzig from the northwest. Dispatches said Leipzig should be entered by nightfall.

Reports of revolt in the German air force came from headquarters of the 3d Army and the 12th Army group of Gen. Omar Bradley.

Defenses of Berlin Stiffen.

The Eighty-third Division closed up to the stream at Barby, outflanking Magdeburg fourteen miles to the northwest. Barby lies fifty-eight miles southwest of Berlin. The Fifth, rather than the Second Armored Division which was across the Elbe, was closest to Berlin on the basis of 11:05 A. M. dispatches from Associated Press Correspondent Robert Eunson.

The Old Hell on Wheels Division, proudly bearing a presidential citation from Franklin D. Roosevelt, was meeting stiff resistance in the manufacturing center of Madgeburg which was not yet cleared. Across the Elbe, the Second Armored Division also encountered strong opposition—suggesting that the Germans had shifted troops from the east.

The enemy asserted that serious tank losses were inflicted on American columns around the Elbe River approaches to Berlin. Repeated attacks on Magdeburg, last large city before Berlin in the north, were reported in the German communique. The Germans said American tank losses were so crippling that some divisions were forced to regroup.

May Be in Leipzig Soon.

The Third Army racing across eastern Germany virtually unopposed advanced within thirty-four miles of Czecho-Slovakia and a bisection of Germany, drove into the streets of Jena, and captured Erfurt. It was approaching Leipzig from the southwest and was within seventy-two miles of the Saxony capital of Dresden on the basis of reports many hours behind the action. The First Army moved on Leipzig from the northwest. Dispatches said Leipzig should be entered by nightfall.

A lieutenant-general of the German Army captured in a hospital told his First Army captors that no organized defense units were in Leipzig.

Huge streams of German vehicles were spotted moving southwestward from the Linz area into the Bavarian redoubt.

Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army advanced at will with no artillery, mortar or anti-tank fire and sighting only two German planes.

APR 14 1945

Luftwaffe Revolt Grows.

"The virtual disappearance of the German air force over the Third Army front appeared to substantiate reports of a Luftwaffe revolt," Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball wirelessed. "Two enemy planes attacked yesterday and one was shot down."

Dispatches from Gen. Omar N. Bradley's Twelfth Army Group Headquarters earlier in the week said the execution of more than 100 Luftwaffe officers had been reported.

"Another officers' revolt in the Luftwaffe is anticipated," Associated Press Correspondent Tom Yarbrough said in a dispatch from Bradley's offices today.

The British continued the siege of Bremen and fought slowly up the last fifty miles toward Hamburg, Germany's greatest port and second largest city.

The Canadians drove into the Dutch city of Arnhem where hopes of an earlier Allied victory were killed last fall with the defeat of the British First Parachute Division.

The First and Ninth armies had divisions boring steadily into the Ruhr death trap far behind the advanced front. The Canadians carved into a larger pocket in Holland where up to 200,000 Germans are inclosed. A lesser pocket of up to 40,000 Nazis was inclosed on three sides southwest of besieged Bremen.

The disintegration of the German Army continued. Nearly 30,000 captives went into cages of the first four armies reporting. The First Army alone took 25,148 yesterday, most of them from the Ruhr pocket. That death trap is now much less than half its original size and an estimated 75,000 of the originally trapped 150,000 have surrendered. The British took 3,000, the French 1,000 and the Seventh Army 2,500.

Huge streams of German vehicles were spotted moving southwestward from the Linz area into the Bavarian redoubt.

Patton's 3d Army advanced at will, meeting no artillery, mortar or anti-tank fire and sighting only two German planes.

"The virtual disappearance of the German air force over the 3d Army front appeared to substantiate reports of a Luftwaffe revolt," AP Correspondent Edward D. Ball reported. "Two enemy planes attacked yesterday and one was shot down."

Dispatches from Gen. Omar N. Bradley's 12th Army Group headquarters earlier in the week said the execution of more than 100 Luftwaffe officers had been reported.

Another Revolt Seen

"Another officer's revolt in the Luftwaffe is anticipated," Associated Press Correspondent Tom Yarbrough said in a dispatch from Bradley's headquarters today.

The 1st and 3d armies were operating under partial security blackouts. All of General Eisenhower's nine armies were striking so swiftly that stretched communications kept information of the supreme command as much as 36 hours behind actual events.

All four immediate objectives of the multiple offensive appeared within grasp: (1) Cutting Germany in two by a junction with the Russians; (2) sealing northern approaches to the redoubt; (3) the capture of Berlin, and (4) the seizure of Leipzig.

Nazis In Pockets

The 1st and 9th armies had divisions boring steadily into the Ruhr death trap, where about 100,000 Nazis are believed caught.

The Canadians carved into a larger pocket in Holland, where up to 200,000 Germans are enclosed. A lesser pocket of up to 40,000 Nazis was enclosed on three sides southwest of besieged Bremen.

The pace of reported advances in the last 24 hours ranged up to 50 miles through the heart of the Even before Jena was en- American armor outflanked the historic battlefield where Napoleon won one of his greatest triumphs.

Resistance In South

There was some resistance in the south against the 7th Army and French moving against the western fringes of the redoubt on the approaches to Nuernberg and Stuttgart.

Operating on tributaries of the Danube, Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's 7th Army was within 94 miles of Munich and 170 miles from Berchtesgaden.

The French captured 1,000 prisoners at the upper Rhine crossing of Rastatt last night and also toppled the watering city of Baden Baden in the Black Forest.

Another concentration camp reported to contain 60,000 prisoners was in the path of the British east flank moving northwest of Celle. Typhus cases were reported in that prison.

Division Achievements

The 3d Army's Onaway (76th) Division cleared 55 towns yesterday and moved into Apolda, 14 miles southwest of Naumberg, and moved on eastward into Dorndorf, 11 miles southwest of Naumberg.

Armor which crossed the Saale between Jena and Naumberg jabbed to within 5 miles of Zeitz on the southwest approaches of Leipzig. Another armored column moved 4 miles east of the Salle south of Jena, thus outflanking the city of 54,000 from the south, just as it was outflanked from the north.

The 89th and Golden Acorn (87th) divisions joined other 3d Army infantry and armor on the Saale.

Cronach Captured

On Patton's southern flank, the Thunderbolt (11th) Armored Division captured Cronach, 15 miles east of Coburg, and reached to within 34 miles of Czechoslovakia.

Cronach is 138 miles from the Czechoslovak capital of Prague and 97 from the Skoda armament works at Pilsen.

The 3d Army won domination of a 40-mile stretch of the Saale River from west of Naumberg to a point northwest of Saalfeld.

The 9th Armored Division, first across the Rhine, made a 26-mile thrust to the Saale River at the cathedral town of Naumberg.

130,000 Nazi Prisoners Taken in Battle for Austrian Capital.

LONDON, Saturday, April 14—(AP) The Red army captured Vienna yesterday after a week's siege, clearing the way for Russian drives to Prague and the Nazis' "mountain redoubt" in southern Germany after taking more than 130,000 Nazi prisoners in the battle for the second city of Adolf Hitler's greater Reich.

Vienna, 2,000-year-old city where Hitler as an embittered and obscure young artist first dreamed of world conquest, fell to the combined Second and Third Ukrainian armies under Marshals Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Feodor I. Tolbukhin. It was the 10th European capital occupied by the Red army and the 18th liberated or dominated by the Allies.

11 Tank Divisions Smashed

Eleven German tank divisions were smashed fighting in the Austrian capital and on the roads to it between March 15 and April 13, Moscow said, while the Soviet radio proclaimed that the Viennese had "saved the honor of the Austrian nation" by assisting in the liberation of the city.

Vienna, classic bulwark of the invasion routes to Bavaria, fell to the co-conquerors of the Balkans after they all but encircled the city. It was the culmination of a 1,500-mile sweep since last fall by the two armies from the Dnestr river on the Russian frontier. The drive carried through Bucharest, Sofia, Belgrade and Budapest, knocking three Axis satellites out of the war and partially liberating Yugoslavia.

Simultaneous with the fall of Vienna, Malinovsky's troops northeast of the capital captured the Moravia war center of Holonin in a surge across a 14-mile stretch of the Morava river that carried them within 32 miles of the Czechoslovak arsenal city of Bruenn (Brno) and into Moravia on a 25-mile front.

Before Berlin, the Red army's greatest objective, Russian artillery hammered German defensive positions along the Oder river and Nazi aerial reconnaisance indicated zero-hour was approaching for Russia's "final heave," but immense Russian ground forces were not yet reported on the move.

Reds Drive Nazis Back

Even as burned and tortured Vienna fell, Tolbukhin's tanks were rolling back the German army across Austria between the Danube and the Drava rivers on a 170-mile front toward Hitler's Bavarian fortress.

The capture of the historic Austrian capital of Vienna—once a Roman frontier outpost against barbaric Germanic tribes—was announced by Premier Stalin in an order of the day which ordered a salute of 24 salvos from 324 Moscow guns.

Significantly, Stalin described Vienna as a "strategically important center of German defenses covering the routes to the southern areas of Germany," where Nazi leaders were expected to make a last-ditch stand in guerrilla warfare.

Vienna, city of waltzes, of art and European culture, was freed seven years, one month and a day after Austrian-born Hitler had sent his legions into the capital for the forced "anschluss" of 1938—one of his first acts which led to World War 2.

Hodinin, birthplace of Thomas Masaryk, father of the Czechoslovak republic—second victim of the predatory German Fuehrer—was liberated after Malinovsky's troops plunged across the Slovak-Moravian border and threatened to sweep across the Moravian plateaus to engulf the last war production areas supplying Hitler's collapsing Wehrmacht.

Hitler had ordered Vienna defended to the last man, captives told the Red army, but Tolbukhin's troops overnight wiped out the last defenders of the nine-mile-long holdout island of resistance between the Danube and the Danube canal.

Storming the enemy under artillery and mortar fire, Soviet tommy-gunners and Marines took the last districts of Leopoldstadt, Brigittenau and apparently also Floridsdorf on the Danube's north bank with a two-way attack from land and from the river.

Battled in Streets

Throughout the night, the Russians fought in streets, buildings, from cellars, rooftops, down stairways and through narrow alleys as the fanatical Germans defended themselves with mortar and machine gun fire and heavy sniping.

Late in the day, veterans of Stalingrad with long debts to settle, swarmed over the last German resistance points and the Austrian flag was hoisted over all Vienna's main buildings.

It was the third time in its 2,000-year history that Vienna had been conquered by force. In the middle of the 5th century, it was captured by the Ostrogoths. More than a century ago it was twice occupied by French troops under Napoleon, before and after the battle of Wagram, where the "little corporal" defeated the Austrians under the Archduke Charles.

Four times in history, Vienna had held against long sieges. It was twice attacked and defended against the Turks in 1529 and 1683 when it was a bulwark of the holy Roman empire against the east; between the Turkish attacks, it was attacked by the Bohemian Protestants and the Swedes.

The world's 15th city in population, Vienna, which for four centuries was the residence of the German emperors, had a 1939 population of 1,918,462 persons, the second largest German-speaking city in the world.

VIENNA TAKEN AFTER EIGHT DAYS' BATTLE

Stalin Announces Capture of Greatest City So Far Seized by Russians.

EIGHTEENTH CAPITAL TO FALL

Meanwhile Soviet Forces Push to Within 33 Miles of Czech City of Bruenn.

London, April 13 (A. P.).—Marshal Stalin announced tonight the capture of Vienna after eight days of bloody street fighting along the banks of the Danube. The world's fifteenth largest city and second only to Berlin in the Greater Reich that Adolph Hitler put together, Vienna was the eighteenth European capital to fall to the Allied armies and the largest city yet captured by the Russians. The Austrian capital had a peacetime population of 1,924,000.

Stalin also announced the capture of Goeding, in southeastern Moravia, thirty-two miles southeast of the Czecho-Slovakia munitions center of Bruenn.

The last three days of the battle in Vienna had been spent in cleaning out German pockets of resistance on a narrow nine-mile island between two branches of the Danube.

Meanwhile the Russian spearheads had pushed on up the valley, and today were reported fighting forty-five miles west of Vienna and less than seventy-five miles from the Bavarian border.

In the fight for Vienna and its approaches from March 16 to April 13, Stalin said, the Russians routed eleven German divisions and captured more than 130,000 officers and men, and destroyed or captured 1,345 tanks and self-propelled guns as well as 2,250 field guns. The captured Germans were equivalent to at least ten divisions.

Meanwhile today the Russians were moving on Bruenn, sixty-eight miles north of Vienna. Moscow said that the Russian spearheads had burst to within thirty-three miles of Bruenn in an invasion over the southern Moravia border.

Russian artillery hammered German defensive positions along the Oder and aerial reconnaissance indicated that the zero hour was near for a new Russian lunge on Berlin, but their immense ground forces were not yet on the move. The German High Command reported no fighting of any consequence anywhere between Czecho-Slovakia and Stettin on the Baltic. The Russians said nothing officially concerning that front.

Captured Twice Before

LONDON, April 13 (AP).—The capture of Vienna today by the Russians marked the third time in its 2,000-year history that the city had been conquered by force. In the middle of the fifth century it was captured by the Ostrogoths. More than a century ago it was twice occupied by French troops under Napoleon, before and after the battle of Wagram, where the "Little Corporal" defeated the Austrians under the Archduke Charles.

Four times in history Vienna had held against long sieges. It was twice attacked and defended against the Turks in 1529 and 1683, when it was a bulwark of the Holy Roman Empire against the East; between the Turkish attacks, it was attacked by the Bohemian Protestants and the Swedes.

The world's fifteenth city in population, Vienna, which for four centuries was the residence of the German emperors, was the second largest German-speaking city in the world.

New Red Drive For Berlin Is Seen Near

London, April 13 (AP)—Russian artillery hammered German defensive positions along the Oder River and aerial reconnaissance indicated that the zero hour was near for a new Russian lunge at Berlin, but the immense Soviet ground forces were not yet on the move.

The German high command communiqué—as it has for more than a week—reported no fighting of consequence anywhere between Czechoslovakia and Stettin on the Baltic.

The Russians said nothing officially concerning that front and no Moscow broadcasts heard by the Soviet monitor in London mentioned it. The war news division of the Soviet Embassy also reported no news from the area.

Nearly Ready, Germans Say

German military commentators—always prompt to report Russian activity on the Berlin front—said only that massive Russian concentrations along the Oder were ready or nearly ready for attack.

Moving On Bruenn

Russian troops were moving on the Czechosolvak city of Bruenn (Brno), 68 miles north of Vienna, after cutting the last lifelines between the two cities in attacks that doomed the remaining Nazi forces in the Austrian capital.

Inside Vienna there was bitter house-to-house fighting as Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian Army seized 60 blocks of the Jewish quarter of Leopoldstadt, between the Danube and the Danube Canal.

Thin Escape Gap Remains

The Nazis have concentrated their Vienna forces for a final stand in that small strip of land between the two waterways. One thin escape gap now remains for the Germans. It is along a railroad running northwest from the city, but Moscow said early today that this, too, was under heavy Russian artillery fire.

The Nazis are suffering terrific losses in the Vienna fighting, with 4,000 officers and men killed yesterday, the Russians said.

Into Alps Foothills

Meanwhile, Berlin reported a general Nazi withdrawal west of the capital along the Danube Valley in the direction of Hitler's Bavarian mountain fortress at Berchtesgaden.

South of Vienna, Tolbukhin's mountain troops ranged into the foothills of the Austrian Alps on a 28-mile front, seizing 40 towns on the roads to Graz, Austria's second city.

Viennese Waltz In Streets In Celebration Of Liberation

London, April 13 (AP)—Joyful Viennese celebrated their liberation tonight with public waltzes in the city squares as Moscow proclaimed that they had "saved the honor of the Austrian nation" by assisting the Red Army.

The Moscow radio, broadcasting scenes from the Austrian capital, described by a Soviet war correspondent, Major Platov, said the Viennese were saluting the Red Army with "unconcealed joy."

Wreaths Placed On Tombs

Soviet officers after the liberation of the city sought out the rubble-covered graves of Beethoven, Strauss and Gluck and laid wreaths of red roses on the composers' tombs, Platov said.

In Field Marshal Schwarzenberg Square Soviet radio transmitters played Viennese waltzes while the streets were hung with Austrian and Soviet flags and thousands of persons filled the streets.

Praise For Viennese

Praising the Viennese for preventing the Germans from making a stand, a German-language Moscow broadcast said:

"Having thus assisted in the liberation of the city, you have earned immortal merit by saving cultural monuments and vital installations and, more important, you have saved the honor of the Austrian nation. . . .

"Draw new strength from the joy of the liberation of your capital and fight shoulder to shoulder with the Red Army to give the knockout blow to the vile Nazi oppressors," the broadcast urged.

U.S. FIGHTERS BAG 321 NAZI PLANES

Most of Enemy Craft Destroyed on Ground, Attack Freight Yards.

LONDON, April 13.—(AP) At least 321 German planes were destroyed by American fighters today in another disastrous blow to the Luftwaffe, raising the toll of enemy planes wrecked within a week to at least 1,393.

Most of the German planes destroyed today were machine gunned on the ground by 350 U. S. Eighth air force fighters which escorted 200 American heavy bombers in an attack on the freight yards at Neumuenster and other targets on the Danish peninsula.

Planes Lost

Six bombers and seven fighters are missing.

Mosquito bombers, which have made nine attacks on Berlin in three nights, were again reported nearing the capital and the Germans also reported a bomber formation, probably RAF heavies, over Western Germany.

The Eighth air force fighters, scarcely needed as escorts, dropped down to strafe a series of airfields, splintering 266 enemy aircraft, including four seaplanes found on a lake.

Pilots of the 56th Thunderbolt group accounted for 95 of the parked planes and ten of these went to one man, Lt. Randel Murphy, Jr., of Houston, Tex., setting an all-time record for Eighth Air force pilots.

The previous individual record of eight on the ground was posted by Lt. Col. John Landers of Joshua, Tex., and Maj. Archie Tower of Winthrop, N. Y., last Tuesday in the Berlin area.

Pilots of the U. S. Ninth air force, operating from bases on the continent, destroyed at least 40 planes on the ground and six others in the air.

The operation of the heavy bombers against Neumuenster, on the main rail line from Kiel to Hamburg, was aimed at cutting the Germans' main overland supply route from Denmark to the battle-front. The weather was good, no interceptors were encountered, flak was meager and officers said the results were—"highly satisfactory."

Withdrawn from Denmark

Front dispatches said the Germans were withdrawing troops from Denmark to bolster their northern defense ring around key ports.

It was the smallest number of bombers the Eighth airforce has dispatched from England in two months. Because the front is so fluid targets now are being picked from day to day and many of them at the request of ground forces.

Meanwhile hundreds of medium, light and fighter-bombers on continental bases struck at various targets elsewhere, lending a main support to the U. S. Ninth army's plunge toward Berlin. The Reich capital itself was within easy range of fighter-bombers now nesting on captured airfields east of the Rhine.

Pilots reported that the remnants of the withered Nazi air force were being pulled out of the Berlin area, most of them being sent south to the Munich region. The menaced capital thus is wide open for attacks with a minimum of interference, and British Mosquito bombers hit it three times Thursday night for the third successive night of triple raids.

The German airforce now has lost perhaps 60 per cent of its fields, many of them jet bases with long strips necessary for these types of planes.

French Open Savoy Drive Against Foe In Italy

London, April 13 (AP)—The French radio said tonight that the French Alpine Army launched an offensive in Savoy today against German forces holding the Franco-Italian frontier.

London, April 13 (AP)—The London Daily Mail has said that the United States War Department was preparing plans to send the wives and children of American service men in this country—irrespective of rank—to their husbands' homes in America free of cost.

The newspaper said the United States Army planned to assume the task of issuing visas to the more than 10,000 wives and families of Yank soldiers who have been married here.

Until now only the wives of men of the rank of staff sergeant or higher have been eligible for free passage.

Tells of Huge Riot in Berlin

Actress Says Nazis Killed 5000 After Street Battle in Capital Last Month.

By HAL BOYLE.

Koelleda, Germany, April 13 (A. P.).—A German woman who left Berlin a few days ago said today that 5,000 civilians rioted in the German capital March 9 and were wiped out by SS troops and police after a heavy street battle among Government buildings.

She told American intelligence officers of the First Army of the revolt. The woman is an intelligent young actress and her story apparently is trustworthy.

"Five thousand people carrying arms, which had been issued to the Volkssturm to defend Berlin marched against the Government March 9," she said. "They were engaged by SS troops and police near Alexanderplatz, where some Government offices were moved. They were all killed after SS men and police surrounded them and took them prisoners."

The woman told of increasing anti-Nazi activity and her story has been borne out by statements of other civilians that the Nazi party government had taken measures to protect itself against the possibility of mass outbreaks among Berlin's populace.

"Street barriers erected in Berlin were not just put there by the Nazis to fight off the Russians or Americans," the woman said. "They were built so that the Nazis could guard themselves against civilian violence."

60,000 prisoners, including a large percentage of Americans, were taken from their prison camps and marched toward central Germany under appalling conditions.

Men fell from the ranks and died by the roadside, with snow drifting over their bodies. Those who stayed alive stole turnips and potatoes to keep their strength and if they were caught they were punished. They slept in the open in the bitter cold, without cover, huddling their shaking bodies together for warmth.

This was the story told by prisoners awaiting transportation from the prison where they were held until three jeeploads of Americans rolled up to the gate three days ago, bringing freedom.

"The first American I saw," said one New Zealander who was captured at El Alamein, "was Pfc. Earle Howard, Portland, Me. That was a day of days. We rushed out to get around the Yanks and mobbed 'em."

Only 400 Left in Camp.

There were only 400 prisoners left in this camp when the doughboys arrived. More than 2,000 prisoners had been marched away to the east—leaving only those who were too weak or too ill to walk.

"This is our hotel splendid," the New Zealander remarked.

"Hotel Splendid" was a three-story brick kiln with a single doorway and a single staircase leading to the upper floors. Once it was used only as a transient camp, but after the death march it was flooded with prisoners and often held as many as 3,500 men. There were never less than 2,000 in the filthy kiln, which had no sanitation facilities The usual meal was a pot of so-called soup, a piece of bread and a stick of stinking cheese.

"Men were dying every day," one man said. "I saw eight bodies in one day in an alleged hospital which was a room with a dirt floor covered with straw. The hospital would accommodate forty patients until death made room for others. It was a pigsty."

Most prisoners had made the march from western Poland and eastern Germany. Some came from a camp near Breslau and others from a camp near Gorlitz in Silesia. The death march began on February 15 and lasted for twenty-six days.

THIRD ARMY CAPTURES WIZARD OF V-BOMBS

SOMEWHERE IN THURINGIA Germany, April 13—(AP) On a tip from a local German, American Third army troops investigated a picturesque old mill Wednesday and captured a man described here as one of the inventive wizards of German V-Bombs, who was hiding out with his wife and five aides.

He is Johannes Gollnow, said to be the inventor and developer of the "light-automatic" an electric eye on robot bombs making possible remote control from the ground. Gollnow and his party described themselves to their captors, however, as "bridge construction experts."

A car found at the mill, painted with American army camouflage and markings, apparently for a get-away, was taken into custody by military government officer Maj. Royce Weisenberg, of Hope, Ark.

PW RESCUE TRY FAILURE

3 Army Tanks Ambushed, Defeated; 7th Later Does Job

With U.S. 3d Army, April 13 (AP). A 3d Army armored dash to rescue American prisoners on March 27 ended in ambush and defeat, it was disclosed today, although 7th Army troops later completed the job.

A column of the 4th Armored Division swept into Hammelburg in the Wuerzburg area on March 27 and smashed through the barbed wire of a prison camp where 900 Americans were held.

The Ambush

The rescuers then headed back toward the American lines with possibly 250 of the liberated prisoners riding on top of the tanks and the others hiking behind.

After moving only a short distance from the empty prison, the column was suddenly attacked by heavy gunfire from enemy positions. Half-tracks carrying fuel were knocked out and tanks and other vehicles subsequently ran out of gasoline and had to be abandoned.

The Second Try

Later, on April 7, the 14th Armored Division of the 7th overran the same camp and liberated many of the prisoners involved in the first abortive rescue attempt.

Among these was Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's son-in-law, Lieut. Col. John K. Waters, who had been held captive by the Germans since early in 1943 when he was taken prisoner in North Africa.

Only a few of the original rescue party have been located, however.

$25,000,000 German Center Is Overrun

With U.S. 3d Army, April 13 (AP). Enemy communications equipment valued at $25,000,000 was captured today by United States 3d Army troops just south of Ohrdruf, where the Germans were building an army communications center following the bombing of Nazi headquarters in Berlin.

Included in the haul were four large storage rooms filled with enough switchboards, army engineers said, "to operate the city of New York."

The equipment was captured near where 3d Army forces found an "extermination center" where inmates declared that 4,000 European prisoners had been starved, beaten or shot to death in eight months. These prisoners were employed in digging the Wehrmacht's vast communications nerve center.

London, April 13 (AP)—The British Empire is in agreement upon the need for "clarification and improvement" in the Dumbarton Oaks proposals as a base for a future world security league charter, diplomatic representatives disclosed tonight.

A statement was issued after the pre-San Francisco conference—strictly private in its discussions—which was attended by delegates from the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India.

"We are convinced," the statement said, "that only the maintenance after the war of close cooperation between the United Nations will prevent a recurrence of strife between governments and peoples of the world.

"Countries of the British commonwealth stand ready to play their full part in an international organization for the purpose of preserving international peace and security and promoting human welfare."

The dominions delegates listed as their objective the "establishment of a world order which will be worthy of the immense sacrifices made by our peoples and designed to unite nations in assuring to all men in all lands economic and social advancement in conditions of freedom, peace and concord."

Nazis Kill 900 In Camp Week Before Yanks Come

Weimar, Germany, April 13 (AP). During the week prior to the American 6th Armored Division's liberation of the Buchenwald concentration camp just north of Weimar, the Germans executed 900 political prisoners, Capt. Charles Davidson, Beaumont, Texas, said today.

APR 14 1945

Captain Davidson, a military government officer who investigated the Buchenwald camp, said that 40,000 prisoners were marched away from the Nazi prison two weeks before the Americans arrived, leaving 21,000 who, when liberated, had one day's supply of food left.

The surviving prisoners said 17,000 Frenchmen were executed at Buchenwald during the past four years.

An English-speaking German Communist, who was thrown into the concentration camp thirteen years ago, told the Americans that 900 persons were executed a week before the 6th Armored Division arrived. He said they were shot down while they stood against a wall, ostensibly for physical examination.

The Germans shot each man in the neck through holes in the wall, it was reported. The surviving prisoners said 17,000 Frenchmen were executed at Buchenwald during the past four years.

Americans Capture Jena

Win City Easily After Commander of City Refuses to Yield

JENA, Germany, April 13 (AP).—The German commander of this city, forty-five miles southwest of Leipzig, refused a surrender ultimatum today, but the United States 80th Infantry Division captured it easily in a brief, half-hearted "battle of Jena" in which only a few shots were exchanged.

Jena is the home of the famed Zeiss optical instrument company and has a normal population of 60,000. It had been by-passed earlier by the 4th Armored Division, speeding eastward, but today it fell to doughboys commanded by Colonel Normand O. Costello, of Franklin, Mass., and Lieutenant Colonel Henry Fisher, of St. Petersburg, Fla.

James Walker, Labor, who won the seat with a majority of 430 in the last general election, died.

BRITISH WIDEN GAINS IN ITALY

Several Towns Taken Despite Fierce Nazi Resistance

Rome, April 13 (AP)—British 8th Army troops, pushing forward in bitter fighting in eastern Italy, have made further "good progress," it was announced tonight, capturing Massa Lombarda and several other towns and villages in the lower Po Valley.

In the western coastal area the U.S. 5th Army also made advances north and west of Carrara.

The bridgeheads which the British threw across the Santerno River were being consolidated today into one big bridgehead 8 miles long. Although the Germans were resisting fiercely, the British drove beyond Massa Lombardo and entered the town of Conselice.

Planes Provide Support

Eighth Army forces were encountering much fiercer opposition than that being met by American 5th Army troops advancing up the extreme western coastal sector. The latter gained more than a mile astride the coastal road toward the naval base of La Spezia and occupied high ground northwest of captured Massa, meeting only scattered resistance. They last were reported at Carrara, 14 miles southeast of La Spezia, and a mile north of Marina di Massa, on the coast 4 miles south of Carrabra.

Allied fighters, fighter-bombers and bombers continued to give the attacking ground forces overwhelming aerial support, raking Nazi positions along the front and pounding enemy communications all the way from the immediate rear to the Alps. Sixteen planes were lost from 2,650 sorties yesterday.

Many Prisoners Taken

Headquarters reported many prisoners were being taken on the 8th Army front in the central lodgement across the Santerno just south of the Lugo-Massa Lombarda road. This foothold, at last account, was more than a half mile deep and nearly a mile wide.

Eighth Army units fighting on the extreme eastern end of the line near Lake Comacchio drove westward from the captured towns of Menata and Logastrino to a point about 3 miles from Bastia.

The Germans had been driven from their last positions on the east bank of the Santerno, despite their lavish use of Tiger tanks and anti-tank guns. Their resistance was officially described as "partially disorganized."

Below Highway 9 the Allies were advancing on a wide front and were beginning to roll up the enemy salient in the Apennines, where the Nazis held stubbornly through the last winter.

An enemy corvette and a merchantman probably were sunk yesterday when Allied light coastal craft attacked a convoy northwest of La Spezia with torpedoes.

Allies Tear Nazis' Lines In Italy

Rome, April 13 (AP)—Allied headquarters announced today that the British 8th Army is driving forward steadily in the lower Po Valley against "partially disorganized resistance after beating off numerous heavy counterattacks west of its newly won Santerno River bridgeheads.

At the same time attacking 5th Army forces on the opposite end of the front were reported meeting little opposition.

Near the shores of Lake Comacchio at the extreme eastern end of the offensive area, 8th Army units, which earlier captured the villages of Mante and Logastrino, drove westward halfway to Bastia, 6 miles distant.

Nazis Lose Footholds

The Germans have lost their last footholds on the west banks of the Santerno River. The three Allied bridgeheads across the stream have been expanded despite the massed strength of big Tiger tanks and Nazi anti-tank guns.

The salient the Germans long held in the Apennines south of Imola swiftly was being pinched out. While Polish troops driving in from captured Castel Bolognese threatened Imola from the southeast, Italian troops and Partisans driving northward in the Santerno Valley gained 4,000 yards and were within four miles of Imola.

Gain More Than Mile

Fifth Army troops who jumped off yesterday in a new attack in the western Italy area gained more than a mile astride the coastal road toward La Spezia and in the high ground northwest of Massa.

Enemy communications immediately behind the battle fronts continued to receive nonstop pounding from the air as heavy bombers last night attacked the vital junction point of Argenta, key point on the road to Ferrar. Sixteen planes were reported missing from a total of 2,650 Mediterranean Air Force sorties yesterday.

Italian Communist Criticizes Catholics

Rome, April 13 (AP)—Vice Premier Palmiro Togliatti has called on Catholic church leaders to put an end to what he described as "anti-Communist terrorism," which he asserted some Italian churchmen have conducted.

The Communist Vice Premier's warning, contained in the text of his speech to the National Congress of the Italian Communist party in Rome and made public by the party organ L' Unita, asserted a "religious war in Italy today would be fatal for our country."

Togliatti declared a "reactionary and conservative" section of the church in Italy is "openly struggling against us not in the political arena but on terrain where it is difficult for us to interfere, such as sermons, refusing of absolution, withholding of the last sacrament from a comrade who died in the Communist faith without renouncing his religious belief."

Togliatti said the Communist party up to now had not raised the question of the Lateran Concordat—an accord with the Fascist government which gave the church certain rights in Italy—because "it will be resolved in time by a majority of the Italian people."

He observed that a "policy pursued by certain reactionary ecclesiastics compels us to raise the question."

ATROCITIES IN ITALY BARED

Some 400 Civilians, Including Priest, Murdered by Nazis

WITH THE UNITED STATES FIFTH ARMY, in Italy, April 13 (AP)—Nearly 400 civilians—including a priest who was shot down at the altar as he celebrated mass—were killed by German SS [Elite Guard] troops in Italian villages between Sept. 29 and Oct. 6, Allied Military Government officers announced today.

The civilians were killed in a series of atrocities at a number of villages between the Setta and Reno Rivers, Col. G. Vergato. The Archbishop of Montorio attested to virtually every incident, Military Government officers said, as well as to the fact that the Germans set fire to houses in these communities.

The priest was killed at the village of Casaglia and his entire congregation of eighty persons was taken out to a cemetery and machine-gunned. On a number of farms entire families were burned alive in their homes. It was announced that the atrocities were not disclosed before because of fear of reprisals, since the Germans still were in the general area, which was close to the front lines.

Primate of Hungary.

Vatican City, April 13 (A. P.).—The Vatican disclosed today that Justinian George Cardinal Seredi, Archbishop of Esztergom and Primate of Hungary, has died of a heart attack at the age of 60 years. His death reduces the number of Cardinals to forty, the lowest in modern times.

A native of Slovakia, Cardinal Seredi was entitled, by virtue of his office, to a seat in the Hungarian Senate, where he was active before the war in advancing Catholic principles and fighting anti-Semitism.

Franco Opens Door To Spanish Exiles

Madrid, Saturday, April 14 (AP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco today announced "the liquidation of all charges of a political character" still pending against the Spanish Republicans. He said that Spanish consular officials abroad had been authorized to accept applications for Republican exiles to return to Spain.

The decision provides the means for liberation of all political prisoners now held in Spanish jails. Their number has been estimated at 60,000—and all Spanish exiles who desire repatriation.

The communiqué issued by the Spanish Cabinet was taken to mean that the Court of Political Responsibilities established in February, 1939, and the special Court for Suppression of Masonry and Communism, established later, would be eliminated.

Neither court was mentioned specifically in the announcement but both were established to judge republicans and extremists held for political reasons as a result of the civil war.

AMERICANS SMASH WITHIN 2 MILES OF BAGUIO LIMITS

MANILA, Saturday, April 14—(AP) Elements of Maj. Gen. Percy W. Clarkson's 33rd division fought their way to within three miles of the city limits of Baguio, Philippines Summer capital, Thursday while the Americal division secured Bohol island, invaded only Wednesday.

Clarkson's 33rd Doughboys, who have battled fiercely defending Japanese in northern Luzon more than three months, captured Mt. Calugon and Asin town north of Baguio in Benguet province, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported in today's communique.

Baguio was the stronghold to which Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, Japanese commander of the Philippines, fled after American landings on Luzon Jan. 9. However, the general probably was evacuated weeks ago to be given another important command as MacArthur increased pressure on his hideout.

Tokyo radio, however, on Friday quoted a correspondent of the newspaper, Yomiuri-Hochi, "just returned from the Philippine front," as saying that "the full display" of Yamashita's military [illegible] the islands "is yet to come."

MacArthur said Bohol had been brought under U. S. control only the day after Maj. Gen. William H. Arnold's Americal division landed on the southwestern coast. Elements of the division are pursuing the dispersed garrison, he added.

On Bicol peninsula in southern Luzon, Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider's 158th regimental combat team advanced 12 miles along the main road from Camalig, capturing a road junction and sweeping on to Oas, while elements of the recently landed 11th Airborne division, closing a pincers from the north, reached Mulay, four miles beyond Calauag.

Numerous enemy infiltration parties were destroyed in the mountains south of Balete pass as the 25th division pushed stubbornly ahead against determined resistance.

Heavy bombers dropped 104 tons on Japanese installations at Bagabag and Tuao in the Cagayan valley on northeastern Luzon, destroying supply dumps and starting numerous fires.

Fighters and attack bombers, supporting all ground operations, destroyed Nipponese supply points, interdicting communications and wrecking defenses. Heavy bombers struck Bivouacs, supplies and communications at Davao on Mindanao island.

The 40th division, pushing into the rugged central range on Negros island, overran the enemy's main supply depot near Manzanares.

Heavy and medium bombers dropped 170 tons on Okayama and Tainan on Formosa and on two large sugar refineries, causing fires and explosions.

Over the China sea, patrol planes sank a small freighter off Shanghai and fired a 1,000 ton freighter and damaged two coastal vessels off Swatow. Finding no other shipping, other planesattacked railway installations on the Chinese mainland. Penetrating as far as the Yangtze river valley, they bombed a railway terminal near Nanking and damaged a bridge on the French Indo-China coast.

PHILIPPINE YANKS ON LAST BIG ISLE

Manila, April 13 (A. P.).—American troops were on every one of the major Philippines Islands today. Elements of the veteran Americal Division invaded Bohol Wednesday and quickly dispersed the enemy near the main town of Tagbilarai.

Americal Division Infantry rapidly drove inland in an endeavor to secure control of the entire island before the surprised enemy could rally his strength. Bohol guerrillas already were in control of much of the island, which lies between Cebu and Leyte in the [illegible] Philippines and just north of Mindanao. The invasion was covered by gunfire from light naval craft and aerial bombings by Thirteenth Air Force pilots. It was virtually unopposed.

Elsewhere, ground troops continued their swift mop-ups, except [illegible] Luzon, where fighting was slow and bitter around Balete Pass and along the road to Baguio, Philippines summer capital.

In southern Luzon, Fourteenth Corps troops which have broken the back of Jap defenses in the past week shot forward thirty miles from Atimonan to Calauag on the east coast of Bicol Peninsula. Farther down Bicol the 158th Regimental Combat Team advanced five miles west to Camalig and eight miles south without serious resistance.

In central Luzon, the Eleventh Corps continued sealing up Jap cave defenses in the upper Marikina River and Angat watershed. One recently sealed cave near Bosoboso River was opened and found to contain 257 Japs dead.

Bombers and fighters kept the China Sea shipping routes under constant patrol, but found hunting so poor that Gen. MacArthur reported: "Enemy sea lanes now are almost deserted."

MANILA, April 13 (AP)—Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, Japanese commander in the Philippines, and José P. Laurel, president of the Philippine puppet Government during the Japanese occupation, have gone to Japan, an escapee from an enemy internment camp said today.

Eugenio Lopez, a former sugar grower of Iloilo Panay, who got away from a Japanese camp in northern Luzon, said Laurel dissolved the puppet regime before he and General Yamashita departed March 20.

400 Superforts Blast Tokyo with Fire Bombs

Giant Attack Sets Capital Aflame, Arsenals, Factories Smashed.

GUAM, Saturday, April 14—(AP) Great waves of B-29s, possibly totaling 400, poured thousands of tons of incendiary bombs on Tokyo war industries today, creating huge fires and explosions audible more than 100 miles away.

Returning fliermen said they must have hit many of their prime targets-arsenals, chemical plants and factories producing explosives.

Great clouds of smoke rising higher than their planes, which probably went in at 5,000 to 7,000 feet, were reported.

The Marianas-based sky giants—perhaps as many as 400 — hit the inflammable Tokyo arsenal area at 12:30 a. m. (Japan Time—11:30 A. M. Friday U. S. Eastern War Time) in the second Superfort assault on the city in 38 hours.

Tokyo radio said fires continued to rage in the city several hours after the B-29s in the low-level attack blasted the five-mile square target area containing three main arsenal buildings and more than 30 specific targets of the attack.

The first were "brought under control by dawn" of Saturday, the enemy radio said later.

Never have the 21st bomber command Superforts, in all their 15 attacks on Tokyo, attacked targets holding such a collection of first-rate installations contributing to the enemy's frontline strength.

All the factories in the oval-shaped target area are engaged in the production of explosives, chemicals and armaments. One of the arsenals is the famous Itabashi plant.

The area, which has a population of from 30,000 to 80,000 persons per square mile, is six miles northwest of the Imperial palace and five northwest of the 13 1-2 square miles devastated in the Superfortress incendiary raid of March 10.

Surrounding the big plants are myriads of little home industries doing piece-work production for Japan's war machine.

Today's raiding force, described by 20th air force headquarters as of "very great strength," was probably larger than the 300-plane armada which made the March 10 incendiary assault on the city.

No fighter planes from Iwo Jima airfields escorted the B-29s today, as in the Tokyo and Nagoya attacks of April 7 and Thursday's raid about noon on the Nakajima airplane engine plant at Musashino, on Tokyo's outskirts.

Superfortress squadrons making the Thursday strike also attacked industrial plants at Koriyama, 110 miles north of Tokyo, longest of all blows struck against Japan by Marianas-base B-29s, which in this case flew 3800 miles round trip.

The April 7 attack on Nagoya virtually destroyed the Mitsubishi aircraft engine factory, 21st bomber command officials said today after a study of post-raid reconnaissance photos.

The Mitsubishi plant and the Nakajima factory hit Thursday were Japan's two largest producers of engines for war planes.

11 Jap Planes Shot Down Over Tokyo

Iwa Jima, April 13 (AP)—P-51 Mustang fighters escorting a large force of B-29's over Tokyo yesterday shot down eleven Japanese interceptors and probably destroyed twelve others in aerial battles over the Japanese capital.

The Superfortresses again blasted the Nakajima aircraft plant while others of a combined force of 300 air giants struck Koriyama, 150 miles farther north.

Little Opposition

The heavy Superfort force over Koriyama met few fighters and meager anti-aircraft fire. Because of the extra distance, those B-29's were not escorted.

Capt. Dave L. Rogan, Middlesboro, Ky., declared "that factory (Nakajima) will not be in operation for the duration."

Fewer Fighters

Capt. F. P. Ennis, of Hollywood, a Mustang pilot, said the Tokyo strike met fewer Japanese fighters than the last great aerial battle there a week ago, when 173 interceptors were destroyed or damaged.

"It looked as if the B-29's had an easier time. The flak didn't seem so heavy and we think we did a better of escorting," he said.

Ennis shot down one interceptor.

Many Suicide Pilots Downed, Enemy Attack on Okinawa Defeated.

GUAM, Saturday, April 14—(AP) More than 256 Japanese planes—many of them piloted by the enemy's vaunted Kamikaze (suicide) corps—were destroyed April 11-13 by Allied forces in the Ryukyus, Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Simultaneously Nimitz reported a strong Japanese counterattack—in battalion strength—on the southern Okinawa front was defeated early Friday morning by the 24th Army corps commanded by Maj. Gen. John R. Hodge. Naval rifles joined heavy Marine and Army artillery in hurling back the fanatical Japanese.

Summarizing the brilliant work of Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's fast carrier task force, Nimitz said that from March 18 to April 12, inclusive, 1,277 Japanese planes were destroyed. Of these, 841 were shot down by U. S. planes in combat; 73 by Naval gunfire, and 366 were destroyed on the ground.

For the 26 days, this is better than 49 planes per day.

The April 11-13 plane bag is:

April 11—118 planes shot down by U. S. guns.

April 11-12—More than 100 additional planes shot down by U. S. carrier planes in the Ryukyu area; 8 destroyed on ground at Tokuno and Kikai islands.

April 12—British Pacific fleet planes shot down 16 planes and destroyed one on the ground, damaged 5.

April 13—U. S. carrier aircraft shot down one plane and destroyed 12 on the ground in the northern Ryukyus.

In addition, shiping and ground installations were destroyed or fired.

Navy search craft hit targets in the northern Ryukyus and set a vessel afire north of the Bonins April 13.

Army night fighters strafed Chichi Jima and Haha Jima in the Bonins while Marine planes worked over the Palaus and Yap in the Western Carolines and the bypassed Marshalls.

On Motobu peninsula, Okinawa, Marines of the Third Amphibious corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, continued their steady advance although meeting sporadic fighting. Ineffective resistance was met by Third corps troops on the Ishikawa isthmus.

More American artillery joined Marine and Army batteries on the southern Okinawa front, where for 10 days Yank big guns have blasted Japanese defenses north of Naha city. The bitter fighting was not affected by suicidal Japanese air attacks Thursday and Friday on American amphibious forces lying off the island, or on Yank-held airfields.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, announcing the loss of one U. S. destroyer and damage to several other ships in the air attack, said later the efforts of the "Kamikaze (suicide) corps" so highly praised by Tokyo, obtained only "negligible success" in return for heavy expenditure of planes and personnel.

The Americans have perfected effective methods of destroying the fanatical Japanese fliers, who have sunk small U. S. ships and damaged major units, but have not sunk any battleships, fast carriers or cruisers, Nimitz said.

On the northern Okinawa front the Sixth regiment of the Third Marine amphibious corps continued its lightly opposed advance up the Ishikawa peninsula, Friday's communique said.

The first regiment Leathernecks on Motobu peninsula sustained some casualties but killed 50 Japanese in cleaning out an enemy resistance pocket, said Vern Haugland, Associated Press correspondent on Okinawa.

On the thundering southern front elements of the Seventh, 27th and 96th divisions of the 24th Army corps made slight local gains Thursday, Haugland said.

Maj. Gen. Hodge, said the Okinawa fighting for the present was an engineering problem, as his troops brought up more artillery and other heavy equipment over roads which returning sunny weather was converting from mud bogs into passable arteries.

War is Hell, This Marine Proves

IWO JIMA—(AP) You can call this part of the "humor in hell" chapter of the saga of Iwo Jima.

Marine Pfc. Alvin O. Reuter, 19, is a drawling Southerner from Livingston, Texas. On D-day plus two, he moved up to the front as part of a Third Marine Division artillery observation team.

Just over a steep ridge north of the first Motoyama airstrip, Reuter and a comrade were pinned down by intense mortar and artillery fire. Asked by his command post what the situation was "up there," the Texan answered over the field telephone.

"I'm not married but I reckon this is like being the bridegroom of the devil's daughter—and living with her folks."

Foe Said to Rush to Manchuria Since Soviet Move to End Pact

By The Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, China, April 13—Japanese mechanized forces that had been moved from Manchuria to the Shanghai area are being rushed back to their original positions as a result of Moscow's denunciation of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact, a Chinese Army spokesman said today.

[The reports of a withdra[wal] of Japanese mechanized forces from China followed by a few days speculation in Chungking newspapers that the Japanese were beginning to withdraw troops from Burma, Thailand, Malaya and South China as the threat to the Japanese homeland loomed larger, according to the United Press.]

A withdrawal of Japanese troops from advanced positions in southwestern Honan Province was also reported although the spokesman declared that this was due entirely to Chinese military pressure and had no relation to the treaty denunciation.

The Chinese High Command announced that the city of Laohokow, former American air base [] miles northwest of Hankow, was recaptured by Chinese forces Thursday after heavy street fighting that lasted until night. The city was cleared of enemy troops who fled toward the northeast with Chinese forces in pursuit.

The capture of the city followed the launching Wednesday of a large-scale offensive in the Honan-Hupeh area, combined with a simultaneous attack by other Chinese forces operating behind enemy lines.

More than 600 Japanese were killed in a sweep that carried Chinese forces to a point fifteen miles from Siangyan, Han River town thirty miles southeast of Laohokow.

The American communiqué said that "numbers" of Japanese troops were killed by United States Fourteenth Air Force fighter and bomber attacks in the forward areas and bases of the Japanese drive on the Han, Tan and Yellow River fronts.

What Tokyo Says.

San Francisco, April 13 (A. P.). Japanese imperial headquarters declared today that Japanese air and surface units had sunk or damaged twenty-one American vessels in the Okinawa area since last Wednesday. In a communique broadcast by Tokyo radio and recorded by the FCC, headquarters also said that the Japanese ground forces have killed or wounded some 6,300 Americans.

All these enemy assertions are unconfirmed.

Canada Voting Slated June 11

Ottawa, Ontario, April 13 (AP)—The long-anticipated Canadian general election, in which the socialistic Cooperative Commonwealth Federation is expected to provide the two old-line parties with a bitter three-way battle, will be held Monday, June 11, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King announced in Parliament today.

The Prime Minister's Liberal party is regarded as being on the defensive and likely to suffer a deep cut in its currently overwhelming majority of seats in Parliament, with the Progressive Conservatives and the CCF each confident of picking up the Government's lost votes.

Same As Ontario Date

The date selected by the Prime Minister is the same announced earlier this week for a provincial election in Ontario. Opposition leaders were quick to note the fact, declaring the Government feared a Progressive Conservative victory in the Ontario balloting which might have an adverse effect on the nation-wide election if it were held later.

The election, in which a new dominion Parliament and federal government will be named, is expected to develop into the first three-way fight since 1921, when the Progressive party won 64 seats, the Liberals 117, and the Conservatives 50.

CCF Won In Saskatchewan

The CCF, born in the West, became the official opposition party in the British Columbia Legislature in 1941, and in Ontario in 1943, winning 34 seats against the Progressive Conservatives' 38, and the Liberals' 15.

Last year the CCF scored a landslide victory in Saskatchewan, becoming the Government party with 47 seats against a total of eight among all other parties.

This parade of successes by the CCF was interrupted by a poor showing in provincial balloting in French-speaking Quebec last August.

More Like Labor Party

The party is led by M. J. Coldwell, 58-year-old English-born former schoolteacher, who describes his party as being more like the British Labor party than the Socialist party in the United States.

In the present Parliament the Liberals hold 158 seats, the Progressive Conservatives, 40, the CCF, 10, the Social Credit party, 10, and scattered parties, 15. There are 12 vacancies.

CANADA STRESSES TIES

Mackenzie King Wires Truman on Taking New Office

OTTAWA, April 13 (AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, whose close personal relationship with President Roosevelt had much to do with the strengthening of the ties between their two countries, hastened to assure President Truman today of Canada's determination to maintain these ties.

"As you assume the great responsibilities of your high office at this critical period in world affairs," the Prime Minister said in a message to the new President, "we wish to assure you of the firm resolve of all Canada to maintain and strengthen the ever-deepening friendship and ever-widening cooperation of our two countries in matters of common interest and in the cause of world security and peace."

Canadians Back Draft Rule

Ottawa, April 13 (AP)—The Canadian House of Commons, by a vote of 124 to 9, tonight defeated a motion calling for repeal of the national resources mobilization act and the order-in-council which authorized the sending of drafted home defense troops overseas.

U. S. SUBS SINK 15

Washington, April 13—A. P.)—United States submarines have sunk 15 more enemy ships, including a naval escort vessel and a converted gunboat in Far Eastern waters. Non-combatant vessels claimed included two destroyer transports, a large tanker, a naval auxiliary, six medium cargo vessels, a medium tanker, and two small cargo vessels.

The announcement raised to 1,098 the total Japanese losses inflicted by United States submarines to date. The total includes 124 combatant ships and 974 non-combatant.

Justice Favors Real Trials Of War Criminals

Washington, April 13 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Jackson tonight advised against "farcical" judicial trials for war criminals.

"If it is believed that the example will outweigh the tendency to create among their own countrymen a myth of martrydom, then let them be executed," Jackson said in an address prepared for the American Society of International Law.

Trials In Fact, Not Name

"But in that case," he added, "let the decision to execute them be made as a military or political decision. We must not use the forms of judicial proceedings to carry out or rationize previously settled political or military policy."

The justice said he was not arguing against bringing to trial those accused of war crimes, but was calling for "trials in fact, not merely trials in name, to ratify a predetermined result."

"Bold, But Sober Efforts"

There are cynics, he said, who "will see no reason why courts, just like other agencies, should not be policy weapons. . . . It is charitable to assume that such advocates of power as the sole source of law do not recognize the identity of their incipient authoritarianism with that which has reached its awful climax in Europe."

Jackson said he did not expect the world to be remade by a single document in a single century, but he predicted "a pretty general response" in this country to "bold but sober efforts to increase the resort to techniques of arbitration, adjudication and conciliation in the future world organization."

Diplomat From China Arrives At Washington

Washington, April 13 (AP)—T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, and Leon Henderson arrived here from Chungking today.

Donald Nelson met the pair at the airport, where they alighted from an Air Transport Command plane.

Soong will head his country's delegation to San Francisco. Henderson had been making an economic survey of China, and is expected to go to Europe next.

Manasco to Manage War Sales Overseas

Washington, April 13 (A. P.).—Congress will send Representative Carter Manasco (D.-Ala.) to Europe next week as its sales manager for the leftovers of world war II.

Mr. Manasco will spend two or three weeks touring England, France, Belgium and Germany as a congressional committee of one to count up the Army's extras, from G. I. sroes to General Sherman tanks.

His job is to map a technic for the overseas end of this country's biggest sale—$100,000,000,000 in war supplies.

He is chairman of the House Committee on Executive Expenditures and estimates the surplus stockpile of the second world war will be twenty times larger than that of world war I and the sale may last as long as fifty years.

Tons of war extras, he told a reporter, probably will be sold overseas to avoid clogging shipping space and United States markets, which will have their own quota of Army and Navy surpluses.

NIGHT-WORK BONUS GRANTED

WLB Takes Action Involving Rubber Companies

Washington, April 13 (AP)—The

APR 14 1945

War Labor Board has directed a 3-cent hourly night-work bonus for 140,000 employés of 64 rubber companies, but denied a general wage increase of 17 cents.

The demands were made by the CIO-United Rubber Workers, representing workers in 92 plants. The board also modified demands for industry-wide paid lunch period and for liberalized vacation plans.

The order was withheld at six plants pending consideration of jurisdictional questions raised by the companies. Because the issues varied in different companies and plants, the board specified that its order was applicable in only those cases where the issues covered in the order were in dispute and were before the board.

Meaning Of Bonus

The 3-cent bonus made the night-shift premium the equivalent of 4 cents on the second shift and 8 cents on the third shift, when allowance is made for the fact that all employés receive a night-work allowance of 1.8 cents in the base rates as a result of previous board action.

The union had asked for a 10-cent night-work differential.

The board denied the union's demand for a twenty-minute paid lunch period for employés who leave the plant, but granted it for those required to stay inside for production or other reasons.

One week's vacation with pay for workers with one year of service and two weeks for those with five years or more of service, were allowed.

The order is retroactive to date of expiration of the last contract, if there has been one in effect, or to the date the contract was opened, whichever is earlier. Where there has been no contract, the order is retroactive to the date of certification of the dispute.

However, the WLB proposed the parties negotiate this retroactive feature to determine how it should be paid.

Exempted from the decision pending jurisdictional questions, are Los Angeles Retread Plant of Firestone Tire and Rubber Company; the United States Rubber Reclaiming Company, Buffalo; General Cable Corporation, Buffalo; Linear Packing and Rubber Company, Philadelphia; W. J. Voit Rubber Company, Los Angeles; and the International Shoe Company, Hannibal, Mo.

U.S. And France Restore Trade

Washington, April 13 (AP)—French-American authorities have agreed to restore private trade from France to the United States with "only the minimum of governmental restrictions required by current war conditions."

This was announced by the State Department tonight after the Treasury had lifted its ban on private trade between the two countries.

The provisional French Government will require export permits for such shipments. The State Department said that while the critical inland transportation situation in France is well known, French authorities are confident they will be able to clear the way for "limited movements of goods" to ports where they will be loaded in ships that otherwise would return to the United States empty.

Warns Against Undue Optimism

The State Department cautioned that Government agencies "wish to avoid giving rise to undue optimism on the part of American importers of French products."

The department suggested that importers should be careful to find out whether sale prices can be established for their purchases which will be within the price ceilings of the Office of Price Administration.

French authorities are assembling information on articles expected to be available for export from France, including details of quantities and prices. This information will be made available to interested persons through the Commerce Department.

On Governmental Basis

With regard to exports from the United States to France, the State Department said that for the time being the provisional French Government will continue to handle all transactions on a governmental basis.

The Treasury action opens the way for private trade and other business transactions. It also moves a step closer to unfreezing private French funds in this country. It does not, however, start the goods moving.

Large-Scale Trade Impossible

The FEA says France will be able to ship "very, very little" to American importers for the first six months, because:

France doesn't have much to sell—some luxury items, but not much. There is a shortage of containers. There is a desperate shortage of rail and truck transportation to move the goods to the ports. Warehouses at the ports are filled with more essential stuff. And on top of all that, there are price difficulties—French prices are higher than ours.

As for private trade going in the other direction, the FEA says "no"—probably none at all for quite a while. Ships are loaded with military goods or essential civilian supplies going to the French Government.

Long Step Forward

Yet the Treasury action is a long step forward. It is, as the Treasury said, "a major development in the Treasury's program of lifting the freezing restrictions as rapidly as conditions permit."

As between the United States and France it's no longer necessary to get a Treasury license to ship goods, receive payments, or exchange letters of credit and other documents. This applies also to trade with French colonies.

SUICIDE PILOTS ARE THROWN INTO PACIFIC CONFLICT

By MURLIN SPENCER
Associated Press War Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 13—(AP) Japan's Kami-Kaze corps, suicide pilots sworn to die for the Emperor by crashing their planes into Allied ships and ground installations, has been thrown into the Pacific conflict.

In a display of mass fanaticism never before seen in war, the Japanese suicide pilots have attempted desperately to check the American war machine shoving ever closer to the Nipponese homeland.

Japs Fail

They have failed.

They have caused damage to American ships and they have caused casualties. But up to the time I left the Philippines a month ago they had failed to stop a single amphibious operation or force the postponement of a single planned operation.

The suicide pilots came out in force on Dec. 7, 1944, the third anniversary of the war in the Pacific. The Japanese long had threatened that their fighters were prepared to die for the Emperor by mass suicide and there had been individual instances of suicide crashes.

They appeared in strength for the first time, however, two hours after the United States Navy put the 77th infantry division ashore at Ormoc in a surprise landing that broke the Japanese determined resistance on the Philippine island of Leyte.

Shortly before 9 a. m., I watched black patches of flak appear in the sky almost on the horizon to the west. I saw three Japanese planes drop down in steep dives and they never came up again. Seconds later large clouds of gray smoke billowed up.

Within 30 minutes another Japanese plane swung over and seemed to pay no attention to the frantic anti-aircraft fire put up by the warships.

The enemy plane came down in a shallow dive. It did not fire its guns and it dropped no bombs. It was evident that it intended to crash. A few yards from its target our anti-aircraft gunners scored a hit that started the Zero burning fiercely. But it was too late to stop the raider and it crashed, starting a fire that was soon controlled.

For nine hours the Japanese attacked in twos and threes and sometimes singly. Possibly there were 40 planes sent over during the day.

Radio Tokyo has blared the story of Japan's suicide pilots to all the world, but little factual is known.

Kami-Kaze means "divine tempest" and while a majority of the pilots probably are volunteers there are some who are believed to have been drafted. Radio Tokyo said they averaged about 22 years of age and there are reports they are garbed in fantastically colored uniforms of green and black and other colors.

Believe Pilots Doped

There are some who believe the pilots are doped before they are sent out on a mission with orders not to return. There is a possibility they carry a liquor with them in their planes, but once a suicide plane crashes there is little left in the way of evidence.

One thing is sure. The Japanese are making much of their suicide pilots, in publicity, in honor to their families and in treatment of the airmen before they start out on missions. Some appear to be well trained and masters of their planes while others fly like beginners.

It is not customary to send all suicide planes in an attack on convoy or land target. Stories are told that at first the pilots complained that when all were ordered to commit suicide—and nothing is too small to attract their attention — there was no one left to tell their families of how they died.

Since that time at least one plane has been observed to hang around on the edge of the attack, apparently observing the way in which each pilot dies and then running for home to make his report.

Only a fraction of the attacks are successful. In the attack on the Ormoc convoy plane after plane was shot down either by anti-aircraft fire or protecting American fighters. Others which broke through missed the ships entirely and crashed into the sea. Still others were damaged so badly the pilots lost all control and crashed far from their targets.

The American High command went to work immediately on a defense against this new form of attack but the method of defense remains a military secret.

While it seems impossible to the average American that any group of men would deliberately destroy themselves in such a manner, there is no question in my mind.

Munitions Dump Blows Up Near Stockholm

New York, April 13 (AP)—A Swedish Army high-explosive dump in a cave outside Stockholm blew up, the Stockholm radio said in a broadcast recorded by the FCC.

The broadcast said the extent of damage had not been determined but added: "As far as is known no body was hurt."

Asks Mass Shift of Germans

PHILADELPHIA, April 13 (AP).—Forced migration of masses of the German people was urged by Dr. Sarah Wambaugh, of Cambridge, Mass., authority on international law, in an address prepared for delivery today before the American Academy of Political and Social Science at its forty-ninth annual meeting. "There are indeed special areas in the world which intimately affect world peace and cannot be rendered safe by a temporary Allied occupation," she said. "In Europe, there are Danzig and East Prussia, and on the west coast of Germany, the Rhineland, the Ruhr and the Saar."

2,500 Former Prisoners Of Nazis Get Army Pay

Leave Camp Miles Standish on 45-Day Furloughs

CAMP MYLES STANDISH, Mass., April 13 (AP).—In sums ranging from $500 up to more than $7,000 each, 2,500 American soldiers, former prisoners of war of the Germans, were paid off today and started on the next to the final leg of their trips to their homes.

The men, 300 officers and 1,200 enlisted men, reached the Boston port of embarkation Sunday night. They were brought here, outfitted from head to toe in new uniforms, quizzed by intelligence officers, and made ready for the forty-five days leave awaiting each.

For some, it was their first Army pay in nearly three years.

In general, they had no definite ideas of what they would do with their money. Payments included from $100 to $200 in cash, the rest in government checks.

The soldiers will leave Myles Standish during the day, some for Fort Devens, Mass., others for distant points. Those living in the eastern states expect to be home by Sunday.

Egypt Sculpture Seen As Removed Illegally

New York, April 13 (AP)—A leading Egyptologist said today the sculptored head of King Tutankh-Amen's mother-in-law, "the One-eyed Queen," probably was taken out of Egypt in violation of a stipulation that no unique archeological find should leave that country.

The colored, painted limestone head of Queen Nefertiti recently was reported among the German art treasures found buried in the Merkens salt mines.

Herbert E. Winlock, former Metropolitan Museum of Art director and leader of some of its past Egyptian expeditions, said the

ROOSEVELT (370)
BY DWIGHT PITKIN

LONDON, APRIL 13-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SUDDEN DEATH CAST A DARK CLOUD TODAY OVER THE PEOPLE OF THIS LAND, IN WHOSE HEARTS HE HAD WON A UNIQUE PLACE DURING THE LAST FIVE AND ONE-HALF YEARS OF WAR.

BRITAIN'S FIRST REACTION TO THE NEWS WAS ONE OF STUNNED INCREDULITY, WHICH GAVE WAY GRADUALLY TO A SOBER SENSE OF DEEP LOSS. TO MANY BRITONS, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WAS AS GREAT A HERO AS PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL, AND THE NATION HAD CONFIDENTLY LOOKED FORWARD TO SEEING HIM IN LONDON SOON AFTER THE END OF THE EUROPEAN WAR--PERHAPS TO REVIEW A GREAT VICTORY PARADE.

FEW WERE SO PROFOUNDLY MOVED AS CHURCHILL HIMSELF WHEN THE WORD WAS GIVEN TO HIM SHORTLY AFTER MIDNIGHT (6 PEW THURSDAY). THE PRIME MINISTER, WHO HAD NOT YET RETIRED, IMMEDIATELY DISPATCHED THE FOLLOWING MESSAGE TO MRS.ROOSEVELT:

"I SEND MY MOST PROFOUND SYMPATHY IN YOUR GRIEVOUS LOSS. IT IS ALSO THE LOSS OF THE BRITISH NATION AND OF THE CAUSE OF FREEDOM IN EVERY LAND.

"I FEEL SO DEEPLY FOR YOU ALL. AS FOR MYSELF, I HAVE LOST A DEAR AND CHERISHED FRIENDSHIP WHICH WAS FORGED IN THE FIRE OF WAR. I TRUST YOU MAY FIND CONSOLATION IN THE GLORY OF HIS NAME AND THE MAGNITUDE OF HIS WORK."

THE BRITISH PUBLIC GOT ITS FIRST NEWS OF THE PRESIDENT'S DEATH IN A MIDNIGHT BBC BROADCAST. THE WORD SPREAD QUICKLY TO ENTERTAINMENT CENTERS THRONGED WITH AMERICAN AND ALLIED SOLDIERS, PLACING A SUDDEN DAMPER OF SPIRITS KEYED TO THE VICTORIOUS ADVANCE OF U.S. AND BRITISH TROOPS ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

THE SHOCKING NEWS DROVE THE WAR OFF THE FRONT PAGES OF THE LATE EDITIONS OF LONDON MORNING NEWSPAPERS, WHICH CARRIED LENGTHY ARTICLES ON THE PRESIDENT'S LIFE AND CAREER, ILLUSTRATED WITH PHOTOS. SEVERAL PAPERS ALSO HAD SPECIAL STORIES ON HARRY S.TRUMAN, THE NEW PRESIDENT.

ONE BRITISHER SUMMED UP THE FEELING OF HIS FELLOW BRITONS BY SAYING SOBERLY:

"WE'VE LOST A GREAT FRIEND AT A TIME WHEN HE WAS NEEDED MOST."

AMERICAN SERVICEMEN WERE OUTSPOKEN IN EXPRESSING THEIR SORROW.

SGT.LAWRENCE GRUENEWALD OF DETROIT, MICH., EN ROUTE BACK TO THE 90TH DIVISION FROM HOSPITAL, SAID: "WE MEN UP THERE REALLY FELT THE PRESIDENT WAS OUR COMMANDER. HIS LOSS WILL BE FELT BY ALL OF US."

PFC. RAYMOND WEISS, 26TH DIVISION RIFLEMAN FROM WASHINGTON, D.C., PUT IN: "I SAW THE PRESIDENT INAUGURATED THE FIRST THREE TIMES AND IT'S HARD FOR ME TO REALIZE HE'S DEAD. HIS LOSS IS A REAL ONE TO ALL US FIGHTING MEN."

FLAGS AT ALL AMERICAN BASES IN THE UNITED KINGDOM WERE ORDERED AT HALF STAFF AND ENTERTAINMENTS SUSPENDED FOR 30 DAYS. OFFICERS CLUBS AND BARS WERE ORDERED CLOSED UNTIL AFTER THE FUNERAL.

THE REV.PAUL DE LABILLIERE, DEAN OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY, TODAY OFFERED THE USE OF THAT BRITISH SHRINE TO AMERICAN FORCES FOR MEMORIAL SERVICES.

NIGHT LEAD BIG THREE-CHURCHILL
BY ALEX H.SINGLETON

LONDON, APRIL 13-(AP)-GRIEVED AT THE DEATH OF HIS "DEAR AND CHERISHED" FRIEND, PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL RELUCTANTLY STUCK TO HIS POST TONIGHT IN EXPECTATION OF IMMINENT MILITARY DEVELOPMENTS AND TURNED OVER TO FOREIGN SECRETARY EDEN THE SOLEMN ASSIGNMENT OF REPRESENTING BRITAIN AT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S FUNERAL.

THE PRIME MINISTER, WHO HAD APPEARED TIRED AND WORN EARLIER IN THE DAY AS HE BRIEFLY EULOGIZED "THIS GREAT DEPARTED STATESMAN" BEFORE A HUSHED HOUSE OF COMMONS, WAS REPORTED TO HAVE DECIDED AGAINST FLYING TO WASHINGTON ONLY AFTER BECOMING CONVINCED THAT THE MILITARY SITUATION REQUIRED HIS HOUR BY HOUR PRESENCE HERE.

THERE WAS SPECULATION THAT IT WOULD BE NECESSARY FOR CHURCHILL AND PREMIER STALIN OF RUSSIA TO MEET SOON WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN TO ACQUAINT THE NEW AMERICAN LEADER WITH THE BIG THREE'S PLANS FOR LIBERATED EUROPE. IT WAS FELT THAT TRUMAN WOULD WANT TO ESTABLISH AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE THE INTIMATE ASSOCIATION WITH CHURCHILL AND STALIN THAT ROOSEVELT HAD DEVELOPED.

ALL BRITAIN AND THOUSANDS OF AMERICANS HERE ON MILITARY DUTY SHARED THE SHOCK AND SORROW OF THE PRESIDENT'S DEATH.

FLAGS ON ALL BRITISH GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD WILL BE FLOWN AT HALF-STAFF TOMORROW. NEXT TUESDAY WAS SET ASIDE FOR TRIBUTES TO THE PRESIDENT BY THE LEADERS OF ALL PARTIES IN PARLIAMENT.

COMMONS ADJOURNED FIVE MINUTES AFTER IT HAD CONVENED, AFTER HEARING CHURCHILL, SPEAKING IN A VOICE SCARCELY AUDIBLE IN THE GALLERIES, SAY IT WAS "NOT FITTING THAT WE SHOULD CONTINUE OUR WORK THIS DAY" AND THEN ASK FOR AN ADJOURNMENT OUT OF RESPECT.

SPEAKING WITH EMOTION, HE SAID:

"THE HOUSE WILL HAVE LEARNED WITH DEEPEST SORROW THE GRIEVOUS NEWS

WHICH HAS COME TO US FROM ACROSS THE ATLANTIC AND WHICH CONVEYS TO US THE LOSS OF A FAMOUS PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, WHOSE FRIENDSHIP FOR THE CAUSE OF FREEDOM AND FOR THE CAUSES OF THE WEAK AND POOR HAVE WON HIM IMMORTAL RENOWN.

A243

"IT IS NOT FITTING THAT WE SHOULD CONTINUE OUR WORK THIS DAY. I FEEL THAT THE HOUSE WILL WISH TO RENDER ITS TOKEN OF RESPECT TO THE MEMORY OF THIS GREAT DEPARTED STATESMAN AND WAR LEADER BY ADJOURNING IMMEDIATELY.

"I SHOULD PROPOSE THAT ON TUESDAY NEXT TRIBUTES SHOULD BE PAID WHEN WE ARE ASSEMBLED HERE BY THE LEADERS OF THE VARIOUS PARTIES IN THE HOUSE AND THAT WE SHOULD AFTERWARD PROCEED WITH THE BUSINESS ALREADY ANNOUNCED."

SLOWLY PARLIAMENT MEMBERS FILED FROM THE CHAMBER, AND THE GALLERIES EMPTIED OF HUNDREDS OF AMERICANS, MANY OF THEM IN UNIFORM.

CHURCHILL HAD NOT RETIRED WHEN THE WORD OF THE PRESIDENT'S DEATH WAS GIVEN TO HIM SHORTLY AFTER MIDNIGHT. HE IMMEDIATELY DISPATCHED THE FOLLOWING MESSAGE TO MRS.ROOSEVELT:

"I SEND MY MOST PROFOUND SYMPATHY IN YOUR GRIEVOUS LOSS. IT IS ALSO THE LOSS OF THE BRITISH NATION AND OF THE CAUSE OF FREEDOM IN EVERY LAND.

"I FEEL SO DEEPLY FOR YOU ALL. AS FOR MYSELF, I HAVE LOST A DEAR FRIENDSHIP WHICH WAS FORGED IN THE FIRE OF WAR. I TRUST YOU MAY FIND CONSOLATION IN THE GLORY OF HIS NAME AV

"I FEEL SO DEEPLY FOR YOU ALL. AS FOR MYSELF, I HAVE LOST A DEAR FRIENDSHIP WHICH WAS FORGED IN THE FIRE OF WAR. I TRUST YOU MAY FIND CONSOLATION IN THE GLORY OF HIS NAME AND THE MAGNITUDE OF HIS WORK."

THE BRITISH PUBLIC GOT ITS FIRST NEWS OF THE PRESIDENT'S DEATH IN A MIDNIGHT BBC BROADCAST. THE FIRST REACTION WAS ONE OF STUNNED INCREDULITY, FOLLOWED BY A SOBER SENSE OF DEEP LOSS. TO MANY BRITONS THE PRESIDENT WAS AS GREAT A HERO AS CHURCHILL. THE SHOCKING NEWS DROVE THE WAR OFF THE FRONT PAGES OF THE LATE EDITIONS OF MORNING NEWSPAPERS.

KING GEORGE VI SENT A MESSAGE TO MRS.ROOSEVELT EXPRESSING DEEP GRIEF AND SHOCK. HE ORDERED A WEEK OF COURT MOURNING AND CANCELLED PLANS TO SEE AN INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL MATCH AT GLASGOW TOMORROW.

"THE QUEEN AND I ARE DEEPLY GRIEVED AND SHOCKED BY THE NEWS OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S DEATH," HE WROTE. "IN HIM HUMANITY HAS LOST A GREAT FIGURE AND WE HAVE LOST A TRUE AND HONORED FRIEND. ON BEHALF OF ALL MY PEOPLES I SEND OUR MOST HEARTFELT SYMPATHY TO YOU AND TO THE MEMBERS OF YOUR FAMILY."

VIRTUALLY EVERY AMBASSADOR TO THE COURT OF ST. JAMES'S CALLED AT THE U.S.EMBASSY TO EXPRESS TO AMBASSADOR WINANT THEIR DEEP FEELING OF LOSS.

A244

THE DEAN OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY OFFERED THAT BRITISH SHRINE TO AMERICAN FORCES FOR A MEMORIAL SERVICE, SAYING THAT ROOSEVELT'S DEATH "LEAVES BEHIND THE MEMORY OF A LIFE WHICH IN UNSELFISH SERVICE TO HUMANITY CAN HAVE FEW EQUALS IN OUR OWN OR ANY TIME."

BRIG.GEN.ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT, COMMANDER OF AN EIGHTH AIR FORCE RECONNAISSANCE WING, WAS VISITING FRIENDS IN LONDON WHEN HE HEARD THE NEWS IN THE MIDNIGHT BBC BROADCAST. HE LEFT ON A SPECIAL ARMY PLANE THIS MORNING FOR WASHINGTON.

ACCOMPANYING BRITAIN'S DEEP SORROW WAS WIDESPREAD CURIOSITY OVER PRESIDENT TRUMAN AND WHAT HIS POLICIES WOULD MEAN TO BRITAIN AND TO WORLD AFFAIRS. LONDON'S EVENING PAPERS REFLECTED THE SPECULATION BY PRINTING LENGTHY LAUDATORY ACCOUNTS OF TRUMAN'S CAREER AND PERSONALITY, STRESSING THE "LOG CABIN TO WHITE HOUSE" THEME.

IT WAS FELT THAT TRUMAN WAS IN ONE OF THE TOUGHEST DIPLOMATIC SPOTS

APR 14 1945

IN HISTORY IN HIS IMPENDING DEALINGS WITH TWO OF THE WORLD'S SHREWDEST STATESMEN, CHURCHILL AND STALIN. THERE WAS SPECULATION ON HOW WELL ROOSEVELT HAD KEPT HIS INTIMATE ADVISORS INFORMED ON SECRET AGREEMENTS WHICH HE ACKNOWLEDGED WERE MADE AT YALTA.

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY THE DEATH OF THE HEAD OF A STATE WHO WAS NOT RELATED TO THE BRITISH ROYAL FAMILY WAS NOTED ON TONIGHT'S COURT CIRCULAR. IT SAID:

"THE KING HAS WITH PROFOUND REGRET RECEIVED NEWS OF THE DEATH OF FRANKLIN D.ROOSEVELT, THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. HIS MAJESTY MOURNS THE LOSS OF A STAUNCH ALLY AND A GREAT PERSONAL FRIEND."

THE EVENING STANDARD REFERRED TO THE DEAD PRESIDENT AS THE "GREATEST AMERICAN," AND THE EVENING NEWS SAID "HE WAS THE FRIEND WHO PUT RIFLES IN OUR HANDS, WHO LET THE ROYAL NAVY HOIST THE WHITE ENSIGN ON AMERICAN DESTROYERS."

"HE HAD WORN HIMSELF OUT IN THE SERVICE OF HIS COUNTRY AND OF ALL THE PEOPLES STRIVING FOR LIBERTY," SAID THE STAR.

"THE COMMON MAN OF ALL LANDS, WHOSE CHAMPION HE WAS, WILL REJOICE THAT AT LEAST HE LIVED LONG ENOUGH TO KNOW FOR CERTAIN THAT HIS FIGHT FOR FREEDOM WOULD BE CROWNED WITH COMPLETE SUCCESS," SAID THE NEWS-CHRONICLE.

"IT IS DEMOCRACY'S TRAGEDY THAT HIS TREMENDOUS INFLUENCE HAS BEEN REMOVED ON THE VERY THRESHOLD OF THE DAY WHEN THE WORLD WOULD MOST BENEFIT BY HIS HELP IN BUILDING THE STRUCTURE OF PEACE."

LONDON, APRIL 13-(AP)-THE THORNY PROBLEMS OF LIBERATED EUROPE AND THE POSSIBILITY OF RUSSIA'S ENTRY INTO THE PACIFIC WAR MAY FORCE A NEW MEETING WITHIN A FEW MONTHS OF TOP RUSSIAN, BRITISH AND AMERICAN LEADERS TO ACQUAINT PRESIDENT TRUMAN WITH THE BIG THREE'S PLANS--SOME OF THEM SECRET.

SOME QUARTERS BELIEVED PRESIDENT TRUMAN MIGHT ACCOMPANY SECRETARY OF STATE STETTINIUS HERE FOR THE CONFERENCE OF ANGLO-AMERICAN-SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTERS SCHEDULED TO FOLLOW THE SAN FRANCISCO MEETING.

ON ONE OF THE TOUGHEST DIPLOMATIC SPOTS IN HISTORY, PRESIDENT TRUMAN FACED THE PROBLEM OF REPRESENTING THE UNITED STATES IN DEALING WITH TWO OF THE WORLD'S SHREWDEST STATESMAN, PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL AND PREMIER STALIN.

THIS WORLD CROSSROADS OF DIPLOMATIC CHANNELS DEVELOPED THE OPINION THAT TRUMAN WOULD WANT TO ESTABLISH AS SOON AS POSSIBLE THE SAME TYPE OF FIRST-HAND CONTACT WITH STALIN AND CHURCHILL WHICH ROOSEVELT HAD DEVELOPED.

BACK OF THIS REASONING WAS THE ARGUMENT THAT THE BIG THREE'S CLOSE RELATIONSHIP ELIMINATED A VAST AMOUNT OF RED TAPE AND MADE POSSIBLE QUICK POLICY DECISIONS ON ISSUES WHICH MAY HAVE THEIR COUNTERPART DURING COMING MONTHS IN THE PACIFIC CAMPAIGN.

IT WAS EXPECTED, HOWEVER, THAT SOME WEEKS WOULD INTERVENE BEFORE SUCH A GET-TOGETHER, A DELAY NECESSITATED BY THE IMMEDIATE JOB OF THE NEW CHIEF EXECUTIVE TO CONSULT WITH ROOSEVELT'S PERSONAL ADVISORS AND COORDINATE THEIR INFORMATION.

SOME OF THESE ADVISORS--WHOM ROOSEVELT USED TO CALL HIS EYES AND EARS--ARE IN EUROPE. AMONG THEM ARE ELMER DAVIS, CHIEF OF THE OWI, JUSTICE SAMUEL N.ROSENMAN, BERNARD M.BARUCH AND EDWARD FLYNN, FORMER DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CHAIRMAN. ALL WERE ON SPECIAL MISSIONS FOR THE WHITE HOUSE.

A191

HIGH IN SPECULATION HERE WAS HOW WELL ROOSEVELT HAD KEPT HIS INTIMATE ADVISORS INFORMED ON SECRET AGREEMENTS WHICH HE ACKNOWLEDGED WERE MADE AT YALTA AND KEPT GUARDED FOR SECURITY REASONS.

ALTHOUGH THERE WAS NO TENDENCY HERE TO REGARD ROOSEVELT'S DEATH AS A PERMANENT BLOW TO THE FUTURE OF THE GRAND ALLIANCE, THERE WAS SPECULATION THAT THE DEATH MIGHT SLOW A SOLUTION OF SOME TICKLISH POLITICAL ISSUES SUCH AS THAT INVOLVING FORMATION OF A NEW POLISH GOVERNMENT.

BUT IT WAS BELIEVED IT WOULD HAVE LITTLE IMPACT ON PROSECUTION OF THE WAR, EIGHER IN THE EAST OR WEST SINCE BOTH HAVE EMERGED FROM THE PLANNING STAGE AND ARE NOW IN THE HANDS OF MILITARY AND PRODUCTION CHIEFS.

PARIS, Apr. 13--(AP)--It takes three men and a girl to slaughter a hog in Germany.

APR 14 1945

And according to a story told today by an escaped American prisoner of war, there are a lot of other things involved, including a letter to Berlin and three white jackets.

The escaped American, Sgt. James J. Weaver (serial number 20312625), Kane, Pa., ought to know. He was there and saw it done.

Weaver was captured last July 31 in France. The Germans shipped him off in a crowded box car to Stalag B Muhlberg, on the Elbe river near Leipzig, where he was farmed out on a labor party assigned to work 90 hours a week in a factory in a little town nearby.

He and other American prisoners in the work party were quartered in a private home and the lady of the house kept pigs.

APR 14 1945

The Germans still like those nice fat sausages and the lady of the house decided she would slaughter one of her pigs. So, according to Weaver, she dispatched a letter to the proper authorities in Berlin, seeking permission to kill the pig. The food supply in the Reich is so closely controlled that one doesn't really own one's pig. The state's cut has to be considered.

In three days, three men appeared at the house, bearing authorizations, documents, instructions and three white jackets. They went over the matter in some detail with the lady of the house and then put on their white jackets. Then they set about to kill the pig.

First, they weighed the pig, and then they poked it and argued about pig-killing procedure, Weaver related.

"They got there about an hour before noon," he said. It was two in the afternoon when everything was finally settled and the pig was slaughtered."

And the lady's share of her pig? She got a few yards of sausage.

APR 14 1945

The rest, about two-thirds of the pig, went to the "proper authorities."

BEFORE LEIPZIG, GERMANY, APRIL 13-(AP)-TANK AND DOUGHBOY COLUMNS ARE FIGHTING A STIFF SERIES OF BATTLES TONIGHT WITH GERMAN ACKACK GUNNERS IN THE OUTER PERIMETER OF LEIPZIG'S ANTIAIRCRAFT DEFENSES.

THIS METROPOLIS OF 700,000 PERSONS--SWOLLEN BY REFUGEES TO POSSIBLY 1,000,000--HOUSES GERMANY'S BOOK TRADE AND FUR DRESSING INDUSTRIES AND IS ONE OF THE MOST HEAVILY-DEFENDED CITIES OF EUROPE.

"ONE ARMORED COLUMN RAN INTO 500 KRAUTS AND 25 ACKACK GUNS SOUTH OF PEGAU ABOUT FOUR MILES," SAID CAPT.FRANK C.CHILD, 1636 EAST NINTH ST., SOUTH SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

ANOTHER COLUMN YESTERDAY OVERRAN 80 FORMER ADMINISTRATIVE WORKERS IN HEINRICH HIMMLER'S GESTAPO HEADQUARTERS, WHO WERE THROWN INTO THE LINES AT NAUMBERG.

A RESISTLESS FLOOD OF TANKS AND MOTORIZED INFANTRY WAS FLOWING DOWN EVERY ROAD AS LT.GEN.COURTNEY H.HODGES' U.S. FIRST ARMY WHEELED FORWARD UNDER THE HOT SUN.

ROADBLOCKS AND OCCASIONAL BLOWN BRIDGES DID MORE TO SLOW UP THE RIGHT FLANK OF THIS GREAT ARMORED MARCH THAN THE OCCASIONAL POCKETS OF DISORGANIZED RESISTANCE.

AS YET THERE HAD BEEN NO TIME TO MOP UP BEHIND THE SWIFT CHARGING TANKS BECAUSE THE BEGRIMED DOUGHBOYS WERE ROLLING ALONG RIGHT BEHIND THEM.

THE PRESENT PENETRATION TOWARD THE ELBE, LAST RIVER BARRIER BEFORE BERLIN, CONSISTS OF A SERIES OF GIANT STEEL PRONGS THRUSTING HOURLY DEEPER INTO GERMANY.

ROVING BANDS OF DESERTERS AND STRAGGLERS FROM THE COLLAPSED GERMAN ARMIES MADE MANY SIDE ROADS PERILOUS TO JEEPS AND TRUCKS. THE ENEMY STICKS STUBBORNLY TO ROAD BLOCKS ON THE SIDE ROADS.

ONE GROUP OF LIGHT VEHICLES FROM AN INFANTRY OUTFIT WITH WHICH I WAS TRAVELING WAS AMBUSHED WEDNESDAY JUST OUTSIDE KOLLEDA, WHERE IT WAS GOING TO SET UP A NEW COMMAND POST. A QUARTERMASTER WAS KILLED IN A BRIEF FIGHT BY A SNIPER WHEN HE LIFTED HIS HEAD TO TRY TO LOCATE ENEMY POSITIONS.

COL. COSTELLO ISSUED TO JENA THE SAME SURRENDER ULTIMATUM WHICH THE CITY OF WEIMAR, 12 MILES TO THE WEST, HAD ACCEPTED EAGERLY YESTERDAY. THE CHIEF OF POLICE OF WEIMAR TOOK THE ULTIMATUM INTO JENA LAST NIGHT, PRESENTING IT TO THE BURGOMEISTER AND THE GERMAN ARMY COMMANDER.

THE FEW GERMANS REMAINING THE CITY RESISTED WEAKLY AND INEFFECTUALLY WHEN THE 80TH INFANTRY ATTACKED THIS MORNING FROM TWO SIDES.

THE DOUGHBOYS ENCOUNTERED ONLY SMALL ARMS FIRE AND QUICKLY CLEARED THE WESTERN HALF OF THE CITY, WHICH IS BISECTED BY THE SAALE RIVER. HOWEVER, THE GERMANS HAD DESTROYED THE BRIDGE AND THERE WAS SOME DELAY IN MOPPING UP THE EASTERN SECTIONS.

MAJ. JAMES HAYNES, 6200 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, SAID THAT THE 80TH INFANTRY HAD MET NO ARTILLERY OPPOSITION IN NEARLY TWO WEEKS AND COMMENTED, "I THINK THE GERMANS LOST MOST OF THEIR ARTILLERY WEST OF THE RHINE."

ALL PRODUCTION IN THE ZEISS PLANTS HAD BEEN HALTED SINCE ALLIED

BOMBERS WRECKED THE COMPANY'S BUILDINGS MARCH 19. AN OFFICIAL OF THE FIRM SAID. HE ESTIMATED THAT THE MAIN PLANT IN THE CENTER OF THE CITY WAS 60 PER CENT DESTROYED, BUT A PERSONAL INSPECTION TODAY MADE IT APPEAR 90 PER CENT WOULD BE MORE ACCURATE.

THE SOUTH PLANT OF THE ZEISS GROUP WAS SEVERELY BOMBED MARCH 17, BUT THE NORTH PLANT ESCAPED WITH ONLY MINOR DAMAGE. ANOTHER PLANT WAS DISCOVERED UNDERGROUND AT TORTHENSTEIN, FOUR MILES SOUTH OF JENA.

OTHER BUILDINGS NEAR THE ZEISS PLANTS SUFFERED SOME DAMAGE, BUT IN GENERAL THE PEOPLE OF JENA GOT OFF LUCKY. THEY LINED THE STREETS AS THE DOUGHBOYS POURED INTO THE CITY AND SEEMED HAPPY.

BY EDWARD D.BALL AND THOBURN WIANT

WITH THE U.S. THIRD ARMY, APRIL 13-(AP)-LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S ARMOR, IN A SENSATIONAL AND ALMOST UNOPPOSED LUNGE OF AT LEAST 32 MILES EASTWARD, CROSSED THE MULDE RIVER TODAY AND WAS BELIEVED ONLY 90 MILES FROM THE RUSSIAN LINES.

THE "FLAMING" FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION MADE THE CROSSING AT A POINT BELIEVED TO BE ABOUT DUE EAST OF JENA, WHILE THE SIXTH ARMORED DIVISION REACHED THE MULDE AT AN UNDISCLOSED POINT FARTHER NORTH AFTER A 24-MILE DRIVE.

IF THE CROSSINGS WERE MADE DUE EAST OF JENA, THEN THEY WERE PROBABLY 90 MILES FROM THE LAST-REPORTED RUSSIAN POSITIONS. THIS WOULD REPRESENT AN ADVANCE OF 32 MILES.

THE FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION, ALTHOUGH THE DETAILS CANNOT BE TOLD, WAS BELIEVED TO HAVE CROSSED THE MULDE FROM 10 TO 12 MILES FROM CHEMNITZ, ONE OF GERMANY'S GREATEST TEXTILE CENTERS WITH A POPULATION OF 350,000.

THE FALL OF THIS OFTEN-BOMBED GERMAN CITY WOULD CUT THE LAST MAIN RAILWAY BETWEEN BERLIN AND THE BRENNER PASS, ALTHOUGH LESSER ROUTES WIND THROUGH CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

THE FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION, FAMED FOR ITS BREAKTHROUGH, WAS BELIEVED TO BE ALREADY 30 MILES EAST OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA'S WESTERN TIP AND WAS CUTTING ACROSS THE WAIST OF GERMANY 32 MILES OR SO NORTH OF THE LITTLE BALKAN COUNTRY'S NORTHERN FRONTIER.

THE SIXTH ARMORED DIVISION'S DASH TO THE MULDE WAS MADE POSSIBLE BY A BATTALION OF TANKS AND A BATTALION OF INFANTRY, WHICH CROSSED THREE RIVERS IN THE AREA OF ZEITZ.

THE TANK BATTALION, COMMANDED BY LT.COL.CHESTER KENNEDY, DETROIT, MICH., AND THE ARMORED INFANTRY BATTALION, COMMANDED BY LT.COL. CHARLES BROWN, TACOMA, WASH., CROSSED THE WIESSE, ELSTER AND SCHWENNICK RIVERS AT A POINT SOUTH OF LEIPZIG AND ATTACKED TOWARD ZEITZ.

ANOTHER COLUMN OF TANKS, COMMANDED BY LT.COL.EMBRY LAGREW, LEXINGTON, KY., ATTACKED ZEITZ FROM THE FRONT. ZZEITZ WAS IMPORTANT PRINCIPALLY BECAUSE THE GERMANS THERE HAD DEFLECTED FLAK GUNS AND WERE HOLDING UP THE SIXTH ARMORED ADVANCE.

THUS, WHILE ZEITZ WAS CONTAINED, OTHER COLUMNS OF THE SIXTH ROARED EAST TO THE MULDE.

GUAM, SATURDAY, APRIL 14-(AP)-SUPERFORT CREWS RETURNING FROM THEIR MULTI-THOUSAND TON INCENDIARY RAID OF THE TOKYO ARSENAL AREA TODAY REPORTED SEEING "ONE SOLID AREA OF FIRE" VISIBLE FROM 75 TO 100 MILES AWAY.

INTERCEPTORS WHICH APPEARED TO BE JET-PROPELLED JAPANESE FIGHTE ATTACKED THE RAIDING BOMBERS.

"THOSE FIGHTERS LOOKED LIKE BALLS OF FIRE IN THE SKY," SAID FLIGHT OFFICER ALBERT EVANS (25 OSBORNE) YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO. "THEY FLASHED ACROSS THE SKY LIKE ROMAN CANDLES IN A FLAT TRAJECTORY."

A TAIL GUNNER, CPL. WALTER TEBBIT (412 NORTH VIEW)AURORA, ILL., SAID HE SAW 11 SEPARATE FIRES BURNING AFTER HIS PLANE, THE SIXTEENTH OVER THE TARGET, LEFT TOKYO. POSSIBLY 400 B-29S PARTICIPATED IN THE RAID.

"I SAW ONE SOLID AREA OF FIRE YOU COULD SEE 75 TO 100 MILES OUT," HE SAID.

OTHER PILOTS REPORTED THAT CLOUDS OF SMOKE HIGHER THAN THEIR PLANES, WHICH FLEW IN AT PROBABLY 5,000 TO 7,000 FEET, ROSE FROM THE TARGET AREA AND THAT EXPLOSIONS WERE AUDIBLE MORE THAN 100 MILES.

THE TARGET AREA WAS A DISTRICT COMPRISING ARSENALS AND CHEMICAL AND EXPLOSIVES PLANTS.

CPL.DAVID L.MENOR (1156 E. 65TH) KANSAS CITY, MO., ONE OF THE FIRST RETURNING CREWMEN, SAID "WE SAW CLOUDS OF BLACK SMOKE HIGHER THAN OUR PLANE AND COULD STILL HEAR EXPLOSIONS WHEN WE WERE MORE THAN 100 MILES AWAY FROM THE TARGET."

SGT.AUBREY E.POLLOCK, PAMPA, TEX., SAID "THERE WERE FIGHTERS AND TRACERS EVERYWHERE. WHEN WE GOT THERE, WE SAW ONE LINE OF FIRES. WHEN WE LEFT, THERE WERE TWO LINES."

OKINAWA (450)
BY LEIF ERICKSON

GUAM, APRIL 13-(AP)-A STRONG JAPANESE AIR FLEET, INCLUDING SUICIDE PILOTS BENT ON SELF-DESTRUCTION IN CRASHES AGAINST CHOICE TARGETS, SANK AN AMERICAN DESTROYER AND DAMAGED SEVERAL OTHER SHIPS OFF OKINAWA YESTERDAY IN A FIERCE ENGAGEMENT IN WHICH 118 ENEMY AIRCRAFT WERE DESTROYED.

ALL EVIDENCE SUGGESTED THAT MOST OF THE ATTACKING FORCE WAS WIPED OUT--BY SUICIDE CRASHES IF NOT BY AMERICAN INTERCEPTORS AND ANTIAIRCRAFT GUNS ASHORE AND AFLOAT.

THE ATTACK WAS DIRECTED AT SHIPS AND SUPPLY DUMPS AT THE TENTH ARMY'S BEACHHEAD ESTABLISHED EASTER MORNING NEAR HAGUSHI ON THE WEST COAST. SEVEN PLANES WERE DESTROYED IN THE MORNING AND 111 IN A FURIOUS AFTERNOON ENGAGEMENT.

TOKYO RADIO CLAIMED, TOTALLY WITHOUT CONFIRMATION, THAT

JAPANESE FLIERS SANK TWO BATTLESHIPS AND TWO LARGE TRANSPORTS IN THE OKINAWA ACTION AND LEFT FIVE OTHER LARGE WARSHIPS AFIRE. IT SAID ONLY TWO JAPANESE PLANES WERE LOST.

THE ENEMY RADIO ALSO REPORTED TWO AIRFIELDS, ONE IN THE NORTH, THE OTHER IN THE SOUTH SECTION OF OKINAWA HAD BEEN BOMBED BY JAPANESE ARMY PLANES AT DAWN YESTERDAY, SUPPORTED BY ARTILLERY FIRE. ANOTHER AIR ATTACK WAS LAUNCHED AFTER NIGHTFALL, THE BROADCAST SAID.

FLEET ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ, DESCRIBING THE ATTACK AS "SUICIDAL" IN HIS COMMUNIQUE TODAY, INDICATED THE JAPANESE PILOTS WERE MEMBERS OF THE "KAMIKAZE", OR SPECIAL ATTACK CORPS, HIGHLY ADVERTISED BY THE JAPANESE AS VOLUNTEERS FOR DEATH. THERE HAS BEEN NO OFFICIAL MENTION OF JAPANESE SUICIDE FLIERS FOR SIX MONTHS OR MORE.

NIMITZ SAID ALL THE AMERICAN SHIPS DAMAGED REMAINED IN OPERATION.

YESTERDAY'S DESPERATE ATTACK WAS THE SECOND HEAVY AERIAL ASSAULT IN SIX DAYS AGAINST THE INVADERS OF OKINAWA, JUST 325 MILES SOUTH OF JAPAN PROPER. IN A DAY-LONG ONSLAUGHT LAST FRIDAY THREE U.S. DESTROYERS WERE LOST WHILE 116 JAPANESE PLANES WERE DESTROYED.

FIGHTING IN THE SOUTHERN SECTOR OF OKINAWA DID NOT RELAX IN INTENSITY. NO ADVANCES IN THE SOUTHERN SECTOR WERE REPORTED FOR THE EIGHTH SUCCESSIVE DAY, ALTHOUGH MARINES IN THE NORTH MOVED WESTWARD ALONG THE RUGGED MOTOBU PENINSULA AND PRESSED NORTHWARD OVER ISHIKAWA ISTHMUS AGAINST ONLY SPORADIC RESISTANCE.

NIMITZ IDENTIFIED FOUR MORE AMERICAN DIVISIONS AS IN ACTION ON OKINAWA. THESE WERE THE FIRST AND SIXTH MARINE DIVISIONS AND THE 27TH AND 96TH ARMY DIVISIONS. THE SEVENTH AND 77TH ARMY DIVISIONS ALREADY HAD BEEN IDENTIFIED. ALL ARE PART OF THE NEW TENTH ARMY.

CAPITAL FUNERAL SERVICES MARKED BY SAD SPLENDOR

Body of President to Rest in Secluded Garden at Hyde Park.

BURIAL THIS MORNING

Notables of Nation and World Attend Solemn Rites in Washington.

By TOM REEDY

WASHINGTON, April 14. —(AP) Franklin D. Roosevelt was borne reverently tonight on his last long journey.

"A part of me within me cries NIGHT out to go back to my home on the Hudson river," he wrote last year. The letter announced his agreement "reluctantly but as a good soldier" to accept nomination for the fourth presidential term which was only well under way when he died in action.

Tonight after funeral rites of sad splendor at the White House, mourned by the nation and honored by the world, he got that wish.

Accompanied by family and friends, notables of the United States and dignitaries representing sorrowing nations abroad, his body was taken by train to the Roosevelt home at Hyde Park, N. Y. for burial tomorrow at 10 a. m. in a secluded, hedge-walled garden [illegible].

The funeral train, preceded by another special train loaded with mourners, pulled out of the Union station here at 11 p. m. (Eastern War Time), due at Hyde Park at 8:40 a. m. tomorrow.

The journey, with the casket under honor guard in the dim-lighted presidential car that carried Mr. Roosevelt on so many triumphal travels, was an extension of the sorrowful trip here last night from Warm Springs, Ga., where the President died Thursday.

Tonight as then, honor guards of servicemen were stationed along the route. Just as last night, mourners high and low gathered along the route and at operating stops for a last glimpse of the only man to serve 12 years as President.

Crowds Line Streets

The greatest throng ever to gather in the nation's capital stood in stricken quiet in a bright sunshine to watch the fallen leader borne along historic streets to the White House this morning for the services.

Then tonight the body was carried out of the White House at 9:28 p.m. (E.W.T.) and taken in a motor funeral coach to Union station.

The ag-draped casket was borne out of the mansion by servicemen through a military, naval and Marine honor guard while the U. S. Navy band played first the Star Spangled Banner and then "Lead, Kindly Light." The music came out of the darkness of the elm-shaded lawn while thousands stood in silence across Pennsylvania avenue, jamming Lafayette park.

The cortege to the railroad station included eight limousines. The funeral coach started moving behind a motorcycle escort at 9:32 p.m. and at 9:34 passed through the northeast gate.

In the first automobile behind it were Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter Anna Boettiger and son, Brigidaire General Elliott Roosevelt.

Following in other automobiles were the wives of the other three Roosevelt sons.

Miss Margaret Suckley, a cousin of Mr. Roosevelt, took the late President's Scottie, Fala, with her in another car.

The cortege moved back along the same route that was traveled this morning. Again that way was lined with soldiers bearing fixed bayonets. Again tonight there were sorrowing watchers as the short cortege went by. But there was no such circumstance of high office as marked the earlier passage —the great of this nation had said the capital's farewell during the day.

Millions Mourn Roosevelt

And over the world millions joined in the mourning for the man who symbolized for them the ideals and aspirations of the United States Their high diplomatic representatives stood for them beside the bier in the famed East Room of the executive mansion.

In a flag-draped casket, the body of the fallen leader arrived from Warm Springs, Ga., at 9:50 a.m., was carried along the once-triumphal inaugural route from the Union station to the executive mansion, past between 300,000 and 400,000 capital residents who stood in shocked silence.

The black army caisson brought the late president to the door of the mansion at 11:16 a.m. At 4 p.m., President Harry S. Truman joined the widow and close relatives, associates of many years and representatives of many foreign governments in the rites of the Episcopal church.

In the flower-decked room, the casket stood on a small oriental rug before an altar.

The right Rev. Angus Dun, bishop of Washington, officiated at the simple, 23-minute ceremony of the faith in which Mr. Roosevelt was a lifelong communicant.

On one side stood a vacant wheelchair, mute symbol of the malady which struck the president down in his prime but couldn't keep him down. Bishop Dun was more than a clergyman for he once warded off an attack of infantile paralysis and like Mr. Roosevelt counted Harvard—the divinity school—as his alma mater.

Only small fraction of the huge crowds of the morning funeral procession remained outside but they were the faithful who refused to depart, standing across the street in silent tribute.

After the services, the body rested before a guard of honor of enlisted men chosen from each branch of the armed forces that Mr. Roosevelt helped develop to such great magnitude.

Special Train Stands By

A special train stood by to carry the body tonight at 10 o'clock for interment in the Garden of Mr. Roosevelt's beloved Hyde Park, N. Y. estate.

Mrs. Roosevelt was stoically dry-eyed through the prayers and hymns her husband liked so much but there was many a damp cheek through the room. There, too, sat Mrs. Woodrow Wilson who endured the same grief a score of years ago.

The women were in black. Mrs. Roosevelt wore the brooch that was her wedding gift from her husband.

Harry Hopkins, closest presidential adviser for years, clung to a chair for support, pale and shaken. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger wept. Crown Princess Martha of Norway dabbed at her eyes frequently.

Bishop Dunn led prayer and then recalled that Mr. Roosevelt 12 years ago voiced his own deep faith that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

And as that was his first word as President, the bishop said, "I am sure he would wish it to be his last and that we should go forward into the future as those who go forward without fear, without fear of the future, without fear of our Allies and friends, and without fear of our own insufficiencies."

A vested choir led in a hymn that reflected Mr. Roosevelt's love of the sea: "Eternal Father, Strong to Save." Another hymn was "Faith of Our Fathers."

The Bishop prayed:

"Remember thy servant, Franklin Delano, O Lord, according to the favor which thou bearest unto thy people and grant that, increasing in knowledge and love of thee, he may go from strength to strength in the life of perfect service in thy heavenly kingdom, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

"Oh God, from whom every good gift cometh, we thank thee for the qualities of heart and mind for this, thy servant, brought to the service of our nation and our world."

The Rev. John G. Magee of St. John's, Washington, read the 46th and 121st Psalms. The lessons, Romans VIII, 14 and St. John XIV, 1, were read by the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas', Washington, the "President's church" which Mr. Roosevelt attended.

Roosevelt Funeral Is Conducted In White House

APR 15 1945

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Franklin Delano Roosevelt returned in death today to the White House he had occupied longer than any other President.

In the East Room at 4 P.M. funeral services were held for the departed leader with the Roosevelt family, national figures and representatives of foreign governments in attendance. The service in the flower-banked room opened with the singing of a hymn.

Bishop Officiates

Then the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, spoke the familiar "I am the Resurrection and the Life, saith the Lord."

The Rev. John G. Magee, of St. John's Church, Washington, read the 46th and 121st Psalms.

The lessons, Roman viii, 14, and St. John xiv, 1, were read by the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas's Church, Washington, "the President's church," which Mr. Roosevelt attended.

Another Hymn Sung

Another hymn followed.

APR 15 1945

The service called for the mourners to respond "and with Thy spirit," to the bishop's entreaty, "the Lord be with you."

The service closed with Bishop Dun praying over the body in the hushed notable-crowded room. The bishop besought:

"Enable us to strive even more mightily in peace than in war to bring new freedom and dignity to every member of our human race."

Lifelong Communicant

The bishop administered the simple but impressive order for the burial of the dead of the Episcopal Church, of which the fallen President and war chief was a life communicant.

"Remember Thy servant, Franklin Delano, O Lord," Bishop Dun intoned in his closing prayer, "according to the favor which Thou bearest unto Thy people, and grant that, increasing in knowledge and love of Thee, he may go from strength to strength in the life of perfect service in Thy heavenly kingdom."

"Grant quietness of heart and comfort," he prayed, "and the assurance of Thy eternal love to those whose lives were knit to his in the bonds of family and friendship.

Prays For Successors

"Strengthen those on whom have fallen new responsibilities in the high tasks of government, that with simplicity of heart and sure trust in Thee, they may accept as from Thee the burden laid upon them.

"Watch over the men and women of our forces by sea, by land, and in the air, in particular those of this household; be Thou their strength when they are set in the midst of so many and great dangers. And grant that whether by life or by death, they may win for the whole world the fruits of their sacrifice and a righteous peace.

"Quicken and knit together in common loyalty the wills of this whole people, that we may resolutely take to ourselves the responsibilities bequeathed to us by our stricken leader.

"Strive For New Freedom"

"Keep us in this land and those peoples who struggle at our side, steadfast and united in the unfinished task of war. Revive us when in weariness we are tempted to grow slack and each man to seek first his own advantage. As we look ahead to final victory, enable us to strive even more mightily in peace than in war to bring new freedom and dignity to every member of our human race, and to bear without stint our destined responsibilities in the family of nations.

"Make ready our shoulders to carry the burdens of victory; to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to free the oppreesed, and to lay the foundation for a more just and ordered common life for all Thy people."

While thousands paused in grief, the funeral cortege bearing the body of the late President drew silently up to the White House door at 11.14 A.M.

It was the end of a long train trip from Warm Springs, Ga., where the President died Thursday.

Truman At Station

Met at the Union Station by President Truman and other Government leaders, Mr. Roosevelt's body was borne slowly along broad Constitution avenue on a flag-draped army caisson. So great was the throng of spectators at the station thta police were still untangling traffic half an hour after the last car had gone.

Tonight the body will be taken to Hyde Park for burial at the family home tomorrow.

Thousands of persons who lined the streets of the procession spoke only in whispers as the casket passed. The caisson was preceded by a guard of all military services.

In the first car directly behind it were Mrs. Roosevelt, Brs. Anna Boettiger, the Roosevelt's only daughter, and Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, the second son.

In the second car were Col. John Boettiger and the wives of the Roosevelt sons.

President Truman, Secretary of Commerce Wallace, and James F. Byrnes, recently resigned war mobilization chief, rode in the third car, flying the American and presidential flags.

Record-Size Capital Crowd

The metropolitan police estimated the largest crowd ever assembled in Washington—between 300,000 and 400,000—saw President Roosevelt's body borne from the Union Station to the White House.

Major Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, said the number of persons lining the two-mile-long procession route surpassed even the largest presidential inaugural crowds.

While thousands lined the streets, many other thousands gathered before the White House and in adjacent parks.

Many In Tears

Many along the funeral route were in tears. As the procession entered the White House grounds, President Truman's car swung out of line and the new Chief Executive dismounted at the steps of the executive wing, entering the White House there.

The caisson halted before the main white-columned portico and the casket was borne into the White House by uniformed members of the armed services. Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the family slowly followed. The Navy Band, which so often greeted Mr. Roosevelt with the joyous "Hail to the Chief," played "The Star - Spangled Banner."

The long procession of military men and machines which followed the casket from Union Station marched and rolled onward up Pennsylvania avenue without stopping.

Within the White House, the casket was placed on a carrier and wheeled straightforward across the glittering bronze seal embedded in the lobby floor.

Wheeled Into East Room

It turned left down a long red carpet, passed the grand staircase on the left, passed the Green Room on the right and through the sliding doors into the famed East Room.

An altar stood before the double doors in the center of the east wall and the casket was place immediately before it. Flowers banked the whole long expanse of the east wall and overflowed into corners of the room whichha s seen so many other solemn occasions—and also the laughter and gayety of brighter moments.

Washington Portraits Overhead

Looking down upon the casket were the pictures of George and Martha Washington. There were no flags. The red drapes of the room were not drawn.

Resting there beneath the glass inclosure of the casket, the body of Mr. Roosevelt was dressed in a greyish-blue business suit, a greyish-blue fore-in-hand tie and a white, soft-collared shirt. He looked younger in death than when last seen by friends in Washington.

Outside on the lawn a service band played an old hymn, "Abide With Me."

Cousin Brings In Fala

The little dog he loved, Fala, was brought in on a leash by Miss Margaret Suckley, the President's cousin. Only a few close friends and members of the White House staff were admitted to the mansion.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughters-in-law, clad in black, retired to the upper floors of the White House.

President Truman went to work in the Oval Room of the executive offices. He said he would attempt to clear his desk of as much business as possible before the 4 P.M. services.

Mr. Roosevelt's body reached Washington at 9.50 A.M.

President Truman and members of the Cabinet were at the station a few minutes before the train pulled in.

Family Enters Train

Members of the Roosevelt family were the first to enter the funeral train, followed by President Truman. Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt and his wife and Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger then went aboard. They were followed by Admiral William D. Leahy, who was President Roosevelt's military chief of staff; by Bernard Baruch, Byrnes and War Mobilization Director Fred M. Vinson.

Members of the Supreme Court and their wives, and Cabinet officers and their wives also entered the train.

Band Plays "Hail To Chief"

As the Government officials, heads bowed, walked slowly toward the cars a Marine band softly played "Hail to the Chief" and the national anthem.

The funeral train was parked on a Union Station siding near a freight depot. Crowds thronged as close to the train as police would let them. At the rear of the former President's car stood a huge army caisson and seven white horses, awaiting the body of the late President.

The body was lifted to the caisson at 9.58 A.M., and the procession began its slow trip to the White House.

Virtually every high dignitary of the Government rode in the procession as it wended its way through the railroad sidings and on to the picturesque Union Station plaza which faces the Capitol.

Two of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, Stephen T. Early and William D. Hassett, rode together in one car. Behind them came another member of the White House secretariat, Jonathan Daniels.

Old Associate Sad-Faced

Sad-faced and with shoulders slumped, Samuel Rosenman, Mr. Roosevelt's long-time counsel, rode in one of the cars reserved for the former President's closest friends. Rosenman had been associated with Mr. Roosevelt in one capacity or another since the days when the late President was Governor of New York.

Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, a Hudson Valley neighbor of the Roosevelt's, rode alone—his head bowed in grief. He glanced neither right nor left as the procession moved out of the station.

Two sharp high notes of a sailor's pipe signaled the start of the long cortege.

Down Constitution Avenue

With the bass drums of a military band thumping mournfully in the distance, a battalion of Marines, followed by a strong detachment of bluejackets, tramped solemnly down Constitution avenue.

A wedge of a 25 motor-cycle policemen rode along the line of march.

A light bomber, gleaming in the sun, circled overhead.

Despite Mrs. Roosevelt's request that no flowers be sent, several truckloads arrived at the White House and were unloaded at the front door.

Among these floral tributes were several from foreign governments.

Two minutes after the last car of the procession pulled away from the station the funeral train stood by itself.

Crowd Breaks Barrier

Then suddenly the crowd that had been pent up behind guard ropes some distance away burst through and swarmed around the famous and much traveled Presidential railroad car.

Police dashed in and cut off the rush of curious spectators.

The Presidential car was laden with floral offerings. Shades were lifted in the living room section, giving the spectators a momentary glimpse of the interior of the famous "Rolling White House."

A team of seven white horses drew the four-wheeled caisson on which the casket of the fallen President lay. The Marine honor guard snapped to attention as the wheeled catafalque passed.

Six of the horses, hitched in three teams—lead, swing and wheel—were harnessed to the caisson, with a rider for each team. The seventh guide horse was ridden at the left front by the noncommissioned officer in charge of the detail.

Three cars to the rear rode President Truman.

A woman Marine, a SPAR, a WAVE and a WAC marched abreast ahead of companies from their organizations.

Mobilization Director Fred M. Vinson. Mrs. Roosevelt had traveled on the train from Warm Springs.

Members of the Supreme Court and their wives and Cabinet officers and their wives also entered. As the Government officials, heads bared, walked slowly toward the cars a Marine band softly played "Hail to the Chief" and the national anthem.

A wedge of twenty-five blue-clad motorcycle policemen puttered and popped in the line of march. A light bomber, gleaming in the sun, circled overhead.

The last car in the procession left the station at 10:20 A. M. It took almost twenty minutes for the entire funeral party to get under way to the White House.

Despite Mrs. Roosevelt's request that no flowers be sent, several truckloads of blossoms arrived at the White House and were unloaded at the front door. Among these floral tributes were several from foreign governments.

As the cortege cleared the Union Station plaza a formation of twenty-five Liberator bombers flew toward the White House, followed a few seconds later by a flight of forty-eight in groups of four.

Down Constitution avenue the seven horses drew the caisson. The Marine honor guard snapped to attention as the wheeled catafalque passed.

Three cars to the rear rode President Truman.

The Ride to the White House.

In the first car after the caisson and military guard were Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Boettiger, the Roosevelts' only daughter, and Brig.-Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, the second son. In the second car were Col. Boettiger and the wives of the Roosevelt sons. President Truman, Secretary of Commerce Wallace, and James F. Byrnes rode in the third car flying the American and presidential flags.

The silence in the throngs about the White House before the music was so deep that even the chirping of the birds on the White House lawn could be heard distinctly.

sion of military men and machines which followed the coffin from Union Station marched and rolled onward up Pennsylvania avenue without stopping.

The Metropolitan Police estimated the largest crowd ever assembled in Washington—between 300,000 and 400,000—saw President Roosevelt's body borne from the Union Station to the White House.

Major Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, said the number of persons lining the two-mile-long procession route surpassed even the largest presidential inaugural crowds. While thousands lined the streets, many other thousands gathered before the White House and in adjacent parks. They stood silently with bared heads as the procession passed.

Mrs. Roosevelt Composed.

Mrs. Roosevelt stood erect and steady as the caisson bearing her husband's body halted at the entrance of the White House.

Standing next to Mrs. Roosevelt was her son, Elliott. On his other side was Mrs. Boettiger, and to Mrs. Roosevelt's right was Vice-Admiral Ross McIntire, physician to the former President.

Behind them stood the four daughters-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., Mrs. John Roosevelt, and the son-in-law, Col. Boettiger.

The United States flag and the President's flag dipped and the "Star-spangled Banner" resounded as bearers lifted the coffin from the caisson to carry it into the White House.

The chief White House usher, Howard Crim, motioned slightly to Mrs. Roosevelt. She moved forward very slowly. Her family followed a step behind.

They walked at an extremely slow pace, following the coffin into the Executive Mansion in which the Roosevelts have lived for more than twelve years.

Mrs. Roosevelt's steps never faltered. With composed but solemn face she went up the wide steps without taking the ready arm of her son. She bowed her head slightly as the coffin was borne through the door of the White House.

Coffin Taken to East Room.

Within the White House, the coffin was placed on a carrier and wheeled across the glittering bronze seal imbedded in the lobby floor. It was wheeled down a long red carpet, past the grand staircase on the left, the green room on the right and through the sliding doors into the famed East Room.

An altar stood before the double doors in the center of the east wall and the coffin was put at rest immediately before it. Flowers banked the whole long expanse of a wall and overflowed into corners of the room. Looking down upon the coffin were the pictures of George and Martha Washington. There were no flags. The red drapes of the room were not drawn. Chairs for the services this afternoon had been placed in two semi-circles at either end of the room.

Scene in the East Room.

The flag-draped coffin of gun metal gray bronze rested on a frame covered with a brown shroud. A sailor, a flyer, a marine and a soldier stood at the corners of the small oriental rug, on which the coffin was centered, with left arms behind their backs, bayoneted rifles out-thrust. An American flag was to the left, the presidential flag to the right.

Three dimly lighted crystal chandeliers cast a sheen on the 200 gold straight back chairs for those invited to the services. In the center at the front were a dozen armchairs upholstered in a pale green brocade. Those were for the family. To one side was an empty wheel chair, standing near a wall banked halfway to the ceiling with flowers of every description.

Resting beneath the glass inclosure of the coffin, the body of Franklin Roosevelt was dressed in a grayish blue business suit, a grayish blue four-in-hand tie and a white, soft-collared shirt. He looked younger in death than when last seen by friends in Washington where his office weighed so heavily.

Outside on the lawn, a service band played an old hymn, "Abide With Me."

Only a few close friends and members of the White House staff were admitted to the executive mansion. Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughters-in-law, clad in black, retired to the upper floor of the White House.

Mrs. Truman and her daughter, Margaret, arrived at the White House at 3:35 P. M., escorted by Col. Vaughn, Mr. Truman's military aid. They came through the northwest gate of the Executive Mansion grounds and went to the executive offices. There they joined President Truman for the walk through the mansion to the East Room.

A brief rainstorm about a half hour before the services sent thousands of Washingtonians who had witnessed the military funeral procession scattering for cover. But the sun soon shone again.

The funeral rites, impressive in their simplicity, were held in the East Room where, just twelve weeks ago today, Mr. Roosevelt, with bowed head, attended divine services on the inaugural day which started him on his fourth term as President.

The Episcopalian order for the burial of the dead was the funeral service which was attended only by the family and those associates and friends who could be accommodated in the East Room.

No State Funeral.

There will be no state funeral.

"Unto God's gracious mercy and protection we commit you," read the prayer to be offered by Bishop Angus Dun of Washington Episcopal Cathedral.

The final resting place lies near the Roosevelt mansion, overlooking the placid Hudson River which Mr. Roosevelt loved.

Crowds Waited.

Long before the funeral train arrived at the Union Station hushed crowds swarmed into the downtown areas and jammed the parks along the procession route to the White House.

Battle-clad infantrymen, bayonets fixed, stood at six-foot intervals around the streets flanking the Executive Mansion. Before the main gate there, the G. I. ranks were three deep, standing attentively at parade rest.

President Truman arrived at the White House at 8:45 A. M., from his Connecticut avenue apartment. He rode alone in a large black limousine and went immediately to the living quarters of the mansion.

Traffic was stilled within the White House grounds, save for an occasional floral delivery truck which came through the police guards.

It was a beautiful morning. Curious spectators clung to statues and benches in Lafayette Park, across from the White House, to get a better glimpse of the funeral entourage. Along historic Pennsylvania avenue, officialdom and "the little people" vied for vantage points on the steps and window ledges of Government buildings.

Cabinet Leaves for Station.

Members of the Roosevelt Cabinet—carried over into the new administration — began arriving at the White House at 9:30 A. M. and shortly thereafter, President Truman and the Cabinet left the Executive Mansion grounds in closed automobiles for the station to meet the funeral train.

The crowds near the Union Station included hundreds of returned overseas veterans, their steel helmets lettered with such names as Marsola, Osterson, Opchika, Christie, Heirberger.

Along Delaware avenue, two blocks south of the station, a regiment of midshipmen from Annapolis deployed in precise formations. A company of girl Marines marched smartly down the thoroughfare to take their place in the sad procession.

President Truman was accompanied on the ride to the station by Secretary of Commerce Wallace and James F. Byrnes. The his white shirt.

President Truman will accompany the body of his predecessor to Hyde Park, N. Y., for burial tomorrow.

Hours in advance of the funeral procession, police strung guard ropes along the route from the station to the White House.

Two non-commissioned officers each from the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps, commanded by Army Master Sergt. James Bowder, were designated pallbearers here.

Separate Senate committees were named to attend the services at the White House and at Hyde Park.

Designated to the White House were Senators McKellar (D.-Tenn.), Barkley (D.-Ky.), White (R.-Me.), George (D.-Ga.), Hayden (D.-Ariz.), Wagner D.-N. Y.), Vandenberg (R.-Mich.), Connally (D.-Tex.), Thomas (D.-Utah), Green (D.-R. I.), Mead (D.-N. Y.), Tunnell (D.-Del.), Millikin (R.-Col.), Wherry (R.-Neb.), Cordon (R-Ore) and Saltonstall (R.-Mass.).

Hyde Park Committee.

The Hyde Park list included Senators Barkley, White, LaFollette (Prog.-Wis), Wagner, Austin (R.-Vt.), Hatch (D.-N. M.), O'Mahoney (D.-Wyo.), Guffey (D.-Pa.), Pepper (D.-Fla.), Hill (D.-Ala.), Mead, Lucas (D.-Ill.), Burton (R.-Ohio), Maybank (D.-S. C.), Ball (R.-Minn.), Ferguson (R.-Mich.) and McMahon (D.-Conn.).

Similar lists of Representatives were to be drawn at an unusual Saturday session of the House, originally planned more than a month ago as a celebration of Pan-American Day.

Instead the session became a requiem.

FUNERAL PLANS AT HYDE PARK

Roosevelt Hymns Will Be Sung by Villagers.

Hyde Park, April 14 (A. P.).—The earth of Hyde Park, warmed by spring sunshine, was laid open today to receive the body of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

In a rose garden shielded by an ancient cedar hedge, a grave was prepared for the burden it will receive Sunday morning when a white - haired, white - bearded clergyman recites:

"Unto Almighty God we commend the soul of our brother departed, and we commit his body to the ground, earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust; in sure and certain hope of the resurrection unto eternal life."

The village of Hyde Park, still bewildered by the sudden death of its first citizen, mourned quietly and proudly.

The 78-year-old Rev. George W. Anthony, who will officiate at the burial, said villagers would gather at the old ivy-covered Episcopal Church of St. James immediately after the brief service at the grave.

They will sing his favorite hymns and the minister will read the President's favorite Bible chapter: "For now we see through a glass dearly, but then face to face . . . and now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity . . ."

As preparations were being made, one of the President's most loyal friends, Mose Smith, 68, tenant farmer on the Hyde Park estate, stared at a row of fragile young maples. Forlornly he picked up a bucket and walked over to water them.

"He wanted me to plant these trees," he said. "I planted them for him. He'll never see them now."

The church-like town hall, where the President voted, was draped in purple and black today. So were the few other public buildings in Hyde Park, a peaceful, spacious village founded in 1735.

Eagle Engine Company placed a wooden plaque in a front window to mark the passing of its most famous volunteer fireman, and the flag was at half staff in front of Hyde Park's 300 houses, most of them shining white.

A fireman said: "Just the last time he was here, he came and watched us put out a fire. He stayed about ten minutes in his convertible until we got the fire out. He had heard the engines go by."

For many of the 1,200 Roosevelt neighbors the national day of mourning was spent away from their jobs in Poughkeepsie, four miles from here. Once the domain of Hudson River squires, Hyde Park now is suburban.

borne up the steep hill, through the oak and hemlock, to the garden. Then will follow the brief committal service of the Episcopal church.

President Truman and highest ranking officers of the Army and Navy, together with Cabinet and Congressional leaders and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden will attend the service with Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the immediate family.

While Hyde Park's citizens may not see the funeral train—the private siding, which rims the Hudson below the village, is hidden by trees—they will attend a memorial service at 11 A.M. in St. James Episcopal Church, of which the Hyde Park Squire was senior warden.

Seventy - eight - year - old Rev. George W. Anthony will conduct the memorial service as well as the ceremony at the grave.

Parents Buried In Churchyard

Mr. Roosevelt's mother, who died in 1941, and his father, who died in 1900, both lie in 134-year-old St. James' churchyard, in a modest plot shaded by stately oaks, beeches and elms. Mr. Roosevelt's first son, who died in infancy, is buried beside them.

The weather forecast for tomorrow is clear and mild. Violets are blooming in the woodland through which the cortege will pass from the railroad to the manor house. Pines and wild apple blossom scent the air.

Between the stately manor house —white painted wood on three sides, stone and stucco on the front—and the new field stone library is the rose garden where the grave has been dug.

FEW NEIGHBORS TO SEE BURIAL

Hyde Park Citizens To Hold Memorial Service Today

Hyde Park, N.Y., April 14 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt's home town was draped with black and purple tonight as its saddened residents awaited the funeral train that will bring the body of the thirty-second President to its final resting place.

Most of the 1,200 townspeople went to their homes when the few stores closed at 4 P.M., to listen to broadcast accounts of the funeral service in Washington.

Few residents will be present tomorrow at the burial at 10 A.M. in a flower-decked garden on the Roosevelt Crum Elbow estate. Soldiers with rifles stood at every entrance to the 1,100-acre estate today and the New York Central railroad tracks were guarded for miles.

Memorial Service At 11 A.M.

Present plans are for the body to be taken off the train at 9 A.M. on the Roosevelts' private siding, and

EAST ROOM RITES MARKED BY PRAYER

Bishop Dun, Of Episcopal Church, Officiates

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Bishop Angus Dun, praying over the body of President Roosevelt in the crowded East Room of the White House, besought today:

"Enable us to strive even more mightily in peace than in war to bring new freedom and dignity to every member of our human race."

The Bishop of Washington administered the simple but impressive order for the burial of the dead of the Protestant Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Roosevelt was a life communicant.

"Remember Thy servant, Franklin Delano, O Lord," Bishop Dun intoned in his closing prayer, "according to the favor which Thou bearest unto Thy people, and grant that, increasing in knowledge and love of Thee, he may go from strength to strength in the life of perfect service in Thy heavenly kingdom."

Prays For Family, Friends

"Grant quietness of heart and comfort," he prayed, "and the assurance of Thy eternal love to those whose lives were knit to his in the bonds of family and of friendship.

"Strengthen those on whom have fallen new responsibilities in the high tasks of Government, that with simplicity of heart and sure trust in Thee, they may accept as from Thee the burden laid upon them.

"Watch over the men and women of our forces by sea, by land, and in the air, in particular those of this household; be Thou their strength when they are set in the midst of so many and great dangers. And grant that whether by life or by death, they may win for the whole world the fruits of their sacrifice and a righteous peace.

"Quicken and knit together in common loyalty the wills of this whole people, that we may resolutely take to ourselves the responsibilities bequeathed to us by our stricken leader.

Unity Urged

"Keep us in this land and those peoples who struggle at our side, steadfast and united in the unfinished task of war. Revive us when in weariness we are tempted to grow slack and each man to seek first his own advantage. As we look ahead to final victory, enable us to strive even more mightily in peace than in war to bring new freedom and dignity to every member of our human race, and to bear without stint our destined responsibilities in the family of nations.

"Make ready our shoulders to carry the burdens of victory; to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to free the oppressed, and to lay the foundation for a more just and ordered common life for all Thy people."

Opens With Hymn

The service in the flower-banked East Room opened with the singing of a hymn.

Then Bishop Dun spoke the familiar, "I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord."

The Rev. John G. Magee, of St. John's Church, Washington, read the Forty-sixth and the One Hundred Twenty-first psalms.

The lessons, Romans 8, 14, and St. John 14, 1, were read by the Rev. Howard S. Wilinson, rector of St. Thomas's Church, Washington, "the President's church," which Mr. Roosevelt attended.

Another hymn followed.

The service called for the mourners to respond "and with Thy spirit," to the bishop's entreaty, "The Lord be with you."

The service closed with Bishop Dun's prayer.

300,000 Plain People See Sorrowful Return

By VIRGINIA VAN DER VEER

Washington, D. C., April 14 (AP).—"Here he comes."

They said it quietly, many of them tearfully, a whisper from one to the next all along the lines.

APR 15 1945

They were the people, waiting in a still, hazy Washington morning, to bid Franklin Roosevelt good-by. They stood shoulder to shoulder, four deep and more in places—white and Negro, Italian and Oriental, Congressman and day laborer. The official estimate was that they numbered from 300,000 to 400,000.

Only a few months ago many of them had lined the same sidewalks to watch a man in a heavy navy cape ride bareheaded through the drizzling rain, waving his hat and smiling, back to the White House to start his fourth term as President of the United States.

Two old men, immaculate in black suits, stood near Union Station.

"Well, here he comes," said one. "The President's casket."

"Saw Them Bring Harding."

"I saw them bring Harding back," said the other. "Seems a long time ago."

Along the tree-shaded street toward the Capitol, the people were quiet. They had brought their children, in carriages, in their arms and seated along the curb.

Only whispers, the solemn muffled beat of approaching drums, a baby's sudden wail, broke the stillness.

"Now here come the horses," a mother explained. "The President's in there under the flag."

As the caisson lumbered into view, a woman wept. The crying spread to other women behind the hemp rope. The people had brought their cameras and the approach of the flag-flanked casket was the signal to focus them.

Soldiers Salute.

Men removed their hats and placed them on their breasts. Soldiers moved quickly to salute. Civilians, seeing them, made their own uncertain salutes.

The horses passed and the long, black car came next. The people knew its occupants.

"There's Mrs. Roosevelt. And Anna. And Elliott."

They knew the next people, too. "There's Truman. There's Wallace."

A child piped up as a car passed with a dog hanging from its window: "Is that Fala?" "No," said his mother, "Fala's a Scottie."

The undertone of drums faded. The people began to walk away, slowly, looking back down the long view of Constitution Ave., watching the procession move toward the monuments of Washington and Lincoln and Jefferson.

Order of Service at Funeral in the White House: The Bible Readings, the Prayer and the Hymns

Mrs. Roosevelt Asked Use of 'Only Thing We Have to Fear Is Fear Itself'

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP).—Following is the outline of the funeral service for Franklin D. Roosevelt as given out by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington:

First shall be sung the hymn, "Eternal Father, Strong to save."

Then shall the minister say:

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord: he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me, shall never die.

"I know that my redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though this body be destroyed, yet shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not as a stranger.

"We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

Then shall be read two psalms (by the Rev. John G. Magee, of St. John's Church, Washington):

Psalm 46:

"God is our hope and strength, a very present help in trouble.

"Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be moved and though the hills be carried into the midst of the sea;

"Though the waters thereof rage and swell, and though the mountains shake at the tempest of the same.

"There is a river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God; the holy place of the tabernacle of the most highest.

"God is in the midst of her, therefore shall she not be removed; God shall help her, and that right early.

"Be still then, and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations, and I will be exalted in the earth.

"The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."

Psalm 121:

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills; from whence cometh my help?

"My help cometh even from the Lord, who hath made heaven and earth.

"He will not suffer thy foot to be moved; and he that keepeth thee will not sleep.

"Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

"The Lord himself is thy keeper; the Lord is thy defense upon thy right hand;

"So that the sun shall not burn thee by day, neither the moon by night.

"The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; yet, it is even He that shall keep thy soul.

"The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in, from this time forth for evermore."

Then shall be read the lessons (by the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas's Church, Washington:

Romans viii, 14:

"As many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit Himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorfied together. For I reckon the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to His purpose. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with him also freely give us all things? Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

"Jesus said, let not your heart be troubled: Ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions: If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself: that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know. Thomas saith unto Him, Lord, we know not whither Thou goest; and how can we know the way? Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me."

Then shall be sung the hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers."

[President Roosevelt's expression of faith—"the only thing we have to fear is fear itself"—was inserted at this point in the service at the request of Mrs. Roosevelt. She told Bishop Dun that the quotation, part of the President's first inaugural address, would best express what Mr. Roosevelt would want to leave with the people. Bishop Dun said:

["In his first inaugural, the President bore this testimony to his own deep faith: 'So first of all let me assert by firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance.'

["As that was his first word to us, I am sure he would wish it to be his last; that as we go forward to the tasks in which he has led us, we shall go forward without fear, without fear of the future, without fear of our Allies or of our friends, and without fear of our own insufficiency."]

Then shall the bishop say:
"The Lord be with you."

And the people shall answer:
"And with Thy spirit."

And the bishop shall say:
"Let us pray."

"O God of Peace, who hast taught us that in returning and rest we shall be saved, in quietness and in confidence shall be our strength: by the might of Thy spirit lift us, we pray Thee, to Thy presence, where we may be still and know that Thou art God: through Jesus Christ Our Lord.

"Remember Thy servant, Franklin Delano, O Lord, according to the favor which Thou bearest unto Thy people, and grant that, increasing in knowledge and love of Thee, he may go from strength to strength in the life of perfect service in Thy Heavenly Kingdom: through Jesus Christ Our Lord.

"O God, from whom every good gift cometh, we thank Thee for the qualities of heart and mind which this Thy servant brought to the service of our nation and our world. For steadfast courage in adversity; for clear vision of dangers to which many shut their eyes; for sympathy with the hungers and fears of common men; for trials met without surrender, and weakness endured without defeat; for unyielding faith in the possibility of a more just and ordered world, delivered from the ancient curse of war; we praise Thee, O God.

"And as we give thanks for his life and pray for Thy merciful judgment on the imperfections which he and all of us have brought to our many callings, we beseech Thee to take under Thy good providence the lives and causes for which he spent himself.

"Grant quietness of heart and comfort and the assurance of the eternal love to those whose lives were knit to his in the bonds of family and friendship.

"Strengthen those on whom have fallen new responsibilities in the high tasks of government that with simplicity of heart and sure trust in Thee they may accept as from Thee the burden laid upon them.

"Watch over the men and women of our forces by sea, by land and in the air, in particular those of this household; be Thou their strength when they are set in the midst of so many and great dangers. And grant that, whether by life or by death, they may win for the whole world the fruits of their sacrifice and a righteous peace.

"Quicken and knit together in common loyalty the wills of this whole people that we may resolutely take to ourselves the responsibilities bequeathed to us by our stricken leader.

"Keep us in this land and those peoples who struggle at our side steadfast and united in the unfinished task of war. Revive us when in weariness we are tempted to grow slack and each man to seek first his own advantage. As we look ahead to final victory enable us to strive even more mightily in peace than in war to bring new freedom and dignity to every member of our human race and to bear without stint our destined responsibilities in the family of nations. Make ready our shoulders to carry the burdens of victory; to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to free the oppressed and to lay the foundation for a more just and ordered common life for all Thy people.

"And do Thou, with whom a thousand years are as one day, and before whom our lives pass like a watch in the night, help us to walk this day and all our days in the light of Thine own eternity; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

"The God of Peace, who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ the Great Shepherd of the Sheep; make you perfect in every good work to do His will, working in you that which is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever, Amen."

Mrs. Roosevelt Leads Family To Pray At Husband's Bier

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Strong even in sorrow, Eleanor Roosevelt today led her family to pray at the foot of the casket in which reposed the body of her husband.

Declining to cover her face with the heavy widow's veil draped to her shoulders, Mrs. Roosevelt remained clear-eyed, her face solemnly composed during 23 minutes of funeral services in the historic East Room of the White House.

One symbol of her long devotion to Franklin D. Roosevelt was the only ornament on her head-to-toe black garb. It was his wedding present to her—a small gold brooch shaped as a fleur de lys, the Roosevelt family crest.

Daughter Anna Nearest Her

Anna, only daughter and eldest child of the Roosevelts, sat nearest her mother. Her black dress, black calot and thin black veil were the same costume she had joyously worn to witness her father's fourth inauguration.

Only a few minutes before the funeral services, Anna had returned from the hospital in which her 5-year-old son, Johnny Boettiger, is seriously ill.

Next to Anna sat her husband, Lieut. Col. John Boettiger. On his other side was Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, the only one of the four Roosevelt sons able to return from overseas duty in time to attend.

Beyond him sat his wife and the wives of the other sons, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and Mrs. John Roosevelt.

Athlone And Eden There

Two vacant chairs separated the Roosevelt family from the 200 men and women representing the great of the world who came to pay tribute.

In the same row as the family sat the Earl of Athlone, Governor General of Canada whom King George of Great Britain designated his personal representative at the services.

Britain's Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden sat between the Earl and the Earl's wife, Princess Alice.

President and Mrs. Truman and their 21-year-old daughter, Mary Margaret, headed the front row across the aisle.

Mrs. Truman's face showed the strain which the death of President Roosevelt and her husband's elevation to the Presidency has caused. Both she and her daughter were dressed in dark blue.

Among those gathered in the room was another wartime President's widow, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. She sat with Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the man who served President Roosevelt as Secretary of State through nearly three terms.

Among those in the room were the former President's personal secretary, Grace Tully, and Mrs. Roosevelt's two secretaries, Miss Malvina Thompson and Mrs. James Meredith Helm.

Notables In Blue Room

Members of the household staff of the White House, many of whom had served the Roosevelt family for more than twelve years, were seated in the Green Room adjacent to the East Room.

Some former associates of President Roosevelt and other national figures were in the Blue Room, including James A. Farley, Roosevelt's campaign manager in 1932 and 1936 before the two split politically in 1940. Labor union leaders Philip Murray of the CIO and William Green of the AFL also were there.

At the close of the brief services, Mrs. Roosevelt once more led the family. They retired to private quarters upstairs, memories of a beloved husband and father their only companions.

Mrs. Roosevelt Calm, Steady

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Dressed in black, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt stood erect and steady as the caisson bearing her husband's body halted at the entrance of the White House for brief ceremonial tribute.

Standing next to Mrs. Roosevelt was the one son able to be here, Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt of the Army Air Forces.

On his other side was the Roosevelts' daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger, and to Mrs. Roosevelt's right was Vice Admiral Ross McIntire, physician to the former President.

Four Daughters-In-Law There

Behind them stood the four daughters-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and Mrs. John Roosevelt, and the son-in-law, Col. John Boettiger.

All the women of the Roosevelt family wore unrelieved black.

The United States flag and the President's flag dipped and "The Star-Spangled Banner" resounded as bearers lifted the casket to carry it into the White House.

The chief White House usher, Howard Crim, motioned slightly to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Moves Very Slowly

She moved forward very slowly. Her family followed a step behind.

They walked at an extremely slow pace, following the casket into the executive mansion in which the Roosevelts have lived for more than twelve years.

Mrs. Roosevelt's steps never faltered. With composed but solemn face, she went up the wide steps without taking the arm of her son.

She bowed her head slightly as the casket was borne through the door. The White House had been left alone to the Roosevelts today.

Truman Diverts His Car

President Truman diverted his car to the executive offices in the west wing after entering the White House grounds.

Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Mary Margaret, were not present. Mrs. Truman has secluded herself in their Connecticut avenue apartment since her husband was sworn in as President Thursday evening.

Roosevelt Will Lie In Rose Garden

Hyde Park, N.Y., April 14 (AP)—In a rose garden shielded by an ancient cedar hedge, a grave was prepared here today for the body of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The village of Hyde Park, still bewildered by the sudden death of its first citizen, was in mourning.

The Rev. George W. Anthony, who will officiate at the burial tomorrow said villagers would gather at the old ivy-covered Episcopal Church of St. James immediately after the brief service at the grave to sing his favorite hymns.

Favorite Bible Passage

And the minister will read the President's favorite Bible chapter:

"For now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. . . ."

"And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity. . . ."

As preparations were being made one of the President's most loyal friends, "Mose" Smith, 66, tenant farmer on the Hyde Park estate, looked at a row of young maples. He picked up a bucket and walked over to water them. "He wanted me to plant these trees," he said. "He'll never see them now."

Town Hall Draped In Black

The churchlike Town Hall—where the President voted—was draped in purple and black today. So were the few other public buildings in Hyde Park, a village founded in 1735.

The Eagle Engine Company placed a wooden plaque in a front window to mark the passing of its most famous volunteer fireman; and the flag was at half staff in front of Hyde Park's 300 houses.

A fireman said: "Just the last time he was here, he came and watched us put a fire out. He stayed about ten minutes in his convertible until we got the fire out. He had heard the engines go by."

For many of the 1,200 Roosevelt neighbors the national day of mourning was spent away from their jobs in Poughkeepsie, 4 miles from here. Once the domain of Hudson River squires, Hyde Park now is suburban.

His Birthplace

The 1,000 acres of Roosevelt land sweep down to the Hudson's bend from the remodeled farmhouse in which the late President was born. Oaks and hemlock clothe one hill below the manor house. Hay fields, mowed for more than a century, are on the hill that slopes away from the river.

A portion of this acreage passed into public control upon the death of the President, who in 1943 deeded it to the Government as a national historic site.

Provision was made that Mr. Roosevelt should remain as tenant for life and that Mrs. Roosevelt and the children might occupy the "Summer White House" after his death.

There is magnificence and yet simplicity about the house. Ivy long has grown on the stone and stucco walls, and the early Nineteenth Century atmosphere blends with that of the recently finished library—another presidential gift to the people.

Seventy-five State policemen joined the military police today around the grounds.

Cox Thinks Yalta Conference Broke Health Of Roosevelt

Atlanta, April 14 (AP)—Former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, in a signed editorial in the Atlanta Journal, which he owns, expressed belief tonight that the Yalta conference broke Franklin D. Roosevelt's health.

The man who headed the Democratic ticket in 1920 with Mr. Roosevelt as the vice presidential nominee asserted that "at Yalta the issues to be met could not have but been most exacting of his powers of endurance."

"It must have been more trying on Roosevelt than either Churchill or Stalin because the United States had been held responsible for the failure of the League of Nations," the editorial said.

Under Great Responsibility

"And in the midst of present discussions, the head of our Government must have been constantly remindful that a greater responsibility rested upon him. This tremendous load must have taken its toll."

The former Governor said he talked to Mr. Roosevelt by telephone just before the President left for Warm Springs, where he died Thursday, and that he seemed to "be quite himself."

"I remarked that if he was as well as he sounded he must be in good shape," Cox recalled. "He said the most bedeviling thing was sinus trouble which persisted in the Washington climate. Nowhere else was he ever conscious of it."

"Good Spirit" Cited

Looking back through the years to their campaign, Cox said Mr. Roosevelt "accepted, in good spirit, every decision that was made as to campaign policy," and, after the ballots were counted, "he was a good loser and never, to me at least, gave evidence of a disturbing disappointment over the results of the election."

Describing the late President as a man of physical and moral courage, Cox said Mr. Roosevelt had "great common sense" and realized that virulent attacks upon him were "perfectly natural."

Knowledge Of Government

"I remember his once saying to me that he was sure the common people of the country loved him," the Cox editorial continued. "Those were his precise words, and he further observed that that was ample compensation for all the unpleasant things that had come."

Declaring that no President ever knew as much about the ramifications of government, Cox said: "His Administration might have functioned better and he might have lived longer if more matters of detail and even minor policy had cleared through the Cabinet members."

Navy Grew Strong Under Roosevelt

Washington, April 14 (A. P.).—When Franklin D. Roosevelt entered the White House in 1933 the total strength of the United States Navy was little more than that of a task force today.

The operating force plan for 1933 provided for 455 vessels of all types, of which 410 were in full commission. The fleet had 919 serviceable airplanes. Navy personnel totaled 79,700, the Marine Corps 16,527.

Today, latest figures give the Navy 61,299 vessels of all types, including 1,108 combatant craft. Plane strength last June 30 was 34,000. Navy personnel at the end of last February totaled 3,269,670, Marine Corps had 474,980 and the Coast Guard, operating with the Navy in wartime, 171,726.

EARL OF ATHLONE AND EDEN ARRIVE

Washington, April 14 (A. P.).—The Earl of Athlone, Governor General of Canada and uncle of King George of England arrived in Washington at noon today to represent the British royal family at the Roosevelt funeral. The Governor General came in at the National Airport in a Royal Air Force Liberator bomber. He was met by a host of high ranking government, diplomatic and military officials.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden arrived at the same airport a short time later to represent the Churchill government at the funeral. Wearing a blue-grey suit the handsome Foreign Secretary alighted from a Royal Air Force four motored transport plane which brought him

MOLOTOV LEADS MEMORIAL RITES

Russia Goes Into Two Days' Mourning For Roosevelt

Moscow, April 14 (AP)—Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov led the Russian people today in a memorial service for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He headed a delegation from the Foreign Office, high admirals and generals and a number of ordinary Russian citizens who went to services conducted by an American Army sergeant, George S. Thomas, at Spasso House, residence of American Ambassador W. Averell Harriman.

Harriman himself read the prayer written by President Roosevelt on the occasion of the landing of Allied forces in Normandy. A choir of American Army privates sang hymns.

2 Days Of Mourning Ordered

Black-bordered red flags were displayed throughout Russia today as two days of official mourning began by order of the Council of People's Commissars.

It was the first time the Soviet Government, which won American diplomatic recognition in Roosevelt's presidency, had so honored the head of a foreign country.

Additional telephone operators had to be engaged by the American Embassy to handle the numerous calls expressing sympathy. Operators said many persons sobbed as they talked. There was open weeping in theaters where newsreels of Roosevelt were shown in a review.

Never had such a demonstration of popular respect and affection for a foreigner happened here before.

At Leningrad

At Leningrad, authorities opened a Roosevelt exhibit at the public library around a big portrait of Roosevelt.

The radio devoted its foreign news time to reports of reactions abroad to Roosevelt's passing and to extensive biographical details of President Truman's life, also carried in the press.

The United States Ambassador to China, Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, was expected here today or tomorrow to confer with Harriman before continuing to his Chungking post which he left February 19 for consultation at Washington. Hurley is coming on Harriman's special plane, with which Harriman is expected to return to Washington in a few days.

ALL FRANCE OBSERVES A DAY OF MOURNING

PARIS, April 14 (AP)—France observed an official day of mourning today for Franklin D. Roosevelt, with flags at half-staff, all amusement places closed and primary schools devoting the day to the study of the late President's life.

Special services will be held tomorrow at Notre Dame Cathedral, at the American Cathedral Church and in a Paris synagogue.

The Paris press played up favorably President Truman's assertion that he would follow Roosevelt's policies. Perhaps not one Frenchman in ten even knew the new President's name before yesterday. Today it is on everyone's lips.

The French press agency said yesterday that the Paris Municipal Council had decided "to give President Roosevelt's name to one of the greatest Boulevards of Paris," according to the Office of War Information.

The Federal Communications Commission also recorded a later dispatch which said that Protestant churches of France would hold "a solemn service" to the memory of Mr. Roosevelt in the Reformed Church of the Louvre Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Star For Roosevelt

Sugar Notch, Pa., April 14 (AP).—The name of Franklin D. Roosevelt was placed on the Sugar Notch honor roll board today with a gold star beside it.

John A. Riley, honor roll chairman, said "President Roosevelt was the Commander in Chief of our forces. He is a casualty on the home front and joins 11 Sugar Notch boys who also have given their lives for their country."

Russia Mourns Officially

Moscow, April 14 (AP)—Russia went into official mourning at dawn today for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Black-edged red flags of the Soviet Union were hoisted over the Kremlin, all other public buildings, in city squares, over apartment houses, and even at private residences.

It was a gesture to a head of a foreign government unparalleled in Soviet history.

Truman Biography Read

Acquainting the Russian people with President Truman, the Moscow and All-Russian Radio this morning gave a long biography of the new American leader. Exhaustives details of his life took up the entire foreign news report from 6.15 to 6.30 A.M.

Last night thousands crowded into Moscow theaters showing pictures of the Crimean Conference for a look at President Roosevelt. Other thousands were turned away.

Weep At Picture

Theater managers said there was weeping during showing of the Roosevelt pictures.

Russian officialdom is attending special memorial services at Spasso House, residence of United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, which will be conducted by an American Army sergeant, George E. Thomas, of Chicago.

Alexander Troyanovsky, first Soviet Ambassador to the United States, wrote a tribute to Roosevelt in the army newspaper Red Star

Recalling that Roosevelt brought about American recognition of the Soviet Union, Troyanovsky said: "It is altogether apparent that the present collaboration of the U.S.A. and the Soviet Union in the struggle against Hitlerite aggression would have been impossible without the establishment of diplomatic relations in 1933."

SOLDIER FAINTS AS CAISSON PASSES

Washington, April 14 (A. P.).—An unidentified soldier fainted today as the caisson bearing his late Commander-in-Chief's body approached the White House.

As he fell the bayonet he had been holding rigidly at attention gashed his chin. Two Navy enlisted men gave him first aid as he lay in the street while the funeral cortege passed by. He was removed in an official limousine before his identity could be learned.

STAMP TO HONOR ROOSEVELT LIKELY

Washington, April 14 (A. P.).—A special memorial stamp in honor of President Roosevelt—long known as the nation's number one stamp collector—appeared likely today. Post Office Department officials said that no steps yet have been taken, but that it is likely such a stamp will be considered.

A special memorial stamp was issued in 1923 in tribute to President Harding following his death. That stamp was a two-cent black showing a side profile of Mr. Harding.

In addition to being a collector, Mr. Roosevelt frequently suggested designs for stamps, accompanying his suggestions with his own sketches.

SUZUKI SYMPATHETIC

San Francisco, April 14 (A. P.).—Premier Admiral Baron Kantaro Suzuki of Japan has extended his profound sympathy to the American people on the death of President Roosevelt, the Japanese Domei news agency said today in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Saburo Kurusu, Special Envoy to the United States when Japan struck at Pearl Harbor, asserted today that President Harry S. Truman "hasn't Roosevelt's ability to lead and control the American people and thereby will confront difficulties." In a Japanese Domei news agency broadcast, recorded by the FCC, Kurusu added, however, that it "is presumable Truman's determination will be to fight Japan to the bitter end, and we, too, will fight to the end."

Memorial Services In Rome

Rome, April 14 (AP)—Cardinals, diplomats and military leaders are expected to attend memorial services for President Roosevelt tomorrow night in the American Catholic Church of St. Susanna here.

His body will be interred tomorrow at his Hyde Park estate.

URGES MRS. ROOSEVELT BE PEACE DELEGATE

DES MOINES, April 14—(AP) A suggestion that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt be sent as a special representative to the United Nations conference in San Francisco April 25 was made in a telegram sent today to President Harry S. Truman by Jake More, chairman of the Iowa Democratic Central committee.

More said in his telegram that the selection of Mrs. Roosevelt "would give assurance to the people of every nation that the President's plans for a lasting peace would be forcefully brought to the attention of the delegates."

F.D.R. ...tograph Rece... At Last

New York, April 13 (AP)—Hugh Denning, 13-year-old infantile paralysis victim, waited seven months for an autograph from Franklin D. Roosevelt, but his joy in its possession was short-lived.

One hour after the chestnut-haired boy, a patient at Bellevue Hospital, received the signature and proudly displayed it, he heard the announcement of the President's death.

"He did a lot for us kids struck by polio. He'll be missed by the whole world," Hugh said.

He's going to have the autograph framed, and "keep it as long as I live."

Roosevelt's Birthday Proposed As Holiday

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Designation of January 30, birthday of President Roosevelt, as a national holiday was proposed in legislation drafted today by Representative Gallagher (D., Minn.)

Gallagher also called for creation of a national shrine at the Warm Springs (Ga.) cottage—the "little White House"—where Mr. Roosevelt died.

Roosevelt Praised By Yalta Servants

Moscow, April 14 (AP)—The death of President Roosevelt deeply affected two middle-aged chambermaids and the headwaiter at Yalta who waited on him during the Big Three conference.

With tears in their eyes, Varya K...ckhova, 44, and Maria Bezruk...va, 51, today described Mr. Roosevelt as a "splendid human being and a real gentleman."

He had sent letters and gifts to the two women and to Oementy Gogoberidze, the headwaiter, thanking them for their attention and services.

MOLOTOV COMING TO CONFERENCE

APR 15 1945

Stalin Replies To Suggestion Of President Truman

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Marshal Stalin, at the suggestion of President Truman, is sending Foreign Secretary Molotov to be Russia's representative at the United Nations Conference.

This was disclosed by the White House tonight.

A statement said that Mr. Truman directed Ambassador W. Averell Harriman at Moscow yesterday to tell Marshal Stalin that the presence of Molotov "would be welcomed."

Stalin Sends Word

It would be welcomed, it was said, "as an expression of earnest co-operation in carrying forward plans for formulating the new international organization as laid down by President Roosevelt and confirmed by the Yalta conference."

Then today, Stalin sent word that Molo... would attend, the White House said.

Prospects for the success of the gathering in its work of chartering a peace-keeping organization were brightened considerably by the news.

It was regarded as an extraordinary demonstration of friendship on the part of Russia toward the Government Mr. Truman heads.

Eden Already Here

Previously, Stalin had designated Ambassador Andrei Gromyko as Russia's representative at the conference opening in San Francisco April 25.

This arrangement had disappointed President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Stettinius as they believed the importance of the meeting deserved representation at the highest foreign official level. They felt that Russia was displaying indifference in not sending Molotov.

Great Britain's representative, Foreign Minister Eden, is now in this country for President Roosevelt's funeral. But he will stay on until the time for the conference and this will give him and Mr. Truman, and Secretary Stettinius an unusual opportunity for conferring on problems.

TRUMAN TO LEAVE PARLEY TO OTHERS

Washington, April 14 (A. P.).—President Truman, intensively preparing to take President Roosevelt's place in the Big Three, is leaving American responsibility for the San Francisco conference with this country's delegation.

This turn of affairs developed today as the new President arranged to lead the nation in sorrowing funeral rites for its dead Commander in Chief.

Faced with the necessity of familiarizing himself with all the intricate details of Europe's tangled affairs, Mr. Truman has decided not to attend the United Nations' meeting. He will probably send a strong statement of approval to the delegates who tackle there the task of constructing a world peace-keeping league.

Delegates Must Decide.

But it will be up to Secretary of State Stetinius and his seven delegation colleagues to make on-the-spot decisions on any differences that arise over the Dumbarton Oaks formula and the Big Three agreement proposing revisions.

Mr. Truman meanwhile set out on the task of acquiring the background information he must have at his command if he is to meet Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill on even terms.

He began that educational process in a conference yesterday with James F. Byrnes, former war mobilizer, who attended the Yalta conference with President Roosevelt, and will continue it with Byrnes, Stettinius and others.

The cascading advance of Allied forces across Germany may precipitate a demand for another meeting of the heads of the three nations much earlier than had been anticipated.

APR 15 1945

The feeling in official circles here is that when Gen. Eisenhower declares officially that organized resistance has ended, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill will want to meet with Mr. Truman almost immediately to settle problems involving the whole economic, if not political, future of Europe.

There will be an immediate request, it is said, to realign each nation's troops within the four agreed zones of occupation in Germany. French troops will occupy one of these areas and Gen. de Gaulle, provisional President of that nation, will want to be in on the conference.

There are indications that at this meeting the nations directly involved will want agreement on the preparations in kind which were projected at Yalta. This means that they want to know how many German plants and other installations in their occupied zone they can dismantle and ship home to replace their shattered factories.

Question of Prisoner Labor.

The question of prisoner labor for reconstruction will also be up, as well as the disposition of foreign refugees who have migrated or been transported to the Allied countries during the war.

President Truman is reported to have told friends that he knows he must have an American answer on these and other important questions. And time is short.

APR 15 1945

In the midst of this imperative research, the new Chief Executive found time to issue through Stettinius yesterday a declaration that there will be no change of purpose or break of continuity in the foreign policy of the Government.

Mr. Truman is expected to enlarge upon this theme in a brief address at a joint session of Congress on Monday afternoon after he returns from President Roosevelt's burial rites at Hyde Park on Sunday.

On Tuesday night the new President will go on the radio for an address beamed to American fighting m... the world. Reputedly ... the suggestion of th... nmand, this speech is e... to pledge forceful prose... of the war on all fronts.

It was a busy first day that Mr. Truman spent in his new office yesterday—from 9 A. M. until about 6 P. M.

APR 15 1945

In the oval room where President Roosevelt worked for more than twelve years, Mr. Truman saw Army and Navy chiefs, Stettinius, Byrnes and others. He decreed today a day of mourning for Mr. Roosevelt.

At noon he sped to the Capitol where he had lunch with old Senate friends. He received unanimous pledges of support.

Then he came out of the room to greet newspaper men.

"If you fellows pray," he said, "please pray for me. I mean that."

Good-Neighbor Policy Backed By Truman

APR 15 1945

Washington, April 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt prepared before his death a message stating that "the maintenance of lasting peace in the Americas is bound up with the maintenance of lasting peace throughout the world."

President Harry S. Truman today sent it to the meeting of the governing board of the Pan-American Union which met in honor of Pan-American Day.

Mr. Truman accompanied it with a message of his own in which he said "I wholeheartedly subscribe" to the good-neighbor policy.

Secretary of State Stettinius read the Truman and Roosevelt messages to the union.

Unity Demonstrated

The Roosevelt message:

"Once more the American republics have demonstrated both their unity of purpose and their capacity for effective co-operation to maintain the security of this hemisphere against aggression and to advance the welfare of the American peoples.

"The agreements reached at the Inter-American Conference in Mexico City and the solid support given to these agreements by all 21 of the American republics have a significance, however, that extends far beyond this hemisphere.

"They provide renewed assurance that the American nations intend to live not only as good neighbors among themselves, but as good neighbors in a world of neighbors.

Understanding Is Shared

"The governments and peoples of the Western Hemisphere share the understanding that maintenance of lasting peace in the Americas is bound up with maintenance of lasting peace throughout the world.

"To the long and difficult tasks of organizing the world for such a peace they will bring a community of principle and a rich store of common experience which will contribute greatly toward the accomplishment of this wider purpose."

Mr. Truman, in his message, sent his regrets that he could not attend the board meeting. But he said that "to the purposes and beliefs which he [President Roosevelt] stated in this message and to the good-neighbor policy of which he was the author, I wholeheartedly subscribe."

"New Strength To Friendship"

"I am certain," said the new President, "that the bond of a cherished memory will give new strength to the friendship of the Americas."

After reading the two messages, Stettinius said that the good-neighbor "policy and program to which President Roosevelt gave so much live on. They are now part of America."

"We shall continue to walk together as neighbors,'" Stettinius concluded, "on that road to security and peace which the vision and steadfast purpose of Franklin Delano Roosevelt helped us so much to find and follow."

Union Pays Tribute

The union passed a resolution of tribute to the late President, calling him "a citizen not only of the United States but of all the Americas."

Mr. Truman, intensively preparing to take Mr. Roosevelt's place in the Big Three, is leaving American responsibility for the San Francisco conference with this country's delegation.

HOPKINS IS WILLING TO HELP TRUMAN

Roosevelt Aide Flies From Hospital To Attend Funeral

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Harry L. Hopkins talked with President Truman today, but said afterward not to draw conclusions that he would figure in the new Administration.

Close friend and adviser of the late President Roosevelt, haggard at 54 from a series of illnesses, Hopkins came here from a hospital to attend the Roosevelt funeral.

Willing To Aid Truman

After he had lunched with Mr. Truman he was asked whether he had offered his services to the new President. He replied:

"Naturally, like every other citizen, I would want to do everything I could to help him make his Administration a success.

"But there should be no implication in that general statement that should apply to me personally."

For years, Hopkins was a right-hand aide to Mr. Roosevelt, flying all over the world on secret missions, helping the President with advice and information, and even living at the White House for a year and a half.

He has no such ties to President Truman, whose main adviser has been Hugh Fulton, a lawyer, who served as counsel for the Truman Investigation Committee of the Senate.

Declines To Talk Of Future

In declining to talk of his future, Hopkins said:

"I just came back to say good-by to a very good friend of mine. And I came down to pay my respects to the President and wish him well. I know he'll get what he deserves—the support of all the American people in this time."

Hopkins Lunches At White House With Truman

APR 15 1945

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Harry Hopkins, friend and confidant of Franklin D. Roosevelt, had lunch at the White House today with President Harry S. Truman.

Looking haggard from illness, Hopkins told reporters he did not want to discuss his plans for the future in any way.

"I just came back to say goodby to a very good friend of mine," he said in an obvious reference to President Roosevelt, then added:

"And I came down to pay my respects to the President, and wish him well. I know he'll get what he deserves—the support of all the American people in this time."

Voice Hardly Audible

Hopkins, who flew to Washington for the funeral from Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., spoke so low that his voice was hardly audible to the reporters who crowded about him as he left the executive mansion.

Hopkins said it was hard for him to tell what was in his mind and heart at this time. But he said he had arranged, when he gets out of the hospital, to see President Truman again and "acquaint him with any information I might have about government that I might have acquired in my relationships with Mr. Roosevelt."

Will Do All Possible

Asked whether he had offered his services to Truman in case the new President wished to take advantage of them, Hopkins replied:

"Naturally, like every other citizen, I would want to do everything I could to help him make his Administration a success. But there should be no implication in that general statement that should apply to me personally."

Hopkins said he thought neither the White House nor himself would have anything to say on that score until he returns to Washington.

"It won't be too long, I hope," he said, "because I'm getting along pretty well."

He said he would, of course, see Mrs. Roosevelt on the present visit.

TRUMANS TO MOVE INTO BLAIR HOUSE

Washington, April 14 (A. P.).—President Harry S. Truman, his wife and daughter, are scheduled to move temporarily into historic Blair House across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House. They are leaving their five-room apartment on Connecticut avenue for the yellow home where kings and chiefs of state usually stay as guests of the President.

It was understood they would not move into the White House until the Roosevelt family is ready to leave.

Amir Faisal, Saudi Arabian delegate to San Francisco, is staying in Blair House now but will leave after Franklin D. Roosevelt's funeral today.

Nipponese Diplomat Offers Views On President

San Francisco, April 14 (AP)—The special Japanese diplomatic envoy who was in Washington on a "peace" mission when the Nipponese staged their sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, was quoted by the Domei agency today as predicting difficulties for President Harry S. Truman.

A Domei radio Tokyo broadcast quoted Saburo Kurusu, the diplomat, as saying the new President "hasn't Roosevelt's ability to lead and control the American people and thereby will confront difficulties." Kurusu presumed that it is President Truman's determination "to fight Japan to the bitter end, and we, too, will fight to the end."

Domei also said Japan's new Premier, Admiral Baron Kantaro Suzuki had extended "profound sympathy" to the American people on the death of President Roosevelt.

Radio Tokyo, speaking of the latest B-29 fire raid, said "it is apparent the enemy carried out such an atrocious action in an attempt to conceal his disappointment over the death of President Roosevelt."

Examiner Read the Eye Chart To Help Truman Join the Army

APR 15 1945

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 14 (AP).—President Harry S. Truman, captain in the Army during the World War, had to "pull sort of a ast one" to get into uniform, it as recalled today by Edgar G. linde, Independence postmaster ho served with Mr. Truman in hat war.

"Harry had weak eyes and his ision was blurred without his lasses," Mr. Hinde said. "He anted very much to get in the rmy, but knew he couldn't pass he physical examination on acount of his eyes—so he just peruaded the examining sergeant to hisper the letters to him so he ould read the chart perfectly. He assed with 20-20 vision.

"Later, after he was already in nd serving, they gave him another xamination and found out about is eyes. He talked them into letng him sign a waiver—and he urned out to be one of the best fficers this country had."

Called Calm Under Fire

Mr. Truman's popularity as a oldier is well known. "He was my dea of a good officer," Mr. Hinde aid. "When we were under fire ver there he was as calm and colected as could be."

It was a day of reminiscing for ll acquaintances of the Truman amily here. Representatives of ational press and broadcasting ervices swarmed the small town n search of stories about the new hief Executive.

A reporter from "The London Mirror" telephoned Miss Ethel Noand, cousin of Mr. Truman, to nquire of his attitude and feeling oward the British.

Miss Noland assured the reorter that President Truman had very warm feeling toward the British people. She explained that e had visited England when verseas in 1917-'18.

Henry P. Chiles, of the County Clerk's staff at Independence, realled that he and Mr. Truman vere in the same class at school. He was always at the head of he class and active in the literary ocieties and such. He didn't tear around and ride fast horses like he rest of us."

Mrs. Truman an Athlete

Mr. Chiles also knew Mrs. Truman as a girl. "She was a great girl," Mr. Chiles chuckled. "She was the first girl I ever knew who could whistle through her teeth. She could bat a ball as far as any boy in the neighborhood.

"I don't want you to get the wrong idea about Bess," Mr. Chiles added, "for as she grew up she became very dignified—but she was quite a tomboy as a youngster, very popular and well liked."

Miss Nellie Noland, another cousin agreed that Mrs. Truman was "very lively" as a girl. "She was a beautiful skater, both on ice skates and roller skates, and was the best tennis player in town.

"Harry wasn't too athletic, he was always bookish, but he did become interested in jujutsu and used to demonstrate for all of us. I think he picked this up while in Battery B."

Called Very Determined

TAMPA, Fla., April 14 (AP).—President Truman is a man who is very determined, says C. W. Latimer, and "if he tells Stalin he wants an island in the Pacific, he'll most likely end up with that island."

This was the characterization of the new Chief Executive presented here by City Representative Latimer, a boyhood friend of Mr. Truman.

President Truman is great on details, studies everything thoroughly before taking any action, and knows where he is going before he moves, Mr. Latimer said.

The city official helped draft Mr. Truman into his first public office as a county judge twenty-three years ago in Independence, Mo., and reported the task required all the persuasive powers of six men.

"They had to sell the idea to him and give him time to study it from every angle," Mr. Latimer asserted, "but once his mind was set he saw it through."

"Hit the Ground" in Argonne

JOHNSTOWN, N. Y., April 14 (AP).—Assemblyman Joseph R. Younglove recalled today that President Truman, then an artillery officer, "hit the ground" to save himself during the second day of the Battle of the Argonne in September, 1918.

"He was right at the front and the fighting was the toughest of any in the Argonne Forest," Mr. Younglove said.

He said he and Mr. Truman, then with the 35th Division, were standing on high ground when German field pieces and machine guns fired on an infantry unit directly in front of them. They fell to the ground to avoid the intense fire.

Mr. Younglove said he wrote the Vice-President Dec. 8 and received a reply from him Dec. 19, in which Mr. Truman said he remembered the incident.

Scheiberling Pledges Legion's Aid to Truman

Calls San Francisco Decision a Tribute to Roosevelt

ALBANY, April 14 (AP).—Edward N. Scheiberling, national commander, pledged the American Legion's support to President Truman today and told him his decision to proceed with the San Francisco conference was a "great tribute to our beloved President who carried us so far on the road to victory and peace."

"You face the greatest challenge that has ever confronted an American," Mr. Scheiberling wired the President. "Speaking for the two million men and women of the Legion, I pledge to you our individual and united support.

"Your own knowledge of the horror and suffering of war gives our people confidence that you will continue the effort to build a lasting peace. Your decision to proceed with the San Francisco conference is a gerat tribute to our beloved President who carried us so far on the road to victory and peace."

Truman Is Called Able And Fair By Colleague

The following appraisal of President Truman was written especially for the Associated Press by Senator Tunnell, who was a schoolteacher and later a lawyer before he was elected to the Senate on the Democratic ticket in 1940.

By James M. Tunnell

[United States Senator from Delaware]

Washington, April 13 (AP)—For more than four years I have sat in the Senate of the United States while Harry S. Truman has been either a member or its presiding officer.

I listened to him the day he offered his resolution providing for the committee which was afterward appointed and usually called the Truman Committee.

Senator Truman was firmly convinced that an investigation at that time would not only be the means of discovering any attempt at dishonesty on the part of those dealing with the United States Government either directly or indirectly as contractors or laborers, but he believed that the fact that such a committee was in existence and making honest investigation would prevent dishonesty in such matters.

No Partisanship

It is generally stated that there has never been a minority report from this committee. Senator Truman has shown remarkable ability in investigations during war, when party feelings might have been aroused, to steer his committee through investigations which frequently involved men of both parties without causing any claims of partisanship or unfairness.

Senator Truman has been a liberal in his votes in the Senate. He voted for the Agricultural Adjustment Act, the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the Social Security Act and the Tennessee Valley Authority Act.

Favored Bonus

He voted for joining the World Court, for the Florida Ship Canal, and favored bonus payments to World War veterans. He supported the preparedness program and voted for appropriations to prepare the United States for what he believed to be the coming struggle.

He has been classed as a liberal but has never been the kind of legislator who voted for or against a measure without knowing why.

There has never been the slightest suspicion of dishonesty in connection with any act of Harry Truman's life. His habit of thought today is straightforward. In any matter coming before him as President of the United States his first question will be as to whether it is right and next as to whether the suggestion is possible of attainment.

His experience as a farmer, as a merchant, as a lawyer, as a judge, as a senator, as chairman of the Truman committee, as Vice President, have prepared him for the greater responsibilities of his present position. In every position which he has held he has shown the common-sense attitude of a practical American.

Those who are inclined to estimate his talents lightly are in for a surprise.

My prediction is that President Truman will meet the highest expectations of the American people in the successful conclusion on the war. It will never be difficult to learn what he believes, and why he believes it.

The world will learn that under the smiling surface there is a steeled determination to stand for right and justice.

Armored Columns Roar Across Reich Within 18 Miles of Czech Border.

PARIS, Sunday, April 15—(AP) U. S. First and Third army tanks drove deep beyond besieged Leipzig and within 85 miles of the Russian lines yesterday while the Germans opened up with artillery against the Ninth army front less than 45 miles west of Berlin.

A German radio commentator today described the Third army drive, which had reached within seven miles of Chemnitz, as "significant," and predicted its speedy exploitation for a link-up with Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian army in Silesia.

Berlin Front-Line City

The same commentator declared Berlin now was "a front-line city" and "may well reckon with defense simultaneously against the western Allies and the Soviets."

The Americans west of Berlin moved up to the twice-breached Elbe river on a 90-mile-wide front while some 750 RAF heavy bombers subjected Berlin and the suburban garrison town of Potsdam to a heavy night bombing.

(The American broadcasting station in Europe told the German people that the entry into Berlin was "imminent" and asserted a "state of tension" existed in the capital, now menaced by American forces 45 miles away and Russian troops 30 miles away.)

As American armored columns roared 10 miles or more eastward under a partial news blackout in the center of Germany, one infantry unit was only 18 miles from the Czech frontier.

The First's Ninth Armored division and the Third's Fourth and Sixth Armored divisions had struck so deep into the enemy's rear that the Germans now must turn for a back-to-back death stand or be cut off from retreat into the southern mountains.

Already this mountain fortress of Bavaria and Austria had been penetrated on the north by yet another Third army column—the Eleventh Armored division—which roared into the Wagnerian city of Bayreuth, 124 miles north of Munich and 173 miles from Hitler's retreat at Berchtesgaden.

Continue Leipzig Battle

The battle for refugee-packed Leipzig, 75 miles southwest of Berlin, thundered into its second day. The Ninth Armored division quit the Leipzig siege and joined the powerful eastward push.

North of Leipzig, the First army's Third Armored division broke loose on a 30-mile gallop that reached a point three miles south of Dessau, six miles from the Elbe river, and 55 miles southwest of Berlin itself.

The U. S. Ninth army forced a second crossing of the Elbe river at an undisclosed point on its looping front bulging within 45 miles of Berlin, and was battering against the capital's leveled anti-aircraft guns as it strove to build up the bridgehead.

The Germans on this front also were being forced to fight back to back with the Russian lines 90 miles away, but there was as yet no indication that any forces had been disengaged from the Eastern front to attempt to save the ruined capital.

Berlin in fact reported the Russians were about to launch a mighty offensive along the Oder and Neisse rivers east of the Reich capital.

Far behind this front, two big German cities fell—Brunswick, aircraft manufacturing center with a population of 201,000, and the Ruhr's Dortmund, with a population of 537,000.

Compress Ruhr Pocket

The battle to liquidate the Ruhr pocket was in its final phase. It had shrunk to one-fifth its original size and 114,000 of the estimated 150,000 Germans troops cut off there had been captured.

On the Ninth army's western flank, the British Second army drove 36 miles out of its Celle bridgehead and reached Uelzen, 22 miles from the Elbe river and 42 miles southeast of the great port city of Hamburg.

The battle for northern Holland was all but won by the Canadian First army, which drove into the Dutch communications center of Groeningen near the North Sea and to the east were within 10 miles of the sea on the approaches to the port of Emden.

Canadians farther south captured Arnhem, where heroic British parachute troops met defeat last September, and drove into Apeldoorn, 16 miles to the north, where Kaiser Wilhelm spent his exile.

On the southern end of the front, the French First army in a 13-mile drive captured Kehl, east bank Rhine city opposite Strasbourg, erasing the threat to that city. More than 50 towns were captured.

The U. S. Seventh army was fanning out steadily on a broad front east of the French positions in the Black Forest and running into stiff resistance.

The Fourth Armored division of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army was battering at the approaches of the communications city of Chemnitz, 33 miles west of Dresden.

When last reported it had driven six miles beyond the Mulde river in twin advances and was in the vicinity of Meinsdorf, seven miles west of Chemnitz, and Hohenstein, nine miles to the southwest.

There was no late news from the Sixth Armored division, which last was reported near Lindenberg, 22 miles southeast of Leipzig.

Near Czech Border

The 90th Infantry in a 10-mile advance was nearing Lichtenberg, 18 miles from the Czech border.

The Eleventh Armored division swung 15 miles southeast into Bayreuth, home of the Wagner music festivals and at the northern edge of mountainous south Germany where the Nazis finally will be brought to bay.

The Eleventh Armored division also battled to the vicinity of Untersteinach, where it was 25 miles from the border of Czechoslovakia.

Infantry was crowding in close behind the armored spearheads, clearing town after town.

The 76th Infantry cleared Zeitz, 20 miles southwest of Leipzig, against moderate resistance while the 80th Infantry captured Gera, city of 82,000 population 33 miles southwest of Leipzig.

While attacking in front of Leipzig, Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' U. S. First army likewise was bypassing it on the south.

Following over a route churned by the treads of U. S. Third army tanks headed for Dresden, the First Army's Ninth Armored division reached the Pleisse river at Bergisdorf, 15 miles southeast of Leipzig.

APR 15 1945

Columns nearest Leipzig still were reported seven miles southwest of the city and heavily engaged by Germans manning leveled antiaircraft guns. The German strongpoint of Wissenfels, 16 miles southwest of Leipzig, fell after a 20-hour battle.

Another armored column also was heavily engaged nine miles southwest of Halle, which lies 16 miles northwest of Leipzig. The Germans turned villages into strongholds blazing with bazooka, mortar and artillery fire.

Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's U. S. 9th Army Infantry was spilling out on the north German plain and cementing the flanks for the two Elbe River crossings.

The 84th Infantry reached Wittinge and Gladdenstadt, 30 miles north of Brunswick and close to the British forces swinging northeastward toward the Elbe.

While the siege of Magdeburg continued, the 2d Armored Division was gathering strength on the east bank of the Elbe to the south and bridging it under heavy fire.

While the Germans gave way southwest of Hamburg on Lieut. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's British 2d Army front, they still held fast on the direct approaches to that second city of Germany and a second port of Bremen to the southwest.

Going is Slow At Bremen.

British troops and tanks southeast of Bremen found the going slow in attempts to enlarge the Aller River bridgehead, where they might sweep northwest and take that port from the rear. Violent counterattacks by a marine division were beaten off in this area.

Along the western flank steady gains were reported. The strongly-defended communications center of Cloppenburg, 35 miles southwest of Bremen, finally was captured. The British then pushed five miles beyond to within 16 miles of the city of Oldenburg.

Farther north the Canadians finally fought into the strongpoint of Zwolle, less than 10 miles from the Zuider Zee.

Infantry of the U. S. 7th Army captured Bamberg, a railway center with a population of 57,000, 30 miles north of the Nazi party city of Nurnberg.

All along Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's 120-mile front the Americans were on the move.

Patton Near Czech Border

Paris, April 14 (AP)—The American 9th Army won a second crossing over the Elbe River today and fought slowly forward on the outer defenses of Berlin. First and 3d Army tanks drove well past besieged Leipzig and advanced into the Nazi mountain stronghold of Bayreuth.

The flanking sweep past Leipzig carried deep into Saxony to within 7 miles of Chemnitz, 88 miles from the Russian lines and 38 from Dresden.

The 3d Army's 90th Infantry reached a point 18 miles from the Czechoslovak border as the 4th Armored Division drove to a point within 7 miles of industrial Chemnitz, a front dispatch reported.

Roads From Berlin Cut

For all practical purposes, Germany had been cut in two, for the last direct communications from Berlin south—including the superhighway to Munich—were cut. The 3d Army had bypassed the northwest tip of Czechoslovakia.

The 9th Army captured Dortmund, second largest city of the Ruhr and eleventh largest in Germany. Its 537,000 peacetime residents worked in the great coal mines over which the city sprawled and in its vast steel and iron mills and synthetic oil plants. The city was an important traffic center but was ruined by bombs and shells.

Arc Around Berlin

The 1st Army closed within 55 miles southwest of Berlin, widening the siege arc being fashioned around the capital by the 9th Army to the west and the Russians to the east.

A 30-mile armored dash carried within 3 miles of Dessau, where the Mulde River meets the Elbe.

The Canadians seized Arnhem, eleventh city of Holland.

The 1st Army captured the industrial center of Luedenscheid and came within 2½ miles of cutting the Ruhr pocket in two near Hagen, menaced on the north by the 9th Army.

French Make Gains

The French took Kehl across the Rhine from Strasbourg and 50 other places, including Buehl, Achern, Reystadt, Gamhurst and Otterswier plus "enormous quantities of material" and prisoners so numerous they could not be immediately counted.

Supreme headquarters did not disclose where the new Elbe crossing was made.

[BBC said the crossing was 15 miles southeast of Magdeburg at Barby.]

The original bridgehead was established by the Hell on Wheels (2d Armored) Division using assault boats near Magdeburg. The nearest 9th Army troops last were reported 45 miles from Berlin.

Many Cities Captured

Among cities captured were Brunswick, Jena, Zeitz, Saalfeld, Rudolstadt, Sangerhausen, Weissenfels, Gerolzhofen, Lichtenfels and Lichtenau.

The 7th Army fought into the rail center of Bamberg, 32 miles from Nuernberg, and on a canal to the Danube. Fighting flared

Yanks Entry Into Nazi Capital Is Near, Report Says

APR 15 1945

London, April 14 (AP)—ABSIE, the American station in Europe which beams propaganda broadcasts to the continent, said today the United States 9th Army's entry into Berlin was "imminent." The station explained, however, that this statement was based on the broad picture drawn from front-line dispatches.

The broadcast made no reference to specific distances from Berlin. Latest advices from Associated Press Correspondents with the 9th Army placed the 9th Army 45 miles from the city.

Absie's report was broadcast at 5.30 P. M. and said:

"There is a state of tension in Berlin as the United States 9th Army approaches the city's western outskirts. [illegible] into Berlin is imminent."

through the cities of Magdeberg, Bayreuth, Gera and the Dutch centers of Goeningken, Zwolle and Appeldorn.

The British besieged Bremen and outflanked Hamburg by plunging 36 miles to within 23 miles of the Elbe south of Hamburg.

The Ruhr pocket was compressed down to a fourth its original size as the one hundred fourteen thousandth prisoner streamed from Germany's greatest industrial valley. The 1st Army took 34,847 prisoners yesterday, 19,904 from the Ruhr. More than 50,000 surrendered the day before.

Trap In Holland

The Canadians were attacking 200,000 Nazis caught in a larger trap in Holland and helping the British erase 40,000 pocketed southwest of Bremen. Already 400,000 Germans have been taken this month.

Supreme headquarters said French troops under Gen. Eduard Rene-Marie de Larimat had made a limited attack at an undisclosed point on the French coast—"the forgotten front"—where thousands of Germans still hold the Gironde estuary, La Rochelle, St. Nazaire, Lorient and Dunkerque. Some 1,500 American heavy bombers attacked the Germans at Royan and Pointe de Grave, barring access to the port of Bordeaux.

Infantry Moving Up

Third Army infantry was rushing up between Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 4th and 6th Armored Divisions while his Thunderbolt (11th Armored) Division broke into Gera, 35 miles south of Leipzig and 33 west of Chemnitz.

Gen. Omar Bradley's armies bypassed Leipzig and tightened the siege arc around the great Saxony city. The closest troops were last reported 4 miles away.

Yanks east of the Elbe were encountering heavy fire from flak batteries guarding the capital. They were making slow progress on the Brandenburg Plain. Americans were along the Elbe for almost 100 miles.

96 Miles From Prague

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's troops moved within 85 miles of the Skoda munitions works at Pilsen and 96 of the Czechoslovak capital of Prague.

Three of Bradley's armies were less than 100 miles from the Russian lines. The 3d Army was within 88 miles of the Soviets, the 9th was 90 miles and the 1st was reported 95 miles from the Red armies.

The Germans fought without a cohesive front and without a cohesive command. The rear of the mass of their armies along the Oder was being penetrated by the swift advance of American armies which gained 30 or more miles in a day.

With the loss of the aircraft center of Brunswick, Germany had lost half of her 58 cities of more than 100,000 population.

British Gains In North

The British 2d Army cut loose in the north in an advance to Uelsen, 49 miles southeast of Hamburg.

The Canadians fought to within seven miles of the North Sea and onto the approaches of Emden.

The Hell on Wheels (2d) Armored Division of the 9th Army had established a firm bridgehead over the Elbe in the Magdeburg area 97 miles from the capital and was progressing slowly. The 17th Engineers Corps was forced to proceed slowly with bridging the 450-foot river because the Germans had the site under direct observation and heavy artillery fire.

The 5th Division north of Magdeburg was closer to Berlin—45 miles away. Bridging the Elbe presents even greater difficulties than the Roer or Rhine Associated Press Correspondent J. W. Gallagher said. The main fire on the bridgehead came from the flak batteries.

Nazis Can Move Overnight

"The 9th Army is so close to the Russian front now that the Germans could move a tank division from one front to the other overnight, and it is expected that some divisions from the East will appear on the side of Berlin if the Nazis plan to defend the capital," the Gallagher dispatch said.

Great cities in the Ruhr were near capture, including Duesseldorf, Wuppertal, Hagen, Salengen, Oberhausen and Mulheim. Some may have fallen already.

The 3d Army was racing across eastern Germany virtually unopposed—driving down clear roads as fast as the greatest aerial resupply effort of the war could keep the attacking columns powered.

By entering Bayreuth after a 15-mile gain, the 3d Army outflanked the Nazi shrine city of Nuernberg, 40 miles to the southwest. Bayreuth, scene of Wagnerian music festivals, is 124 miles north of Munich and 173 miles from Hitler's mountain home at Berchtesgaden.

2 Red Armies Launch Mighty Berlin Drive

KARLSRUHE

Germans Report Massive Tank Battle Rages Before Capital.

APR 15 1945

LONDON, Sunday, April 15—(AP) Panicky German broadcasts said that a massive, swaying tank battle was raging early today within 30 miles of Berlin after two mighty Soviet armies opened "preparatory" offensive operations yesterday for a linkup with American troops.

The battle raged after massed Russian forces broke through powerful Nazi fortifications in preliminary thrusts which, Berlin said, indicated that the Red army had begun the grand-scale, long-planned offensive to engulf Berlin and end the war.

Drive Toward Yanks

Late German broadcasts indicated that the major Soviet blow was about to fall along the Neisse river 85 miles from Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. Third army. One Soviet battle group was said to be attacking after violent artillery fire to cover up heavier attacks planned to sweep south of Berlin and link up in the area of Dresden.

There was no confirmation from Moscow, but dispatches reported a zero-hour atmosphere in the Soviet capital.

With captured Vienna behind them, Russian armies in the south wheeled toward Hitler's mountain lair at Berchtesgaden, drove within 63 miles of the Austrian city of Linz, and in Czechoslovakia battered within 29 miles southeast of the war production city of Bruenn (Brno), Moscow disclosed.

Berlin said that fighting was spreading like wildfire along a 57-mile front east and southeast of Berlin in the initial blows of a massive offensive involving four armies and possibly the greatest concentration of men and materiel massed by the Red army.

The first blows were launched near Guben, 50 miles southeast of Berlin, yesterday morning, the enemy said. Later, six-inch artillery guns opened a paralyzing barrage from bridgeheads on the west bank of the Oder river between Kuestrin and Frankfurt, due east of the capital.

The attacks were described as "diversionary" and of "regimental strength" designed to feel out German positions, preparatory to the main offensive which Berlin said was "immediately imminent."

Tank Battle Raging

But in fighting west of Kuestrin, Berlin admitted that a tank battle already was raging, claiming that 47 Russian tanks had been destroyed "within a few hours." In this area, where last enemy reports put the Russians 30 miles from Berlin, Nazi broadcasts admitted that Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's tanks had penetrated "into foremost German positions."

After the break-in, the Nazi DNB agency said, Zhukov's troops were "forced to take cover and subsequently were weakened by German fire." DNB, however, did not claim that the Russians retreated.

South of Frankfurt, near Fuerstenburg, lively activity also was reported blazing. There, the enemy said, Russian sappers were clearing German minefields.

Nazi broadcasts said four powerful Russian armies were poised along a 170-mile front. American armies were only 88 miles away. Gloomy Nazi commentators said: "We must stand and fight—win or die—as the Russians are getting ready to smother us like a blizzard across the steppes."

Far to the north, Russian rearguard troops opened an offensive to clear the Samland peninsula of East Prussia west of Koenigsberg, capturing more than 60 towns and villages and 7,000 prisoners and constricting the enemy pocket to 153 square miles. Soviet naval planes again lashed enemy shipping off the coast and sank 13 small naval ships, a tanker and 18 enemy transports totaling 92,000 tons.

Meanwhile, Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army west of Vienna advanced 12 miles through the Danube valley north of the Vienna woods and captured more than 60 towns and settlements and 2,200 prisoners.

Tolbukhin's troops breached the Traisen river and captured Herzogenburg, 63 miles east of Linz, 132 miles of Berchtesgaden, and 89 miles of Bavaria.

Along the south bank of the Danube, advancing tank forces pushed forward 12 miles from Tulin to take the station of Gemein Lebarn, 133 miles southeast of the Czechoslovak capital of Prague.

Sweep Across Austria

On the north bank of the Danube, infantrymen of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian army also were sweeping across Austria and Czechoslovakia in a drive that ultimately may wheel to Prague.

They closed in on the rail junction of Breclav (Lundenburg) on the Austrian-Czechoslovak frontier, by taking the suburb of Stara Breclav, site of an important German airfield and 29 miles southeast of Bruenn, guarding the southeastern approaches across the Moravian plateaus to Prague.

The Red army storm before Berlin, brewing for 10 weeks as the Russians brought up two armies from East Prussia and Danzig and massed them on a 170-mile front from Stettin bay to the Sudeten mountains east of Dresden, apparently was about to burst with full fury.

Six-inch Russian offensive guns, Berlin said, opened the "diversionary attack" from a Red army bridgehead at the Oder-Neisse river confluence north of Guben, 50 miles from the Nazi capital. A violent barrage lasted 25 minutes and then Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian army troops went over to the attack.

The Germans said, however, that the blow was "designed to conceal Russian concentrations farther to the south" along the Neisse river.

A short time after this announcement, a German military spokesman in Berlin said zero-hour was imminent for the major offensive.

Along a 57-mile front from Kuestrin, 38 miles east of Berlin, to Forst, on the Neisse river 13 miles south of Guben, the spokesman said "the Russians are busy clearing German minefields and establishing lanes through these fields—an unmistakeable sign that the planned large-scale offensive toward the west is about to begin."

The German Transocean Agency forecast a great pincer and frontal assault on Berlin.

It predicted the combined 2d and 3d White Russian armies under Marshals Konstantin K. Rokossovsky and Alexander M. Vasilevsky, former chief of the Red Army general staff, would strike across the Oder River northeast of Berlin, sweep north of the capital and cut the Berlin-Stettin autobahn.

Russian military men said the main bulk of the German Army is massed along the Oder-Neisse sector and despite rapid Anglo-American advances, these forces must be crushed. They believe the cost may be heavy. But standing ready to fight is the greatest weight of tanks, artillery and infantry massed by the Red Army and to supplement them are large forces of cavalry and the air force to give the final death blows to the W... macht.

Tito's Army Active

West of Vienna the Germans admitted deep penetrations near St. Poelten, 28 miles from the Austrian capital, while to the south Soviet Alpine troops pushed into the Fischbacher Alps toward Austria's second city of Graz.

Meanwhile, Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Army broke through German lines in northeastern Yugoslavia, forced three major rivers and in a 32-mile sweep westward stormed six strong points and a dozen smaller places, the Free Yugoslavia communiqué announced.

The action was fought in the plains of the Srem lowland between the confluence of the Drava and Danube rivers and north of the Sava River, where the Germans held fortified positions northeast of Belgrade.

[A second communiqué said that the island of Rab, in the Adriatic Sea, off Yugloslavia's northwest coast 35 miles south of Fiume, also had been captured.]

Meanwhile today other powerful Russian forces released by the fall of Vienna mounted new drives aimed at Prague and the Nazis' mountain fortifications in South Germany.

The Austrian capital on the Danube fell yesterday to the combined weight of the Second and Third Ukrainian Armies under Marshals Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Feodor I. Tolbukhin after a week-long siege that resulted in the capture of 130,000 Germans, by Moscow account.

Vienna, second city of the greater Reich and bulwark of the invasion routes to Bavaria, little more than 100 miles away, was the tenth European capital occupied by the Red Army and the eighteenth liberated or dominated by the Allies.

Moscow said that between March 15 and April 13, eleven German tank divisions were smashed as Russian forces closed in on the Austrian capital, and the Soviet radio last night said the Viennese had saved the honor of the Austrian nation by assisting in the liberation of the famed city of song.

The Viennese celebrated their liberation with public waltzes in the city's squares. The streets were hung with Austrian and Soviet flags as the populace saluted the Red Army with unconcealed joy, a Moscow broadcast reported.

Meanwhile, Malinovsky's troops northeast of the capital, captured the war center of Hodonin in a surge across the Moravian border that carried to within thirty-two miles of Bruenn (Brno), Czecho-Slovak arms center. The Soviet forces were storming the Morava River along a fourteen-mile stretch and driving forward on a twenty-five-mile front in this sector.

Tolbukhin's tanks were rolling back the Germans across Austria west of Vienna between the Danube and Drava rivers. Berlin already has reported a wholesale withdrawal of Nazi troops on this wide 170-mile front.

Tolbuhkin was driving hard toward Berchtesgaden, Hitler's Bavarian mountain stronghold, but perhaps more significant was Malinovsky's push into Moravia, which with Bohemia, is the last arsenal for the crumbling Wehrmacht.

REDS REPORTED PROBING LINES BEFORE BERLIN

Russians West of Vienna Push On for Prague and South Germany.

AUSTRIAN CITY CELEBRATES

Moscow Says People of Capital Saved Nation's Honor by Aid Given to Soviet Forces.

London, April 14 (A. P.).—Marshal Zhukov's First White Russian Army troops probed the German defenses before Berlin today with attacks from their Oder bridgeheads along a thirty-five-mile front which heralded, the Germans said, "a general offensive toward the capital which will begin very shortly."

The Berlin radio commentator, Ernst von Hammer, who made the report, said the preparatory attacks were in regimental strength.

'Greatest Battle' Forecast For Russ Front

Moscow, April 14 (AP)—Every sign indicated today that four massive Russian Army groups were approaching the zero hour for the drive against German divisions massed on the Eastern front from Silesia to the Baltic.

The Russians were rested and ready for the campaign which promises to destroy a principal part of Adolf Hitler's staggering military forces. The expected blow might result in the greatest battle of World War II.

"Greatest Offensive"

[Berlin broadcasts said today that the Russians "are about to launch their great offensive" on the Eastern front aimed at Berlin and a linkup with British and American armies driving toward the Reich capital from the west. One German correspondent said Russian artillery was in position for the preliminary bombardment.

[The Germans indicated they expected Soviet forces to strike to outflank Berlin from the north and south while Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army, now approximately 30 miles due east of Berlin, staged the frontal blow.]

Mud Hampers Effort

Working against troublesome thaws and mud, which hampered transport on lines of communications stretching from the Urals, Soviet forces now have thoroughly prepared for the fight.

Premier Marshal Stalin will throw the greatest force of the war into the fray. Marshal Zhukov, who was the defender of Moscow, well may be the man upon whom the burden will fall to lead the spearhead attack.

Konev In Command

Marshal Ivan S. Konev, commander of the 1st Ukrainian Army, probably will direct the southern wing of the all-out offensive into the heart of Germany.

What disposition Stalin will make of his forces in the Baltic operations, Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian Army and Marshal A. M. Vasilevsky's 3d White Russian Army, remains to be seen. These two forces may be sent into the lower Oder sector opposite Stettin or should to the salient between Konev's and Zhukov's principal spearheads.

Push Toward Prague

New Russian drives today were aimed at Prague and the Nazis' mountain fortifications in southern Germany.

Vienna fell yesterday after a week-long siege that resulted in the capture of 130,000 Germans, by Moscow account.

The Austrian capital, second city of the Greater Reich, was the tenth European capital occupied by the Red Army and the eighteenth liberated or dominated by the Allies.

RAF BOMBERS RIP BERLIN, POTTSDAM

Raid Seen as Softening Up Attack for Ground Forces.

LONDON, Sunday, April 15—(AP) RAF heavy bombers last night assaulted Berlin and its western suburban garrison town of Pottsdam, toward which Allied armies were surging in strength.

The heavy bombings, first since the RAF hit Berlin in three waves the night of April 12, was seen as a possible softening-up attack for the ground forces.

The air ministry estimated that possibly 750 Lancaster heavy bombers participated.

The isolated German garrison which has been blockading the southwestern French port of Bordeaux for months was attacked today by 1,150 Flying Fortresses and Liberators in a revived offensive against the Nazis' forgotten front in France. Five bombers were reported missing.

Supreme headquarters in Paris announced that French forces followed up the attack with a limited assault on an undisclosed sector of the French coast, heightening speculation here that the plane raid was designed to soften up German defenses as a prelude to land or sea operations.

Returning crewmen said they encountered little or no flak and all bombing was visual with good results. It was the first time in nearly two years that such a large force of heavy bombers had attacked a target without fighter escort.

At least 3,500 tons of high explosives were slammed into the Gironde estuary gateway from the sea to Bordeaux in the two-hour raid started shortly after daybreak. The assault followed a night attack by 750 RAF heavy bombers on the great German naval base at Kiel.

It was estimated that possibly 35,000 Germans are crowed along both sides of the Gironde estuary, part of possibly 170,000 Nazis still holding out in half a dozen pockets of resistance scattered along the French coast from Dunkerque to Bordeaux.

The British coastal command announced that RAF planes caught a large German coastal steamer believed to be moving troops through the Kattegat from Norway to Baltic ports and at least two direct hits were scored.

The Air Ministry announced that the German 10,000-ton cruiser Admiral Hipper and the 5,400-ton cruiser Emden were believed damaged April 9 in a raid on Kiel which is jammed with the last remnants of the Nazi navy. It was there that the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer was sunk.

Gironde Pocket Hammered By U.S. Planes

London, April 14 (AP)—The German heavy cruiser Admiral Hipper and the cruiser Emden are believed to have been damaged in the Kiel raid of April 9 when the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer was sunk, the British Air Ministry announced tonight.

London, April 14 (AP)—A force of 1,150 American heavy bombers made a surprise attack at dawn today on German strong points and anti-aircraft positions on both sides of the Gironde Estuary north of the French Atlantic port of Bordeaux.

This is one of a half dozen isolated places along the French coast where Germans estimated to total 170,000 are still holding out.

The bombing fleets dropped 3,500 tons of explosives through clear skies in a two-hour attack started soon after daybreak. Concrete fortresses, troop concentrations and largely silent anti-aircraft batteries were among the targets struck around Royan. Unescorted, the bombers met no fighters.

Coast Sector Attacked

Some time later [illegible] headquarters announced that French troops simultaneously had carried out a limited attack on an undisclosed sector of the French coast.

The daybreak attack followed a blow last night by more than 750 RAF Lancaster and Halifax bombers on Kiel, chief refuge for what remains of the German navy.

There was speculation in London that the bombing of the Gironde pocket might be linked with some kind of land or sea action.

It was the first time in nearly two years that Fortresses and Liberators carried out a daylight operation wholly without fighter escort.

Supplied By Subs

Perhaps 21,000 Germans are still sitting out the war in the Royan district around the mouth of the Gironde. Others are holding out in Dunkerque, St. Nazaire and the Channel islands. Small quantities of food and other supplies have been sent to them occasionally by Nazi aircraft and submarines.

Three aircraft were reported missing from last night's RAF operations which, in addition to the attack on Kiel, included a raid by 100 bombers on objectives in Hamburg, Boizenburg southeast of Hamburg, and in Stralsund, another German naval base on the Baltic northwest of Stettin.

Big Blasts Reported

RAF airmen observed many big explosions during the attack on Kiel, where reconnaissance had shown the harbor packed two days ago with all kinds of shipping driven from such Baltic ports as Gydnia, Danzig and Konigsberg by the Russians.

Last night's attack was made through clouds under control of a master bomber—one plane that hovers over the target and directs all bombing by night. The entire port area, including three big shipbuilding yards, was saturated with both high-explosive and incendiary bombs.

London Newspaper Shouts "This Is Victory Week End"

London, Sunday, April 15 (AP)—The London Sunday Express reported today that "news of major importance is known to have reached the Cabinet Ministers yesterday," and declared "the war may end literally at any moment."

[While there are indications that an American-Russian junction or entry into Berlin may come at any time, the best information available to the Associated Press is that an actual end of the war in Europe will not come for some time.]

Called Victory Week End

Contributing to the wave of optimism in London, the Sunday Dispatch carried a headline saying "This is the victory week end."

However, when a secretary at Prime Minister Churchill's residence at 10 Downing Street was asked if there had been an official state alert, he said: "No—thank you."

No special preparations had been made in official quarters in London for any startling announcements over the week end. Censors were not clamping down on any news generally known.

Bell-Ringers Rotate Shifts

And though bell-ringers went on rotating shifts at St. Paul's Cathedral to be sure of being on hand when the news proclaiming victory does come, there were few takers of bets that V-E day would come this week end.

Many Britons got their cue that something might happen from Prime Minister Churchill's decision not to attend President Roosevelt's funeral.

An authoritative report said the Prime Minister made the decision against his personal wishes and that it was dictated by last-minute reports from the war fronts which made his presence here essential.

Expect Guerrilla Fighting

Throughout England the air of tense expectancy was tempered only by grief over the death of President Roosevelt and by the realization that large-scale guerrilla warfare probably will be waged before the last of the fanatical Nazis have been eliminated.

Key Government officials were ordered to remain at their posts. Most high-ranking foreign diplomats stayed close to their jobs.

The man in the street was betting the V-E day proclamation would come anywhere from tomorrow to Thursday, when Churchill is scheduled to review the progress of the war again.

Steel emergency barriers have been erected to screen the broad steps and forecourt of St. Paul's to prevent injuries among the mass expected to assemble there to give thanks for victory. The big church's famed choir stood by for thanksgiving services.

Banner lines on London evening newspapers declared German "Collapse at Hand," "Reich Entering Its Last Hours."

It was the general opinion that an announcement of the end would be issued simultaneously in London, Moscow and Washington.

Nazi Damper On News

London, April 14 (AP).—The German radio and press services were blacked out on all crucial sectors of the western front today, and only the Berlin station was on the air.

The Transocean and DNB agencies had made no broadcasts since 7 P. M., and the International Information Bureau reported only on the Dutch front and the Ruhr pocket.

Last Shot Held Fired In Defense Of Britain

London, April 14 (AP)—In relinquishing command of Britain's anti-aircraft command, Gen. Sir F. A. Pile today told his gunners, "I think I have seen you fire the last shot in defense of this country."

General Pile said no German aircraft of flying bombs had been seen over England in three weeks and that fifteen days had passed without a rocket falling.

Rudolf Hess Moved From Prison To Prison

London, April 14 (AP)—Rudolf Hess, once deputy Führer of Germany and now wallowing in melancholia with the collapse of the German Army near, is a here-today and gone-tomorrow war prisoner of Britain.

Closely guarded since he bailed out of a Messerschmitt on a Scottish moor May 10, 1941, on a reported peace-mission, bushy-eyed Hess now is being moved from one hide-out to another, it was understood today.

The objective is to prevent fanatical Nazi war prisoners who might escape from attempting to liberate him, kill him or give him an opportunity to kill himself.

When German prisoners made a mass breakout from Newport stockade last month, Hess was only 20 miles away. Guards were doubled and he was moved to another secluded spot.

VON PAPEN SEIZED BY YANKS IN RUHR

'Gray Fox' of Nazi Diplomacy Taken Prisoner at Hunting Lodge.

PARIS, April 14 — (AP) Franz Von Papen, the gray fox of Nazi diplomacy and a notorious international figure since he was kicked out of the United States in 1915, was captured in the Ruhr pocket by the U. S. Ninth army April 11, Allied headquarters disclosed tonight.

The 65-year-old former chancellor of the German republic, vice-chancellor under Hitler and later ambassador to Austria and Turkey, was seized at a small hunting lodge near Stockhausen, 25 miles southeast of Hamm. Taken with him were his son, Capt. Friedrich-Franz and his son-in-law, Baron Max von Stockhausen.

Captured by U. S. Troops

The capture was made by Lt. Thomas McKinley of Lexington, Ky., and seven soldiers.

They were: Sgts. Stephen A. Witchko of McKees Rocks, Pa., Hugh G. Frederick of Adamsville, Ala., Herbert A. Steuben, Chicago; Waldo L. Elder of Burlington, Iowa; and Pfcs. Jesse H. Leonard of Lexington, N. C., Denver M. Terrill of Bunker, Mo., and Anthony L. Giuinti of Chicago.

Von Papen, famed for lighting on his feet in many a desperate situation, including the Nazi blood purge of 1934 in which he was marked for destruction, exclaimed upon his capture:

"I wish this war were over."

"So do eleven million other guys," replied Sgt. Frederick as he led away the man who has been named in countless unconfirmed rumors as a would-be peace negotiator.

What will happen to Von Papen next has not been disclosed but authoritative word from Britain was that he was regarded as "just a prisoner," despite his lack of military status.

Von Papen became widely known in the First World War when, as German military attache to the United States, he was expelled for "improper activities in military and naval matters" in connection with the notorious Zimmerman incident.

The United States then was neutral, but a British destroyer stopped the neutral ship on which he was traveling, and found his baggage papers which led to the arrest and trial of numerous German espionage suspects in the United States. Von Papen, himself, as a diplomat, went free eventually and was assigned to a liaison job with the Turkish army for the remainder of that war.

Von Papen had been an important servant of Hitler for more than a dozen years.

Former German Chancellor

He himself was chancellor of the German republic in 1932, the year before Hitler took power. As chancellor he had refused to deal with the rising Nazi party, but in 1933 he helped bring Hitler together with important bankers who contributed to the Nazi movement.

While Von Papen barely escaped with his life in the 1934 Nazi blood purge, the agile gray fox managed to land on his feet and shortly was appointed ambassador to Austria, a country to which he gave the kiss of death.

He it was who persuaded Premier Schuschnigg to make the fateful journey to Berchtesgaden in February, 1938, which resulted in the forced anschluss with Germany and in Schuschnigg's imprisonment.

This cheap victory so pleased Hitler that he named the Catholic Junkers Von Papen a member of the Nazi party and sent him to Turkey as ambassador in 1939 to keep up the "good" work.

Von Papen failed, however, to win Turkey to the German side.

Shrewd, affable, dignified, he was credited by the Turks with probably saving them from German attack, as he argued with Hitler that he could win the Turks through diplomacy without use of an army.

Even in those days, there was talk that Von Papen might some day seek to seize power in Germany eventually and make peace with the Allies. Adroit as he was, however, he failed to bring off any such coup. Yet he has escaped the Nazi collapse by becoming a prisoner of the Americans.

The instant reaction in London upon news of his capture was "Von Papen's done it again, as far as getting out of the Nazi frying pan and the fire."

The same authoritative British spokesman who made this comment added, "this time there is no fixing. He is just a prisoner."

Nazis Apt To Fight On Past V-E Day, Possibly Into Next Winter

APR 15 1945

By James M. Long

Allied Headquarters, Paris, April 14 (AP)—The German Army, still fighting fiercely in the east, no longer has either a cohesive front or a coherent command in the West. The long-awaited linkup splitting the Reich in the middle is near—but that does not mean that the war in Europe will end at that time.

There may still be military fighting on into next winter, but it is not likely that this will still be regarded as an active phase of the European war.

Joint Action Expected

V-E day will come, according to the best available opinion here, somewhere between the Allied linkup and the end of subsequent fighting. And it will come by Allied proclamation and not by German surrender.

APR 15 1945

Events since General Eisenhower a fortnight ago predicted that the Germans would continue to fight as best they could until the last inch of the Reich has been overrun have only served to underscore the supreme commander's words.

But it is hardly likely that Eisenhower alone could or would proclaim a V-E day. It would be proclaimed by a joint agreement with Premier Stalin, and it could hardly come, whatever the success of the cleanup in the West, until the Eastern front, too, had collapsed.

Two Fronts Forming

There is no disposition here to believe that even splitting the Reich in two will cause the collapse of a fighting front—actually many fighting fronts as the German command disintegrates into separate pockets of major resistance.

These fronts are already forming. One, perhaps the weaker of two, is shaping up in the north in a great arc backed up against the Baltic Sea and trying to hold the northern ports and perhaps Berlin.

The other would be a great arc in the south centered upon the "national redoubt" of Nazism—the hideaways of mountainous southern Germany and northern Austria between Lake Constance and Berchtesgaden.

Foe Being Concentrated

The arc in the north will probably break into more than one pocket, particularly if the Allies in the west continue their wedge toward Hamburg and Luebeck.

It would mean there would be the Berlin arc to clear out, the northern ports, western Holland—perhaps eventually even Denmark and Norway. Norway and the heart of the south German redoubt might take months to clean out, especially if the Nazis held on there past fall.

It is not suggested that the Germans would necessarily be able to do that with any degree of success. The American speed through middle Germany and the force of the Russain drive are bringing the end near even faster than the Germans had calcluated.

But, by the very nature of the Allied breakthrough in the center, considerable Wehrmacht forces are actually being folded back into these arcs.

Situation Unprecedented

The situation is virtually without military precedent—a people beaten and unable to quit, a nation defeated and unwilling to surrender; and the prospect of one side eventually having to announce that it had won a war.

Just when the Allied victory proclamation will come, will depend upon the extent of the breakdown of the German fighting force. But it is conceivable—even probable—tht when it does come the Germans will still have at least a nominal army in the field. That is to say, the proclamation may not await breakdown of the German opposition into purely guerrilla resistance.

But it would certainly not come until virtually all of Germany had been seized and resistance whittled down to mere mop-up.

If that was the case, there might come a "celebrational" victory day, and after that the war would continue as "aggressive occupation" of additional parts of the Reich and the liberation of the last bits of German-held and German-conquered territory.

It would be entirely conceivable under such conditions that some American doughboys would still be in the fighting line in Europe and new Gold Stars would be added to the little flags in the windows down Main Street back home for weeks, or even months, after the day of celebration.

APR 15 1945

Nazis May Fight In Hide-Aways Through 1945

Victory Proclamation Date in Doubt as Two Fronts for Last Stand Shape Up

By James M. Long

PARIS, April 14 (AP).—Victory on the European front by Allied proclamation—whenever it comes—probably will not mean an end of fighting on a military scale in Germany or its stolen outposts.

The best information here is that if the fighting is not broken down to mere guerrilla warfare by late fall, it might conceivably stretch on through the winter in the pass-guarded hide-aways of Norway and southern Germany's "national redoubt," where snow and ice would slow the clean-up.

In such an event, weeks and months after proclaimed victory American divisions might still be in the line on European soil.

American boys still might be dying in a war whose end already had been celebrated.

There is no reason to suppose that the link-up with the Russians, splitting Germany in two in the middle, would be the signal for General Dwight D. Eisenhower in conjunction with Premier-Marshal Stalin to proclaim victory.

After the junction with the Russians, large German forces still will be in the field in the north or south or both, and it is believed here that V-E Day will be proclaimed only after those forces are much more greatly broken down and boxed in.

Already there is no cohesive front nor coherent German command in the west. The junction of the Allies of the east and west seems near, but V-E Day will come, according to best opinion here, somewhere between that junction and the end of the subsequent fighting.

Two fighting fronts now are shaping up. One is in the north guarding the great German ports and perhaps Berlin.

The other is the "national redoubt" of mountainous southern Germany and northern Austria between Lake Constance and Berchtesgaden, whose approaches already echo to the clamor of American and Russian arms.

Both present the drab prospect of long and bitter campaigning.

In the north, besides the ports—always stubbornly defended by the Germans—there is flooded western Holland, perhaps Denmark and Norway. Norway might take months to clean out.

It is not suggested that the Germans will be able to turn southern Germany into the fortress the Nazis hope for. The speed of the Russian and American advances is

Just when the Allied victory proclamation will come after the die-hards are shoved into their last corners will depend upon the extent to which the German fighting force is broken down in the process.

It will not come until most of Germany is seized and resistance is whittled down to a mere mop-up.

It presents an almost unprecedented military situation.

A people is beaten and yet it is unable to quit.

A nation is defeated and is unwilling to surrender.

Thus the Allies have no alternative. They must announce that they have won a war.

Robert S. Allen Freed

Colonel, Former Columnist, Taken Near Ohrdruf on April 7

WITH THE UNITED STATES 3D ARMY, April 13 (Delayed by censor), (AP).—Colonel Robert S. Allen, former co-author with Drew Pearson of a Washington newspaper column, was captured by the Germans south of Ohrdruf on April 7 and liberated when the United States 3d Army took Erfurt.

Allen, who is on Lieutenant General George S. Patton's staff, was in a jeep that was ambushed from the rear by German civilians after it ran into a lightly-manned roadblock.

'Ike' Compliments 3d Army

With U.S. 3d Army in Germany, April 14 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, after visiting the 3d Army front, expressed today "pleasure with the discipline and veteran characteristics of all troops, particularly the self-confidence of all 3d Army troops I saw at the front."

More Art Treasures Seized in Reich

Wuerzburg, Germany, April 14 (A. P.).—Although this historic city underwent heavy destruction, it appears today that more art treasures can be salvaged than the Allied Military Government had expected.

The Sixth Army Group public relations section announced the finding of more than 200 rare paintings valued conservatively at $200,000 in a farmhouse at Kist, southwest of Wuerzburg. Other works of art were hidden in the caverns of the thirteenth century fortress of Marienberg.

Eisenhower Back From Front Tour

JULES GRAD

SHAEF, April 14 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower returned to his headquarters today after an extended tour of 1st Army corps and divisions in central Germany.

Tanned from the trip in an open jeep, the supreme commander immediately upon his return conferred with members of the general staff.

General Eisenhower, accompanied by Gen. Omar Bradley, 12th Army ground commander, and Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, 1st Army chief, yesterday rode through thick clouds of dust and over shell-pocked German roads along the southern and eastern fringes of the Ruhr pocket.

Girls Cry 'Russki, Polski'

And the 42d Division Finds a Way Around Fraternization Ban

SCHWEINFURT, Germany, April 12 (Delayed) (AP).—Americans of the 42d Division who captured Schweinfurt have figured out an answer to the Army's non-fraternization edict, laid down when the Allies invaded Germany.

As the Americans celebrated the conquest with girls, military police would ask the girls if they were German.

"Russki, Polski," all would exclaim. There were hundreds of Russian and Polish girls among the slave laborers in the Schweinfurt ball-bearing plants.

The 42d previously had taken Wuerzburg, whose cellars yielded some choice champagnes. Corks were popping all afternoon.

117 Frenchwomen Freed From Nazis, Get Home

Paris, April 14 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today welcomed 117 Frenchwomen released from the infamous Ravensbruck concentration camp where some 30,000 women of Allied nationalities, 7,000 of them French, await repatriation.

They were doctors, actresses, wives of resistance leaders and other Frenchwomen deported to Germany for political reasons.

Henri Frenay, Minister for Prisoners, announced that of France's total of 2,500,000 prisoners and deportees in German hands, about 1,000,000 had been liberated. Of those freed, 102,000 have been repatriated and the others are being returned to their homes at the rate of between 15,000 and 20,000 daily.

NAZIS WIELD WHIP ON FOE

Enemy Treated Like Dogs In 'Horror March' Over Snow

WIANT

Wefenbuttle, Germany, April 12 [AP—Delayed] — American soldiers, part of 2,000,000 Allied prisoners of war and slave laborers liberated so far on German soil, told today of a "horror march" under the Nazi whip as brutal as that perpetrated by the Japanese in the Philippines.

They were the half-starved, weary, footsore doughboys liberated by the British 2d Armored Division, and who have been forced to march from eastern prison camps as the Germans fled the Soviet drive.

This is not the first time such a story has been told.

American captives freed on nearly every front tell of the horror of that frozen march, of beatings when the marchers lagged; of the weak left to die in the snow.

Nazi Mask Slips Off

How many died no one could say, but they were many as frantic guards strove to keep ahead of the Russians.

NIGHT

One veteran from the Italian front said his march began from far-off Danzig, where they had been treated fairly well but poorly fed.

Then the Nazi mask slipped off. Two pieces of bread was the daily ration.

If the sick fell out, they were beaten with rifle butts until they got up again. If they couldn't get up, they were allowed to ride in a car for a day, but the next day they were left behind if they still could not make it.

Sleep In Snow Or Rain

As the line tramped westward it was joined by other columns of British and Americans until there were thousands of them slogging along the frozen roads.

They slept in the open in snow or rain.

"They treated us like dogs," said one soldier.

There might have been more left behind on the Polish plain, or in eastern Germany, but the British and American prisoners shared the little food they had and helped each other to march along.

One prisoner captured in the Ardennes on the Western front, January 22, said he had been "walking ever since" and after losing 40 pounds was down to 80. Another soldier lost 80 pounds.

Million Frenchmen Freed

Most of those liberated so far have been Frenchmen, both war prisoners and slave laborers. It is estimated that 1,000,000 Frenchmen alone have been freed.

[The Polish Press News Agency from Moscow, said that among American, British, French, Polish and Russian prisoners just liberated on the Eastern front were some who had been forced to make an eight-day march.

[This account said many died of starvation, exposure and torture, that the Germans employed dogs and rifle butts to make them move along, and some were shot after they became too weak to walk.]

Yanks At Door, Nazi Leader Kills Self

BOYLE

Naumburg, Germany, April 14 (AP)—A Nazi leader shot himself to death yesterday as American soldiers knocked on the door of his attic hideaway.

The suicide, Paul Hinkler, stocky, white-haired, handsome in his fifties, died not in the gaudy trappings of a Nazi functionary, but in an ordinary nightshirt.

Hinkler's appointment as police commissioner of Wuppertal bore the signature of Hermann Goering. His effects included many flamboyant uniforms and decorations.

Word From Mayor

The incident took place in the little village of Nissmitz, near Freyborg. Two American military intelligence soldiers had heard from the mayor that Hinkler was a man of influence among National Socialists. The Americans decided to arrest the man but found him dying, Lieut. Col. Maxwell A. Snead, of Winston Salem, N.C., said.

DAY

His wife disclaimed belief in Nazism.

"But my husband was a good man,' she protested. "I just couldn't control him. To the best of my knowledge, he shot only twelve people."

7TH ARMY DRIVES FOR NUERNBERG

GOLDBERG

Leading Elements Now 25 Miles From Shrine City

Sixth Army Group, April 14 (AP). Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's 7th Army smashed southward toward Nuernberg tonight, with leading elements drawing up along a mile-front at Pettstadt, 25 miles from the Nazi shrine city.

Nuernberg, Bavaria's second city with a peacetime population of 431,000, was in the path of at least three divisions moving down from the north and two other divisions were closing down from the northwest.

NIGHT

45th Division In Center

In the center was the veteran 45th Division, which captured Bamberg and began charging south. Bamberg is 30 miles airline and 32 by road from Nuernberg.

The seasoned 3d Infantry Division was on the west flank and the 14th Armored Division on the east flank.

The 42d "Rainbow" Division was coming down swiftly from the northwest and the 12th Armored Division has had a spearhead pointed at Nuernberg from that direction for ten days.

Was Toy-Making City

Loss of the mountain city would be especially hard for the Nazis, since aside from its role as a rallying ground, it guards the northern approaches to Munich and the mountains where the Germans are expected to hold out against the final day of reckoning.

Nuernberg was an ancient city of toymakers, but Hitler changed it to a city that made lethal toys. It was a center of precision industries until the Allied bombers began working it over.

2 Soldiers Face Hanging, Attacked German Women

Third Gets Life; Court Martial Rebuffs Husband's Thanks

TAUBERBISCHOFSHEIM, Germany, April 14 (AP).—Three American soldiers were convicted of rape today by a court martial which sentenced two to be hanged and a third to life imprisonment.

The complainants, two German women, were in court when the verdict was announced. The husband of one thanked an American Army officer for the verdict.

"We didn't do this to please you," the officer snapped. "We did it to maintain discipline. Do you think the German Army would have done the same if the situation were reversed?"

The German mumbled, "no, and I'm not for Hitler," and hurried away.

The sentences are subject to review by General Dwight D. Eisenhower. The soldiers are Negroes.

Three white soldiers are to be tried next week on rape charges.

Of the convicted men, Corporal Carey Pugh, of Earling, W. Va., was sentenced to life while Private First Class Harold Williams, of New Orleans, and Private First Class Luster Wright, of Cleveland, were sentenced to be hanged.

Yanks Tell Of Nazi Horror Marches

By J. W. Gallagher

A Prisoner-of-War Camp, Wefenbuttle, Germany, April 12 [AP—Delayed]—American soldiers freed by the Allied advance told today of numerous deaths among their fellow prisoners from freezing and sickness and of guards' cruelty during forced marches from eastern camps as the Germans fled before the Red Army.

The Americans were freed by the British 2d Armored Division. The Tommies gave the men—weeping with joy—eggs, cigarettes and field rations before resuming the pursuit of the enemy.

Horror Marches

Soldiers captured on various fronts told similar stories of horror marches during which frantic German guards beat and cursed them and left many to die when they dropped out in snow, rain and sleet.

In February, detachments of American and British prisoners were marched 600 miles from East Prussia. Scores froze or starved to death.

DAY

There were fifteen cases of diphtheria at the camp when the British liberated the Allied prisoners.

Marched Feb. 27 To April 5

Private Walker Mikesz, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., who was captured at the Rapido River in Italy at a time when the 36th Division was cut off, said he was treated fairly well at Danzig, but was poorly fed.

"On February 27 we were forced to march out," he said. "We marched every day until April 5. We got two pieces of bread daily and some slop that they called coffee.

"If a man was sick and fell out they beat him with rifle butts until he got up again. If he couldn't get up they put him in a car for a day and if he couldn't march the next day he was left behind."

40 Arrive, 5 Die

"What became of those left behind, I don't know," Mikesz said. "Forty of us reached this camp and five died the day after getting here."

Corporal James Garvin, of Illinois, of the 9th Armored Division, captured in the Ardennes Forest, told of losing 75 pounds through illness during the march.

"I was so weak from dysentery I couldn't walk," he related. "One morning I stayed in a barn after the others left. A guard came in, beat me with a stick and cursed me."

Slept In Snow And Rain

Private Anthony Amati, of Donora, Pa., reported: "We slept in the open in the snow and rain. I am the only one of my group of 25 to reach here. I don't know where the rest are."

Amati was captured in Tunisia in February, 1943, when the Germans broke through the Kasserine Pass.

2 Yank Soldiers On Road To Berlin Play Cupid To A German Girl And A French 'Slave'

APR 15 1945

Schlotheim, Germany (AP)—Two American soldiers on the road to Berlin halted long enough to play cupid by arranging a marriage between a French slave laborer and a German girl.

"They stopped us as we were rolling through town and asked us if we would please help them get married," said Sergt. Gerald E. Herrnstadt, of New York city.

The Frenchman was Jacques Rousseau, 24, of Ligneville, France. He wanted to marry a German girl—she was named Erna Gindler and was 22 years old—because she had brought him food for the last four years while he was compelled to do forced labor.

Good-Looking Girl

"It was really a love match—and she was a real good-looking girl, slim and blond. We told them that we would do what we could for them."

The Frenchman explained that they had tried repeatedly to get married, but that the burgomeister had refused to sanction the ceremony because such marriages were frowned upon by the Nazi party.

Finally, the local Nazi party bigwig agreed to let them marry. He granted his permission in a letter which stipulated:

"If a German woman sinks so low as to marry a Frenchman, the Frenchman must prove he is worthy of her by serving in the German armed forces."

Girl Protested

But the German girl, called "swine of French" by her neighbors, refused to let her lover enter a German SS (Elite Guard) unit.

"If you do I won't marry you," she stated firmly.

That was the status of the case when the American Army arrived on the scene.

"Let's go to a priest," said Herrnstadt and Lieut. Richard E. Artschwagnern, who lives in a village near Santa Cruz, New Mexico.

The priest agreed to perform the ceremony, although the girl was a Protestant, and married the couple at once.

Afterward, the happy couple took a handsome radio liberated from an overrun Nazi party office as a wedding gift.

For their honeymoon they moved right in the burgomeister's apartment. The burgomeister seemed very glad to do anything to oblige them.

BRITISH FORCE ITALIAN RIVER

8th Army Breaks Out Of Bridgeheads In 4-Mile Gain

Rome, April 14 (AP)—British 8th Army forces, breaking out of their bridgeheads across the Santerno River, have advanced 4 miles and forced a crossing of the Sillaro River, about 22 miles east of Bologna despite bitter German resistance, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

A late headquarter's report said the Germans were making every effort to eliminate Allied bridgeheads over the Sillaro.

Other 8th Army forces to the south moving forward against light and scattered German resistance rammed into the outskirts of Imola, junction city on the Bologna-Rimini highway 20 miles southeast of Bologna.

Yanks Take Strongpoints

Ten miles south of Bologna, American troops of the 5th Army captured San Ansano, Castelnuova and Barchetta. All three towns have been strongpoints of German resistance all winter, but the Yanks entered them today with little or no trouble.

San Ansano and Castelnuova were taken without a shot being fired, and Barchetta fell after a short skirmish, giving the Yanks holdings on the west bank of the Savena River.

NIGHT

The Sillaro was reached on a 3-mile front astride the Massa Lombarda-Medicina highway. Conselice, 4½ miles north of Massa Lombarda, was cleared and Chiesanova, just west of Conselice, was taken after the Conselice Canal had been bridged.

Other Allied forces pushed along Highway 16 beyond Santerno.

Amphibious Landings Made

Eighth Army amphibious landings on the southwest shore of Lake Commancchio yesterday against very strong enemy opposition were reported. The landings cut the Porto Maggione road in two places about 4 miles from Menate. The Germans counterattacked bitterly, reports said, but so far the positions had been held.

In the west American troops drove within 11 miles of the naval base of La Spezia.

United States 5th Army troops moving against light opposition captured La Pizza, a 3,000-foot peak 3 miles north of captured Carrara and also took near-by Castel Poggio.

Troops of the 92d Division pushed into the outskirts of Avenza, on the coast 3 miles southwest of Carrara, headquarters said.

Allied headquarters disclosed that the famed marble center of Carrara had been cleared of the Germans and collaborating Fascists troops by the town's Partisan warriors, mostly young boys and girls, who swarmed out of caves in the marble quarries before the American troops arrived.

Allies In Outskirts Of Imola In Italy

Rome, April 14 (AP)—Eighth Army troops have driven into the outskirts of Imola, Po Valley highway center less than 20 miles east of Bologna, Allied headquarters announced today.

A communiqué said the advance along the Bologna-Rimini highway was made against light and scattered German resistance, but that heavy fighting continued farther north in the bridgehead across the Santerno River.

Stronghold Taken

Polish troops pushing directly along the highway yesterday had been reported less than 4 miles from Imola, while Italian troops had captured the Nazi stronghold of Tossignano, 7 miles southeast of Imola.

Grim resistance from Nazi tanks and anti-tank guns impeded the progress on the right wing of the fresh Po Valley offensive. Nevertheless, the Santerno River was crossed in that area and 8th Army units were within 2 miles of the road intersection town of Bastia, adjacent to Argenta on the main route toward Ferrara.

Bridgehead Widened

Ever heavier fighting was in progress west and northwest of captured Massa Lombarda where the original bridgehead over the Santerno was being widened and deepened.

At the other end of the Italian front American 5th Army troops moved farther north along the coast against light enemy resistance. They took Lapizza, 3,000-foot peak northwest of the newly occupied village of Castelpoggio, and reached the outskirts of Avenza.

RAF heavy bombers, meanwhile, attacked enemy concentrations northwest of the 8th Army's advancing columns last night after British and American planes had given all-day support over the battle zone. Fourteen planes were lost.

Rivalry Reported

An army report said intense rivalry existed between various Italian Partisan groups in the newly captured marble industry center of Carrara, but that they had united against the Nazis in a loose confederation known as the Garibaldi brigade.

The Partisans, a large proportion of whom are boys and girls, disrupted German communications and then ambushed and shot up enemy groups as they fell back past Carrara before the American attack. Many Partisans had lived secluded in quarries since Italy's surrender in September, 1943.

Couple From America Blessed By Pope Pius

Vatican City, April 14 (AP)—Pope Pius XII granted a private audience to an American couple today and imparted a special blessing following their marriage in the Blessed Sacrament Chapel of St. Peter's.

FRANCO GRANTS PARTIAL AMNESTY

Madrid, April 14 (A. P.)—The Franco regime today proclaimed an end to the period of repression that followed the civil war and invited Spanish Republicans abroad to apply for return.

The announcement was a frank bid for the support of a majority of the Allies. It was by no means a general amnesty offer, for the Government reserved to itself the right to make decisions on applications for re-entry to Spain, and there was no indication that persons arrested since the civil war for opposition to the regime would be freed.

It was, however, a promise of freedom for the political prisoners, possibly 60,000, still held in Spanish jails as an aftermath of the struggle.

In Mexico City Felix Gordon Ordaz, last Spanish Republican Ambassador to Mexico, said many of the problems connected with restoration of the Spanish Republic will be settled at the coming San Francisco conference.

Two Russians Disagree On German Punishment

Moscow, April 14 (AP)—The Communist party's propaganda chief said today the German Nazis were baring their Western front to the Soviet's allies and concentrating forces on the Eastern front as a gigantic political trick designed to create dissension among the nations warring on Hitler.

"They are trying to create distrust among the United Nations—to postpone at least temporarily the last mortal blow of the Allied armies," said Georgif Alexandrov, chief of the propaganda section of the central committee of the Communist party.

Some Not Nazis

At the same time Alexandrov said Germans and Nazis are not identical. He took issue with one of the Soviet's top writers, who had contended that all Germans form one "colossal gang" and that all must pay equally for Nazi crimes.

Referring to an article earlier this week by Ilya Ehrenburg on the whole subject of Germany, Alexandrov said in a prominently displayed story in the Communist party newspaper Pravda:

"Each person who reads attentively Comrade Ehrenburg's article cannot but note its basic thesis is not well thought out and is visibly erroneous.

Not "One Big Gang"

"The reader cannot agree with his description of Germany as one single 'colossal gang,' nor with his explanation of the reasons for the departure of the German Fascist Army from the Western front and concentration of all forces of the German Army in the East.

"Comrade Ehrenburg assures the readers that all Germans are identical and all in equal measure will answer for the crimes of the Hitlerites."

Alexandrov said it was not difficult to prove that the assertions of Ehrenburg, who writes for both Pravda and Red Star, did not correspond with the facts. His commentary defining the Soviet view in respect to the German population and the Nazi rulers of Germany was of the highest importance.

Germans Different

"Currently," Alexandrov said, "everyone is convinced, and this especially is true in view of the experiences of the last few months, that different Germans fight differently and conduct themselves differently."

Declaring that this was true not only of the civilian population but also of the German Army, he added: "It is not surprising that if some German officers fight for the cannibal system, then others throw bombs at Hitler and his clique or persuade Germans to put down their guns."

Alexandrov declared that Premier Marshal Stalin foresaw long ago what was now happening in the German Army and among the German people.

Won't Exterminate People

"If it is admitted that Ehrenburg's stand is correct," Alexandrov went on, "then it follows one must assume that all the population of Germany will share the fate of Hitler's clique. In the given case Ehrenburg does not express Soviet public opinion.

"The Red Army, fulfilling its great liberative mission, is waging war for the liquidation of Hitler's army. The Soviet Government never has and does not have as its aim the extermination of the German people.

"This would be stupid and unthinkable.

Rulers Unlike People

"The Soviet people have never considered as one and the same the German population and the criminal Nazi clique ruling Germany."

Alexandrov said Ehrenburg correctly condemned the bloody work of the Germans in Russia, "but regrettably, from unarguable facts, Ehrenburg draws erroneous conclusions.

"Noting that 'impudent Germans conduct themselves with Americans as with some neutral power,' Ehrenburg says tough resistance of the Germans on the Soviet-German front was caused by fright and fear in view of the coming payoff for their cruelties committed on Soviet soil."

Alexandrov asked what plan Germany was following in carrying out a transfer of troops to the Eastern front from the west.

Caused By Fear?

"Can such action be explained by fear of the German command for responsibility for bloody crimes committed on Soviet territory?" he wrote. "The Hitlerites are trying by their action to create distrust in the United Nations camp, to bring about dissension among the Allies, to postpone if only temporarily the last mortal blows of the Allied armies and, by the help of provocative military-political tricks, to save that which they failed to achieve with the help of the armed forces."

The propaganda chief added that "the unfounded conclusions and deductions of Comrade Ehrenburg confuse the question and, of course, do not help expose the provocative politics of the Hitlerites directed toward dissension among the Allies."

REDS FIND VIENNA A CITY OF HUNGER

APR 15 1945

Moscow, April 14 (A. P.)—Vienna is a hungry town, a war correspondent's dispatch to the newspaper Izvestia from the liberated Austrian capital said today. Russian correspondents gave this picture of Vienna:

Tens of thousands of foreign workers were found. The Germans did not even give them the 150 grams of bread daily which they fed the Viennese population. While Vienna was not too badly damaged, the Germans set fire to the gas plant as well as to numerous other buildings. A wing of the Parliament building burned. Smoke from these fires hung over the city for two days.

The Viennese are getting the capital back in order again, sweeping tons of glass from the streets, repairing snapped trolley and telephone wires and reopening stores, some well-stocked. The flag of Austria flies over the City Hall.

The Russians found 1,200 wounded soldiers whom the fleeing Germans had abandoned.

Russian cooks commenced feeding the population even before the city was completely freed. Long lines of thin women and children flocked to the Red Army kitchens while guns roared not far away.

Two of Vienna's famous bridges were saved and the electric power station was captured intact.

The Russians found a group of Austrian Patriots in a ministry building battling against the Germans. They wore red and white arm bands.

35,000 Captives of Nazis Forced to March 8 Days

Poles Report Incomparable Torture of 'Doomed People'

MOSCOW, April 14 (AP).—The Polish press agency said today that Nazis herding captives from the path of the Russian drive westward in one case had inflicted an eight-day forced march on prisoners in groups of 1,200, a "march of doomed people with which nothing can be compared in human history."

More than 35,000 persons, most of them Polish, were living in a concentration camp at Stutthof, east of Danzig, the statement said. As the Russians advanced, the prisoners were marched westward at a pace of almost twenty miles a day. Dogs and rifle butts were used to keep them moving.

Some too weak to walk were reported shot. Many died of starvation, exposure and torture, the statement said, adding that the prisoners finally were quartered in open fields near Lauenburg, in Pomerania, for five weeks.

Hurley Expected in Moscow

MOSCOW, April 14 (AP).—Major General Patrick J. Hurley, American Ambassador to China, is expected to arrive in Moscow today or tomorrow for conferences with Ambassador W. Averell Harriman. Hurley is on his way back to Chungking from the United States. Harriman plans to go to Washington soon for a brief visit, but does not expect to attend the San Francisco world security conference.

Tokyo Reports 3 Palaces Were Fired by B-29s

Asserts Meiji Shrine Was Destroyed in 400-Plane Blow; Emperor Is Safe

GUAM, April 15 (Sunday) (AP).—Major General Curtis E. LeMay said after yesterday's raid on Tokyo by B-29s of the 21st Bomber Command, which he headed, that destruction of Japan's industry by air blows alone was possible, but, he added, "we would have to have many more B-29s than we do at present."

The raids, however, already have hit enemy plane plants hard, with a consequent sapping of Japanese ability to resist in the air, he said.

Yesterday's raid, made in "very great strength," probably included as many as 400 Superfortresses.

An imperial communique said fires were started in "buildings within the Imperial Palace, the Omiya Palace and the Asaha detached palace," and the Tokyo radio declared, "The enemy carried out such an atrocious action in an attempt to conceal his disappointment over the death of President Roosevelt."

Tokyo quoted Premier Kantaro Suzuki as assuring the Japanese people that their imperial majesties, the Emperor, Empress and Empress Dowager, are absolutely safe and sound and that no damage was incurred by the three sanctuaries within the Imperial Palace." Suzuki personally apologized to the Emperor for the bombings.

The Japanese communique also said that "the main building and sanctuary of the grand Meiji Shrine were burned to ashes." This is one of Japan's major Shinto shrines.

The Japanese Cabinet, Tokyo said, met in emergency session Saturday afternoon to hear reports on the raid and discuss plans to cope with the situation.

Crew members of the B-29s reported they left great fires in the five-mile-square area of arsenals and large and small industries northwest of the Imperial Palace grounds.

Twentieth Air Force headquarters in Washington announced six planes were missing from the raid. Returning crews told of seeing Japanese jet-propelled fighters flash through their formations like balls of fire, the first encountered in the Pacific war.

A Japanese communique claimed forty-one raiding planes were shot down and eighty damaged after "wantonly" bombing the city.

The bombers went without the Iwo Jima-based Mustang fighters, which accompanied the last two daylight missions by B-29s against Japan. General LeMay, in his talk yesterday, said that the use of fighter planes from Iwo Jima as air cover for the B-29s was for a particular purpose which military security forbids disclosing. Their two missions have proved they fulfill the purpose, he said.

Imperial Palace Fired In Raid, Japs Say

San Francisco, April 14 (AP)—Fires were started in the Imperial Palace and Japan's revered Meiji Shrine destroyed in today's Superfortress raid on Tokyo, Japanese headquarters said in a broadcast recorded here.

All fires were extinguished by 6 A.M., the communiqué said. It claimed 41 of the 170 raiders were shot down and 30 others damaged.

The communiqué said bombs were dropped wantonly on the city and fires started in "buildings within the Imperial Palace, the Omiya Palace and the Asaha detached palace, but were soon extinguished. The main building and sanctuary of the grand Meiji Shrine were burned to ashes."

Suzuki Apologizes

Radio Tokyo reported that Premier Baron Admiral Kantaro Suzuki called at the imperial palace and Omiya palace, residence of the Empress Dowager, and paid his respects to their majesties. Later "he worshipped at (the site of the) Meiji shrine, expressing an apology."

"It is apparent," the broadcast said, "the enemy carried out such an atrocious action in an attempt to conceal his disappointment over the death of President Roosevelt."

The Tokyo radio said the Japanese were indignant over "the enemy's defilement of the imperial palace" and other imperial shrines.

Emperor Reported Safe

The dispatch, recorded by the Associated Press, quoted Premier Suzuki as assuring the Japanese that "their imperial majesties the Emperor, Empress and Empress Dowager are absolutely safe and sound and that no damage was incurred by the three sanctuaries within the imperial palace."

"The Japanese people renew their pledge to crush the barbaric enemy because of irrestible indignation over the enemy's defilement of the imperial palace, Lyima palace and the detached Palace of Akasaka, as well as the Meiji Shrine, by enemy indiscriminate bombing," the broadcast quoted Premier Suzuki.

Suicide Raids Reported

Another imperial communiqué asserted Nipponese suicide planes continuing the attack on American shipping around Okinawa, 325 miles south of Japan, had destroyed or damaged twelve more vessels. A cruiser, one transport and five unidentified craft were listed as sunk.

A more candid report by Tokyo domestic radio admitted the Okinawa battle "seems to be changing for the worse."

Blasts In Tokyo Attack Heard 100 Miles

Guam, April 14 (AP)—The greatest B-29 raiding force yet struck the arsenal area of Tokyo early today with fire bombs, causing explosions which pilots said were heard more than 100 miles away.

Explosive blasts bounced the 60-ton Superfortresses as much as one mile upward through the air, pilots said. Crewmen unanimously agreed it was "a very successful raid."

The Japanese met the raiders with jet-propelled fighters which B-29 crewmen said flashed across the sky like great balls of fire.

Six Planes Missing

[At Washington, the 20th Air Force reported that six aircraft were missing in the Tokyo attack. The communiqué did not specify whether they were bombers or escorting fighters.]

Tokyo radio said the B-29's had been given a "hot reception." An imperial communiqué said that 41 planes were shot down and 80 damaged.

Beginning at 12.30 A.M. Japan time (11.30 A.M. Friday, E.W.T.) the sky giants from Marianas bases poured thousands of tons of incendiaries on the choicest targets thus far attacked in the enemy capital — a five-mile-square area containing arsenals, chemical plants and explosives factories.

400 Planes Indicated

It was the fifteenth Superfort raid on Tokyo. The raiding force was officially described as of "very great strength," which probably meant as many as 400 planes. The largest previous B-29 assault on the enemy capital, March 10, involved probably 300 planes.

Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Power, of Fort Worth, Texas, who cruised over the city nearly two hours after the raid, said it looked as if "the boys did a good job, but I wouldn't want to estimate the damage until we see the photographs."

Fires Rage For Hours

Tokyo Radio reported fires continued to rage several hours after the assault, but said the first of the conflagrations was brought under control by dawn. Superfort crews said some of the smoke columns rose higher than their planes which went over the city at 5,000 to 7,000 feet.

The target area, 6 miles north of the Imperial Palace, has a population of 30,000 or more persons to the square mile and includes the famous Itabashi arsenal. On its fringes are countless home industries doing piecework for war.

Plane Plant Wrecked

While today's raid was under way, 21st Bomber Command headquarters reported reconnaissance photos of the April 7 Superfort raid on Nagoya showed virtually complete destruction of the great Mitsubishi aircraft plant there.

The plant had been hit several times previously. Pictures taken after the April 7 assault indicated all major assembly buildings and machine shops of the plant had been either destroyed or heavily damaged. Of 140 buildings in the area only 24 showed no visible damage.

LE MAY ASKS MORE B-29'S

Air Blows Alone Can Destroy Jap Industry, He Says

Guam, Sunday, April 15 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Le May declared after Saturday's greatest raid on Tokyo by B-29's of his 21st Bomber Command that destruction of Japan's industry by air blows alone was possible.

"But we would have to have many more B-29's than we do at present," he added. The "very great strength" of Superfortresses which hit the Japanese capital with fire bombs shortly after midnight yesterday probably numbered as many as 400.

Crew members reported they left great fires in the 5-mile square area of arsenals and large and small industries northwest of the Imperial Palace grounds. They heard explosions when 100 miles from the blazing city.

The Japanese Cabinet, Tokyo radio said, met in emergency session Saturday afternoon to hear reports on the raid and discuss plans to cope with the situation.

Six Planes Missing

A Japanese communiqué said fires were started in three palaces and that "the main building and sanctuary of the Meiji Shrine were burned to ashes."

This was without American confirmation as also was the Japanese claim that 41 of the raiding bombers were shot down.

Washington 20th Air Force headquarters announced six planes were missing from the raid. Returning crews told of seeing Japanese jet-propelled fighters flash through their formations like balls of fire.

The bombers went without the Iwo Jima-based Mustang fighters which accompanied the first two daylight missions by B-29's against Japan.

Apologizes To Emperor

Tokyo radio quoted Premier Kantaro Suzuki as assuring the Japanese people that "their Imperial majesties, the Emperor, Empress and Empress Dowager, are absolutely safe and sound and that no damage was incurred by the three sanctuaries within the Imperial Palace." Suzuki personally apologized to the Emperor for the bombings.

The Imperial communiqué claimed fires were started in "buildings within the Imperial Palace, the Omiya Palace and the Asaha Detached Palace."

Tokyo radio declared "the enemy carried out such an atrocious action in an attempt to conceal his disappointment over the death of President Roosevelt."

It was the fifteenth B-29 attack on Tokyo and the second in 38 hours.

'Friday, 13th', Ends Happily

Guam, April 14 (AP)—It was a real Friday the thirteenth yesterday for a landing-craft support ship off Okinawa, but it had a happy ending.

Three suicide planes crashed into her during a heavy air attack in the afternoon. She received an eight-foot hole in her side which extended below the water line.

Her lower compartments were flooded and some of her guns were put out of action. The water system in the galley went out of operation and all living quarters became uninhabitable.

Then things changed.

When the fourth Japanese plane came over, the little ship shot it down. Then she proceeded to anchorage under her own power.

She gets credit for four planes.

Captain Honored For Clearing Dispatches

Guam, April 14 (AP)—Capt. Harold B. Miller was awarded a Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit Medal today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz for work which "enabled representatives of the world press and through them the American people being supplied news of the Pacific war and of their Navy with maximum speed and in great volume."

"Captain Miller has thus made a material and meritorious contribution to fulfillment of this basic tenet of American naval policy," the citation said.

Miller, as public-relations officer, from September 9, 1944, to April 12, 1945, established public-relations facilities in forward areas.

"This task was accomplished with outstanding efficiency resulting in moving of unprecedented volume of news material in record time resulting from the assault and capture of Iwo Island and positions in the Ryukyu Islands," the citation added.

First Marines on Isthmus

GUAM, Sunday, April 15 (AP)—The Sixth Marine Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd Jr., was attacking Japanese troops on the Motobu Peninsula.

The First Marine Division, under Maj. Gen. Pedro A. del Valle, pushed northward along Ishikawa Isthmus to capture the towns of Momobaru and Arakawa.

MARINES NEARING TIP OF OKINAWA

96th Infantry Division Halts Small Jap Counterattack

Guam, Sunday, April 15 (AP)—The 1st Marine Division advanced to within 10 miles of the northern tip of Okinawa—just 325 miles south of Japan—Saturday while the 96th Army Infantry Division was beating off a small but desperate Japanese counterattack on the southern front.

The 6th Marine Division, meanwhile, virtually completed occupation of Motobu Peninsula.

The leathernecks' push gave the United States control of the central two thirds of Okinawa. Their sweep northward from the landing beaches near Katena has been island-wide.

Nine Jap Planes Down

On the south, frontlines remained virtually unchanged, extending across the strategic Ryukyus Island from 4 miles north of Naha on the west coast to Yonabaru on the east. Aside from the quickly repelled Japanese counterattack, action in the south was chiefly an artillery duel.

After two days of desperate, fanatical Japanese aerial attacks on both the amphibious task forces lying off Okinawa and against American-held airfields on the island, the enemy sent only a few aircraft against Yank forces yesterday.

Nine were shot down, bringing the three-day toll of Nipponese warcraft destroyed in and near the Ryukyu islands to more than 265.

No Damage To U.S. Ships

The attack was defeated, apparently without any damage to United States ships.

Some 350 miles to the south small groups of Japanese planes attacked the British Pacific task force. Three Nipponese planes were destroyed. United States Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported in today's communiqué that none of the British ships were damaged.

The British, meanwhile, sent their carrier aircraft to raid airfields and installations at Matsuyama and Shinchiku on Formosa Friday. A number of aircraft were damaged on the ground and fires were started in barracks. A railway bridge, a train and other targets were heavily damaged.

Two Towns Captured

The following day, American carrier aircraft resumed where the British had left off a few days earlier, bombing Ichi Ishigaki and Miyako Islands in the Sakishima group, southernmost of the Ryukyus. Seven Japanese aircraft were destroyed on the ground and 25 damaged.

The British had hit Formosa airfields on Thursday.

The 6th Marine Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., was attacking small concentrations of Japanese troops which were virtually bottled up on Motobu Peninsula.

The 1st Marine Division, under Maj. Gen. Pedro A. Del Valle, pushed northward along Ishikawa Isthmus to capture the towns of Momobaru on the west coast and Arakawa on the eastern shore—only 10 miles from the northern tip of Okinawa.

Field Artillery Used

Resistance was negligible in the Marine sectors.

On the southern "Little Siegfried" front, Nimitz said, the enemy's small counterattack "was immediately beaten off" by elements of Maj. Gen. James L. (Smilin' Jim) Bradley's 96th Infantry Division.

Enemy positions along the southern front again were shelled by field artillery and ships' guns and were bombed and strafed by both carrier and land-based planes. The latter are operating from Katena and Yontan airfields, only a few miles north of the bitter ground fighting.

Hiding Places Disclosed

The heavy artillery duel, most intense and longest of the Pacific war, continued into its twelfth day with Yank guns slowly but deliberately knocking out the enemy's pieces as their hiding places in caves and rugged hills were disclosed.

Tokyo radio broadcast an imperial communiqué claiming without confirmation that twelve more American vessels had been sunk or damaged by Japanese "special attack" or suicide planes.

But Nimitz has said the suicide flyers obtain small results for their efforts, having sunk only destroyer or small craft and failing utterly to sink any fast carriers, battleships or cruisers.

Okinawa Force Repels Furious Counterblow

Guam, April 14 (AP)—The 24th Army Corps—backed by heavy guns of the Army, Navy and Marines—hurled back a furious pre-dawn Japanese counterattack on Okinawa Friday and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Continuing their desperate suicidal air assaults on Admiral Raymond A. Spruance's 5th Fleet screening Okinawa on Wednesday and Thursday, the Japanese lost more than 100 additional planes for a total of more than 218 planes on the two days. Lesser actions off the Ryukyus brought the two-day total to more than 256.

Corps Fails To Gain

Attesting to the fury of the ground fighting in southern Okinawa, Maj. Gen. John R. Hodge's 24th Army Corps failed to gain ground for the eighth straight day.

Over this contested area, the Pacific war's heaviest artillery duel went into its eleventh day. It was in this sector that the Japanese counterattack, involving a battalion, probably 500 men, was hurled back.

In the north, 3d Amphibious Corps' Marines continued their steady advance on both Motobu Peninsula and Ishikawa Isthmus. Resistance, reported Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger's headquarters, was "sporadic and ineffective."

Carrier Force's Score

Nimitz disclosed that in the 26 days from March 18 through April 12 Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's fast carrier force pilots destroyed 1,277 planes, an average of more than 49 planes daily. Of this number, 841 were destroyed by carrier pilots in air combat, 73 by ships' gunfire and 363 on the ground.

British carrier-borne planes destroyed 16 planes in the Formosa area and 1 on the ground and damaged 5 others, bringing their total in the Northern Pacific to 64 destroyed and 17 damaged in three weeks.

Army, navy and marine patrol, bomber and fighter planes hit ships and targets from the Bonins to the Carolines and east to the bypassed Marshalls.

Pilot Lack Plagues Jap Air Force

By James Strebig

Okinawa, Ryukyu Islands, Apr. 14 (AP)—Japanese air power may be suffering from the same malady which plagued the German air force—strangulation of the pilot supply.

Enemy aircraft shot down in the Okinawa operation, 325 miles south of Japan, in general appear to be of excellent quality, materials and workmanship. The numbers in which they have been made available for destruction by American carrier-based planes and anti-aircraft fire indicated sizable resources.

But the manner in which they have been employed causes eyebrow-raising among tactical experts.

Fuel A Likely Problem

Japan appears to be lacking properly trained personnel to fly planes.

The most likely reason for Japan's deficiency is the lack of aircraft fuel, which was the major difficulty in Germany's program. It may also be that Japan simply lost pilots faster than she could replace them. And now with the war in her front yard, doesn't have time for an adequate training program.

DAY

The enemy hasn't enjoyed the opportunity of live target practice as the Americans have in bypassed islands. When the enemy comes in to fight it meets the first line, whereas the United States has been able to condition younger flyers with practice runs on Japanese-held areas left behind in the sweep toward Nippon.

Holding-Back Theory

Considering other tactics, it is possible the Japanese command is holding back much top-flight personnel against the day when the war enters Nippon's parlor. This doesn't make much sense, but neither does the Japanese failure to use her best—if there is any—when the war is still beyond the front gate.

JAP TOLL ON GUAM 18,500 SINCE D DAY

Washington, April 14 (A. P.).—Nearly 18,500 Japanese have been killed on Guam since D day last July 21, Major-Gen. Henry L. Larsen, Marine commanding officer of the island, reported today. Only one day has passed since the Marines retook the island without at least one Japanese being killed, he said. Latest previous official reports had placed enemy killed on the island at about 15,000.

Gen. Larsen told a news conference that there was no way to estimate the number of Japanese remaining on the island, but that he was positive no support was coming in for them.

Japanese now being accounted for, he said, were very largely military personnel, though there were a few civilians.

Gen. Larsen is here for staff conferences.

Jap Suicide Plane Missed Flagship

Okinawa, April 13 [AP—Delayed]—It can now be disclosed that a Japanese suicide plane crashed in the water only 200 yards from the amphibious flagship of Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner while he and Lieut. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, Jr., 10th Army commander, watched from the bridge.

The plane narrowly missed several small boats, but did no damage. Like a great majority of suicide planes it missed all targets.

A hospital ship nearly was struck the same day as a Kamikaze swooped in, maintaining a long, steady dive at the white-painted ship. As the Kamikaze struck the water a bright sheet of flame flicked out, almost reaching the ship.

How Destroyer Sank

Elaborating on the destroyer announced sunk in yesterday's communiqué, it was said at headquarters the ship had shot down a single-engine Japanese fighter, then was attacked simultaneously by two Zeros flying wing to wing. One of these was shot down but the other's bomb sank the ship.

Navy in Pacific Joyful At 'News' of Armistice

False Report Moves Sailors and Flyers to Celebrate

OKINAWA, April 14 (AP).—The men aboard American warships in the western Pacific and even carrier-plane pilots far out over the ocean celebrated a false European armistice report today. It took several hours for the bubble to burst.

DAY

The excitement was traced to a garbled news message regarding reduced German resistance. Warships, catching phrases of the report, sent queries crackling back and forth. Radio units ashore misinterpreted the queries and repeated them as facts. A battleship picked up one of the shore reports and radioed it happily to ships in general.

Within a few minutes some vessels, including two large ships, announced over loudspeaker systems that German resistance had ended. Some of the carriers even sent the information to pilots in flight and their joyful responses came singing back over fleet networks.

Several hours later the rumor was discredited.

ISLES SEIZED OFF LEGASPI

Sea Approaches Are Secured. Yanks Close In On Baguio

Manila, Sunday, April 15 (AP)—American infantrymen seized Batan and Rapuropu islands off Legaspi, important harbor on southeastern Luzon, quickly eliminating the Japanese garrisons, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today.

The landings, made Friday, secured the sea approaches to Legaspi, which is in American hands.

Doughboys of the 1st Army Corps, meanwhile, closed in on Baguio, Philippine summer capital, in the Benguet Mountains of northwestern Luzon, as bombers and fighters blasted the way with 540 tons of explosives, one of the heaviest concentrated bombings of the Pacific war.

NIGHT

Six Freighters Wrecked

Baguio, bitterly defended, has been a prime ground target since the Yanks first invaded Luzon on January 9. A Japanese military headquarters is believed located there.

Bombers patrolling the China Sea area wrecked six small freighters, and raked rail installations in Indo-China. Formosa's west cost was another target.

Patrol bombers scored near misses on a 10,000-ton tanker and an escorting vessel off Borneo. A small freighter was hit in Borneo's Brunei Bay and shipyards at Sandakan were bombed.

Japs Burned Out

Davao, on Mindanao's east coast, was severely pounded by Liberators.

The Japanese garrison at Fort Drum on tiny El Fraile Island at the mouth of Manila Bay has been burned out by a United States 38th Division assault unit at the cost of three men slightly wounded, 5,000 gallons of gasoline mixture and a demolition charge.

Australians Active

The Yanks stormed the concrete decks of the battleship-shaped fort south of Corregidor Friday, and when the 25 to 50 Japanese in the bastion refused to surrender, poured gasoline into this structure and set it afire.

Melbourne Radio said Australians, with bayonet work and automatic-weapon fire, overcame all organized Japanese resistance in the But-Dagua area of northern Guinea.

On Bougainville Island, in the Solomons, 2,343 Japanese dead have been counted since November, when Australians took over from the Americans and started operations to clear the island, Melbourne reported.

Yanks Burn Out Foe In Manila Bay Fort

APR 15 1945

Manila, April 14 (AP)—Thirty-eighth Division Yanks stormed battleship-like Fort Drum on El Fraile Island in Manila harbor yesterday and burned out a Japanese garrison which had been maintaining a radio signal station.

Using a specially constructed ram which rattled down from the superstructure of a landing ship, the troops got aboard a concrete deck ashore with a minimum exposure to sniper fire from portholes in the wall.

Gas Poured Into It

Once atop the deck of the fort, which maintained two former battleship turrets as gun positions, the Yanks challenged the enemy to surrender.

On repeated refusal, they poured 5,000 gallons of a gasoline mixture down vents and set a 600-pound demolition charge before withdrawing. The subsequent blast sent fire shooting from every porthole in the "stationary battleship" which lies across the bay from Corregidor.

Thinks None Survived

Col. Robert H. Soule, assistant division commander, who led the assault, said there was no chance of survival of the estimated 25 to 50 Japanese.

Major Paul R. Lemasters, of Shelbyville, Ind., battalion commander, said the attack was so well executed that the only casualties were three soldiers who suffered superficial wounds from snipers as the landing craft drew near Fort Drum.

South Luzon Japs Pushed Back

Manila, April 14 (AP)—Isolated Japanese in Bicol peninsula of southern Luzon are compressed into an area about half the length of the peninsula as a result of advances Thursday of the 158th Regimental Combat Team and elements of the 11th Airborne Division.

Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider's 158th, which landed Easter at Legaspi, advanced 12 miles from Camalig, capturing road junctions at Guiobatan and Ligao and sweeping on to Oas, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in today's communiqué. Opposition was light.

11th Airborne Gains

In the north, the 11th Airborne Division reached Mulay, on the northern end of the peninsula.

The swift retreat of Japanese in southern Luzon was not matched in the northern sector where the 25th Division pushed painfully ahead against stubborn, holed-up Japanese.

The 33d Division, driving on the Philippine summer capital of Baguio, captured Mount Calugon, less than 4 miles from the city limits, and Asin town, 3 miles from Baguio.

Bombers continued pounding vital Cagayan Valley, hitting Bagabag and Tuao effectively.

Mop Up On Bohol

On newly invaded Bohol Island, the American division continued to mop up the Japanese against slight opposition and reported the island under control.

Bombers of the 13th Air Force smashed hard at Japanese positions at Davao and around Cotabato on Mindanao while 5th Air Force and Navy bombers attacked sugar refineries, rail centers and dock areas on Formosa in a succession of raids from April 10-12.

Navy search planes sank a 1,000-ton freighter transport and fired a small freighter and damaged two others off Swatow in the China Sea. Land-based bombers struck a railway terminal near Nanking.

JAPS ORDERED TO KILL CRUELLY

Manila, April 14 (A. P.).—Gen. MacArthur's headquarters reported today that a Japanese document captured by troops of the Fourteenth corp in Batangas province on March 27 read:

"Kill American troops cruelly. Do not kill them with one stroke. Shoot guerrillas. All who oppose the Emperor, even women and children, will be killed."

Headquarters said the document was part of battle instructions to Japanese troops from the ground commander of the Juji group and was dated March 8, 1945.

PERIL HALTED AT CHUNGKING

Strategic Town Of Siangyang Is Under Direct Assault

Chungking, April 14 (AP)—Chinese troops attacking in a general counteroffensive in southwest Honan and northern Hupeh provinces have frustrated enemy threats to Shensi province and to Chungking itself and have placed the big, strategic highway town of Siangyang under direct assault, the high command announced tonight.

Advancing in Hupeh southward from the area of Laohokow, recaptured former United States airbase city, the Chinese won a 24-hour battle for dominating heights 7½ miles from Siangyang, which is on the Han River, 30 miles southeast of Laohokow.

Japs Open New Drive

Other enemy strong points were assaulted both in Honan and Hupeh, and "a large number" of Japanese were killed, the high command said.

Japanese, meanwhile, launched a new attack in the area west of Hengyang in Hunan province, far to the south of the new counteroffensive. Three enemy columns struck out from their Paoching stronghold guarding the west flank of their Indo-China corridor, possibly paving the way for a drive on the advanced United States 14th Air Force base at Chinkiang in western Hunan.

14th Air Force Helps

One of these columns, for which reinforcements had been moved up, was hurled back, and the two others were engaged in a severe battle 18 miles west of Paoching, the Chinese said.

The United States 14th Air Force gave strong support to the resurgent Chinese in their Honan-Hupeh drive, lashing at columns of Japanese and enemy strong points in the areas around Laohokow. They also hit rail yards, convoys and other targets over a wide area in Honan, Hupeh and Hunan provinces.

The Chinese attacked at several points north of Sinyang, another highway town, 100 miles north of Hankow.

Chinese Offensive Ends Jap Threat

Chungking, April 14 (A. P.).—The Chinese High Command said today that Japanese threats to Shensi province and to Chungking itself had been frustrated by the newly launched Chinese general counter-offensive in Honan and Hupeh provinces. Resurgent Chinese in southwestern Honan hammered against stubborn enemy resistance, reaching the southern suburbs of Sichwan, a highway town thirty-seven miles east of the Shensi border and fifty-three north of the recaptured former United States air base at Laohokow.

Other Chinese in Hupeh battled toward Singyang, strategic Han River town thirty miles southeast of Laohokow, placing it under direct assault after a successful 24-hour battle for heights seven and a half miles to the west.

RUSH TO RED BORDER

Chungking, April 14 (A. P.).—The Japanese are speeding mechanized forces from the Shanghai area to positions they occupied originally in Manuchuria as a result of Moscow's denunciation of the Russo-Japanese neutrality act, a Chinese army spokesman declared last night.

British Troops Make Central Burma Gains

Calcutta, April 14 (AP)—British 14th Army troops have entered Hlaingdet, 8 miles east of Thazi on the main road to the east from central Burma, Allied headquarters announced today.

In the area of Kyaukpadaung, 34 miles south of the Irrawaddy river bridgehead at Pakokku, other Allied troops and armor "continue to make satisfactory progress," the communique said.

Allied headquarters announced a number of enemy coastal vessels were sunk and shore installations on Great Coco Island were bombarded recently by units of the East Indies fleet.

San Francisco, April 14 (AP)—Tokyo Radio said today 200 British carrier planes raided northern Formosa yesterday for the second successive day while fighter-escorted American bombers from the Philippines struck central and southern areas.

The broadcast, recorded here, said the British carriers were cooperating with an American task force which was active nearby.

Honduras Routs Exile Invasion

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, April 14 (AP)—Honduran exiles living in Guatemala invaded the border town of Copan and were chased out by Government troops after a fight, according to reports received here tonight. Suggests Allies Enter Berlin Simultaneously

'Army-Navy Journal' Favors Expression of Unity

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP).—The "Army and Navy Journal" said today that the question "which national force shall first enter Berlin or whether contingents shall occupy the enemy capital simultaneously, is intriguing military minds in Washington."

"There may be competition on this matter on the part of the commanders of several co-ordinated campaigns, but there is none between the governments," said the unofficial service publication, adding that the governments were "anxious to finish the job as speedily as possible."

"Whichever army arrives at the city will be hailed for its achievement," he said. "It is acknowledged that it would be expressive of the unity which has existed between the Big Four, if France be included, should the commanders agree, when Berlin is invested, for troops representing each of them to participate in the final assault."

The "Journal" said that Berlin "will be districted between the four powers, and thus any clashes between its occupying troops will be avoided."

CATHOLICS SEE FUTURE CLASH

Bishops Cite Democracy And Marxian Idea

APR 15 1945

Washington, April 14 (AP)—A committee of Catholic bishops today said "two strong essentially incompatible ways of life will divide the loyalties of men and nations in the political world of tomorrow. They are genuine democracy and Marxian totalitarianism."

The statement was part of a pronouncement on international affairs taking sharp issue with some of the plans for world peace organizations. It was prepared prior to the death of President Roosevelt.

Democracy's Foundation

The group, consisting of the archbishops and bishops constituting the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, said:

"Democracy is built on respect for the dignity of the human person with its God-given inviolable rights. . . . however, we have to reckon with the active, cleverly organized and directed opposition of Marxian totalitarianism to genuine democracy. This system herds the masses under dictatorial leadership, insults their intelligence with its propoganda and controlled press, and tyranically violates innate human rights."

Must Be On Guard

"Against it," the bishops added, "genuine democracy must constantly be on guard. . . ."

The bishops said a "sound world organization is not a utopian dream. With honest good will in all the victors, it will be realized."

But if any nation refuses the organization full support or insists on vitiating its charter by radically changing it, then, the bishops asserted, a martial victory may be "largely nullified by sheer political expediency."

Other points touched upon by the bishops:

"We fail to see that the voting procedure in the security council agreed upon at Yalta is consistent with the sovereign equality of peace-loving nations recognized as basic in the Dumbarton Oaks proposals. . . .

"The nations should adopt an internation bill of rights, in which men and groups everywhere would be guaranteed the full enjoyment of their human rights.

"The peace of the world demands a free and independent Poland."

ASKS AMENDMENT OF OAKS FORMULA

Bushfield Wants Declaring Of War Left Up To Congress

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Senator Bushfield (R., S.D.) proposed today that the American delegation attempt to write into a projected world security formula guarantees that Congress will decide when this country is to take up arms against an aggressor.

Bushfield wrote Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Secretary of State, that "a prolonged contest" might be avoided in the Senate if the American representatives to the United Nations conference will insist upon such an amendment to the Dumbarton Oaks formula.

The Bushfield proposal, forerunner of similar suggestions expected to be made in the Senate when a peace-keeping treaty is considered there, also was submitted to the delegates.

Resuming Meetings Tomorrow

This country's group of eight, headed by Stettinius, will resume Monday the preconference policy-making meetings which were interrupted by President Roosevelt's death.

Informed by President Truman that they must shoulder full responsibility for American decisions at the San Francisco meeting, members said the delegation probably will seek an appointment with the new Chief Executive to inform him of their progress before they leave.

Noting that ratification of the Dumbarton Oaks formula was to be accomplished by this and other countries "in accordance with their constitutional processes," Bushfield told Stettinius it is his opinion that Congress cannot delegate the power to declare war.

How It Could Be Done

Bushfield said he thought it would be possible to insert in the proposed San Francisco charter a statement similar to that which the Senate approved overwhelmingly in adopting in 1943 the Connally resolution.

This resolution, written by Chairman Connally (D., Texas) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, pledged this country "acting through its constitutional processes" to join with other nations to establish an international organization "with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

The South Dakota Senator said he was led to believe that the State Department desired "a broad delegation of power to the President or to the American delegate to the security council, whereby he or the delegate could act without reference of the matter to Congress when it became necessary to send armed force into foreign countries to carry out the aims of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals."

RUSSIANS REBUFF HATE INSTIGATOR

Disowning Ideas Seen Aiding Allied Understanding

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

Washington, April 14 (AP)—The Soviet disavowal of ideas of Ilya Ehrenburg, Russia's leading wartime pamphleteer, constituted a significant political and diplomatic step today. It is likely to contribute to Allied understanding.

Ehrenburg, chief instigator of the Russian hate campaign against the Germans during the war, also has been the Soviet Union's severest critic of the Allies. He was one of its most strident publicists in his demands for a "second front."

Words Carry Weight

The disavowal came from his Communist Party superior, Georgif Alexandrov, head of the propaganda section of the central committee, who denounced Ehrenburg's favorite theme that all Germans were war criminals and equally liable to punishment.

Alexandrov, who writes rarely but whose words carry tremendous weight in Russia, said even more significantly:

"The unfounded conclusion and deductions of Comrade Ehrenburg confuse the question and of course do not help expose the provocative politics of the Hitlerites, directed toward dissension among the Allies."

Cut In Following Likely

Alexandrov's article in the Communist party newspaper, Pravda, dealt Ehrenburg his first public rebuff since the start of the war. It is likely to reduce the wide following his writings had won in numerous Russian newspapers and magazines.

Publication of Alexandrov's views was particularly important because of the apparently imminent junction of Allied and Russian military forces in Europe, and the impending problem of close cooperation between them.

Ehrenburg has been a frequent source of irritation to the Allied diplomatic corps in Moscow, not only by his writings but also by his spoken views, which have included criticism of America as the most "racist" country in the world.

Why U.S. Demands Tightening Of Belts To Send Food Abroad

APR 15 1945

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Recent tightening of civilian food supplies has led many to ask why Americans should tighten their belts to send a "lot of food" abroad.

They have asked, too, why Americans feed enemy prisoners of war better than the enemy feeds captured Allied soldiers.

Answers to these and similar queries are to be found in the basic principle of the Government's wartime food program. This is that American food must be used to help win the war under internationally accepted rules and to found a durable peace.

Military Strategy Cited

Examine foreign shipments, starting with lend-lease.

The Government believes it to be good military strategy for this country to send supplies to Great Britain and Russia. These countries have not produced enough to keep their armies fighting.

Hence, the Government believes, our suplies have kept British and Russian soldiers fighting and the military burden on American fighting men has been lessened.

Examine next the policy of foreign relief feeding. This program promises to overshadow all other phases of the wartime food program. It may cause this country many heartaches and disappointments.

The Government has three main reasons for providing relief:

1. Food has been promised.

2. Food must be sent for humantarian reasons.

3. The United States must help for reasons of self-interest.

Cornerstone Of Program

The promise of food relief was made one of the cornerstones of the American wartime food program. Conquered peoples were told that liberating armies would appease their hunger.

This promise had its military aspect. It was designed to keep the spirit of resistance and to encourage sabotage of the enemy.

Supplying of food for humanitarian reasons was emphasized recently by President Roosevelt in a statement calling for further belt tightening at home.

Officials believe Europe will need vast quantities of food and farm implements during the next twelve to eighteen months if starvation is to be prevented.

In peacetime the Continent does not produce enough to feed itself. It normally imports between ten and twenty per cent of its food materials.

Deficiency Greater Now

That deficiency is much greater now. Some experts believe it will take Europe two or three years to get back to prewar production.

Supplying food for reasons of self-interest is in the opinion of many the most important.

Officials realize that people with empty stomachs don't tend to be wise or even-tempered. They are not likely to build durable political institutions or to plan soundly for the future.

Could Endanger Future

Thus a European continent seething with chaos and hunger could endanger the future of this country.

Further, officials believe failure of this country to divide its food with the overseas hungry could do much to turn such people against this country.

Officials explain still further that diseases, epidemics and plagues often follow in the wake of hunger. Such diseases could easily spread to our soldiers of occupation and even to this country.

Ready To Provide Relief

The Government is set to provide relief. The only question is our ability to help. Because of a world wide shortage of most foods and because of heavier military requirements, that ability may not be sufficient to prevent suffering next winter.

Now turn to the feeding of prisoners of war. The Geneva Convention requires that prisoners be fed rations equal in quantity and quality to the rations of our own troops in base camps.

Permit Substitution

This does not mean that prisoners must be supplied with steaks

if our troops are fed steaks. The rules permit substitution for scarce items. Prisoners get less red meat than our soldiers, but more fish. They get margarine instead of butter.

The Government feels that this country is not justified in putting prisoners on starvation diets just because the enemy does. To do so, officials explain, would be to reduce this country to the level of the enemy as a treaty breaker.

YUGOSLAVS TAKE RAB

New York, April 14 (A. P.).—The island of Rab, in the Adriatic sea off the northwest coast of Yugoslavia, has been captured by Yugoslav troops and naval units, a Yugoslav broadcast communique said today.

The announcement, reported by the FCC, said that the entire enemy garrison in the town of Rab had been annihilated.

China To Get Truck Bases

Detroit, April 14 (AP) — The Chrysler Export Corporation of Detroit announced today with War Department approval that it will establish a network of truck repair and maintenance bases in Free China and along the new Ledo and old Burma roads.

The project is to be financed by the Foreign Economic Administration and is part of a program announced by Leo T. Crowley, FEA administrator, to speed up the movement of lend-lease materials to the Chinese Government.

To Use 600 Technicians

Plans for the network include a repair and supply headquarters employing 600 technicians and mechanics for complete reconstruction of truck assemblies, and fourteen stations for overhauling, replacement of parts and miscellaneous repairs.

C. B. Thomas, president of Chrysler Export, said the corporation was seeking to enroll service engineers and technical experts, as well as mechanics, from all parts of the United States for the project. The American staffs will be augmented by more than 3,000 Chinese.

Trucks Sent To China

Many specially constructed heavy duty trucks already have been shipped to China from the Dodge truck plant here, and thousands more will be shipped in the ensuing months, Thomas said.

"When the entire Dodge fleet is in operation on the all-land route," he said, "an estimated 140,000 tons can be hauled each month."

SUBS SINK SHIP A DAY

Portland, Ore., April 14 (A. P.).—American submarines have sunk an enemy ship in the Pacific for every day of the war since Pearl Harbor, Rear Admiral Ralph W. Christie announced.

The Navy officer, who for thirty-three months commanded the submarine fleet in the Southwest Pacific, said the subs have consigned the Japanese merchantman to that part of the ocean which is rightfully his, the bottom.

Admiral Christie, now commandant of the Puget Sound Navy Yard, told business men here yesterday that the submarine fleet has one standing order: "Find 'em, chase 'em, sink 'em."

New York, April 14 (AP)—The American broadcasting station Europe, quoting a Soviet bro cast, said tonight that Viennese patrols had executed Baldur von Schirach, Hitler youth leader and Gauleiter of Austria.

THE PATH TO A DIRECT ASSAULT ON LEIPZIG'S GREAT ACK-ACK DEFENSES, CONTAINING SOME OF THE MOST POWERFUL ANTIAIRCRAFT GUNS IN EUROPE, WAS OPENED WITH THE CLEARING OF WEISSENFELS AFTER 48 HOURS OF SAVAGE CLOSE-RANGE FIGHTING.

OKINAWA, RYUKYU ISLANDS, APRIL 14-(AP)-A LARGE PROPORTION OF JAPANESE SUICIDE PLANES ARE SHOT DOWN BY SHIP'S GUNS AS THEY MAKE THEIR SUICIDAL DIVES. MANY OTHERS MISS THE TARGET ALTOGETHER BECAUSE THE PILOTS ARE KILLED OR BLINDED BY ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE.

SUICIDE PLANES ARE COMPARATIVELY EASY TARGETS FOR AMERICAN PILOTS BECAUSE MANY OF THEM ARE OBSOLESCENT TYPES AND MANY ARE FLOWN BY COMPLETELY INEXPERIENCED AIRMEN.

ENS. PAUL R. BAUMGARTNER, (50 LAWRENCE AVE.) DETROIT, MICH., A WILDCAT PILOT ABOARD AN ESCORT CARRIER, COMMENTED "THE JAPANESE COME IN SO INTENT ON HITTING THE SHIPS THAT THEY PAY SCARCELY ANY ATTENTION TO US.

"WE WERE FLYING COMBAT PATROL--NAVY WILDCATS AND MARINE CORSAIRS--WHEN WE JUMPED TWO SUICIDE-BOUND TOJOS," BAUMGARTNER SAID. (A TOJO IS A SINGLE-ENGINED JAPANESE FIGHTER.)

TRUMAN, DIGNITARIES OF GOVERNMENT ATTEND CEREMONIES AT ESTATE

Interment Takes Place In Flower Garden As Volley Of Farewell Salutes Is Fired And Bombers Drone Overhead

APR 16 1945

Hyde Park, N.Y., April 15 (AP)—As President Truman looked on, Franklin D. Roosevelt was committed today to the warm brown earth of his native land.

Under a cloudless spring sky, the body of the late Chief Executive was lowered solemnly into a grave in the flower garden of his family estate.

Watching were members of the family, dignitaries of Government and little groups of plain people— the employés on the place and neighbors from the countryside.

A detail of gray-clad cadets from the United States Military Academy at West Point fired a volley of three farewell salutes. A bugler played "Taps."

Flag Given Mrs. Roosevelt

Soldiers, sailors and Marines, who had held an American flag over the casket, folded it and handed it to Mrs. Roosevelt.

A few steps to the rear stood President Truman.

Franklin D. Roosevelt had left his task unfinished, but he had blazed for his successor the paths he believed would lead most surely to swift victory at arms, and to a world of peace and plenty.

The garden where Mr. Roosevelt rests lies between the family home where he was born 63 years ago and the library which houses his state papers and the gifts of a world which recognized him as one of its pre-eminent leaders.

Body Brought From Capital

The body had been brought here overnight from Washington, where a state funeral was held yesterday in the East Room of the White House.

The Cabinet, Supreme Court, representatives of other lands, members of the Senate and House, and other high officials in public life accompanied it.

Removed from a special train alongside the Hudson, just below the hills which sweep up to the estate, the casket was placed on a caisson and driven slowly along between lines of men in uniform standing stiffly alert to honor their late Commander in Chief.

Behind the caisson, a Negro cavalryman led a black horse draped in black, carrying saber and boots, symbolic of Mr. Roosevelt's position as head of the nation's military forces.

Presidential Salute Fired

It was exactly 10 A.M. when the first gun of a presidential salute was fired from a battery in the library grounds to the east of the quarter-acre garden. The guns boomed at solemnly spaced intervals.

An honor guard lining the hemlock hedge around the garden stood at attention.

A few moments later, the distant melody of a bugle came to those within the garden. A flight of bombers and another of training planes droned overhead.

The beat of muffled drums in slow cadence rolled through the wooded hills above the Hudson. In the distance, gradually drawing nearer, a band played a funeral dirge.

Promptly at 10.30 the national anthem sounded and, as the wheels of the caisson noisily ground the gravel of the roadway, the notes of "Nearer, My God, To Thee" were played softly.

Rector Appears

Through a passageway at one corner, the elderly, grey-bearded rector of the President's Episcopal Church at Hyde Park walked across the newly clipped grass toward the grave.

The Rev. George W. Anthony was wearing the black and white surplice and stole of the clergy. He removed a black velvet skullcap and took his position at the head of the grave, toward the west. The family followed him.

Facing the grave was Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, the second son, on the left.

Mrs. Roosevelt, her face wan and drawn, its pallor contrasting with her black attire, was on Elliott's right. Next to her was the only daughter, Anna, and her husband, Colonel John Boettiger.

Truman's Stand In Rear

Behind them were the daughters-in-law—wives of the boys who all are in service. Behind them stood President and Mrs. Truman, taking an inconspicuous role in a moment in history reserved for the dead, rather than for the living.

"All that the Father giveth me shall come to me," the Rev. Mr. Anthony said.

A lone plane circling above almost drowned his words as he declared that unto Almighty God "we commit his body to the ground; earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust."

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," the rector intoned.

"Lord, have mercy upon us. Christ, have mercy upon us. Lord, have mercy upon us."

The pastor repeated the words of the Lord's Prayer. Elliott's lips moved with him.

The services followed the ordinary Episcopal burial rites for the dead. There were no words of eulogy, only the word of God.

Near its conclusion the Rev. Mr. Anthony recited the poem written by John Ellerton in 1870: "Now the laborer's task is o'er; now the battle day is past."

"Father, in Thy gracious keeping we now leave Thy servant sleeping," the rector continued.

The services were brief. They were over by 10.45.

Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the family walked out slowly, and went to the manor house.

President and Mrs. Truman, Mrs. Roosevelt and Washington officials left Hyde Park by special train for Washington, little more than three hours after they arrived here.

With a crew of assistants, he rasped some of the rough edges off the speech as he rode back to the capital by special train.

It is an address which the entire world is awaiting eagerly for indications of the course he will chart for winning the war and guaranteeing peace. He has promised to carry on where President Roosevelt left off, and no wide deviation of policy is expected.

Byrnes Aids on Speech

James F. Byrnes, who resigned but a few days ago as War Mobilizator and Reconversion director, was one of Mr. Truman's principal advisers on the speech. Whether that augured a return of the former Senator and Supreme court justice to a position high in government was not yet apparent.

The address will be made before a joint session of Senate and House about 1 p.m. (EWT) tomorrow.

George Allen, former District of Columbia commissioner and insurance executive, whipped together the first draft from suggestions made by various individuals.

"He pulled the suggestions together and did the spade work," one of Truman's assistants said.

Lunches in Private Car

The President finished lunch as his train was being serviced in the Mott Haven railroad yards at New York city. Seated around the table in the private railroad car, the Roald Amundsen, were Mrs. Truman, their daughter, Byrnes, Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan and Mrs. Hannegan, Democratic Treasurer Ed Pauley, and Col. Harry Vaughn.

Vaughn served in the same brigade with Truman in the last war and was his secretary before reentering service in this conflict. Now he is Truman's military aide.

A bouquet of spring flowers was in the center of the dining table.

After lunch, Truman returned to the parlor of the private car and conferred with Allen. Mrs. Roosevelt came in a few minutes later with her son, Elliott, and sat down with the President on a settee. Elliott sat in a chair facing them.

Mrs. Truman joined them shortly and they talked at length.

Ritual Conducted Without Eulogy; Mrs. Roosevelt Returns to Washington.

Soldiers, sailors and Marines, who had held an American flag over the casket, folded it and handed it to Mrs. Roosevelt.

A few steps to the rear, President Truman stood with dim eyes and lowered head. There was a hush. Then, in that moment of supreme grief, he squared his shoulders as if to assume completely and finally the enormous burden left by the death of Mr. Roosevelt.

Franklin D. Roosevelt had left his task unfinished, but he had blazed for his successor the paths he believed would lead most surely to swift victory at arms, and to a world of peace and plenty.

The services were brief. They were over by 10:45. The flag which Mrs. Roosevelt clutched tightly was handed to Elliott, and the family filed out.

President Truman left for the village station in Hyde Park, followed by the other dignitaries present, to return to Washington on the special train.

Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the family walked out slowly, and went to the manor house.

Several onlookers reached earthward to pick up a few souvenirs, including some empty shells dropped from the saluting cadet rifles.

Members of the Cabinet, Supreme court and Senate and House then filed through the tall hemlock hedge opening, each taking a final glance at the flower-banked graveside.

President and Mrs. Truman, Mrs. Roosevelt and Washington officials left Hyde Park by special train for Washington, little more than three hours after they arrived here.

Memorial Service Held

The Rev. Mr. Anthony went to the tiny Church of St. James, where the President had been senior warden. There 300 sorrowing villagers paid tribute to their neighbor at a memorial service.

The church was crowded. Men and women knelt in the aisles. But one pew was empty—the one in which Mr. Roosevelt used to sit.

All about the old ivy-covered church were memories. There was his pew; there the grave-yard where his mother and father lie beside a son of the President who died in infancy; there the stained-glass window dedicated to the memory of James Roosevelt, the President's father.

Many shed tears as they sang the words of one of his favorite hymns: "O Master, help me bear the strain of toil, the fret of care."

Others wept when the congregation stood in tribute to the flag and sang the national anthem.

The Rev. Mr. Anthony read from Mr. Roosevelt's favorite biblical passage: ". . . and now abideth faith, hope, and charity, but the greatest of these is charity."

"I know of no other man among the world's leaders who would be so universally lamented," the white-bearded minister said in his sermon, broadcast over NBC. "He is as truly a casualty of the war as any member of the armed forces. . . He was a great lover of mankind.

"Now he is at rest in the community which he loved.

"He has come back home."

Thousands Pay Tribute

A special train, rolling northward from Washington through the night, brought the late Chief Executive's body to Hyde Park. Thousands of plain people in the towns and cities through which it passed, stood for hours in the night to bid a reverent, sad farewell.

Aboard the train were the highest officials of a nation which Franklin Roosevelt had served through trying years of peace and war.

Shortly before 9 a.m. (E.W.T.), the train came to a stop beside the Hudson river. As a lad, Mr. Roosevelt had sailed its waters in summer and skimmed its ice in winter.

The casket, still covered by the flag it wore at state funeral services at the White House yesterday, was lifted from the rear car of the train by men in uniform. Slowly it was taken up the steep, twisting road leading from the river to the wooded slope at the rear of the Roosevelt estate.

Yearned to Return

Plaintively, Mr. Roosevelt had spoken many times of a yearning to return to the ancestral lands he loved. Every inch of that had been a delight to him. Every neighbor for miles he knew by first name.

But retirement to the life of a country squire had been denied him. He had died Thursday of a cerebral hemorrhage at his "other home," at Warm Springs, Ga.

Even as he accepted nomination for a third term in 1940, Mr. Roosevelt had declared it would have been his personal preference to leave public life. Again last year, in agreeing to run for a fourth term, he had voiced a longing to go back to Hyde Park as a private citizen.

He had seen war coming and then had watched it break in all its fury. If America felt it needed his services, he felt it his duty to give them.

The casket was borne to Washington's Union station late last night in a plain black hearse. Thousands of residents of a still stunned capital stood bare-headed along the route.

As it was placed aboard the train, an Army band played the National Anthem. And, as a guard of honor of four men from the armed forces took their places, the music of a well-loved hymn, "Rock of Ages," spread through the warm night.

Stiffly braced against the lurching of the train, the honor detail stood guard for two hours. Then four other men took over, for two more hours.

Blackout Is Over

The shades were up on every window at the rear of the train so the people could see in. This time, there was no blackout for security reasons.

At Poughkeepsie, seat of Mr. Roosevelt's home county, boy and girl scouts at salute lined the station platforms and men doffed their hats as the train rolled past.

Already waiting at Hyde Park was another special train that had brought members of Congress, other dignitaries and a large delegation of the press.

The wildflowers of Spring were blooming in the swampy lowlands along the river and a brook rippled quietly down the hillside as the casket was borne the half mile to the Roosevelt garden, between the family home and the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library.

A mound of flowers, truckloads of them, had been built to the north of the grave. There were offerings from everywhere — from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, from Cuba, from Bermuda—lilies, roses, carnations, and new blossoms of Spring.

Along the 15-foot hedge, 400 feet long and 200 feet wide, stood ranks of soldiers, sailors and marines.

Employes on the estate, friends from the village, and wives of military officers participating in the service stood in knots to the north of the grave.

They conversed in hushed tones. A tiny girl sobbed.

Prime Minister MacKenzie King of Canada, a Harvard classmate of Mr. Roosevelt, wore the only top hat among those inside the green-walled enclosure.

A delegation from the Senate and House filed in two by two at 9:30 a.m. and took its place on the west, alongside the members of the Supreme court and Cabinet.

The White House staff was on the east.

The burial plot itself was toward the southeast corner of the quarter-acre garden.

A chill was in the air in the early morning, but a bright sun in a cloudless sky soon warmed the early arrivals.

King Brings Wreath

MacKenzie King had brought with him a wreath. As the mourners gathered about the burial plot, awaiting the service, he carefully unwrapped the wreath, left his coat and hat with Secretary of State Stettinius and walked alone to the grave. He stood a moment, then quickly dropped the flowers at the grave-side and returned to stand with Stettinius and towering Bernard Baruch.

Three small boxes of earth from Haiti, Cuba and the Dominican Republic had been flown here yesterday to be placed on the grave by the consuls general of those good neighbor nations.

Robert Sherwood, the towering playwright and former OWI official who helped on so many presidental speeches, stood a head taller than any other spectator.

Roosevelt Memorial Services Held In Many Lands

New York, April 15 (AP)—Americans and friends of America paused today to pay tribute to Franklin D. Roosevelt in globe-memorial services.

As the President's body was laid to rest at his Hyde Park home, radio and cable brought across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans the story of how his death touched leaders and common people alike in all except the enemy lands.

Millions of Britons at their regular church services joined in prayers for the late President, while American service men and women in the British Isles held special services at every post and base. The empire's formal memorial will be held Tuesday at famous St. Paul's Cathedral.

At Notre Dame In Paris

A solemn mass for the President at Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris was attended by General de Gaulle and most of his Cabinet while a half dozen other religious services were held elsewhere in the French capital.

One of the most moving was that by the Paris Jewish colony at the Grand Synagogue of Paris, where many members of the congregation wept unashamedly over the death of the man they credit with playing a large part in their deliverance from four years of German rule.

Many churches in Ireland observed a one-minute period of silence in respect to Roosevelt's memory, and Derry Cathedral at Belfast was the scene of a special service.

Algiers, Athens, Jerusalem

An open square in Algiers was thronged for services in charge of American military men and attended by representatives of the French Government.

Greeks paid their tribute at a service in Athens Cathedral, attended by the Greek Regent, Archbishop Damaskinos, and other high officials.

Special services were held in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

A massed gathering of Indian civilians and British and American soldiers attended services in an open park at New Delhi.

Churches of Australia held special services, with ministers and laymen voicing tributes. Eight nations were officially represented at a special service at Sydney's largest Presbyterian church.

New Zealand churches also paid their tribute and that country will observe an official two minutes of silence at 11 A.M. tomorrow.

In Buenos Aires hundreds of Argentines and members of the North American community paid homage to Roosevelt at the George Washington Statue near the United States Embassy residence. On Tuesday, official religious services will be held in the Metropolitan Cathedral, with Argentine official representatives in attendance.

The Canadian capital of Ottawa paid tribute to the late President with services Saturday in the old Christ Church Cathedral. Among the mourning throng was Princess Alice, wife of the Governor General.

MRS. F. D. R. IS COMPOSED

Stands Immobile During Services For Husband

Hyde Park, N.Y., April 15 (AP)—Black-garbed Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife and coworker for more than 40 years and lifetime companion since their childhood together, stood strong and clear-eyed today throughout the burial rites for her husband.

Head bowed, face wan but uncovered beneath her widow's veil, she seemed immobile until volleys fired over the grave caused her to start involuntarily.

At the close of the services, the master sergeant heading the bearers folded and placed in Mrs. Roosevelt's hands the Stars And Stripes which had covered her husband's casket.

Smiles At Rector

The Rev. W. George W. Anthony, white-haired rector of St. James' Church, of which the President was senior warden, passed by Mrs. Roosevelt in the recessional. She smiled slightly at him and others who participated in the services.

She lost her look of sorrowful reverie, raised her head and moved forward to kiss Mrs. James R. Roosevelt, widow of the former President's half brother.

The former First Lady left the garden before the casket was lowered. With members of her family, President Truman, his family, and close friends she walked sturdily to the house.

Mrs. Roosevelt even found time to greet friends standing on the grounds. She told them she was glad they could come.

To Supervise Packing

Within half an hour she motored to Truman's special train to return to Washington to supervise removal of the President's and her belongings from the White House where they have accumulated for more than twelve years.

With her were the Roosevelt's only daughter and eldest child, Anna; the latter's husband, Lieut. Col. John Boettiger; the only son able to return from fighting for their country, Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt; his wife, and the wives of the other three sons, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and Mrs. John Roosevelt.

Before she boarded the train, Mrs. Roosevelt paused to thank personally each of the New York State troopers officiating during the occasion.

Widow Returns to Grave

HYDE PARK, N. Y., April 15 (AP)—In dry-eyed sorrow, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt returned to the family garden after the crowds departed today to look at the grave of her husband.

It was several minutes after the close of the burial service. She gazed at her husband's final resting place a minute or so, then turned and walked away.

In the great profusion of flowers at the grave was an offering from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

COL. ROOSEVELT ARRIVES TOO LATE

Reaches N. Y. After 10,000 Mile Flight from Manila to Find Funeral Over.

NEW YORK, April 15—(AP) Col. James Roosevelt of the Marine Corps, eldest son of Franklin D. Roosevelt, arrived at Floyd Bennett field today after a flight from Manila, but was an hour and a half too late to attend the burial of his father at Hyde Park.

He went directly from the airport to Pennsylvania station, arriving there in time to meet the presidential train aboard which his wife, mother and President and Mrs. Truman were returning to Washington.

Col. Roosevelt said weather conditions, especially head winds, delayed his 10,000-mile flight from the Philippines.

"I would have been here in time for father's funeral, had it not been for head winds," he said. "We left Manila when word of father's death was received and our flight took 60 hours."

Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, who flew to the United States from his post in Europe, was the only one of the late President's four sons at the funeral.

Col. Roosevelt said he would remain in Washington a week and then return to the Philippines where he is assistant chief of staff of a Marine Corps amphibious group.

"We still have to finish that job and we'll do it all right," he declared.

The last time he saw his father, he said, was at the late President's fourth inaugural ceremonies.

"Just a week ago," he recalled, "I received a cheerful letter from him in which he said he was looking forward to going to San Francisco for the international conference. Although the last time I saw him he appeared in high spirits I noticed a definite change in his looks. First there was a noticeable loss of weight. And he appeared too thin."

Fala Present At Burial Of Master At Hyde Park

Hyde Park, N.Y., April 15 (AP)—Fala, the little black scottie Franklin Roosevelt kept almost constantly at his side in his world travels in recent years, rolled on the grass just a few feet from his departed master as the committal service was read today.

He was held on a leash by Miss Margaret Suckley, the late President's cousin and worker in the Roosevelt library here.

Fala seemed to sense something was wrong, Arthur Prettyman, who was Mr. Roosevelt's valet, said. He became restless as the first volley from the West Point rifles was fired. He barked a little, but was soon quieted.

Exhibition Scheduled Of Roosevelt Papers

Hyde Park, N.Y., April 15 (AP)—A public exhibition of Franklin D. Roosevelt's papers bearing on his international war conferences will be held in the National Archives in Washington May 4.

Fred W. Shipman, director of the Roosevelt Library in the family estate here, said various documents were being collected for the display.

The exhibit had been planned for some time and Shipman said "we decided to go ahead with it since it will be even more significant since Mr. Roosevelt's passing."

ARTIST TALKS ON ROOSEVELT

Verbal Picture Given About His Last Moments

New York, April 15 (AP)—The Russian-born woman artist who was sketching Franklin D. Roosevelt when he was stricken fatally at Warm Springs, Ga., painted for the nation today a verbal picture of the late President's last living moments.

At her Locust Valley (Long Island) home to which she returned by automobile, Mme. Elizabeth Schoumatoff, a tall, dark-haired, brown-eyed woman, told newsmen that Mr. Roosevelt was seated at the fireplace in the little White House. In the room with him also were two cousins, Miss Laura Delano and Miss Margaret Suckley, and his secretary, William D. Hassett.

"The President was busily signing papers," Mme. Schoumatoff recalled. "There were papers stacked on the card table. The chairs were covered with papers as was a large sideboard. Then Mr. Hassett said: 'Don't mind me I'm just drying my laundry.' At that the President burst into laughter."

Tie Was Just Right

Hassett, she said, referred to the fact that the papers were spread around the room to allow the President's signature to dry.

"I had brought my easel with me for a life-size portrait," Mme. Schoumatoff continued. "I was getting set to start painting when I noticed the President had worn his red Harvard necktie. It was just right. He never looked better than when he greeted me. He had on a dark grey suit and the Harvard necktie was a perfect blend with his blue navy cape."

Mme. Schoumatoff said one of the cousins who had stepped out of the room then returned. Some conversation regarding the pose followed and then she began painting.

"The time was 12.30 P.M. When it was getting near 1 o'clock the butler came in and started to set the table for luncheon. Mr. Hassett had taken all his papers away. The President looked up from the papers he had been working so hard over and said to me:

"'We've got just about fifteen more minutes to work.'

Cousin Asks For Doctor

"With that he went back to work on the papers. He became so engrossed that he slipped slightly out of pose. His head went down a little but I didn't ask him to look up. He was extremely absorbed. Fifteen minutes had passed."

"I couldn't paint his face while he was out of pose so I was doing this and that, particularly making notes of the color and light on his face.

"Then he raised his left hand to his left temple, then to his forehead and his hand went back to the arm of the chair. Then slowly he lay back, reclined in the chair, slipped slightly to the left, with his head more to the left.

"Then the two cousins rushed to him just as the butler was coming into the room."

One of the cousins, she said, told her to ask a Secret Service man to call a doctor immediately.

Call For Mrs. Roosevelt

"I went out and did that," she continued. "I told him to get instantly a doctor because the President was not feeling well."

Mme. Schoumatoff said she did not again return to the room. About fifteen minutes later a doctor arrived, she related, and then someone telephoned Mrs. Roosevelt.

"Then I returned to my cottage. One of the cousins came in a few minutes and asked me to leave as they would need the cottage."

She said she called Nicholas Robbins, a New York photographer who had accompanied her to Warm Springs.

Death Report Stops Call

"He was at an inn at Warm Springs," she said. "In an hour we were off the property. I didn't know how seriously ill the President was and didn't know he was dead until I reached Macon, Ga.

"I had spoken to Miss Tully (Miss Grace Tully, the late President's private secretary) before leaving the property and intended to call her back. In Macon, I went into a telephone booth, dropped in the coin. But before I could get the number the operator asked me:

"'Did you hear, the President is dead?'"

She said she then got back into the car and started for Locust Valley.

Will Finish Portrait

Mme. Schoumatoff recalled that the President "looked remarkably well" shortly before he collapsed.

"The chair he was seated in was not a wheel chair, but a chair with leather arms and back—a rather high back so that when his head fell back in a faint it rested on the back of the chair," she said. "It was a beautiful day. The sun was coming in rather warm. It was a cheerful room."

She said she would work two more days to complete the unfinished portrait and expressed the hope that it would be hung in Mr. Roosevelt's library at Hyde Park.

Stassen Wants Roosevelt World Leader 'Emeritus'

APR 16 1945

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 15—Comdr. Harold Stassen suggested tonight that the late President Roosevelt be named "President Emeritus of the United Nations of the World."

Commander Stassen, a delegate to the forthcoming San Francisco Conference, spoke on a broadcast program of tribute over CBS.

"He was looking toward San Francisco in his last days," said Commander Stassen, a Republican who left the Governorship of Minnesota to become a navy officer.

"Now he will not be there to open that historic conference. But the impetus that he gave it will be felt. The ranks will close. The agreements will be reached. The framework will be erected. We may yet say—he is not really gone. And then we may well name Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in absentia, President Emeritus of the United Nations of the World."

Three Faiths Join in Tribute

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP)—Memories of Franklin D. Roosevelt as a neighbor for twelve years occupied the city's churchgoers at special services today. Hundreds of all creeds and stations in life prayed for the late President, and while the burial was being conducted at Hyde Park leaders of three faiths paid homage in Constitution Hall, a scant three blocks from the White House. The hall was filled for the memorial program led by the Rev. Edmund S. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, and Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, chaplain of the Senate and minister at the Foundry Methodist Church.

Campobello Islanders Hold Memorial Service

200 Crowd St. Anne's, Which Roosevelt Attended as Boy

WELCHPOOL, Campobello Island, N. B., April 15 (AP).—Campobello Islanders paid their last respects today to President Roosevelt in St. Anne's Episcopal Church, which he attended as a boy.

More than two hundred persons—more than a third of the current population—crowded the little church for a brief and simple memorial service.

In charge was the Rev. Raymond Smith, now rector at Trinity Church in St. Stephen, who was rector here when Mr. Roosevelt paid his last few visits to his family's summer estate.

The reverent congregation heard a eulogy based on the text "He has fought the good fight" and sang some of Mr. Roosevelt's favorite hymns, among them "Faith of Our Fathers" and "Eternal Father, Strong to Save."

St. Anne's is in the village of Welchpool. The Roosevelt summer home lies a mile away, overlooking Friar's Bay and the American shore.

President Roosevelt passed part of his childhood and youth on the island. He returned often and made several visits while President.

Hollywood Broadcasts Memorial to President

Stars of Screen and Radio in Two-Hour Program

HOLLYWOOD, April 15 (AP).—Stars of radio and screen joined tonight to pay tribute to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It was a tribute far removed from the usual program of Hollywood entertainment. Millions heard it over the National Broadcasting Company network, and hundreds sought admission to the studio. But there was no audience.

There were laugh makers on the two-hour program, Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor, Edgar Bergen, Ed Gardner, Fibber McGee and Mollie, Amos and Andy, Kay Kyser, all famous for their fun making. But there were no jokes.

There were dramatic stars, Ingrid Bergman, Bette Davis, Ronald Colman, James Cagney, Robert Young, Charles Laughton. But there were no dramatics and no applause.

There were songs by Bing Crosby, Deanna Durbin, John Charles Thomas, Shirley Ross and Ginny Simms. But there were no encores.

MANZANAR, Calif., April 15 (AP).—Three thousand persons of Japanese ancestry at this relocation center assembled today at a memorial service honoring Franklin D. Roosevelt. Buddhist, Protestant and Catholic clergymen participated in the service, attended by Issei, Nisei and Sansei—aliens, their American-citizen children and their grandchildren. The crowd included forty American Legionnaires of Japanese ancestry and a score of Nisei soldiers in United States uniforms of this war, here on furlough visiting their parents.

Mr. Roosevelt was eulogized in English and Japanese by Kaiycharu Anzai, unofficial mayor of Manzanar as head of the Block Managers' Association, which also sent a message of condolence to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Truman-Secret Service Tete-a-Tete Is About Due

His Independent Habits Are a New Worry for Agents

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP).—It won't be long before President Truman gets a good talking to by the Secret Service, experts in that line predicted today. And he, not being a man to worry folks unduly, will probably assent smilingly to their pleas for a little less moving about.

But until the new Chief Executive gets used to the constant companionship of the Secret Service, there may be some new gray hairs among those traditional guardians of the President. When Mr. Truman makes up his mind to go somewhere it take more than arguments to stop him. To Secret Service agents nothing is so disturbing as a President on the move.

Their responsibility for his safety requires elaborate precautions to guard him at all times. His every departure from the White House is a nerve-twisting crisis which lasts until his return.

"It's going to be tough for me," President Truman confided to a reporter shortly after his inauguration Thursday. "I can't get used to having whole swarms of people follow me wherever I go."

FULTON SLATED FOR TOP POSITION IN TRUMAN CIRCLE

WASHINGTON, April 15—(AP) A 230-pound, round-faced lawyer of only 36 years shaped up tonight as the likely top heavyweight of the Truman inner circle.

He is Hugh Alfred Fulton, Ohio-born New Yorker, whose intimates credit him with an abiding devotion to President Truman and a profound knowledge of the workings of government.

Fulton Glutton for Work

A behind-the-scenes operator, Fulton is a glutton for work with little appetite for the limelight.

Some say he eventually will be attorney general, if he wants that cabinet post.

He says he doesn't know what role the President has in mind for him.

Whatever may be his title, his job will be important, for Truman himself has often said he thinks Fulton had a brain "almost as big as his body."

This new "brain-truster" on the American political scene is as unremarkable in appearance as his career has been spectacular.

After a brilliant scholastic record at the University of Michigan, the Phi Beta Kappa Fulton established a name for himself early in his legal career as a special assistant to the attorney general.

He was in charge of the prosecution of Howard Hopkins in the celebrated government investigation of the Associated Gas & Electric company back in 1940.

He and Truman had never met until the heavily-built, slightly-shy young attorney walked into the former Senator's office one day in 1941 in response to a suggestion by Robert H. Jackson, now a Supreme Court justice and then attorney general.

Truman, attempting to organize his newly-created Senate War Investigating committee for an inquiry into camp construction and other defense activities, had asked Jackson to recommend a good man for counsel.

The $7,500 he could pay Fulton meant a sacrifice and Fulton hesitated.

Had Free Hand

"I want to give you a free hand," Truman told him. "I want this to be a real investigation. We don't want to whitewash anybody or smear anybody. I'll give you my full support for such an investigation if you will take the job."

The rest of the story is part of American history. Fulton set to work. His staff remembers that he would stay on the job until 11 o'clock at night and be back at his desk at 3 a.m., on many occasions.

Fulton presented an accumulating mass of evidence and the investigators, in unanimously-approved reports engineered by their chairman, condemned waste and mismanagement and suggested remedies. The committee's fame spread.

The Senate, with never even so much as a word of debate on the subject, started voting the committee $100,000 at a time.

Out of that investigation as much as any one thing, came a vice presidency for Truman, and with the passing of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the nation's highest office.

It is only natural for Truman, in shouldering the heavy new responsibilities, to turn to the smiling bespectacled, Fulton.

Even his best friends won't say that Fulton is an astute politician. The campaign speeches he helped Truman draft lacked the dash, and color that bring the cheers.

The political decisions ahead are a job for people like Bob Hannegan, Democratic national chairman and like Truman, a Missourian.

Fulton's assignment is likely to be in government. His background as a student in that field was expanded during his three and a half years as committee counsel during which he probed deep into the operations of every department.

SHIFTS LIKELY IN CABINET

Truman's Friends Look For Changes Within 2 Months

Washington, April 15 (AP)—President Truman is being urged by some of his closest advisers to make early and sweeping changes in the Roosevelt Cabinet.

Although Mr. Truman emotionally told the Cabinet members when he was sworn in last week he wanted them to stay on, most of his friends look for changes within the next two months.

This shakeup probably will extend down through the socalled Little Cabinet—Government officials who head agencies not of Cabinet rank. They have been among the sixteen or seventeen persons who used to gather regularly on the Fridays President Roosevelt was in town and wanted to see them.

Stettinius Likely To Go

Most Capitol Hill associates of Mr. Truman believe that soon after the San Francisco United Nations conference has concluded its work on an international organization, Edward R. Stettinius, Secretary of State, may move on to other fields.

There are persistent reports that the new President would like to have James F. Byrnes, his former Senate colleague, as his Secretary of State. That is perhaps the only Government office that would interest Byrnes, who resigned as war mobilizer shortly before Mr. Roosevelt's death.

Certainly Mr. Truman intends to lean heavily on Byrnes, who accompanied President Roosevelt to Yalta. The new President demonstrated that when he asked Byrnes to accompany him to Hyde Park on the Roosevelt funeral train and the return to Washington.

Took Lengthy Notes

Byrnes took along lengthy notes which he had taken at the Yalta conference of President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill. The shorthand notes had been transcribed in detail since he stepped out of official life in Washington.

Of the present Cabinet, Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, and James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, are sure to be asked to stay.

Forrestal and Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of Interior, were particular favorites of President Truman when he was a senator and there is no reason to believe his ideas about them have changed. The Senate War Investigating Committee which the new President headed generally credited the two with having done an outstanding job in the war effort..

Probably Up To Wallace

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce, probably will stay on if he desires. Mr. Truman often has told friends he did not feel Wallace received just treatment in the move that resulted in Mr. Truman's nomination for Vice President.

But the remainder of the Cabinet members in time may have to find something else to do.

If Mr. Truman follows the recommendations of his own former committee he will consolidate all labor activities under the Labor Department. Secretary Perkins, who reportedly tried to quit when the fourth term began, may not stay on long now.

The divided activities of the Agriculture Department also might be merged by the new President.

While Cabinet changes can wait, Mr. Truman has some unfilled appointments which will need early attention.

Among these is the job of Federal Loan Administrator. If the new President followed his own inclinations entirely, he might ask Jesse Jones to step back into that post. He also must fill the post of rural electrification administrator, a job for which the Senate turned down Aubrey Williams.

KURUSU PREDICTS DIFFICULTIES FOR NEW PRESIDENT

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15—(AP) The special Japanese diplomatic envoy who was in Washington on a "peace" mission when the Nipponese staged their sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, was quoted by the agency Domei today as predicting difficulties for President Harry S. Truman.

A Domei radio Tokyo broadcast quoted Saburo Kurusu, the diplomat as saying the new president "hasn't Roosevelt's ability to lead and control the American people and thereby will confront difficulties." Kurusu presumed that it is President Truman's determination "to fight Japan to the bitter end and we, too, will fight to the end."

Domei also said Japan's new premier, Adm. Baron Kantaro Suzuki had extended "profound sympathy" to the American people on the death of President Roosevelt.

The Premier told the people that the Emperor, his wife and the Empress Dowager were safe even though American bombs started fires in the Imperial palace and the Meiji Shrine in Saturday's raid on Tokyo by Superfortresses. The Japanese people were represented as indignant over "defilement" of the palace and the shrine and the Premier offered apologies to the throne and at the shrine of the late Emperor Meiji.

De Gaulle at Paris Mass

PARIS, April 15 (AP)—General de Gaulle and most of his Cabinet attended mass for the late President Roosevelt today at Notre Dame Cathedral.

The Garde Republicaine, lined up before the cathedral and presented arms as United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery arrived. The Ambassador also attended services at the American Episcopal Pro-Cathedral, where Dean Frederick Beekman officiated, and at the Grand Synagogue of Paris.

The synagogue service was one of the most moving, with many members of the Paris Jewish colony who spent four years under German occupation, weeping over the death of the President, whom they credit with playing a large part in their deliverance. Chief Rabbi Schwartz of France, Chief Rabbi Weiss of Paris and several American Jewish chaplains participated.

The military personnel of the Seine Base Section attended services in the great auditorium at Chaillot Palace at which prayers for Mr. Roosevelt and President Truman were said by Lieut. Col. Edward R. Carter, Army chaplain. The Scripture was read by Maj. Chester R. McLellan, chaplain.

3 Large Services in Rome

ROME, April 15 (AP)—Allied diplomats, church officials and fighting men of the United Nations joined today in memorial services for the late President Roosevelt.

Crown Prince Umberto, Premier Ivanoe Bonomi, Myron Taylor, the late President's personal representative at the Vatican, and United States Ambassador Alexander Kirk were among the dignitaries at evening services in the Catholic church of St. Susanna.

Earlier services attended by Crown Prince Umberto, Pietro Badoglio, former Premier, and Count Carlo Sforza were held at the American Episcopal church.

The ceremony at St. Susanna was celebrated by Msgr. Francis J. Brennan of Philadelphia, who was assisted by other American priests stationed in [illegible]. Ten Cardinals and repre[illegible]ives of the Vatican attended. Special prayers were offered for the American people and peace.

Outside a crowd including hundreds of American troops jammed San Bernardo Square and stood in reverent silence for forty-five minutes during the services.

Military personnel of all ranks attended an outdoor memorial service at Allied Air Force Headquarters.

Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander, commander of Allied forces in the Mediterranean; Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commander of United States Forces in the Middle East; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, and Air Marshal Sir Guy Garrod, RAF Commander in Chief in the Middle East, were among high ranking Allied officers at the outdoor service.

Russ Newspapers Laud Roosevelt

Moscow, April 15 (AP)—Russia's Communist party newspaper Pravda today urged that American and Soviet friendship "continue to flower as a genuinely majestic monument to the great President Roosevelt, who departed so untimely to his grave."

In tribute to the President, the newspaper declared "the Soviet people will never forget how much Franklin Roosevelt did to strengthen Soviet-American friendship."

The President, Pravda said, was "a genuine public crier for the organization of peace and security. The world will never forget the contribution made by him, this outstanding participant in the 'Big Three,' to the cause of the liberation of humanity from Hitlerite tyranny and the establishment of universal security."

The Russian Trade Union paper, Trud, had this to say:

"The Soviet people and the Red Army will never forget the help which the United States under Roosevelt's leadership rendered our country in its heroic struggle against the enemy."

High Soviet officials in Moscow realize what the loss of the President has meant to the United States, and the best opinion here is that they will keep the ship of international relations on an even course.

It can be stated on sound authority that the Russians are keenly interested in maintaining the status quo of Soviet-American relations.

Southern Germany dangled from the rest of the Reich by a slender thread. All north-south highways through Germany were cut, and the enemy fled south over Czechoslovakia's winding roads and railways for a stand to the death in the mountain fastnesses of Bavaria and Austria.

Approach Mountain Retreat

Already the outer bastions of this mountain retreat were falling before the southward charge of the U. S. Third and Seventh armies. The Third army was attempting to snap the thread by driving the last 13 miles to the border of Czechoslovakia.

APR 16 1945

A German broadcast said an American link-up with the Russians "is on the point of being realized" but field dispatches failed to confirm enemy reports that the Third army was storming the city of Chemnitz, 33 miles west of the Nazis' big east front base of Dresden.

The Fourth Armored division still was reported battling a few miles west of Chemnitz, although the Sixth Armored division crossed the Mulde river.

The U. S. First army closed up to the Mulde river on both sides of besieged and by-passed Leipzig after gains up to 18 miles.

Smash Toward Dresden

On the south, its Ninth Armored division reached the stream on a six-mile front close to the Third army's crossings and possibly 35 miles west of Dresden.

North of Leipzig, the Third Armored division reached the Mulde two miles southeast of Dessau, 54 miles southwest of Berlin, and was hurrying up tanks and troops on a broad front.

On the northern end of the front, the Canadian First army sealed off all Germans in western Holland with a 35-mile dash to the North sea, but the enemy held the British Second army in check on the approaches to the big ports of Bremen and Hamburg.

(The Luxembourg radio said entirely without other confirmation that the British had bolted northward from the Aller river bridgehead to a point 15 miles south of Hamburg, the Federal Communications commission reported.)

On the southern end of the front, the U. S. Seventh army unleashed a powerful onslaught that rolled within 15 miles of the Bavarian mountain stronghold of Nuernberg.

In the vanishing Ruhr pocket, the U. S. First army captured the industrial city of Wuppertal with a pre-war population of 398,000, cut the pocket into two segments by joining up with the U. S. Ninth army, then all but crushed the eastern segment.

On the almost-forgotten Atlantic coastal front, French troops were driving the last Germans from the mouth of the Gironde river to free the big port of Bordeaux.

Backed by American artillery and French naval units, the French Second Armored division drove into Royan, the main strong point on the east side of the Gironde estuary. (The American Broadcasting Station in Europe said Royan had been captured.)

Nazi Lines Stiffen

The German high command apparently decided to defend Berlin against the U. S. Ninth army at the cost of weakening the Russian front as enemy troops smashed the original Second Armored division bridgehead just south of Magdeburg.

Three divisions had been brought into the battle, one from the Eastern front and at least one from the Berlin garrison.

The Ninth's 84th infantry division was hurrying up to join the battle, traveling 32 miles to within six miles of the Elbe.

The loss of the Magdeburg bridgehead came after two of the German divisions struck Saturday at American infantry which had crossed the broad Elbe by boat. Heavy losses were inflicted on the Americans.

German tanks charged in against the Americans, who were without armored protection, and the massed antiaircraft guns of Berlin's outer defenses were swung down to ground level and turned on the crossing.

Magdeburg itself was under assault after a tremendous artillery and aerial bombardment and its fall seemed near. White flags flew from many of its buildings.

The push toward Berlin opened from the second bridgehead at Roy, 15 miles southeast of Magdeburg. Closest American forces to the capital are those on the Elbe's west bank northeast of Magdeburg and 45 miles west of Berlin.

Junction With Reds Near

A German broadcast declared that an American junction with the Russian armies "is on the point of being realized" with the U. S. Third army storming into the communications city of Chemnitz, 33 miles west of the enemy's big east front base of Dresden.

The U. S. First army hammered across the Mulde river north of Chemnitz and 35 miles west of Dresden. On its north flank it reached the Mulde near Dessau, close to its junction with the Elbe river 54 miles southwest of Berlin.

In the first setback since the Rhine was crossed, the U. S. Ninth army's Second Armored division yielded its Magdeburg bridgehead as the Berlin garrison sallied from the capital and attacked under cover of massed antiaircraft guns leveled and blasting away at the crossing.

Fifteen miles farther southeast, however, the Ninth army hurriedly built up its second bridgehead at Barby, 57 miles southwest of Berlin.

The 90th Infantry of the U. S. Third army battled five miles west of Hof, striving to cover the last 13 miles to the Czech border, cut Germany in half and leave only the circuitous roads of Czechoslovakia open for a German retreat to the Bavarian and Austrian Alps.

Already the last good road between north and south Germany was severed, and the 11th Armored division captured the Wagnerian festival city of Bayreuth, first large locality to fall in the American drive into the mountain fortress of Bavaria.

Two German divisions hit the Second Armored infantry yesterday [illegible]

The old "Hell on Wheels" division, which cracked the German front wide open with a dash from the Rhine to the Elbe, had its bridge damaged four times by German guns, and was unable to send tanks over to support the infantry, which had crossed in boats 48 hours previously.

Doughboys of the Second Armored division's 41st regiment and the 30th division fought two days without sleep and with little food before coming back across the Elbe with heavy casualties.

While a setback, it is but a drop in the bucket in the whole Western front picture.

Nazi Lines Stiffen in Effort To Defend Berlin to the Last

By WES GALLAGHER

AT THE ELBE RIVER, April 15—(AP) The U. S. Ninth army fought its most furious battle in more than two months on the east bank of the Elbe today as the German High command declared its intention of fighting for Berlin to the last, even at the expense of the Russian front.

A combination of German tenacity and long lines of communications has caused a gamble to go wrong and the slow movement of the Ninth Tactical air force to forward air fields resulted in a sharp setback late yesterday.

Yanks Give Setback

For the first time in its brilliant record of two and a half years of war, the Second Armored division had to give up territory to the enemy when it was forced to withdraw its bridgehead from the east bank of the Elbe river just south of Magdeburg.

The Germans pitched in precious divisions against the Second Armored, because it represented the most dangerous threat to Berlin.

But the 83rd infantry crossed with little opposition and there was no indication the Germans can parry other Ninth army thrusts or those of the U. S. First army to the south. The 83rd has deepened its bridgehead to four miles.

The Germans simply have not shown any indication of having the manpower to erect any sort of a continuous front.

The German High command apparently is determined to defend Berlin at all costs.

Two divisions were thrown against the Second Armored division. One was from Berlin's inner defenses, the 580th Potsdam division, and the other was from the Eastern front. One other division has been identified.

APR 16 1945

Yanks Use Tanks, Planes

It is not immediately apparent where the German tanks that attacked came from. The Germans also used jet and fighter planes in continuous attacks.

Another factor contributing to the setback was the rapid Ninth army dash to the Elbe, which left it without the power punch it possessed when it crossed the Rhine.

Ammunition has to be brought several hundred miles by truck.

While tactical planes have been hampered by poor weather at their bases, the front itself has been marked by clear weather, particularly around Berlin, where German fighters now are based.

The Ninth Tactical airforce has been slower in moving bases forward to keep pace with the American advance than the Tactical Air forces in Italy and Africa, which moved with front line troops and often had planes based almost within artillery range.

The problem of the Ninth army in furthering the Berlin drive now is not one of fighting ability, but of bringing up the tail of the army, which includes supply, close to the front line troops for a new blow forward.

officers offered to sell him wine and liquors stolen from the Seyss-Inquart stock.

A German general Rauter, SS (Elite Guard) officer second in command of German forces in Holland, was reported today to have been wounded critically by the Dutch underground a month ago.

The reports said the Germans, in reprisal, killed 1,400 Dutch civilians and threatened to burn every structure between Apeldoorn and Arnhem if Rauter died.

Rauter, second in command under Arthur Seyss-Inquart, German commissioner in the Netherlands, was removed from St. Joseph's hospital on the outskirts of Appeldoorn two weeks ago because of Allied threats in that direction, and his present whereabouts are unknown.

Allied wounded prisoners of war at the hospital, which was seized by the Canadians, told me the story today. They reported Rauter was shot through the chest while in his car by men in German uniform. His driver and bodyguard were killed.

Nazi Commission in Holland Flees, Leaves Rich Loot Behind

WITH CANADIAN TROOPS IN HOLLAND, April 15 — (AP) Arthur Seyss-Inquart, German commissioner in Holland, fled from advancing Canadian troops, leaving behind him most of a mountainous store of rich loot liberated Allied prisoners of war reported today.

The loot he left behind — to be picked up later if he could—never will reach his hands, these men said, because the lieutenant that Seyss-Inquart had trusted cruelly stole it for themselves.

The story came to light as Canadian troops overran St. Joseph's hospital on the outskirts of Appeldoorn and found it already had been seized by a British major and 45 of his wounded comrades who had been prisoners of the Germans for seven months.

A medical officer among them said Seyss-Inquart found himself with only a single automobile in which to make his getaway as the Allied trap in Holland was sprung. The loot he had accumulated would not begin to fit into the machine.

The medical officer said German

Americans in Fortress Crew Shot While Landing By Parachute

WITH CANADIAN TROOPS IN HOLLAND, April 15 (AP).—Nazi Dutch S.S. (Elite Guard) troops deliberately shot and killed six members of an American Flying Fortress crew as they parachuted to earth from their burning plane near Apeldoorn, a British medical officer said today.

The medical officer, a major, said the pilot and two other wounded men had been brought in by Germans who said the pro-Nazi Dutch had deliberately shot them.

The major said the pilot of the Fortress, since transferred to another hospital near Rotterdam, told him that as the crew parachuted from the plane the Dutch S.S. troops fired on the descending men and killed six. Later he saw a Dutch trooper deliberately shoot another crewman after he reached earth.

French And Americans Strike All-Out Blow At Bordeaux

Paris, April 15 (AP)—French forces captured Royan after savage fighting today in a drive to clear the Germans from the Bordeaux pocket on the Atlantic coast.

The action on this "forgotten front" was described as the first of a series intended to mop up pockets of enemy strength left behind in the Allies' drive to Berlin.

Big fleets of American bombers, heavy American artillery, and French naval units showered bombs and shells upon the Germans' strongly fortified Atlantic Wall defenses on the north side of the Gironde estuary.

Infantry with bayonets then chased the Germans from Royan to high ground northeast of the city.

French and American bombers pounded German-defended positions in the Roube and Jaffe areas. Spotty weather conditions limited the tactical air units to 1,200 sorties in which they destroyed 65 German planes and damaged 45 in the air and on the ground. Three Allied aircraft were lost.

20,000 Germans In Area

Trying to break the German lock on the port of Bordeaux so that France can be better fed, French troops with American artillery and French naval support jumped off at dawn yesterday to attack about 20,000 Germans entrenched in the Royan and Pointe de Grave areas on both sides of the Gironde Estuary.

German defense lines broke under the assault and the enemy started falling back into steadily contracting pockets at the coast, AP Correspondent Relman Morin reported in a field dispatch.

Resistance was spotty in the initial stages, with the Germans fighting hard to hold some pillboxes and entrenchments, while they quit cold at other places. The French quickly pinched off an enemy-held sector around Medis on the north side of the estuary, about 50 miles north of Bordeaux, while on the south they gained similar success in a drive straight toward the tip of Pointe de Grave.

Start Of "Battle Of Pockets"

General Eisenhower's headquarters suggested that the attack was only the beginning of a widespread "Battle of the Pockets" to wipe out an estimated 170,000 Germans strung out along the coast at such places as St. Nazaire, Lorient and Dunkerque.

Supreme headquarters said a task force of the French Navy opened a heavy bombardment in support of military operations "taking place to clear enemy pockets of resistance on the west coast of France."

The task force bombarding German batteries covering the mouth of the Gironde included both large and small French warships commanded by Admiral G. S. Rue.

Planned By Admiral Kirk

Planning and execution of the naval operation was directed by Vice Admiral Alan G. Kirk, of the United States Navy.

In an order of the day Gen. de C. A. de Larminat, commanding the French forces, disclosed that Leclerc's 2d French Armored Division, which drove the wedge to Strasbourg on the Rhine, was spearheading the assault, along with infantry of the French forces of the Interior.

"FFI soldiers of the Atlantic front, your hour has come," said his order. "You will be aided by your experienced comrades of the Leclerc division and by American artillery. Show them, show France you know how to win a regular battle.

Fighting To Free Bordeaux

"Soldiers, aviators, sailors, you are fighting to liberate a corner of your own soil. But you are fighting especially to free the port of Bordeaux which is indispensable for our imports so France will have enough to eat next winter. It is an important part in the rebirth of our country which is in your hands."

It was disclosed that the German offensive in the Ardennes last December had caused the postponement of the drive for several months. American units assigned to aid the French in freeing Bordeaux, St. Nazaire and Lorient were held on the Ardennes front to stop the Nazi winter drive.

Massed Artillery Opens Up

Morin said massed artillery from the American Long Toms laid down a shattering barrage for three hours before the infantry attacked and the aerial bombardment was one of the most concentrated poundings given a small area since Cassino in Italy.

Following the big bomber attack lighter French and American planes roared over by the hundreds, and the ground for miles around trembled beneath the crushing weight of explosives.

French Storm Bordeaux Fort, Port Half Freed

Leclerc's Tanks Shoot Way Into Royan at Heavy Loss; Navy and U. S. Guns Aid

By The Associated Press

AT THE FRENCH ATLANTIC FRONT, April 15.—French tanks of Major General Jacques Leclerc's famous 1st Armored Division today shot their way into the town of Royan, main point on the north side of the Gironde estuary, virtually ending that phase of the campaign to free the port of Bordeaux. Bitter fighting continued at the Pointe de Grave, on the other side of the mouth of the Gironde.

The Germans fought savagely despite their hopeless situation. Forced out of Royan, they apparently were heading for wooded high ground northeast of that town to continue fighting. With Royan and northerly coastal areas, the Germans lost heavy guns used by them to prevent Allied shipping from going up the Gironde to Bordeaux.

The French infantry again received the support of big fleets of American bombers and of American artillery, in addition to French naval units. Steel poured into the German positions from both sides of the estuary throughout the day. Smoke from the shelling and bombing was so dense artillery observation planes flying under 1,000 feet were unable to see through it.

Seldom in this war has so much firepower been concentrated upon such a small area, and it paid dividends.

When the French infantry charged, it quickly cleared the village of Medis and tank spearheads rammed along two roads to Royan, seven miles away. The armor bypassed the strongly fortified town of Belmont, and before nightfall infantry attacking with bayonets had cleared Belmont as well.

The whole area is a remnant of the Germans' much-discussed Atlantic wall. It is studded with concrete gun emplacements, pillboxes and entrenchments. The bombs and heavy shells showered upon the area smashed many of these fortifications, but as always it remained for the infantry to go in and take the points where the German defenders still waited behind their guns.

[Besides the Gironde estuary, there are twelve other Nazi-held areas of resistance behind Allied frontlines—La Rochelle, St. Nazaire, Lorient and Dunkerque along the coast of France; the Channel Islands, the Ruhr, western Germany, and Breslau, eastern Germany; the Hela Peninsula, Poland; the Vistula Delta at Danzig; the Samland Peninsula and the port of Pillau, East Prussia; a section of Latvia, including the port of Libau, and the Dodecanese and Aegean Islands, including Crete and Rhodes.]

The French suffered heavy casualties, particularly at the Pointe de Grave. In that sector, they are smashing head-on against a strong German line crossing a narrow tongue of land, with little room to maneuver. It was a question of driving straight into a solid wall which has flanks protected on both sides by water.

The French, nevertheless, spanned the Gua Canal, one of the main water barriers, and inched forward against German fire. Very few prisoners were taken. Those captured represented virtually every branch of the German forces—regular army, sailors, marines, flak artillery and the Todt military construction organization. They said their orders were to fight to the last.

3d Army Censor Shifted, Cleared Nazi Gold Story

Bradley Had Requested 'Kills,' Then Order Was Rescinded

WITH THE UNITED STATES 3D ARMY, April 9 (Delayed by censor) (AP).—The 3d Army's chief press censor, Captain Cecil Durant, of Gainesville, Fla., has been transferred. This occurred after 3d Army censorship cleared stories filed by correspondents April 7 telling of the capture of German gold and art treasures in a salt mine.

After the stories were transmitted to the United States, correspondents were asked by General Omar N. Bradley in a telephone message from 12th Army group headquarters to send "kills" on their dispatches to their home offices. The order was rescinded, however, when it was pointed out the stories already had been published.

Durant has been a censor since December, 1942, and has been chief press censor for the 3d Army since it became operational last summer.

In theory, censors are permitted to stop only matter involving security, anything which "gives aid and comfort to the enemy." Correspondents expressed belief that the gold story did not involve any question of security.

Higher quarters knew about the gold story hours before the news stories were filed. Censors were not told, however, to stop the story.

Americans Seize Gestapo Quarters

Frankenhausen, Germany, April 15 (AP)—American soldiers captured a temporary headquarters of the staff of Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler today, three days after the Nazis had fled in such haste that many did not inform their wives or mistresses.

Records were destroyed or carted off to Munich two days before the entry of the 9th Armored Division into this spa 27 miles north of Erfurt.

"They spent two days burning cords and files," said a lieutenant who questioned the tearful, frightened women left behind, some of them with six and seven children.

Russians. They came to Frankenhausen and requisitioned a children's home, giving 200 to 300 children, many of them ill, just 24 hours to move out.

"The children had no place to go and could not be returned to their families, so the head nurse distributed them among the townspeople," the lieutenant said. The head nurse said she had nursed Maj. Gen. Terry Allen's baby during the American occupation after the last war and knew she would not be harmed if she stayed behind.

Himmler himself never visited the headquarters here, but he kept in constant telephone communication, calling two or three times daily.

Captive Allies 'Captured' Hospital

Forbidden To Use Captured Foods

U.S. 7th Army, Germany, April 15 (AP)—American troops in southern Germany were forbidden today to use captured German foodstuffs. It was reported officially the Germans either "are poisoning or have prepared poisoned coffee, sugar, cigarettes and chocolate" to leave in their retreat.

The Americans' pace in recent weeks has been so fast that forward elements lost touch with supply units. In some cases troops fed on German lard, butter, meat and sugar found in warehouses or freight yards.

Three-Fifths of Germany Won; One Bridgehead on the Elbe Is Given Up

APR 16 1945

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, April 15.—American reconnaissance patrols have reached Berlin's western suburbs, the German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau reported tonight from Berlin.

The dispatch said that small American armored detachments ranged "to the Elbe River" to the western suburbs of Berlin" but were forced to turn back after meeting stiff resistance.

The same Nazi agency said also that there was street fighting in Chemnitz, in southern Germany, and that American advanced units had reached the suburbs of Dresden, capital of Saxony.

A military spokesman said that a meeting of the American and Russian armies in the area of Dresden could be expected "any day now."

He declared that "several American armored columns" had crossed the Elbe River west of Berlin and that the Americans controlled the stream's west bank from Wittenberge seventy airline miles southward to Schoenebeck, south of Magdeburg.

FLIER DIES A HERO AT ELBE

Pilot Gives Life Helping 60 Men Escape Back Across River

ON THE ELBE, Germany, April 15 (AP)—An American Thunderbolt pilot gave his life helping save sixty men of the Second Armored and Thirtieth Infantry Divisions when a German attack smashed the American bridgehead across the Elbe River yesterday afternoon.

An artillery observer with the men directed artillery fire on the town in which they were hidden until the Germans took refuge. While the Germans were out of sight the men made off on the double quick for the river.

Four Thunderbolt pilots, informed of the getaway attempt, swung low over the fleeing men, strafing all Germans in their path. They were flying at treetop height, and just as the men reached the river one Thunderbolt leader struck the top of a house and was killed. The other fighters continued to support the sixty men until they got across the river.

U. S. Tank Destroys Nazi Train

AT THE ELBE, April 15 (AP).—An American light tank on reconnaissance in the Barby bridgehead across the Elbe sighted a train moving along the railroad. Taking a short cut across a field, the tank reached a point on the tracks ahead of the train. The crew jumped out and piled logs on the track. When the train came around a curve and halted, the tankmen shot it up at their leisure.

RUSSIANS STRIKE WITHIN 24 MILES OF NAZI CAPITAL

Full Power of Soviet Armies Not Yet Committed, Enemy Claims.

ST. POELTEN FALLS

Tanks Roll Across Austria Toward Hitler's Hideout at Berchtesgaden.

LONDON, Monday, April 16—(AP) German broadcasts said last night that Red army forces had ripped new breaches in Berlin's outer defenses in a steadily-mounting battle of tanks, artillery and infantry and were storming the approaches to Wriezen, only 24 miles northeast of the German capital.

Berlin said that the full fury of a four-army Russian storm, brewing against Berlin along a 170-mile front, had not yet burst but was gathering force and was likely to strike at any hour.

Moscow Silent on Attack

Moscow continued entirely silent on the attack which was expected to sweep [illegible] with American armies. But Premier Stalin announced that Soviet tanks rolling across Austria through the Danube valley toward Hitler's hideout at Berchtesgaden had captured St. Poelten, strategic 10-way road and rail center 61 miles east of the big Austrian industrial city of Linz.

In East Prussia Soviet troops virtually cleared the last enemy-held territory on the Samland peninsula west of Koenigsberg, reducing the enemy pocket to about 88 square miles and pushing within 13 miles of the escape port of Pillau.

Reds Attack Wriezen

German war correspondent Armin Shoenberg, in a late front report from east of Berlin, said that massed Red army tank and infantry forces were attacking the approaches to Wriezen in a "furious" attempt to break out of bridgeheads on the curving west bank of the Oder river.

By enemy account the battle was blazing along at least a 57-mile front with Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's First White Russian army and Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainians spearheading the assault. Berlin said that Zhukov himself had relinquished command to Gen. Vassily Sokolovsky, chief of staff under Konev, having been recalled to Moscow.

German broadcasters differed in their assessment of the Red army attacks, some terming them "preparatory and of a local nature", and others describing them as the "first chapter of the all-out Russian offensive toward Berlin and central Germany."

Heavy Red army blows, launched by Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's First White Russian army, were concentrated on a 16-mile sector between the Oder river fortresses of Kuestrin and Frankfurt, Berlin reported.

A blazing tank and infantry battle was underway west of Kuestrin itself 38 miles east of Berlin. The DNB agency said that Zhukov had thrown five Russian divisions—some 75,000 men—supported by 200 tanks into the battle. DNB claimed that at least 198 Red army tanks had been knocked out by German guns.

Capture St. Pelten

St. Pelten, strategic 10-way road and rail center 28 miles west of liberated Vienna, fell to Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army, Premier Stalin announced in an order of the day.

Fall of the Traisen river stronghold carried Tolbukhin's tanks, cavalry and motorized infantry within 61 miles east of the big Austrian city of Linz, 126 miles from Berchtesgaden and 86 miles from the frontier of the Nazis' Bavarian mountain redoubt.

A bitter battle was in progress in the Danube valley around St. Pelten as the Germans threw in fresh reserves, especially anti-tank groups.

The Germans were employing all kinds of devices along the Vienna-Munich autobahn in an effort to halt Tolbukhin. His advance threatened to flank the Czechoslovak caital of Prague, 131 miles northwest of Soviet spearheads. Dispatches said the Nazis were felling trees, mining and blowing up huge stretches of the broad high-speed road.

While these forces gained along the Danube's south bank, a second order of the day from Moscow announced the capture of Floridsdorf, an industrial suburb of Vienna on the north bank of the Danube, which actually is included in the city boundaries.

Korneuburg, rail junction on the Vienna-Prague line three miles up the Danube, also was taken by Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian army, with the aid of Tolbukhin's troops who crossed the Danube in that area. Stalin said that a grouping of German troops seeking to withdraw from Vienna was wiped out and 3,000 prisoners taken.

Nazi broadcasts asserted that Red army attacks east of Berlin constituted a limited offensive. All commentators declared it had not yet reached the momentum of last January's breakout from the Vistula river in Poland.

Germans said the Russians were attempting to find a weak spot, but Nazi claims of high Red Army tank losses indicated the ferocity of the struggle.

Resistance In Yugoslavia

Meanwhile in Moscow, Marshal Tito predicted that all of Yugoslavia would be cleared of the Germans within a month or six weeks. He said the Germans were fiercely resisting the Yugoslav Army in northern Yugoslavia to prevent the loss of vital industrial districts in southern Austria.

"They understand that if in the present situation, which is so critical for them, they lose these districts then there really will be no place for them to go," Tito said.

Berlin Admits East and West Will Soon Meet

All Elite Forces Reported Facing Reds; Americans Favored in Berlin Race

LONDON, April 15 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that the Allied "aim to link up with the Russians is on the point of being realized," but declared the German high command was "doing everything in its power to prevent . . . or at least delay this achievement as long as possible."

Swedish dispatches from Berlin to Stockholm said that Germany now was split in two administratively, and hinted that actual physical division of the Reich was a matter of days.

The British radio, in a broadcast beamed to Germany, said the German command in the west had been split by the Allied drive and that Field Marshal Ernst Busch had taken over command in the north, with Field Marshal Albert Kesselring leading the troops in central and southern Germany.

The German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau said the Nazis were using all their elite forces east of Berlin in an attempt to halt the Russians. The agency said the Russians already had cleared German minefields and were pressing on the Reich capital, but added: "If one can speak of tips the race for Berlin should be slightly in the Americans' favor."

Walter Plato, a German commentator, said any "link-up between the eastern and western Allies certainly would constitute an impressive achievement but would not be decisive."

Ivar Westerlund, only Swedish correspondent left in Berlin, wrote in the Stockholm "Dagens Nyheter" that "the greatest military resistance can be reckoned to come from southern Germany, which perhaps will serve as the central administration." Since the order to evacuate Berlin, he said, "hardly half of the ministries and officials still remain in Berlin." The S. S. (Elite Guard) weekly, "Das Schwarze Korps," failed to appear this week, with no reason given, Westerlund reported.

BOMBERS RAID BERLIN AGAIN

Bordeaux Pocket Sprayed With New Type Liquid Fire

London, Monday, April 16 (AP)—RAF Mosquitos bombed Berlin last night in the second consecutive night of aerial assault softening up the German capital for the kill.

It was the 61st RAF raid on Berlin in 52 nights, and followed daylong pounding of the German capital's approaches by the United States 9th Air Force.

The American planes destroyed at least 64 German aircraft and knocked out hundreds of vehicles in attacks on airfields and rail targets in the path of the advancing Allied armies.

Luftwaffe Resistance Feeble

The Luftwaffe, riddled by last week's loss of some 1,400 planes, offered feeble resistance. One 9th Air Force plane was reported lost, while seventeen German aircraft were shot down in aerial combat, at least 47 were destroyed on the ground and 44 were damaged in attacks on airfields in the areas of Leipzig, Dessau and Marienburg.

The enemy's loss of vehicles included 93 locomotives, 173 rail cars and 311 motor vehicles.

Saturday night the RAF sent more than 700 heavy bombers against Berlin and suburban Potsdam, where the Germany Army has had its headquarters since the days of Frederick the Great.

New Type Liquid Fire Used

During the day more than 1,300 American heavy bombers, using a new type of liquid fire along with tons of regular high explosive bombs, assaulted the German-held Gironde estuary in France in support of the French-American drive to free the entry to Bordeaux.

Eighth Air Force fighters, not needed in the unopposed Bordeaux raid, helped 9th Air Force bombers blast fortifications and communications just ahead of American ground forces converging on Potsdam and Berlin.

Called "Hitler's Hot Foot"

Flyers said the new incendiaries—which they call "Hitler's hot foot"—produced spectacular results.

"It was just like hurling a gigantic flame thrower," related Sergt. George B. Hacks, Los Angeles, a Flying Fortress gunner, in describing the effect of the tanks filled with inflammable liquid which explode on impact and splash flames over an area of 60 square yards.

More than 460,000 gallons of this liquid fire and more than 6,000 of the usual type incendiary bombs, as well as 1,000 high-explosive bombs, were spread over the target area on both sides of the Gironde.

Whole Area "An Inferno"

"The whole area was a blazing inferno," reported Major Charles A. Reid, Asheville, N.C., pilot commanding a Fortress formation.

Flak was meager, there was no fighter opposition and the crews dropped their cargoes with precision through clear skies. The attack followed the opening aerial assault yesterday by 1,150 heavy bombers. Medium and light bombers working in close co-operation with ground forces slashed at railways, airfields and troop concentrations in front of the Allied armies over a wide area in central Germany.

Thunderbolts bombed two fortified towns in the path of the United States 9th Army, hit rail yards at Ulm and Gunzberg which were supplying German troops and attacked concentrations of road and rail traffic in the areas of Chemnitz, Dresden, Muehlberg, Dessau, Leipzig and Borna.

Up to noon but one air battle was attempted by the German air force which lost some 1,400 planes last week. This battle near Bayreuth resulted in the shooting down of a German plane without Allied loss. RAF Mosquitos, however, shot down two more Saturday night while two RAF bombers were lost.

RAF forces hit a U-boat and three other ships in an attack in Norway's Josen Fjord late Saturday.

"One minute to target," said the navigator, Lieut. John E. Alexander of East Liverpool, Ohio, and the bombardier, Lieut. Carlo Zuniga of Mira Loma, Calif., prepared to let go his propaganda weapons.

Co-pilot Lieut. A. H. Franke of Spokane, Wash., explained about flak: "In the daytime you can see bursts of brown smoke, but at night it's just a flash, and hard to judge in the distance. Sometimes it looks like stars."

"Yep," observed S/Sgt. Emmerson Miller of Chrisney, Ind., tail gunner, on inter-com. "Stars that go out are flak."

After the next objective the plane set a new course farther east beyond the deepest American spearheads. There were fewer fires, and gun flashes diminished.

The waist gunners attended to cargo—S/Sgts. Larue Shipley of Caldwell, Idaho, and Charles W. Strain of Crete, Neb. A moment after "target" they reported "Cargo over the side."

South of Leipzig on the way home, the ground haze again reddened with fires. One massive conflagration apparently was an oil fire.

"Something down there is burning like hell—look at those flames roll," exclaimed S/Sgt. George W. Knott of Chester, Pa., the ball turret gunner.

The plane swung wide to avoid the Ruhr pocket. Continuous flashes could be seen inside the pocket and there was an angry glare of many fires, consuming German towns and villages.

...Below Night-Flying B-24; ...render' Leaflets on Saxony

APR 16 1945

...OMNEY WHEELER
By The Associated Press.

AN RAF BOMBER BASE, in England, April 15—A night bomber trip over the narrowing Saxon corridor, between American and Russian forces, the Ruhr pocket and the Netherlands, showed towns in flames everywhere.

The trip, which ended here this morning, was made in a United States Eighth Air Force Liberator named Midnight Mistress. The B-24 ship was loaded with leaflets telling Hitler's Wehrmacht and civilians that this is the end, and calling for surrender.

The plane crossed the Saale River battle line at a height of four miles, flying south of by-passed Leipzig and toward Dresden. Lieut. Bruce Edgerton of Washington, D. C., was the pilot.

In the darkness below fires were visible everywhere, most of them large ones.

Farther west a heavy artillery bombardment was visible in the Netherlands along the battle line.

Over the North Sea T/Sgt. Ralph W. Wise of Nabb, Ind., checked the fuel. The plane had been in the air nearly eight hours. Weather prevented the plane from landing at its home field, and T/Sgt. James K. Echols of Sandusky, Ohio, the radioman, got a report that this RAF field, eighty miles away, could take the plane in. Midnight Mistress dropped down to the runway here.

BRITISH POWER AT PEACE TALKS WORRIES RUSSIA

SINGLETON

LONDON, April 15.—(AP) Russian concern over possible British dominance of the world security conference following President Roosevelt's death was credited by some diplomats today as perhaps the chief reason why Marshal Stalin decided to send his right hand man, Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, to San Francisco.

But, simultaneously, it was believed the sudden Soviet reversal of the earlier decision against Molotov's attendance generally strengthened reliance in the Big Three accord on plans for insuring peace.

The Kremlin is believed to be convinced that world security, at least in its present stage, depends upon a working agreement among the three major powers.

To this fact was added the appeal of President Truman that Molotov come to the conference, an appeal which diplomatically could scarcely be disregarded.

Truman's appeal undoubtedly was welcomed in Moscow, if for no other reason than to give Russia's leaders a first-hand appraisal of the man who must take over where Roosevelt left off.

There were a number of problems on which the Russians and Western Allies were far from accord—chief among them the future of Poland, for which Roosevelt particularly insisted upon a coalition government.

Here in Britain it was considered that Roosevelt's death and the absence of a senior Russian statesman from San Francisco would leave Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in the position of being the only one at the conference with complete knowledge of the Big Three's pattern for its future.

It was felt, too, that Stalin, for the double purpose of aiding the United States' new president and of underscoring Russia's points in the absence of first-hand arguments laid before Roosevelt, had decided to assign Molotov to make the Soviet viewpoint clear.

'V-E' Day Unlikely to Bring Finish of Fighting in Reich

By JAMES M. LONG

PARIS, April 15—(AP) Victory on the European front by Allied proclamation—whenever it comes—probably will not mean an end of fighting on a military scale in Germany or its stolen outposts.

The best information here is that if the fighting is not broken down to mere guerrilla warfare by late Fall, it might conceivably stretch on through the Winter in the pass-guarded hideaways of Norway and southern Germany's "national redoubt," where snow and ice could slow the cleanup.

In such an event, weeks and months after proclaimed victory American divisions might still be in the line on European soil.

American boys still might be dying in war whose end already had been celebrated.

There is no reason to suppose that the link-up with the Russians, splitting Germany into two in the middle, would be the signal for Gen. Eisenhower in conjunction with Premier-Marshal Stalin to proclaim victory.

Germans Still in Field

After the junction with the Russians, large German forces still will be in the field in the North or south or both, and it is believed here that V-E day will be proclaimed only after those forces are much more greatly broken down and boxed in.

Already there is no cohesive front nor coherent German command in the west. The junction of the Allies of the East and West seems near, but V-E day will come, according to best opinion here, somewhere between that junction and the end of the subsequent fighting.

It is hardly likely that Gen. Eisenhower would proclaim victory until the Eastern front too has collapsed and a proclamation is issued jointly with Stalin.

A fortnight ago Eisenhower predicted that the Germans would fight on as best they could for the last inch of Reich soil; that there would be no formal surrender; that victory probably would come by proclamation.

Events since have borne out that prediction.

Two Fronts Loom

Two fighting fronts now are shaping up. One is in the north guarding the great German ports and perhaps Berlin.

The other is the "national redoubt" of mountainous southern Germany and northern Austria between Lake Constance and Berchtesgaden, whose approaches already echo to the clamor of American and Russian arms.

Both present the drab prospect of a long and bitter campaigning.

In the north, besides the ports—always stubbornly defended by the Germans—there is flooded western Holland, perhaps Denmark and Norway. Norway might take months to clean out.

The same is true of the southern retreat, a mountain-bound natural fortress which, if the Nazis could hold out through the Fall, would be made doubly formidable by the snow and ice of the mountain passes.

It is not suggested that the Germans will be able to turn southern Germany into the fortress the Nazis hope for. The speed of the Russian and American advances is bringing the end near even faster than the Germans calculated.

Just when the Allied victory proclamation will come after the diehards are shoved into their last corners will depend upon the extent to which the German fighting force is broken down in the process.

It will not come until most of Germany is seized and resistance is whittled down to a mere mop-up.

It presents an almost unprecedented military situation.

A people is beaten and yet it is unable to quit.

A nation is defeated and is unwilling to surrender.

Thus the Allies have no alternative. They must announce that they have won a war.

CAPRA FILM ON BURMA SCRAPPED BY BRITISH

DENNEHY

LONDON, April 15 (AP)—An American-made film of the Burma campaign, produced at the special request of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Supreme Allied Commander in Southeast Asia, has been scrapped after British military authorities complained that it "suggests most of the Burma fighting has been done by United States troops," the British War Office announced tonight.

The British military authorities said the film, directed by Frank Capra, a prominent Hollywood director, was "completely unfair." It was reported here that the film was withheld after George Archibald, director of the films division of the British Information Service in New York, and Maj. Frank Owen, editor in India of the British publication "SEAC," saw the film at a private showing in New York.

British authorities said ground forces in Burma were predominantly British. They added that the Capra film would give the idea that they were predominantly American. Lieut. Col. Alexander Bryce of the British Army film unit, worked with Mr. Capra as co-director.

A spokesman for the British Army film unit said "the film was intended to cover the early stages of the campaign when the proportion of British troops to American was about twenty to one." Mr. Archibald and Major Owen, it was said here, cabled the War Office that the film "lacked balance" and gave undue prominence to Americans. It was reported that either Admiral Mountbatten or the War Office would commission the British Army film unit to re-film the Capra assignment.

agent in the United States from 1936 to 1941 when he was ousted for failing to comply with the Alien Registration Act, was seized at Bad Berka by troops of the 89th Division, AP Correspondent Theburn Wiant reported.

Zapp, formerly head of the Transocean News Service, said he no longer was in contact with Nazi leaders and that he could give no clue as to Hitler's whereabouts. He also claimed he had lost favor with top Nazis after being expelled from the United States, that he had served eighteen months on the Russian front, and only recently had been released to work on the American sector for the German Foreign Office.

Thin, nervous, and tugging at his goatee, Zapp said he did not fear capture because he did not consider himself connected in any way with Nazi atrocities.

The German Foreign Office was just moving some departments at Bad Berka, 5 miles south of Weimar, when 3d Army troops swept into the area, Wiant reported.

Zapp C...tive; Prince Wilhelm, Mac...ensen Reported Seized

London, April 15 (AP)—United States 3d Army troops have captured Dr. Mannfred Zapp, Nazi propaganda chieftain expelled from the United States in 1941, and European broadcasts tonight declared Prince August Wilhelm and aged Field Marshal August von Mackensen also had fallen into Allied hands.

[Editor's note:—Von Mackensen was one of the officially listed war criminals of World War I but was not ordered to trial.]

Meanwhile, so far as could be learned from the best available sources in Paris, the German diplomat Franz von Papen still was awaiting processing and interrogation in Europe as a prisoner of war.

Wilhelm Known As "Auwi"

The Luxembourg radio said Prince Wilhelm, also known as "Auwi," had been captured by the Allies. The fourth son of the Kaiser, he once participated in Nazi activities as a Reichstag member and was the most active of all Hohenzollern princes in the Nazi cause.

ABSIE, American broadcasting station in Europe, reported the capture of von Mackensen, 96 years old, who commanded the Germans Eastern front in Galicia in the first World War.

Dr. Zapp, chief Nazi propaganda agent in the United States from 1936 to 1941 when he was ousted for failing to comply with the Alien Registration Act, was seized at Bad Berka by troops of the 89th Division, AP Correspondent Theburn Wiant reported.

Von Papen Flown To U.S.?

A Paris dispatch said supreme headquarters would neither confirm nor deny reports that von Papen had been flown to the United States.

Nor could it be ascertained whether he was listed officially as a war criminal, but he is being held under Provision 27-10 of "The Army Field Manual," which says any person having held a high diplomatic post or in any way capable of usefulness to the enemy government, can be taken as a prisoner of war.

In Bad Blankenburg, the United States 87th Division found Gen. Vittorio Foschini, formerly Mussolini's Minister of Information for the Italian Army, Navy and Air branches; Foschini's wife and Count Ettore Tolomei, former administrator of Southern Tyrol.

Shot in the left arm during the Battle of the Marne in 1914 and decorated with the Iron Cross, "Auwi" proved adept at giving the Nazi salute when Hitler rose to prominence. He became a brigadier general in the Nazi brownshirt army.

He once declared God had sent Hitler to the German people. Hitler honored him by giving him the title of national orator.

Bombardment Group Cited For Heroism

London, April 15 (AP)—A distinguished unit citation was given today to the 100th Bombardment Group of the United States 8th Air Force for making the first three daylight attacks on Berlin in March, 1944, despite snowstorms, withering flak, and savage German fighter attacks.

Only 3 groups of bombers succeeded in reaching Berlin on the first mission. On the second trip the 100th lost half its bombers, but two days later returned again in a display of "extraordinary heroism and tenacity of purpose," the citation said.

The group then was commanded by Col. Thomas S. Jeffrey, Jr., Arvonia, Va. Now it is under Col. Frederick J. Sutterlin, Fr[illegible]rt, Kentucky.

POLISH PREMIER AC[illegible]EES ON YALTA PROVISION

LONDON, April 15—(AP) Poland's peasant-born former premier, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, formally agreed today to the principle that a new Provisional government of National Unity must be formed in accord with the Yalta declaration.

"I consider close and lasting friendship with Russia a keystone of future Polish policy," he said. "To remove all doubts as to my attitude I wish to declare that I accept the Crimea decision in regard to the future of Poland."

He said leading Polish personalities should meet "with a view to constituting a government of national unity as widely and fairly representative of the Polish people as possible and one which will command recognition of the three major powers."

Mikolajczyk left the Polish exiled government at London in disappointment over its refusal to agree to his plan for reaching an accord with the Soviet Union and the Lubin Committee of National Liberation. Both Russia and the western Allies have looked upon him as a man who might bring together the London Poles and the Lublin group.

Mikolajczyk made no reference to the sixteen Polish political leaders reported by the exiled government to have disappeared after meeting with Soviet agents. It was assumed that these leaders were engaged in direct negotiations with the Russians.

Russian-Yugoslav Pact

POLISH TROOPS SEIZE IMOLA

Yanks In Italy Win Control Of Roffeno Ridge

NORGAARD

Rome, April 15 (AP)—Imola, important junction town on the Bologna-Rimini highway, 20 miles southeast of Bologna, was captured today by Polish troops of the British 8th Army.

At the same time, American troops of the 5th Army advanced through rugged terrain northwest of Vergato and seized control of the 2-mile-long Roffeno Ridge, capturing several small villages. Vergato is 17 miles southwest of Bologna, important German supply and communications center in the Po Valley.

Heavy Nazi Reinforcements

On the eastern flank of the Italian front, the Germans were reported throwing in heavy reinforcements in a desperate effort to smash the hard-won 8th Army bridgeheads over the Sillaro River.

In the face of bitter opposition, 8th Army attacks made only modest gains northwestward toward Ferrara and directly eastward, Allied headquarters said:

A New Zealand correspondent reported from the 8th Army front that one Allied battalion captured 400 Germans, many of whom, he said, surrendered because their home towns had been occupied by the Allies and their families were no longer in danger of reprisals from the Gestapo."

Many Tanks Wrecked

The correspondent said the Germans were using great numbers of the huge Tiger and Royal Tiger tanks and that the wreckage of these battle machines was strewn over the battlefield. American-made Sherman tanks of one New Zealand squadron knocked out two Royal Tigers.

An 8th Army announcement stated that the Nazi command had thrown the veteran 4th Paratroop Division into the fighting line soon after the British and New Zealand forces opened the current offensive by smashing across the Senio River.

Planes Support Action

Other German divisions reported in action in that sector included the 42d Jaeger, the 362d and 98th Infantry and the 26th Panzer.

Ground action was supported by Allied airplanes, while other craft of the 15th Air Force strafed rail lines in Bavaria, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

On the western end of the Italian front, 5th Army troops seized Monte Pizzaculo, 4 miles northwest of Carrara, and retained it against a German counterattack. Small gains were reported also in the coastal plain area west of Carrara.

The Mediterranean Allied air force flew 2,400 sorties yesterday against enemy targets in northern Italy and southern Austria with a loss of four aircraft.

NO [illegible]AZI RETREAT EX[illegible]CTED IN ITALY

HENZERLING

ROME, April 15.—(AP) Marshal Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean theater, sent the British Eighth army into its latest battle for the Po valley with the conviction that the Germans had no intention of withdrawing from Italy.

Alexander told correspondents this April 9, five days before the attack started. Censorship permitted transmission of the interview today.

He said the enemy was suffering from an acute lack of fuel, transport and disrupted communications and even if he tried to withdraw [illegible] it would take so long to get his troops out that they could reach no vital battle-front in time.

Discussing his recent five-day visit with Marshal Tito, Alexander said he found the Yugoslav leader a "very exceptional man—he is wise, very intelligent, moderate and above all sensible."

Alexander also held "some very useful talks" with Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin, commander of the Third Ukrainian army, "about future plans and how we could foresee helping each other."

"Sooner or later our armies will join hands and we shall have mutual problems to solve," he said. "Today we have much better arrangements with the Russians for interchange of information and our air forces are giving them considerable support by bombing targets ahead of their present advance."

Three Greek divisions are being trained and equipped, he said, and when they are ready British forces will be withdrawn from Greece.

Ship Carrying V-Bombs Reported To Have Sunk

Stockholm, April 15 (AP)—The Free Danish Press Service said tonight it was rumored the 10,000-ton steamer Hansett struck a mine and sank while carrying V-bombs from Aarhus, Denmark, to Norway.

The agency confirmed an earlier report that the Germans were shipping many trainloads of long cylinder-like objects into Denmark and said they were believed to be either V-2 bombs or one-man torpedoes.

NAZI INTRIGUE IRKS RUSSIANS

German Business Deals With Americans, Britons Feared

Moscow, April 15 (AP)—The official Communist party organ Pravda charged today the Nazis were using business men as "underground agents over a large part of the European Continent."

"This intrigue is going on in territory occupied by the American and English armies," Pravda said. "Leading German industrialists are remaining on the job with the purpose of establishing contact with the Americans and Englishmen."

Krupp's "Impudent Interview"

Pravda said the business leader, Dr. Rudhard Duisberg, "sits in the consultative council of Frankfurt-on-the-Main," along with W. C. Boehnert, a representative of the giant I. G. Farbenindustrie chemical trust.

In Essen the German munitions manufacturer, Alfred Krupp, himself remained on and, Pravda said, "kindly granted an impudent interview to a representative of the (London) Daily Express in which he advertised his Nazi party support and friendly connections with the Nazis."

Uneasiness Over Cartels

Uneasiness over possible international business deals with Germany has been reflected in the Soviet press recently. The last issue of the magazine War and the Working Class, remarking that "the American press has been devoting particular attention to agreements between monopolists," said:

"American cartels once before have helped their German partners to get on their feet again. The German militarists struck out the disarmament clauses of the Versailles peace treaty with the unconcealed assistance of American corporations.

"The activities of political agents of international cartels constitute an attempt on the one hand to preserve German industry, and consequently the base of new German aggression, and on the other hand to isolate the Soviet Union in the postwar world politically and economically."

NAZIS SEEN TRYING TO SPLIT ALLIES

MOSCOW, April 15—(AP) The Communist party's propaganda chief said yesterday the German Nazis were baring their Western Front to the Soviet's Allies and concentrating forces on the Eastern front as a gigantic political trick designed to create dissension among the nations warring on Hitler.

"They are trying to create distrust among the United Nations—to postpone at least temporarily the last mortal blow of the Allies' armies," said Georgif Alexandrov, chief of the propaganda section of the central committee, Communist party.

At the same time Alexandrov said Germans and Nazis are not identical. He took issue with one of the Soviet's top writers, who had contended that all Germans form one "colossal gang" and that all must pay equally for Nazi crimes.

Tito said Italy "must make indemnity for the damage rendered our country by the Italian Army, but up to the present nothing has been returned to us."

CHINESE GAIN IN DRIVE IN SOUTHWEST HONAN

CHUNGKING, China, April 15 (AP)—The Chinese tonight reported gains in several sectors in widespread fighting in southwestern Honan and north Hupeh Provinces, where a general Chinese counter-offensive is in progress.

In Laohokow, American air base city northwest of Hankow, the Chinese attacked a group of Japanese surrounded in the Catholic church.

The Chinese reached the suburbs of Shangyang, thirty miles southeast of Laohokow, where they had cut the Japanese lifelines to Laohokow, and battled to the gates of the walled town of Sichwan, fifty-three miles north of Laohokow and thirty-seven miles east of the Shensi border.

Tank-supported Japanese were thrown back, and one of their columns was surrounded at Hsiachikow, 100 miles north of Laohokow. The Chinese fought into the streets of Likwanchiao, twenty-five miles north of Laohokow.

NIGHT

TOKYO HIT AGAIN BY INCENDIARIES

Industrial City Of Kawasaki Also Fire-Bomb Target

Guam, Monday, April 16 (AP)—American Superfortresses in great strength attacked Tokyo for the second time in 48 hours today (Tokyo time) and also raided the Japanese capital's industrial suburb of Kawasaki. Probably as many as 400 B-29's participated.

The mass attack by the Superfortresses of the 21st Bomber Command from this and other Marianas bases was something of a repetition of Saturday's incendiary raid on Tokyo [illegible] new targets were hit.

Returning flyers reported sections of Tokyo still were flaming from the previous raid.

Attack Near Midnight

Fire bombs were showered on the southeastern corner of Tokyo, bordered by Tokyo Bay on the east and Lama River on the south. This is one of the principal industrial areas of the city.

Japan's Domei News Agency said fires burned in the bombed area of the city for more than seven hours and made the unconfirmed claim that 50 B-29's were shot down. American reports made no mention of losses.

Kawasaki, on Tokyo Bay, between Tokyo and Yokohama, is the ninth largest city in Japan. It has many war industries and also shares the Tokyo-Yokohama railroads, highways, power system and communications network.

Saturday's raid by some 400 B-29's destroyed much of the Tokyo arsenal area.

The attacks against the two cities were made around midnight (Japanese time—11 A.M. Sunday E.W.T.).

The northern part of Kawasaki, just across the Tama River from Tokyo, was the center of the target in that city.

This was the second incendiary blow in 48 hours against Tokyo, the third incendiary strike in five weeks and the sixteenth attack since last November's inaugural from the Marianas. It was the second attack on Kawasaki but the first with incendiary bombs. The first attack on Kawasaki was by a medium force of Superfortresses on April 3.

Kawasaki has a population of more than 300,000 and together with Tokyo and Yokohama, forms a continuous, built-up area extending 25 miles along the western shore of Tokyo Bay.

Kawasaki extends inland from Tokyo Bay in a northwesterly direction about 7 miles, narrowing toward the interior. Density of population is highest near the harbor, along rail lines and along the Tama River to the north. This was included in the attack area.

400 Superforts Put Torch To Tokyo, Kawasaki Plants

Yank Columns Converge on Baguio; Attacks Repulsed on Okinawa.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The American torch was applied again today (Japanese time) to Japan's vital homeland war industries when a very large force of Superfortresses, perhaps 400, seared Tokyo and nearby Kawasaki with tons of incendiary bombs.

This second great fire raid on Tokyo within 48 hours was officially reported by the 20th air force some hours after the Japanese radio said two score small-type aircraft and carrier-based planes had raided the Boso peninsula on Tokyo bay.

Troops Close On Baguio

In the Philippines three Yank columns converged on Baguio, summer capital in the Benguet mountains, while other American troops cleared the Japanese from Cagraray, a small island off the port of Legaspi, southeastern Luzon.

The Japanese stronghold at Davao, on the southeastern tip of Mindanao island, was plastered with 387 tons of aerial bombs.

The mass attack by the Superfortresses of the 21st bomber command from this and other Marianas bases was something of a repetition of Saturday's incendiary raid on Tokyo, except that new targets were hit.

Fire bombs were showered on the southeastern corner of Tokyo, bordered by Tokyo bay on the east and Tama river on the south. This is one of the principal industrial areas of the city.

Kawasaki, on Tokyo bay between Tokyo and Yokahama, is the ninth largest city in Japan. It has many war industries and also shares the Tokyo-Yokahama railroads, highways, power system and communications network.

Saturday's raid by some 400 B-29s destroyed much of the Tokyo arsenal area.

Three Japanese counterattacks were broken up by artillery Saturday night along the bitterly-contested "little Siegfried line" of southern Okinawa, and the lines remained unchanged yesterday for the twelfth straight day.

Marines Mop Up Japs

Marines in the north continued to mop up small groups of the enemy in their drive which has carried them to within 10 miles of the northern tip of the strategic Ryukyu island, only 325 miles south of Japan proper.

One isolated Japanese force on the western side of Motubu Peninsula offered stiff resistance, Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported in his communique today.

Keufu island in the Kerama group just off Okinawa's southwest coast was invaded yesterday. Eight of the Kerama Islands were seized by the 77th Army division shortly before the invasion of Okinawa.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported that the Doughboys in the Philippines killed 8,156 Japanese and took 205 prisoners during the past week. This boosted Nippon's total casualties in the Philippine campaign to more than 323,000.

Formosan airports and rail and dock areas were blasted by Philippines-based Yank fliers. They also hit the big Japanese supply terminals at Hong Kong and Canton, on the China coast, with 170 tons of explosives, struck Indo-China rail lines and raided shipping on the China sea and in the Makassar straight sector.

The waves of Superforts sent against the Tokyo region picked important industrial areas of the capital and Kawasaki as their targets. In the heavy raids 48 hours earlier the giant bombers hit the Tokyo arsenal sector, causing great fires and explosions in a five-mile square district of both major and small war plants.

Japanese weaken near Baguio; 8,156 of enemy counted dead in Philippines in last week.........Page 7

Guam, Monday, April 16 (AP)—Three Japanese counterattacks were broken up by artillery Saturday night along the bitterly contested "Little Siegfried Line" of southern Okinawa, and the lines remained unchanged yesterday for the twelfth straight day.

Marines in the north continued to mop up small groups of the enemy in their drive which has carried them to within 10 miles of the northern tip of the strategic Ryukyu Island only 325 miles south of Japan proper.

Some Resistance Stiff

One isolated Japanese force on the western side of Motobu Peninsula offered stiff resistance, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported in his communiqué today.

Keufu Island in the Kerama group just off Okinawa's southwest coast was invaded yesterday. Eight of the Kerama Islands were seized by the 77th Army Division shortly before the invasion of Okinawa began Easter morning.

Ground forces on Okinawa continued to receive close, effective support from naval guns, carrier and land-based aircraft and field artillery.

Tanega Island Bombed

No mention was made of Japanese planes raiding American shipping or ground targets. A heavy toll of 265 planes was exacted from enemy air fleets over the area for three days late last week. Dispatches from Okinawa indicated this must have taken a serious bite out of Japan's available aerial striking power.

Fleet patrol bombers hit Tanega Island in the northern Ryukyus yesterday. Army and Marine planes bombed and strafed Haha Jima, Chichi Jima and Muko Jima, in the Bonins, just north of American-conquered Iwo Jima.

The United States now controls the central two thirds of the strategic Ryukyu Island just 325 miles south of Japan proper.

Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr.'s 6th Marine Division, meanwhile, completed occupation of the big Motobu Peninsula, which juts off Okinawa's northwest coast. Japanese on this peninsula counter-attacked lightly in midweek to give the Leathernecks their only sizable opposition of the campaign.

3 COLUMNS CLAMP ARC AROUND BAGUIO

MacArthur Unit 3 Miles West of Enemy Redoubt—Landing Secures Legaspi Ship Lane

HUTCHESON

MANILA, Monday, April 16 (AP)—Further American progress in the reduction of Japanese defenses of Baguio, Philippine summer capital in the rugged mountains of northern Luzon, was announced by Gen. Douglas MacArthur today.

"Our columns," the communiqué said, "converge on the city from the south, west and northwest." Doughboys of Maj. Gen. Percy Clarkson's Thirty-third Division were about three miles from Baguio on the west and about seven miles on the north.

The communiqué reported that 8,156 Japanese dead were counted and 205 of the enemy taken prisoner in the Philippines last week. This brought the total Japanese casualties for the Philippines campaign to about 323,000.

In southern Luzon American troops invaded and cleared Cagararay Island, at the entrance to Albay [illegible] further secured the shipping passage to the important harbor of Legaspi.

American aircraft dropped 387 tons of bombs on Japanese installations at Davao and other Mindanao Island positions.

Continuing their South China Sea blockade, Philippine-based bombers struck supply terminals at Hong Kong and in the Canton area, sank a medium freighter in the harbor, hit rail facilities on the French Indo-China coast and destroyed or damaged seven enemy vessels in the sea lanes.

Other planes attacked air centers, rail yards and docks in continuing daily attacks on Formosa.

Supply areas at Tawao and Tarakan, on the northeast coast of Borneo, also were bombed.

Thirteenth Air Force Liberators pounced on Japanese convoys in Macassar Strait and at Brunei Bay in the Netherlands Indies. They sank two freighters and possibly sank a third; damaged four others, a destroyer and a gunboat and sank or damaged several small craft.

Fighting continued desperate along the thirty-mile northern Luzon front, with the stiffest resistance in the Baguio and Balete Pass areas. Maj. Gen. Ennis P. Swift's First Corps troops were fighting in rain and mud.

NIGHT

Although coming long after the more spectacular battles for Manila and Corregidor, the northern Luzon fighting, concentrated near Baguio and the Balete gateway to the rich Cagayan valley, will probably prove the hardest and longest and perhaps costliest of any in the Philippines.

The Japanese are making a last stand there and doing it well.

U. S. MAYOR OF BAGUIO DIES

Halsema, Last American to Run City, Killed in Air Attack

MANILA, April 15 (AP)—E. J. Halsema, 63, of New Bremen, Ohio, last American Mayor of Baguio, was killed March 15 during the bombing of that Philippine summer capital, which, as an engineer, he helped to build. Word of his death was brought to Manila by Dr. Fernando D. Manalo, his physician, who got through the Japanese battle lines and made his way south.

Dr. Manalo, head of the Notre Dame Hospital in Baguio, confirmed the deaths in that Japanese-held area of three other Americans — Michael Ryan, 69, owner of the Shamrock Hotels at Baguio and Cebu; Mrs. John B. Rodgers, 75, wife of the first Protestant missionary in the Philippines, and Arthur E. McCan, 64, of Milwaukee, Wis., paymaster for the Sheald Lumber Company. All had been allowed to live uninterned because of their age and infirmities.

The hospital head also confirmed earlier reports that José P. Laurel, puppet President of the Philippines under the Japanese, had been flown to Japan.

Halsema, in Philippine government service since 1908, was the engineer who carried out the plan to create a summer capital during the twenty-eight years he was mayor of the city.

FOE KILLED MANILA JEWS

75 Murdered in February Battle, Relief Agency Head Reports

MANILA, April 15 (AP)—More than seventy-five members of Manila's Jewish community were killed during the February battle for the city and many were wounded, it was revealed here today by Morton Netzorg of Detroit, Mich., [illegible] of Jewish relief in Manila.

NIGHT

Mr. Netzorg told the following story:

The Japanese lumped all Germans in Manila into the German-

Jew category, and the Aryans fared no better than the Jews. More than seventy-five German Jews resided in Manila before the war, most of them in the South Manila district, which was the worst affected by fighting in the city. Among these was Alexander M. Bachrach, 55, owner of Manila Motors and Hixbar Mining Companies, who was bayoneted at his home.

Some of those killed were refugees who, after having waited in Shanghai for years for visas, got as far as Manila and then were stranded.

War Dog And Master Recovering Together

Division Command Post, Luzon [AP—Delayed]—In a surgical ward of an American army field hospital attached to the 25th Division you will find in adjoining beds Corporal Frank R. Oliver, of Johnston, W.Va., and "Skipper," the War Dog Platoon.

Oliver has shrapnel in a leg, arm and shoulder while Skipper has a bullet wound through his lower jaw.

The war dog was trained to be suspicious of strangers and hospital attendants could do nothing with him until they moved his master, Corporal Oliver, into the next bed. Oliver made Skipper submit to ministrations. Both are well on the road to recovery. They were wounded leading an advance patrol in the Caraballo Mountains of east-central Luzon.

Oliver and Skipper are veterans of Aitape, Morotai and Luzon fighting. Skipper is a three-year-old German Shepherd Airdale recruited in Ridgewood, N.J.

Yanks Are Plenty Sore As Japs Destroy Beer

An American Division Command Post, Luzon [AP—Delayed]—The unpopularity of the Japanese among Yank doughboys of the 25th Division has reached a new high. The Yanks are quite sore.

Nipponese artillery scored a direct hit on their cache of beer in rugged Balete Pass sector. All but one bottle was destroyed. A nearby ammunition dump and a supply of soft drinks were undamaged.

'Japan Phooey!' Nipponese Cry

AN AMERICAN DIVISION COMMAND POST, Luzon (Delayed) (AP).—A Japanese soldier who surrendered recently to Major James A. Moore, of Kansas City, Mo., in the Balete Pass area, was fed up with bushido and Japanese warrior code. As he approached the major waving a surrender leaflet, he shouted, "Japan phooey! Japan phooey!"

OKINAWA, April 15 (AP).—Small groups of Japanese who attempted to infiltrate the 148th Regiment lines on the 7th Division's front on southern Okinawa were armed only with six-foot poles tipped with three-cornered ten-inch steel prongs, an Associated Press correspondent with the regiment reported.

SYDNEY, Australia, April 15 (AP).—Ralph McGill, editor of "The Atlanta Constitution," and Wilbur Forrest, assistant editor of the New York Herald Tribune, arrived in Australia today on a world tour in behalf of a free exchange of news in the post-war world.

They represent the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Officials of the Australian Newspaper Proprietors' Association informed the Americans that the association had offered to pay all expenses of a proposed free press conference in Australia of some thirty to fifty British, American and Canadian editors and had asked the government to arrange travel priorities for the delegates.

Sees Long Pacific War

Gen. Blamey, of Australia, Finds By-Passing Gives False Hopes

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 15 (AP).—General Sir Thomas A. Blamey, deputy commander in the Southwest Pacific, discounted today any suggestion that the Pacific war might end soon.

Some people have been encouraged in such a belief by the high degree of success which attended the by-passing strategy used by General Douglas MacArthur in his advance on the Philippines, Blamey, who is also the Australian commander in chief, said in a broadcast.

"I have not heard that view expressed by any Allied service leader in possession of all the knowledge available to us," Blamey declared. "Rather, it is felt we must face up to the probability of sustained campaigning and heavy fighting for an unpredictable period."

Molotov-Truman Talk Seen As Closing Big Three Ranks

APR 16 1945

Washington, April 15 (AP)—Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia is expected to come to Washington and confer with President Truman en route to the San Francisco conference.

Diplomatic officials speculated on such a visit today, as a second gesture by the Russian Government toward closing Big Three ranks following the death of President Roosevelt. The first was Premier Stalin's assent to Mr. Truman's request that Molotov be designated as the Soviet representative to the United Nations meeting starting April 25.

Busy Week For Truman

The prospect of a meeting with Molotov and conferences as well with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, of Britain, promises a busy week of international affairs for Mr. Truman. His first full week in office will be highlighted tomorrow by a fifteen-minute address to a joint session of Congress on foreign affairs.

The week also is certain to produce a fairly comprehensive development of policy by the American delegation to the San Francisco conference, whose work was interrupted by the President's death last Thursday.

Among other things, it is expected that the delegation will give strong support to the proposals by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), one of the delegates, for writing into the United Nations Charter, or into its preamble, a forthright statement of the principle of justice as the basis for a world organization.

"Get Acquainted" Meeting

There is also expected to be support for other Vandenberg proposals, and allied proposals of Commander Harold Stassen, that the organization be kept flexible and have powers of review over war and peace settlements.

While official and diplomatic Washington applauded the decision of Stalin to send Molotov to the San Francisco gathering as a result of President Truman's direct request Friday, the possibility is widely discussed here that one of Stalin's objectives is to have Molotov get acquainted with Mr. Roosevelt's successor and restore as quickly as possible the techniques of personal diplomacy which the Big Three leaders have used since the earliest days of the war.

Number Of Problems

There is beginning also to be some talk that when the British, Russian and American foreign ministers get together they may work out tentative plans for a Big Three meeting to tackle some of the problems currently bothering the Allied governments. Among these are:

1. The effort to reorganize the Warsaw Polish Government has been deadlocked for weeks. Personal intervention by President Roosevelt with Premier Stalin shortly before the former's death may have opened up somewhat the possibility for the Government to be reconstituted in time to send a delegation to San Francisco.

2. German control plans—This most urgent problem facing the Allied powers has not been solved beyond the first steps of military occupation. The Reparations Commission agreed upon at Yalta in February has not even started its meetings in Moscow.

3. The Balkans—Several weeks before Mr. Roosevelt's death the United States had undertaken to get consultations with Russia and Britain on the Soviet overthrow of a Romanian administration which was replaced by a Communist-dominated regime.

There are other sets of problems directly concerned with the San Francisco conference, such as Big Three voting powers and the issue of regional setups.

2 FOOD STUDIES FOR CONGRESS

APR 16 1945

House Committee Begins Trip, GOP Group States Plans

Washington, April 15 (AP)—Two congressional groups—one official, the other unofficial—tackled the food question today with special reference to black markets and adequate production.

The official group is the House Food Investigating Committee under Chairman Anderson (D., N.M.). The other is the Republican congressional food-study committee, organized for this, the Seventy-ninth Congress.

Anderson's committee left today on a swing through the Middle West and East to get first-hand information on black markets and especially the meat shortage.

"Some Plain Common Sense"

The Republican group, in a statement, announced its intention to "inject some plain American common sense into the muddled and disorganized food situation."

Representative Jenkins (R., Ohio) said the 44-man group would conduct an independent investigation and study of the whole food situation.

Anderson's official group will hold hearings in Chicago April 16-17, studying especially meat sources and supplies. They will be in Cleveland April 18, for an inquiry into consumer problems; Boston, April 23, for a study of possible black-market channels; and Providence, R. I., April 24th for a check into the meat situation in that State.

Hearing On Diversion Of Meat

Emphasis will be placed on the diversion of meat into illegal channels, Anderson said, when the committee begins hearings at New York city, April 25.

"We are going to try to find out where black markets come from and how they grow," Anderson told a reporter. "We are going to report our findings to the Office of Price Administration for proper action."

One of the Republican group's objectives, Jenkins said in a statement, will be "to help plan a sensible national food program based upon sound conservation and the fullest utilization of our resources—and not upon the New Deal theory of a regimented economy of scarcity."

Subcommittee Chairmen

Jenkins announced appointment of the following subcommittee chairmen, all House members:

Production and marketing of field crops, Hope of Kansas.

Dairy and poultry products, Andresen of Minnesota.

Live stock and meat products, Chenoweth of Colorado.

Distribution and rationing of food, Herter of Massachusetts.

Government food purchases and lend-lease supplies, Jonkman of Michigan.

Farm machinery and farm labor, Cunningham of Iowa.

Fruits and vegetables, Landis of Indiana.

Fish and sea foods, Auchincloss of New Jersey.

Brazil Agrees to Boost 1945 Exports of Cottons

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP).—Brazil has agreed to increase its cotton fabrics exports by some 300,000,000 yards during the next year, the Combined Production and Resources Board announced today. The committee described the agreement as "an important contribution to alleviation of the acute United Nations textile situation."

The new export allotment is in addition to Brazil's previous commitments to ship about 200,000,000 yards of fabrics in 1945.

Ninety million yards have been contracted for by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, as part of Brazil's national contribution to that organization. Various commercial markets will receive about 60,000,000 yards.

The new agreement, negotiated at Rio de Janeiro between C. P. R. B.'s textile committee and the Comissao Executiva Textil of Brazil, also provides for 80,000,000 yards to be purchased governmentally for the liberated areas, principally in the Far East.

U. S. to Aid Construction Of West Indies Oil Plant

P.A.W. to Underwrite Material for Curacao Refinery

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP).—The Petroleum Administration for War said today it is extending assistance to British interests in the construction of a 100-octane refinery on Curacao Island, off Venezuela.

The unit is being built for the Dutch Royal Shell plant at a cost of $6,700,000, as a part of the overall program to meet military demands for aviation gasoline.

United States co-operation consists of acceptance of orders for $1,650,000 of materials to be fabricated in this country. British companies pay cash for equipment for these refinery expansion projects, the P. A. W. said. All refinery facilities in the Caribbean area have been pooled for use by the United Nations.

League Likens Depressions to World Plagues

Ends 6-Year Survey With Chart for Guidance of San Francisco Parley

PRINCETON, N. J., April 15 (AP).—Economic depressions are like world-wide plagues, and international inoculation is the only way to prevent them, a League of Nations report said today.

Spreading from land to land once they get started, striking down strong nations along with the weak, they blight the earth with hunger, hopelessness and talk of retribution.

Sheep sicken and die in the Andes—and a steel worker's pay is cut in Pittsburgh. Rubber goes bad in Java and a blacksmith closes shop in Maine. Oil runs dry in Mesopotamia and a farmer in France can't buy shoes.

Such is the pattern of close-knit global housekeeping drawn by the Delegation on Economic Depressions of the League of Nations after a six-year survey.

Officials of the remnants of the League, whose economic experts have been centered here since war blasted them from Europe, hope the delegation's treatise will be a guide for delegates to the forthcoming United Nations Security Conference at San Francisco.

The 320-page document, titled "Economic Stability in the Post-War World," charts a course for each individual nation to avoid depression at home, and maps a master plan for the nations of the world to keep the wolf from the door.

Long-term foreign lending by the richer countries, and establishment of an international buffer stock agency are suggested as the best known preventives of global depression.

The stock agency would purchase some crude products when prices tend to fall, and sell them when prices tend to rise.

The economists, drawn from several nations of the old league structure and also the United States, contend the economic well-being of the world depends on an expanding economy and avoidance of delation in each individual nation with government help, and on the blending of all these healthy households into a prosperous international neighborhood.

The publication is a sequel to a report by the commission in 1943 on the transition from war to peace economy. The current report deals with the longer-term problem of securing economic stability and full use of productive resources once these resources have been readapted to peace-time requirements.

If an economic stagnation appears, the report says, "an increasing proportion of the spare resources released by technical progress should obviously be devoted to increasing leisure, particularly among the more hard-worked sections of the population."

Urging international co-ordination of national policies for the maintenance of a high and stable level of employment, the delegation suggested appointment of a central advisory body of recognized competence as a part of the general international organization.

Depressions, the report says, "are international phenomena, or national phenomena spreading from one country to another," and the delegation "had to consider the influences of policies adopted in one country upon the economic activity in another."

"We should have failed wholly in our purpose," it states, "had we put forward proposals which might reduce unemployment in one area only at the cost of increasing unemployment elsewhere."

Gen. Wainwright Well, According To Message

San Francisco, April 15 (AP)—A message represented as being from Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, commander of United States Army forces in the Philippines who surrendered to the Japanese at the fall of Corregidor, saying he was well, comfortable and in good health, was recorded here today.

The message was broadcast from Tokyo, being read by the station announcer, and was addressed to General Wainwright's wife at Saknealteles, N.Y., and relatives in Dallas, Texas.

A private individual made the recording.

Conference Delegate Arrives From Britain

New York, April 15 (AP)—Dingle M. Foot, parliamentary secretary of the British Ministry of Economic Welfare and a delegate to the San Francisco Conference, arrived here today aboard an Army Air Transport Command plane.

He said he expected to go to Washington, where he will remain about a week before proceeding to the United Nations meeting.

A GENERAL ORDER TO TROOPS LAST NIGHT TOLD THEM THEY WERE FIGHTING NOT ONLY TO CLEAR THE GERMANS FROM THIS CORNER OF FRENCH SOIL, BUT TO CLEAR THE WAY TO BORDEAUX SO ESSENTIAL FOOD SUPPLIES CAN REACH THE FRENCH PEOPLE BEFORE NEXT WINTER.

THE FRENCH TROOPS HOPPED OFF AT DAWN AND DROVE TOWARD THE CITY OF ROYAN, ON THE RIGHT BANK OF THE RIVER, AND SIMULTANEOUSLY SMASHED TOWARD POINT DE GRAVE ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE RIVER. MASSED ARTILLERY PREPARED THE WAY WITH A SHATTERING BARRAGE THAT LASTED THREE HOURS BEFORE THE ATTACK.

IT WAS OFFICIALLY DISCLOSED THAT THE GERMAN ARDENNES COUNTERATTACK LAST DECEMBER HAD FORCED POSTPONEMENT OF THE PRESENT ACTION AND ANOTHER AGAINST THE GERMAN-HELD PORTS OF ST.NAZAIRE AND LORIENT. THIS IS ALMOST A MERCY MISSION. THE OBJECTIVE IS THE OPENING OF BORDEAUX HARBOR IN A LAND, SEA AND AIR OFFENSIVE COORDINATED WITH FRENCH TROOPS AND A FRENCH AIR FORCE.

THE GERMANS EVACUATED BORDEAUX LAST SEPTEMBER, BUT BLOCKED THE HARBOR ENTRANCE WITH MINES AND SCUTTLED SHIPS AND THEN WITHDREW THEIR TROOPS TO TWO POCKETS AT ROYAN TO THE NORTH OF THE ESTUARY AND AT POINTE DE GRAVE TO THE SOUTH.

A CRITICAL FRENCH FOOD PROBLEM PLACES A HIGH PRIORITY ON REOPENING THE PORT.

THE FRENCH TASK FORCE HAS BEEN ASSIGNED TO THE UNENVIABLE JOB OF SILENCING ABOUT 25 COASTAL BATTERIES RANGING FROM THREE TO 11-INCH GUNS. TO REACH THE BOMBARDMENT POINT FRENCH VESSELS STEAMED THROUGH SUBMARINE AND MINE-INFESTED WATERS.

IT IS A DANGEROUS ASSIGNMENT, BUT AROUND THIS SHIP SIGNS ARE DISPLAYED READING "HONOR AND COUNTRY." THERE IS NO MISTAKING THE PRIDE OF FRENCH OFFICERS AND MEN THAT THEY HAVE BROUGHT THEIR FORGOTTEN NAVY AGAINST THE GERMANS AT LAST. THIS IS THE DAY FOR WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN WAITING.

THE COMPOSITION OF THE FORCE CANNOT BE DISCLOSED NOW, BUT IT PACKS ENOUGH FIREPOWER TO LET THE GERMANS KNOW THAT ALL THE FRENCH FLEET WAS NOT SCUTTLED AT TOULON.

OKINAWA, APRIL 15-(AP)-SINCE THE RYUKYU CAMPAIGN STARTED THE JAPANESE FANATICAL KAMIKAZE (SUICIDE) CORPS PILOTS HAVE BEEN THROWING EVERYTHING THEY HAVE AT THE AMERICAN INVASION FORCE OF 1,400 SHIPS.

IT IS A FRIGHTENING EXPERIENCE TO WATCH THESE AERIAL SCREWBALLS.

SO FAR I'VE WITNESSED A DOZEN OF THESE ATTACKS LAUNCHED APPARENTLY FROM THE JAPANESE HOMELAND, 325 MILES TO THE NORTH.

THE FIRST WAS OFF OKINAWA IN MARCH. IT WAS DAWN AND THE ENEMY PLANES CUT THROUGH A SKY ALIVE WITH A MILLION STREAMING TRACER SHELLS. ONE PLANE MADE A STEEP DIVE INTO A SHIP A MILE OFF OUR PORT, CRASHING WITH A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION. A SECOND CAME IN A LONG LOW GLIDE OFF OUR STARBOARD BOW ABOUT 2,000 YARDS AWAY. THE PILOT DIDN'T CALL THE SIGNALS RIGHT, OR HIS AIM WAS SPOILED BY ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE, BECAUSE HE OVERSHOT.

WATCHING THESE BIRDS COME BOILING IN AND THE RESULTANT FIERY CRASH MAKES YOU JUMPY--AND IT HAPPENS MANY TIMES EVERY DAY.

OFF OKINAWA HUNDREDS OF SUICIDE PILOTS HAVE TRIED TO GET THROUGH THE AIR PATROLS AND THEN THE SHIPS' ACKACK. HAPPILY, !32 :4-'£ 9. 5£384 5-4&35'.

SOMETIMES THEY GANG UP AND COME IN FROM ALL

THE AIR PATROLS AND THEN THE SHIPS' ACKACK. HAPPILY, FEW CRASH ON THEIR TARGETS.

SOMETIMES THEY GANG UP AND COME IN FROM ALL SIDES.

ONE PATROL VESSEL WAS ATTACKED BY SIX SIMULTANEOUSLY. THE SHIP SHOT DOWN FIVE BUT THE SIXTH FOUND ITS MARK--AND AMERICAN BOYS DIED.

ANOTHER SMALL VESSEL WAS HIT AND SUNK. OTHER JAPANESE PILOTS THEN STRAFED THE STRUGGLING MEN IN THE WATER.

SOMETIMES ENEMY PILOTS TRY TO CHALK UP A DOUBLE SCORE. THEY COME IN AND LAUNCH THEIR TORPEDO AT ONE VESSEL AND THEN TRY TO CRASH ANOTHER SHIP.

ONE DAY 15 JAPANESE PLANES GANGED UP ON A TINY PATROL VESSEL. THE GUNNERS OF THIS LITTLE SHIP PUT UP SUCH TERRIFIC FIRE THAT ALL PLANES VEERED OFF AFTER TWO WERE SHOT DOWN.

OFFICERS OF ANOTHER SHIP HIT BY A SUICIDE PILOT DESCRIBED THE ACTION:

"THE PLANE CAME IN ONLY SIX FEET ABOVE WATER AND DESPITE OUR GUNFIRE CRASHED OUR FORWARD DECK. THE IMPACT BLEW A LARGE PIECE OF METAL BACK AMIDSHIPS AND IT TOOK EIGHT MEN TO LIFT IT OVER THE SIDE. FLYING THROUGH THE AIR, IT DECAPITATED A SEAMAN."

BY HAMILTON FARON
ABOARD ADM. MITSCHER'S CARRIER FLAGSHIP, OFF OKINAWA, APRIL 13 -(DELAYED)-(AP)-ONE JAPANESE KAMIKAZE (SUICIDE) PILOT CAME WITHIN 20 OR 25 YARDS OF CRASHING HIS BURNING PLANE INTO VICE ADM. MARC A.MITSCHER'S CARRIER FLAGSHIP AND ANOTHER WAS SHOT INTO THE OCEAN ONLY 100 YARDS AWAY YESTERDAY.

THE ACTION OCCURRED AS MITSCHER'S PILOTS AND SHIPS' GUNS BEAT OFF A SERIES OF NEW JAPANESE ATTEMPTS TO DELAY CONQUEST OF OKINAWA AND TO DESTROY THE U.S. PACIFIC FLEET. PILOTS AND SHIPS' GUNNERS SHOT DOWN MORE THAN 200 ENEMY PLANES IN THE TWO-DAY ATTACK YESTERDAY AND TODAY.

IN THE MIDST OF ONE FURIOUS ATTACK, TRACER SHELLS MARKED SHARPLY THE LINE OF FIRE FROM THIS SHIPS' GUNS AS THEY CONVERGED ON A PLUNGING JAPANESE PLANES, TEARING INTO ITS WINGS AND FUSELAGE.

SEVERAL HUNDRED YARDS AWAY FROM THIS FLAGSHIP, THE PLANE FALTERED AND NOSED OVER SLOWLY. WITH SHELLS STILL POURING INTO IT, IT CONTINUED TO SPEED TOWARD THIS SHIP'S BROAD DECK.

THEN IT NOSED OVER AND DIVED INTO THE WATER, ONLY 20 OR 25 YARDS AWAY.

ALMOST SIMULTANEOUSLY, ANOTHER ATTACKED THE OPPOSITE SIDE OF THIS CARRIER. THIS PLANE, TOO, BROKE THROUGH THE HEAVY ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE AND DARED THE SMALL A-A BATTERIES. IT CAME ON TO WITHIN APPROXIMATELY 100 YARDS OF THE PORT SIDE BEFORE IT, TOO, PLUNGED INTO THE SEA.

NEITHER EXPLODED ON STRIKING THE WATER, BUT WENT IN LIKE DIVING BIRDS. OTHERS EXPLODED OR SUCCEEDED IN LAYING BOMBS OR TORPEDOES CLOSE ENOUGH TO SOME SHIPS TO CAUSE DAMAGE.

ONE JAPANESE PLANE FLEW LOW ACROSS PART OF THE FORCE WITHOUT DRAWING FIRE, RACED TOWARD ANOTHER CARRIER AND DROPPED ITS BOMB JUST IN FRONT OF THE BIG SHIP. THE PLANE SWERVED THEN, POSSIBLY FOR ANOTHER ATTACK, BUT ROLLED OVER INTO THE WATER.

ANOTHER, R

ANOTHER, RIDDLED BY SHELLS AS IT DIVED, CRASHED WITH A MIGHTY EXPLOSION NEAR THE STERN OF ANOTHER CARRIER. FORCE OF THE BLAST HURLED WATER SPOUTS HIGH INTO THE AIR.

A242FX
DESPITE SEVERITY OF THE ATTACK, DAMAGE TO MITSCHER'S FORCE WAS LIGHT. (FLEET ADM. CHESTER W.NIMITZ SAID ONE DESTROYER WAS SUNK; SOME OTHER SURFACE CRAFT WERE DAMAGED.)

ENEMY PLANES WERE KEPT OFF THE FLEET FOR HOURS DDURING YESTERDAY'S HEAVY ASSAULT BY SHIPS' GUNS WHICH FILLED THE SKIES WITH FLAK WHEN EVEN A SINGLE NIPPONESE CRAFT WAS DETECTED.

BUT MANY BROKE THROUGH, TAKING ADVANTAGE OF CLOUD COVER TO SLIP INTO ATTACK POSITIONS ABOVE THE FLEET.

PLUNGING SUDDENLY THROUGH LOW HANGING CLOUDS, THEY STARTED THEIR DIVES, THEIR PATHS MARKED BY BLACK BLOTS OF SMOKE FROM THE BURSTING ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE OF FIVE-INCH GUNS. MANY WERE STOPPED BY THIS FIRE AND WERE BLOWN TO BITS WITH DIRECT HITS, OR SENT PLUNGING OUT OF CONTROL INTO THE SEA.

OTHERS MANAGED TO MAKE THEIR WAY THROUGH THE FLAK-FILLED SKY, CARRYING ON THEIR ATTACK RUNS. THEN WOULD COME THE CRACKLING OF 20 AND 40 MM GUNS, THEIR DEADLY RAPID-FIRE POLKA-DOTTING THE SKY WITH VIVID FLASHES QUICKLY TURNING TO SMALL SMOKE DOTS.

THROUGHOUT THE NIGHT, THE ATTACK CONTINUED, GUNFIRE LACING THE SKY WITH STREAMS OF RED AND FLARES FROM THE PLANES LIGHTING LARGE AREAS.

TODAY, THE BATTLE MOVED AWAY FROM MITSCHER'S FLEET, BUT CARRIER PLANES BORE THE BRUNT OF DEFENSE FOR VICE ADM. RICHMOND KELLY TURNER'S AMPHIBIOUS FLEET AND SHORE INSTALLATIONS. THEY SHOT DOWN 63 ENEMY PLANES OVER OKINAWA, 10 OVER A TASK FORCE AND 80 INTERCEPTED NEAR JAPANESE AIRFIELDS ON KIKAI, AMAMI AND OTHER POSITIONS IN THE NORTHERN RYUKYUS.

ONLY SEVEN AMERICAN PLANES WERE LOST FOR THE TWO DAYS.

BOTH DIVISIONS WERE CONFRONTED BY STUBBORN JAPANESE TROOPS, HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE, KNIFE-EDGE RIDGES AND THICKLY-WOODED TERRAIN. SOME OF THE HILLSIDES ARE SO STEEP THE JAPANESE HAVE SUNK VERTICAL SHAFTS AND FROM THEM HAVE DUG PILLBOX APERTURES OVERLOOKING THE TRAILS.

FOR SIX WEEKS THE 32ND DIVISION HAS MEASURED ITS GAINS IN YARDS.

ONE ADVANCE WAS MADE BY PUSHING SANDBAGS AHEAD FOR COVER UNTIL THE YANKS REACHED AND BLASTED CAVES. SO FAR MORE THAN 150 CAVES HAVE BEEN SEALED BY DEMOLITION OR CLEANED OUT WITH FLAMETHROWERS.

TRUMAN PLEDGES CONTINUANCE OF ROOSEVELT'S AIMS

Asks Cooperative Backing from Congress in First Address.

SPEECH HIGHLY PRAISED

No Changes in Unconditional Surrender Terms, President States.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(AP) President Truman today dedicated his administration to the war and peace ideals of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Emphasizing the humility with which he faces the gigantic task so suddenly laid on him, and his need of cooperative backing, the new President said he takes that program as a duty.

First Speech as President

For the first time as Chief Executive, Mr. Truman spoke to the lawmakers, the Cabinet and foreign diplomats in the hall of the House.

Implicit in paragraph after paragraph of the brief address was his determination to work hand in hand with the Congress.

"With confidence, I am depending upon all of you," he said.

Though he consumed only 19 minutes, the President covered a wide range. In quick order he punched home that:

1—The Axis can look only for the same unconditional surrender terms Mr. Roosevelt voiced at Casablanca.

2—Enemy war criminals will be punished if the Allies have to plunge into such mountain retreats as Berchtesgaden to get at them.

3—The military strategy will continue under the same admirals and generals that Mr. Roosevelt chose.

4—A world organization, dedicated to preventing future wars, must become an accomplished fact.

5—The great nations must demonstrate that they are to "serve—not dominate" in the scheme of things.

6—Domestically, the United States must see to it—and the Truman administration will try to see to it—that the lot of the common man is steadily improved.

Praised by Senators

Immediate reaction to the speech was couched in the highest of praiseworthy terms. Senator Vandenberg (R.-Mich.) called it "a very fine dedication to victory and the public welfare." To Senator Connally (D.-Tex.) it was "eloquent and forceful."

Many House members hit on the same phrases—honest, sincere reassuring. Soviet Ambassador Gromyko called it "wonderful."

Catapulted to the highest office in the land by the death of Mr. Roosevelt, the President seized his first opportunity to address a joint session of Congress shortly afternoon, punctuating a hectic day that started for him in the White House at 8:15 a.m.

After he conferred with Secretary of State Stettinius and British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, the President came to the Capitol at 12:30, took the rostrum of the House at 1:03 and spoke for 19 minutes of his grave duties ahead.

Thunderous applause greeted the spare, smiling President as he arrived, attired in a black suit relieved by a blue and white pocket handkerchief.

He stood erect until the applause susbided, and unused to his role nervously started his speech before he was presented. Speaker Rayburn interrupted and Mr. Truman started again.

APR 17 1945

Thirteen microphones picked up the President's soft, steady and slightly high-pitched tones for international distribution. He occasionally tapped his right foot when he came to an emphatic phrase.

It was a scene in sharp contrast to the last appearance of Mr. Roosevelt, seated in a wheel chair down in front, when he reported on Yalta March 1.

There was another sharp contrast as President Truman studiously followed the text of his 1,500-word address, unlike Mr. Roosevelt's frequent, homey interpolations.

The President said that a more adequate tribute to the fallen leader would be reverent silence but in this hour, silence might give comfort to the enemy. Thus he felt called on, he said, to chart the nation's "forward" course because "our departed leader never looked backward."

As to the conflict itself, Mr. Truman said:

Pledges Continued Fight

"So that there can be no possible misunderstanding, both Germany and Japan can be certain, beyond any shadow of doubt, America will continue the fight for freedom until no vestige of resistance remains."

Much hard fighting still lies ahead, he said, but:

To settle for another temporary respite would surely jeopardize the future security of all the world.

"Our demand has been and it remains—unconditional surrender."

This nation will not "traffic with the breakers of the peace on the terms of the peace," Mr. Truman said, and it was at this point that he banged the palms of his hands on the stand from which he read the pen-and-ink address.

In his drive to crush the foe into submission, he emphasized, there will be no change in the military and naval high command. He paid tribute to the "able direction" of war strategy by Generals of the Army George C. Marshall, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Henry H. Arnold and Douglas MacArthur, and Admirals of the Fleet William D. Leahy, Ernest J. King and Chester W. Nimitz.

"I want the entire world to know that this direction must and will remain—unchanged and unhampered," he ejaculated.

As for the war criminals, the President said surely the United States and its Allies do not wish to see "unnecessary or unjustified suffering" but the laws of God and man "have been violated and the guilty must not go unpunished.'

"Nothing," he said, "shall shake our determination to punish the war criminals even though we must pursue them to the ends of the earth."

The peace to come, he asserted, cannot be secured "if we permit our dangerous opponents to plot future wars with impunity at any mountain retreat—however distant."

Text Of President Truman's Address Upon Foreign

Washington, April 16 (AP)—The text of President Truman's foreign policy speech to Congress follows.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, Members of Congress:

It is with heavy heart that I stand before you, my friends and colleagues, in the Congress of the United States.

Only yesterday, we laid to rest the mortal remains of our beloved President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. At a time like this, words are inadequate. The most eloquent tribute would be a reverent silence.

Yet, in this decisive hour, when world events are moving so rapidly, our silence might be misunderstood and give comfort to our enemies.

In His infinite wisdom, Almighty God has seen fit to take from us a great man who loved, and was beloved by, all humanity.

"Looking Forward"

No man could possibly fill the tremendous void left by the passing of that noble soul. No words can ease the aching hearts of untold millions of every race, creed and color. The world knows it has lost a heroic champion of justice and freedom.

Tragic fate has thrust upon us grave responsibilities. We must carry on. Our departed leader never looked backward. He looked forward and moved forward. That is what he would want us to do. That is what America will do.

So much blood has already been shed for the ideals which we cherish, and for which Franklin Delano Roosevelt lived and died, that we dare not permit even a momentary pause in the hard fight for victory.

"Defend Those Ideals"

Today, the entire world is looking to America for enlightened leadership to peace and progress. Such a leadership requires vision, courage and tolerance. It can be provided only by a united nation deeply devoted to the highest ideals.

I call upon all Americans to help me keep our nation united in defense of those ideals which have been so eloquently proclaimed by Franklin Roosevelt.

I want in turn to assure my fellow Americans and all of those who love peace and liberty throughout the world that I will support and defend those ideals with all my strength and with all my heart. That is my duty and I shall not shirk it.

"Will Continue The Fight"

So that there can be no possible misunderstanding, both Germany and Japan can be certain, beyond any shadow of doubt, America will continue the fight for freedom until no vestige of resistance remains!

We are deeply conscious of the fact that much hard fighting is still ahead of us.

Having to pay such a heavy price to make complete victory certain, America will never become a party to any plan for partial victory.

To settle for merely another temporary respite would surely jeopardize the future security of all the world.

"Unconditional Surrender"

Our demand has been, and it remains, unconditional surrender!

We will not traffic with the breakers of the peace on the terms of the peace.

The responsibility for the making of the peace—and it is a very grave responsibility — must rest with the defenders of the peace, the United Nations. We are not unconscious of the dictates of humanity. We do not wish to see unnecessary or unjustified suffering. But the laws of God and of man have been violated and the guilty must not go unpunished. Nothing shall shake our determination to punish the war criminals even though we must pursue them to the ends of the earth.

Lasting peace can never be secured if we permit our dangerous opponents to plot future wars with impunity at any mountain retreat—however distant.

In this shrinking world, it is futile to seek safety behind geographical barriers. Real security will be found only in law and in justice.

"No Relaxation" At Home

Here in America we have labored long and hard to achieve a social order worthy of our great heritage. In our time tremendous progress has been made toward a really democratic way of life. Let me assure the forward-looking people of America that there will be no relaxation in our efforts to improve the lot of the common people.

In the difficult days ahead, unquestionably we shall face problems of staggering proportions. However, with the faith of our fathers in our hearts, we fear no future.

On the battlefields, we have frequently faced overwhelming odds—and won! At home, Americans will not be less resolute!

"Will Maintain Our Way"

We shall never cease our struggle to preserve and maintain our American way of life.

At this very moment, America, along with her brave allies, is paying again a heavy price for the defense of our freedom. With characteristic energy, we are assisting in the liberation of entire nations. Gradually, the shackles of slavery are being broken by the forces of freedom.

All of us are praying for a speedy victory. Every day peace is delayed costs a terrible toll.

The armies of liberation today are bringing to an end Hitler's ghastly threat to dominate the world. Tokyo rocks under the weight of our bombs.

The grand strategy of a United Nations war has been determined, due in no small measure to the vision of our departed Commander in Chief. We are now carrying out our part of that strategy under the able direction of Admiral Leahy, General Marshall, Admiral King, General Arnold, General Eisenhower, Admiral Nimitz and General MacArthur.

I want the entire world to know that this direction must and will remain—unchanged and unhampered!

"Will Never Forget Fighters"

Our debt to the heroic men and valiant women in the service of our country can never be repaid They have earned our undying gratitude. America will never forget their sacrifices. Because of these sacrifices, the dawn of justice and freedom throughout the world slowly casts its gleam across the horizon.

Our forefathers came to our rugged shores in search of religious tolerance, political freedom and economic opportunity. For those fundamental rights they risked their lives. We well know today that such rights can be preserved only by constant vigilance, the eternal price of liberty!

Within an hour after I took the oath of office I announced that the San Francisco conference would proceed. We will face the problems of peace with the same courage that we have faced and mastered the problems of war.

"Must Work For Peace"

In the memory of those who have made the supreme sacrifice—in the memory of our fallen President—we shall not fail!

It is not enough to yearn for peace. We must work, and if necessary, fight for it. The task of creating a sound international organization is complicated and difficult. Yet, without such organization, the rights of man on earth cannot be protected. Machinery for the just settlement of international differerences must be found. Without such machinery, the entire world will have to remain an armed camp. The world will be doomed to deadly conflict, devoid of hope for real peace.

APR 17 1945

Fortunately, people have retained hope for a durable peace. Thoughtful people have always had faith that ultimately justice must triumph. Past experience surely indicates that without justice an enduring peace becomes impossible.

Denies Wars Are Inevitable

In bitter despair some people have come to believe that wars are inevitable. With tragic fatalism they insist that as wars have always been of necessity wars will always be. To such defeatism men and women of good will must not and cannot yield. The outlook for humanity is not so hopeless.

During the darkest hours of this horrible war, entire nations were kept going by something intangible—hope! When warned that abject submission offered the only salvation against overwhelming power, hope showed the way to victory.

Hope has become the secret weapon of the forces of liberation! Aggressors could not dominate the human mind. As long as hope remains, the spirit of man will never be crushed.

Calls For Co-Operation

But hope alone was not and is not sufficient to avert war. We must not only have hope but we must have faith enough to work with other peace-loving nations to maintain the peace. Hope was not enough to beat back the aggressors as long as the peace-loving nations were unwilling to come to each other's defense. The aggressors were beaten back only when the peace-loving nations united to defend themselves.

If wars in the future are to be prevented the peace-loving nations must be united in their determination to keep the peace under law. The breaking of the peace anywhere is the concern of peace-loving nations everywhere.

Nothing is more essential to the future peace of the world than continued co-operation of the nations which had to muster the force necessary to defeat the conspiracy of the fascist powers to dominate the world.

Great States "Must Serve"

While these great states have a special responsibility to enforce the peace, their responsibility is based upon the obligations resting upon all states, large and small, not to use force in international relations except in the defense of law. The responsibility of the great states is to serve and not dominate the peoples of the world.

To build the foundation of enduring peace we must not only work in harmony with our friends abroad, but we must have the united support of our own people.

Even the most experienced pilot cannot bring a ship safely into harbor unless he has the full cooperation of the crew. For the benefit of all, every individual must do his duty.

I appeal to every American, regardless of party, race, creed, or color, to support our efforts to build a strong and lasting United Nations organization.

You, the members of Congress, surely known how I feel. Only with your help can I hope to complete one of the greatest tasks ever assigned to a public servant. With divine guidance, and your help, we will find the new passage to a far better world, a kindly and friendly world, with just and lasting peace.

With confidence, I am depending upon all of you.

The Cost Of War

To destroy greedy tyrants with plans of world domination, we cannot continue in successive generations to sacrifice our finest youth.

In the name of human decency and civilization, a more rational method of deciding national differences must and will be found!

America must assist suffering humanity back along the path of peaceful progress. This will require time and tolerance. We shall need also an abiding faith in the people, the kind of faith and courage which Franklin Delano Roosevelt always had!

Today America has become one of the most powerful forces for good on earth. We must keep it so. We have achieved a world leadership which does not depend solely upon our military and naval might.

"Must Learn To Co-Operate"

We have learned to fight with other nations in common defense of our freedom. We must now learn to live with other nations for our mutual good. We must learn to trade more with other nations so that there may be—for our mutual advantage—increased production, increased employment and better standards of living throughout the world.

May we Americans live up to our glorious heritage.

In that way, America may well lead the world to peace and prosperity.

A Prayer

At this moment, I have in my heart a prayer. As I assume my heavy duties, I humbly pray to Almighty God, in the words of Solomon:

"Give therefore Thy servant an understanding heart to judge Thy people, that I may discern between good and bad: for who is able to judge this Thy so great a people?"

I ask only to be a good and faithful servant of my Lord and my people.

President Starts Speech Before Introduction, Is Checked

Washington, April 16 (AP)—President Truman's old cronies are having a bit of trouble getting around to the "Mr. President" salutation, and the President himself is a little nervous about all the new formalities.

Mr. Truman, mounting the dais to address the joint session of Congress, started right into his speech, before he was formally presented, according to custom.

Speaker Rayburn (D., Texas), presiding, yelled down to the President:

"Just a moment—let me present you, Harry, will you."

"Sure," Mr. Truman replied just as informally.

The President backed up, was formally presented, and then started his speech all over again.

Applause Moves Mrs. Truman

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Mrs. Harry S. Truman's eyes filled with tears today when top Government officials and diplomats stood to applaud at the start of her husband's first speech as President of the United States.

She bowed her head a moment as he stepped down from the House rostrum and the applause renewed.

The Trumans' 21-year-old daughter, Mary Margaret, smiled slightly with pride in her father's historic moment. Margaret had to lean to one side in her seat in order to see around a gallery post.

"Thank You" To Friends

As they emerged from the executive gallery to leave the Capitol, Mrs. Truman said a brief "thank you" to friends who complimented her husband's speech.

Mrs. Truman and most of the wives of government officials present were dressed in black as were Representatives Mary Norton of New Jersey, Margaret Smith of Maine and Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts.

Eden Applauded

British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, who came to attend funeral services for President Roosevelt and who will go on to the United Nations conference in San Francisco, smilingly applauded President Truman's speech from the section where sat the diplomatic corps.

Soviet Ambassador Andre Gromyko sat forward on the adge of his seat, attentively watching Mr. Truman while he talked.

Truman Speech Evokes General Commendation

Democrats, Republicans and Diplomats Impressed by Pledge of Co-operation

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP).—Senator Wallace H. White jr., Republican, of Maine, the Senate minority leader, summed up in four words today the common reaction of Democrats, Republicans and diplomats to President Truman's speech to Congress—"have only commendation."

The humility of the new President before his task, and the earnestness with which he pledged and asked co-operation were singled out for comment more than any other points.

Congressmen applied such adjectives as "excellent," "fine" and "courageous" to the address.

Democrats almost universally commended Mr. Truman's adherence to the program laid out by President Roosevelt. Many Republicans offered special declarations of co-operation in prosecution of the war and in maintenance of the American way of life at home.

Senator Tom Connally, Democrat, of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, a delegate to San Francisco, said: "President Truman delivered an eloquent and forceful address pledging to carry on the policies of our beloved President Roosevelt. I am particularly gratified at his strong pronouncement in behalf of the San Francisco conference and the establishment of organized peace and security."

APR 17 1945

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, also a San Francisco delegate: "A very fine dedication to victory and the public welfare."

Andrei Gromyko, Russian Ambassador: "It was wonderful."

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas: "I think the President delivered a message that is full of hope. It was a reassuring message."

Representative Joseph W. Martin jr., Republican, of Massachusetts, House Republican leader: "We Republicans will be united in support of the war and we will give him full support in maintaining the American way of life."

Senator Arthur Capper, Republican, of Kansas: "I've been listening to speeches of Presidents for twenty-six years and it's the first time I've heard no comment or criticism by Congressmen."

Represenative Sol Bloom, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee: "President Truman picked up the torch where President Roosevelt dropped it."

Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Ohio: "It was a simple, direct and concise statement of American ideals with which we all agree."

Representative Andrew J. May, Democrat, of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee: "It will put hope in the hearts of Americans and fear in the hearts of our enemies."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana: "A very fit address for the occasion."

Senator George D. Aiken, Republican, of Vermont: "A very reassuring talk, particularly his pledge to keep on working for the common man."

Senator Claude Pepper, Democrat, of Florida: "It gives us new assurance that we will win the war and win the peace."

Senator Joseph H. Ball, Republican, of Minnesota: "It was a very fine speech. Brief as it was it outlined a program which is sound and straightforward."

Senator Hugh Butler, Republican, of Nebraska: "It was indicative of his sincerity and honesty and the people will realize this as time goes on."

Called Level-Headed

Senate President pro tem McKellar (D., Tenn.): "I think he made a most excellent speech. It was level headed and full of common sense."

House Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts: "President Truman's message was a great contribution at this time."

Sneator George (D., Ga.): "It was a most heartening message, reassuring not only to America but to all of the United Nations. The high point was the undoubted and deep sincerity."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky told a reporter:

"It was a very, very excellent address. Full of reassurance to all. It should win the President many more friends."

Senator Johnson (R., Cal.): "I think it was excellent."

Senator McCarren (D., Nev.): "It was a fine speech given under very trying circumstances."

"Inspires Confidence"

Cordon (R., Ore.): "A clear, forcible and courageous statement to the American people, inspiring confidence and loyalty.

Morse (R., Ore.): "I find myself in accord with the general principles of the speech given in an hour so solemn that all should rededicate themselves to American democracy.

Representative Rankin (D., Miss.): "President Truman made a great speech—one worthy of the man, the subject and the occasion."

Representative Randolph (D., W.Va.): "It was a good message by a man who will make a good president."

Honesty And Economy A Truman's First Principle

This is the first of a series of dispatches depicting Presid of Missouri knows him. The author of the series, George K. the Kansas City Star, has known Truman since his advent

By George K. Walla

Independence, Mo., April 16 (AP). "It isn't business and it isn't politics to run this county into debt and I want it stopped. I want it to be made a felony to spend money the county hasn't on hand."

That is the earliest known political philosophy of President Harry S. Truman. He said it at a political rally and picnic in Oak Grove, near here, in August, 1922, when he was seeking elective office for the first time—the Democratic nomination for county judge of Jackson county.

"A Day's Work For A Day's Pay"

"I want men for road overseers who know roads and who want to work—men who will do a day's work for a day's pay, who will work for the county as they would for themselves. I would rather have 40 men for overseers who are willing to work than to have 60 politicians who care nothing about work. I believe that honest work for the county is the best politics anyway."

Truman thus outlined his first theories of government at a time when the postwar depression was just beginning to recede. He spoke from his own bitter knowledge of having gone broke only a few months before in the haberdashery business he had started in nearby Kansas City.

His First Political Job

Truman's first political job was as a $5-a-day road overseer in eastern Jackson county, driving an eight-mule hitch to a road grader. He knew his mules just as he knew the need for an honest day's work.

In those days, as today in many rural sections of America, the road overseer looks after dirt roads, grading and dragging them after rains[illegible] cov[illegible]

Often the system is rooted in [illegible]nty politics, it was then the backbone of the Jackson county Democratic organization.

Industrious, Serious, Friendly

The Truman family had been rooted in Jackson county for a century; and Truman 40 years ago was an industrious, serious but friendly young fellow who knew all his neighbors around Grandview, where the original 600-acre Truman farm was located, and Independence, the Truman home.

The Pendergast organization, then reaching outside Kansas City to extend its power over Jackson county, saw in Truman a likely youngster who would be helpful as a vote-getter, and he started to the White House behind four span of Missouri jackass mules—working from the ground up.

The files of the Kansas City Star hold a mass of clippings showing that Truman, during his tenure on the county court, harped day and night about cutting taxes and preached constantly the theory of economy and value received in governmental expense as in business.

"Cost of government," he told the Kansas City Citizens League on December 8, 1931, "can be cut only by eliminating some services, equalizing the burden and doing it scientifically. It is an economic problem and must be handled in an economic manner."

Truman's constant theme was budget the expense and spend the money only after receipt. He strongly opposed borrowing of money on which interest had to be paid.

A 1930 Comment

The Odessa county Democrat in 1930 launched a boom for Truman for Governor. The boom never developed, but the Democrat's summation of Truman's work is interesting.

"In 1928," the paper said, "he sponsored a movement for a system of paved roads in his county and $6,500,000 in bonds were voted and the work completed. Not a dollar was spent illegally under the watchful eye of Judge Truman. Not only was the road system built which the bond issue called for, but seven additional miles were constructed and after this was accomplished there was $121,000 left over to be applied on more concrete roads."

"Contributed Leadership"

"It should be a satisfaction to the people of Jackson county that Judge Harry S. Truman, presiding judge of the county court, has filed for renomination," the Kansas City Star said editorially on May 26, 1930.

"Judge Truman has been much more than a routine official. He has contributed leadership to an efficient county administration."

"Didn't Want To Go To Senate"

On July 22, 1944, Roy A. Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, and a distinguished Washington correspondent for the Star long before that, wrote of Truman from Chicago in the first hours after his nomination for Vice President:

"No man on earth ever came to the Senate with a worse handicap. He didn't want to go to the Senate, as everyone back home knows. He was chosen by Pendergast because the political situation in Missouri demanded it from the machine standpoint and because Harry with his war record and outstate connections seemed the only man in sight to make the fight for the Senate on the Pendergast ticket.

"Then came the scandals that broke the machine—none of them reflecting on Truman personally. But, being loyal, he did not run from T.J., but defended him. It was a miracle plus the fact that there were three candidates that let him get by [illegible] the narrowest margin. . . .

"Truman . . . has a great capacity for friendship. He is essentially modest. . . . Truman, himself, was the first to say he was no superman. He still does. . . .

"It may be a surprise to folks back home but Truman isn't close to F.D.R., personally.

"Not A Pink Or A Reformer"

"He probably hasn't had over five or six really intimate talks with him in all these years—although many over the telephone. Truman always voted straight-out Roosevelt. He always voted straight-out for labor bills the President was pushing. Yet the Senator's close friends and especially his colleagues knew that at heart he was an old-fashioned Missourian—not a pink or a reformer. . . .

"If anything should happen to F. D. R., many figure there would be a man with common sense and modesty to take over, willing to consult—even if not a superman, and that's just about it.

"Truman came here not wanting the vice presidency any more than he desired the senatorship years ago. All he wanted was to be let alone in the Senate. He said so. The sheer fact he didn't go after it red hot, with all the drive on for others, didn't hurt him here. To friends, Truman confessed he was happy just to remain as s[illegible] He wanted one more term and the[illegible] retire."

London Press Acclaims Truman for His Speech

Finds a Determination to Hold to Roosevelt's Course

LONDON, March 17 (Tuesday) (AP).—London morning newspapers today acclaimed editorially President Truman's first speech to Congress and welcomed warmly his pledge of unwavering support to the late President Roosevelt's ideals, policies and "unconditional surrender" goal.

Stories about Mr. Truman's speech received prominent front-page play and varied in length. Editorial comment showed it was obvious that the British believe Mr. Truman's plans are similar to those of [illegible]. His statement that "it is futile to seek safety behind geographical barriers was well received here.

Newspaper reaction indicated that the British felt Mr. Truman had struck the right chord and that close collaboration among the United States, Great Britain and Russia would continue despite Mr. Roosevelt's death at a critical hour.

"The Daily Express" said: "Roosevelt's idea of victory is Truman's. . . . The new President makes it clear that he is taking over not only the plans and purposes of Roosevelt but the men, the leaders of the fighting forces that Roosevelt chose and trusted."

"The Daily Sketch": "If our enemies had imagined that the death of Roosevelt might have an effect on the American public of the slightest value to themselves, such hopes have been finally set to rest by the moving speech which Truman made yesterday."

"The Yorkshire Post": "Truman's answer rings out with the challenge of a trumpet call in this dawn of a new world."

NEW FIRST LADY LEARNS DUTIES

Confers at White House With Mrs. Roosevelt.

Washington, April 16 (A. P.),—Mrs. Harry S. Truman, the new First Lady, conferred today with her predecessor, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, for more than an hour. Mrs. Truman arrived at the White House at 10:50 A. M. She left by a back entrance at 12:15 P. M., in order to go to the Capitol to hear her husband's first address as President to a joint session of Congress.

The former First Lady showed Mrs. Truman around the White House, explaining in detail the social and household duties of its mistress. Mrs. Truman will receive furthr information as time permits from the chief usher, from Mrs. Meredith Helm, social secretary, and from Mrs. Enriette Nesbitt, housekeeper.

While Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Roosevelt conferred, Army Quartermaster trucks loaded with barrels, boxes and excelsior moved in and out of the White House grounds. This is only the beginning of the mammoth physical task facing Mrs. Roosevelt, who is trying to remove twelve years' accumulation of family belongings out of the White House in a few days to enable the Trumans to move in as soon as possible.

Mrs. Truman had a moving job on her hands today, too. The new President and his family will stay temporarily at Blair House, Government guest house across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House. They have been living in a Connecticut avenue apartment.

Aware that President Truman and his family are entitled to move into the Executive Mansion as soon as possible, Mrs. Roosevelt left Hyde Park yesterday within an hour of burial services for her husband. She returned to Washington on the special train that also brought the Trumans.

If Mrs. Truman wishes it, as she undoubtedly will, Mrs. Roosevelt will see her to advise her on the numerous duties of the First Lady.

Before her husband's death last Thursday, Mrs. Roosevelt had planned to spend today at the Forest Glen Convalescent Center here for wounded service men.

Aside from the thousands of ordinary family items to be removed from the White House, Mrs. Roosevelt will give special attention to the personal belongings of the former President.

There are his hundreds of valuable marine prints and ship models, his celebrated stamp collection, his thousands of books and the mementos of his presidency.

Most of these probably will be placed in the library on the Roosevelt's Hyde Park estate which Mr. Roosevelt bequeathed to the Government after the lifetime of his family.

Thanks State Troopers.

It was in his library, sorting his collections and documents that Mr. Roosevelt had looked forward to spending his final years.

On leaving Hyde Park Mrs. Roosevelt paused a moment at the train to thank each New York State trooper there who helped handle the throngs at the funeral. Upon her arrival in Washington she stopped to thank the train crew members for a safe journey.

Making the return trip with her was her daughter, Anna, who, with her husband, Lieut.-Col. John Boettiger, hurried to find out how their 5-year-old son, Johnny, is faring. The youngster is seriously ill in a hospital.

Flight From Manila.

In New York city Col. James Roosevelt, eldest of the four sons, boarded the Washington-bound train. It was the earliest moment he could reach his mother's side after a flight from Manila.

He and his three brothers have been on military duty overseas. Brig.-Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, the second son, flew in from England in time to attend services in the White House Saturday and at Hyde Park yesterday.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt Jr. and John Roosevelt were unable to return from their ships, somewhere in the Pacific.

MRS. TRUMAN HAS BUSY DAY

Confers With Mrs. Roosevelt On White House Duties

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Mrs. Harry S. Truman today set forth with quiet determination to do what is expected of her as First Lady.

It will not be easy for her. The unexpected assignment is burdened with mourning for former President Roosevelt. It requires placing social and public demands ahead of private life.

Already today Mrs. Truman has moved her family into Blair House, conferred with Mrs. Roosevelt, and appeared in Congress to hear her husband's first speech as President.

News Conference Delayed

She also scheduled a news conference for tomorrow, but it was announced tonight that this had been postponed.

As First Lady, Mrs. Truman probably never will attempt to match Mrs. Roosevelt's variety of activity.

The two are very different type women.

The new First Lady began her efforts this morning by accepting Mrs. Roosevelt's offer, made immediately after her husband's death, to help Mrs. Truman learn of her obligations as mistress of the White House.

Heard Her Husband

In the limousine now assigned for her use, Mrs. Truman came to the White House before 11 A.M., escorted by a Secret Service man, to spend almost an hour and a half with Mrs. Roosevelt and heads of the White House staff.

Mrs. Truman left by a back entrance in time to take her seat as First Lady in the executive gallery of the House chamber and hear her husband address Congress, Government officials, the diplomatic corps and the people of the nation.

She bowed her head briefly as applause for him swelled. Her eyes were filled with unrepressed tears.

Directing Moving

Meantime, the former President's widow is spending long hours directing the monumental job of packing and removing the Roosevelts' innumerable belongings, to enable the Trumans to move into the White House before the week's end.

The President left his executive offices shortly after 4 P.M. to go to his old apartment to pick up Mrs. Truman, planning to return to the Blair House in time "to have supper," a White House attaché said.

BYRNES NOT TO RETURN TO GOVERNMENT POST

WASHINGTON, April 16—(AP) James F. Byrnes told reporters "I have no plans to come back into government service" as he left a conference today with President Truman."

He said he had discussed with the new President "mobilization and unfinished business President Roosevelt and I discussed."

Byrnes told reporters he planned to return to Spartanburg Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.

He previously has indicated he would be available to President Truman for consultation whenever he is needed as "Private Citizen James F. Byrnes."

He said he discussed matters with Mr. Truman which he had previously discussed with President Roosevelt and told him of matters he knew the former President would want Mr. Truman to know.

The former justice of the Supreme Court recently retired as Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion.

PARLEY STAMP BEARS ROOSEVELT'S NAME

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—A new postage stamp to be issued in observance of the United Nations conference at San Francisco will bear the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker announced the change in the original layout today in disclosing that the late President suggested the wording and design for the commemorative stamp. Mr. Walker said that Mr. Roosevelt's last official directive approved a proposal that he buy the first stamp at San Francisco.

The addition of the name, as ordered by the Postmaster General, gives recognition to the authorship of the text. The original wording will be enclosed in quotations, "Toward United Nations, 1945." Below this will be the name of the author.

The new stamp goes on sale at San Francisco April 25, only thirteen days after President Roosevelt's death, and at other postoffices April 26.

In discussing the part played by President Roosevelt in designing the stamp, Mr. Walker said the President called him from Warm Springs late one night to agree that there should be such a commemorative stamp.

"The design, he said, should be as simple as possible. He then suggested the wording: 'Toward United Nations, April 25, 1945.' The border, he thought, should be plain. He approved having a small branch of laurel at the bottom as the sole decorative detail."

The stamp will be in five-cent denomination of the special delivery size and printed in blue by rotary presses in sheets of fifty.

AMERICAN TROOPS FLANK LEIPZIG IN 14-MILE ADVANCE

Yanks Gain New Foothold Over Elbe, 52 Miles from Berlin.

SMASH INTO WURZEN

Third Army Strikes Within 85 Miles of Russian Lines.

PARIS, Tuesday, April 17.—(AP) Three American armies battled possibly 85 miles from Russian lines today, hammering five miles beyond the Elbe river, outflanking the great fortress of Leipzig and driving a steel wedge 30 miles from the enemy's Eastern front base of Dresden.

Yet another American army, the Seventh, broke into the Nazi shrine city of Nuernberg, 90 miles north of Munich and an outer bastion of the German's Alpine retreat, where the final shots in the war in Europe may be fired.

The U. S. Ninth army was 52 miles southwest of Berlin after hacking out a foothold five miles beyond the Elbe, and unconfirmed enemy reports said the Americans had forced a new crossing farther north at Havelberg, 45 miles northwest of Berlin and some 85 miles from Russian lines.

Dash Past Leipzig

The U. S. First army cut loose with a [illegible] dash that swept into Wurzen, 12 miles east of Leipzig, where an estimated 1,000,000 civilians faced an ordeal of fire and steel because 40,000 German troops are bent on making a Stalingrad of that refugee-swollen fifth city of the Reich. Infantry battled up seven miles south of the city.

The U. S. Third army as well as the First was 85 miles from Russian lines and slashing into the rear area of German forces on the Eastern front. Both were up to if not across the western boundary of German territory marked for Russian occupation.

The Third army laid siege to Chemnitz, was seven miles from the border of Czechoslovakia, and shoved a steel fist on northeast of Chemnitz 30 miles from the Elbe and Dresden.

The First army at Wurzen was 18 miles from the Elbe along which the Germans may make their final stand in central Germany—and was less than two miles from the river farther north as it opened an attack at the approaches to Dessau, 52 miles southwest of Berlin.

With the British and Canadians threatening the north German ports of Bremen, Emden and Hamburg, and with the Allies squeezing enemy pockets in western Holland, the Ruhr and on France's Atlantic coast, German soldiers were giving up by the thousands.

Seasoned Nazis Surrender

A total of 66,191 prisoners were counted Sunday, most of them from the Ruhr, where a German Panzer Lehr division which had fought in Africa and Normandy surrendered. Equally surprising was the abrupt capitulation of tough German Marines to the Canadians at Groningen, Holland's fifth largest city.

For all that, Gen. Eisenhower dampened any optimism that the end of the war in Europe was imminent.

He told visiting radio correspondents the war probably would not end until Allied troops had completely occupied Germany, and no victory would be proclaimed "until all important enemy pockets on the Western Front have been wiped out."

Allied air forces were hastening that day with tremendous blows at the German air force, destroying 845 additional enemy planes yesterday.

In the north, the British Second army launched a big assault on Germany's fine river port of Bremen, advancing to within two and a half miles of its southern out[illegible] skirts and farth[illegible] with a 15-mile sur[illegible] river bridgehead [illegible] only 40 miles sou[illegible] burg, Germany's s[illegible]

The Canadian [illegible] the battle of north[illegible] turing Groningen, [illegible] all along the No[illegible] within five miles [illegible]

Farther south, C[illegible] all but pinned four German divisions against the Zuider Zee with a lightning drive that rolled up northwest of Arnhem to within five miles of the old Dutch water line guarding Utrecht, Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

The battle of the Ruhr was almost at an end, and with 176,000 German troops and three enemy generals already captured there, a U. S. First army officer styled it "the greatest defeat any German army ever suffered on German soil."

Dusseldorf Holds Out

Of all the great munitions cities that stud that rich industrial region, only Duesseldorf remains in enemy hands, and with the Germans giving up by the hundreds its fall cannot be long delayed.

Even as this pocket was squeezed of almost its last German, another big trap was sprung on the new but rag-tag German 11th SS (Elite) army in the Harz mountains southwest of Berlin. The trap closed when the First and Ninth armies, the ones which fashioned the Ruhr trap, met four miles north of Kothen, 26 miles southeast of Magdeburg.

The battle to free the Atlantic port of Bordeaux roared into its second day, with 450 Flying Fortresses pounding the enemy positions on the Gironde river after they had been bathed in liquid fire by an incendiary aerial attack Sunday.

The French routed the Germans from Royan, the chief strongpoint on the east bank of the Gironde river, but the Germans still held fast on the opposite side of the stream.

A field dispatch reported that the Second Armored division, which lost one Elbe river bridgehead just south of Magdeburg to a smashing attack Saturday, had joined the 83rd infantry division in deepening a second bridgehead at Barby to the southeast.

52 Miles from Berlin

The Americans were about 52 miles southwest of Berlin's Potsdam suburbs after repulsing one small counter-attack and deepening the bridgehead to five miles.

The Germans had not yet thrown a punch here comparable to the one uncorked when with three divisions they drove the Americans back into the Elbe south of Magdeburg.

The answer may be that they are uncertain where the main blow will fall. German commentators said the Ninth army was "preparing to cross the Elbe at several points" north of Magdeburg. There was no confirmation that the Ninth had crossed at Havelberg, which is about 50 miles northeast of Magdeburg.

Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's Ninth army was prying open some of Germany's best-kept secrets of war as it swung up to the Elbe river on a front of more than 100 miles.

One prize was a $10,000,000 jet-plane factory hidden deep underground in salt mines in the area of Magdeburg. This factory was capable of producing 700 jet planes a month.

APR 17 1945

Yanks Within 7 Miles Of Czech Line; Foe Bolsters Berlin

APR 17 1945

Paris, April 16 (AP)—Third Army infantry advanced to within 7 miles of Czechoslovakia today and virtually cut Germany in two. The Reich's Western front already has been split into northern and southern commands.

The Germans rushed troops and tanks from the Eastern front and Berlin to oppose the grave threat to their capital, 45 miles fro[illegible] the 9th Army elements north of Magdeburg. Three Nazi divisions stamped out the original Elbe River bridgehead at Magdeburg, but another east bank salient at Barby was deepened to 5 miles to within 52 miles of Berlin on the Brandenburg plain.

At Havelberg, Nazis Say

A German frontline reporter said tonight that Allied forces had reached Havelberg, 45 miles northwest of Berlin, where they apparent had forced another bridgehead over the Elbe at a point 50 miles north of Madgeburg.

The final liquidation of the Ruhr pocket is imminent, a dispatch from General Bradley's 12th Army Group headquarters said. Already 176,000 prisoners have been taken from the trap including the surrendered Panzer Lehr (1st Armored) Division, its commanding general and his staff. The Lehr was one of the elite units in the German Army.

Simultaneously the United States 3d Army besieged the big Saxony center of Chemnitz while the 1st Army tightened its grip on Leipzig and cleared the northern third of Halle, and fought within 2 miles of Dessau.

Canadians and Poles reached the North Sea within 5 miles of Emden, pocketing perhaps 200,000 Germans. The 1st and 9th armies formed another traps in the Harz Mountains of 350 square miles.

Junction Imminent

Third Army troops were 75 miles or so from Russian lines southeast of Berlin and the enemy said that a junction was imminent. The German communiqué said Americans had broken into the western section of Chemnitz but were driven out. General Patton's men were less than 30 miles from Dresden.

The American 7th Army sent five divisions against Neurnberg, crashing to within 8 miles of that Nazi citadel and within 160 miles of Hitler's mountain residence at Berchtestaden, nerve center of the German national redoubt. Troops nearing Nuernberg were 97 miles from Munich.

British Nearer Bremen

Late in the day, the British drove to within 2 miles of Bremen. British tanks and armored cars broke out within 40 miles of the larger port of Hamburg.

The Canadians overran large parts of northern Holland, capturing Sneek and moving to within 3 miles of the west coast of northern Holland. Little German resistance was encountered.

Bridgehead Widened

Fighting on the Elbe was the hardest the 9th Army had encountered since the battles on the Roer River. Units of the Hell on Wheels (2d Armored) Division joined the 83d Infantry Division in deepening the Barby bridgehead, 15 miles southeast of beleaguered Magdeburg. Berlin's own defense force opposed the push.

The nearest 3d Army approach [illegible] was made by the Yankee (26th) Division south of captured Hof. The 3d Army took 5,869 captives yesterday to raise its total to 452,137.

Vital Cities Taken

Among the more important cities captured were Wupperthal, Oberhausen, Hagen, Mulheim, Bayreuth, Bamberg, Stendal, the big oil center of Leuna, Walsrode, Bergen and Ruhrort. The Dutch cities of Leeuwarden, Zwelle, Meppel, Herrenveen and Winschoten also fell.

The Dutch city of Groeningen, sixth largest in Holland, surrendered to the 2d Canadian Division and German resistance in northeast Holland virtually ended.

The British 2d Army liberated 6,500 American and British prisoners by capturing Fallingstbostel after a 5-mile advance east of Walrode.

Phoney Army Created

Meanwhile, supreme headquarters disclosed that the Germans, desperately trying to plug the gaping holt in the middle of the front, created a phoney army—the 11th SS Panzer—and threw it into the fight a week or more ago.

It is composed of the poorest scrapings from the Wehrmacht's empty barrel and had neither any SS units nor any tanks. It already has been whipped, overrun, killed or captured or boxed into a new 350-square-mile Harz Mountain pocket southwest of Berlin.

The 1st Army, fighting within 54 miles of Berlin in the Dessau area was very close to another junction with the 9th Army on the Elbe. The two forces had 150 miles of the river's west banks under control.

Every Road Cut

American infantry and tanks had cut every road from northern and cental Germany into the Nazi national redoubt in the south—except the circutious routes through Czechoslovakia.

Third Army pilots said German rail and road traffic was streaming south from menaced Dresden, 28 miles from spearheads, toward Czechoslovakia.

The Western front no longer existed as such in the enemy organizational setup. Field Marshal Ernest Busch was placed in charge of the northern front guarding Berlin from both the Americans and Russians. Field Marshal Albert Kesserling probably was given command of the southern front.

Meanwhile, fighting progressed inside Magdeburg. Greeningen, Apeldoorn, Uelzen and Royan—the latter entered by General Leclerc's famous 2d Armored Division which was attempting to clear the Gironde estuary and open the water front of Bordeaux to sea traffic.

9 Miles From Stuttgart

The French were 9 miles or less from Stuttgart. The British passed the Aller River to within 42 miles of outflanked Hamburg, Germany's largest port and second city.

Assorted personalities such as Franz von Papen, the gray fox of Nazi diplomacy; hoary old Field Marshal August von Mackensen; Prince August Wilhelm, and the Nazi propagandist, Dr. Manfred Zapp, once deported by the United States, were among those reported captured.

In its retreat from the original Elbe River bridgehead, the Hell on Wheels Division suffered severe casualties. However, the disposition was to consider the reverse as only temporary. The 9th and 1st armies had closed up to that last river before Berlin on a front of about 150 miles.

At supreme headquarters, it was said that the Nazi effort on the Elbe had come too late.

Mulde River Crossed

Marshal Busch, 60, now reported in charge of German armies in the north, has been unemployed since the Russians vanquished his Central Army Group on the Eastern front many months ago. What was done with Kesselring's over-all command in the west was not clear, but it appeared to have vanished.

Clear spring skies gave the Allied air forces another chance to rip open the way for continued advances.

It was Patton's Texas and Oklahoma 90th Division which captured Hof. The Yankee (26th) Division drove to near Schwartzanback, 5 miles below Hof. The 6th Armored Division advanced 23 miles to the northwest of Chemnitz and crossed the Mulde river.

Chemnitz In Gun Range

The Breakthrough (4th Armored) Division occupied positions three miles west and northwest and within field gun range of Chemnitz. Infantry, mopping up behind the tanks, made numerous advances of from 4 to 6 miles. The Golden Acorn (87th) Division cleared Schleiz, 23 miles southwest of Gera, and then added 6 miles in its eastward thrust by reaching a point near Ransbach.

The dispatch from 21st Army Group headquarters said British troops broke out of the Aller River bridgehead for a 15-mile advance toward Hamburg.

The British 11th Armored Division was 15 miles beyond the Aller River and was nearing Hermannsburg and Bonstorf, the latter 48 miles south of Hamburg.

Germans Kept Guessing

The advance placed sizable forces of Field Marshal Montgomery's troops south of Hamburg and left the Germans guessing as to whether they would plunge toward that big port or swing eastward to the Elbe.

A breakout at Rethen, on the Aller, 30 miles southwest of Bremen, came after the Nazi air force had made day-long attempts to smash the bridgehead with bombs.

The British 53d Division pushed one thrust north of Rethen for 5 miles into the Salingsloh Forest. Other armored units veered northeast to the approaches of Walsrode.

Fifteenth Scottish troops were still fighting in Uelzen, 32 miles northeast of Celle and 22 miles from the Elbe.

In the Nuernberg sector, General Patch hurled his 3d, 42d, 45th, 12th Armored and 14th Armored divisions toward the Nazi shrine city. The 157th Regiment entered Sebalder Forest just north of Nuernberg. Resistance at points was stubborn.

other enlisted men having voluntarily come in.

The sergeant marched off to the American lines, returned with an American colonel and then rode triumphantly back in a jeep, accompanied by the German general, the colonel and the two lieutenants.

Airman's Parting Gift Is Nazi General

United States Ninth Air Bombardment Division Headquarters, April 17 (A. P.).—Rounding out a "get acquainted" visit with the Army ground forces, Sergt. Robert Loomis of Youngstown, Ohio, a Ninth Air Force radio man and gunner, presented his Twenty-sixth Infantry Division hosts with a parting present—a German general and his staff. In return, the 25-year-old air man received the Bronze Star in a battlefield ceremony held prior to his return to duty with the Ninth's 322d Bombardment Group.

Permitted to inspect the front lines in accordance with the Ninth Air Force's ground liaison program, Sergt. Loomis borrowed a rifle and set out across a stream as the American ground forces attacked Fulda. Becoming separated from his companions, Sergt. Loomis encountered a civilian and told him that unless the occupants of the houses in town displayed white surrender flags they would soon be shelled by American guns. White flags immediately began to appear from windows.

A German girl warned Loomis that a Nazi anti-tank crew was just around the corner, so the sergeant investigated. He walked up behind four Germans who immediately surrendered and revealed that a German general was in a nearby building.

"I went inside," Loomis said, "and bumped into a general, a colonel and two lieutenants. I told them to surrender. They pointed out that I was alone. So I told them they were surrounded, and if they'd give me their word of honor to wait I'd go bring in my colonel."

Loomis left the building and found that his original prisoner bag had increased to eight, four

NAZI GOVERNMENT HAS QUIT BERLIN

BAU

SAALFELD, Germany, April 16—(AP) A German who left Berlin six weeks ago and kept in communication with the flattened capital until he was captured last Thursday, said today the entire government had fled from the city.

The American daylight raid of Feb. 3 wrought the most destruction of any assault on Berlin since the start of the war, the informant said, adding that at least 95 per cent of the city was destroyed.

Thousands of refugees streaming through the capital from the path of the Russians were caught in the raid and killed, he related.

Describing the Feb. 3 attack, he said:

"Terrific destruction was inflicted upon the Potsdamerplatz area. The Propaganda Ministry and Foreign Office on the Wilhelmplatz were hit time after time. The whole southwestern part of the city from Hallesches Tor practically to the Alexanderplatz and the Janowitz bridge was wiped out in that raid.

"The American embassy has been hit several times. The Brandenburg gate and the Adlon hotel still are intact, however. The Adlon is the only hotel of any size left in Berlin.

"The Zimmerstrasse (where the former Associated Press office was located) was virtually wiped out.

"The DNB office building also is gone, but the staff has carried on in the basement. Domei, Japanese news agency, also was still functioning with its Japanese staff last week."

Transocean news agency was bombed out of Berlin in February and the staff came to Saalfeld to set up an emergency radio station. This station was to rebroadcast to the main transmitter near Berlin, which still was undamaged. But the Americans arrived before the Saalfeld station ever got into operation.

21,000 Freed At Buchenwald Murder Camp

STEIN KOPF

All Sick, Many Died After Their Rescue; Slept in 18-Inch-High Cubby Holes

WEIMAR, Germany, April 16 (AP).—The American troops of the 80th Infantry Division who last week broke into the notorious Buchenwald concentration camp a few miles outside Weimar brought fresh air, hope and liberty to 21,000 miserable, sick and ragged men.

Tens of thousands of others had died before the Americans got there, and many of those remaining were too far gone to be saved. In the first twenty-four hours of American administration, about 150 men succumbed to malnutrition and disease. In the next six hours, thirty-nine more died.

All that the small American Military Government staff could do immediately was to increase the soup ration—adding meat and vegetables—and release the interned doctors to help the sick.

The Americans found a shocking mess, but inmates said Buchenwald had been improving lately, with the Germans apparently cleaning it up in expectation of the Americans' arrival. There once were more than 50,000 prisoners at Buchenwald, but a short time before the Americans arrived the Nazis marched 20,000 or 30,000 of eastward.

Many of the camp records were destroyed or removed by the Germans. About half of the 21,000 men found there were Russians. There were 4,000 Frenchmen, and the remainder were of various nationalities.

Many of the internees found were vague about their legal status—whether convicted, accused or merely suspected of various charges. Most of them admitted anti-Nazi activities. Prisoners said Germans held in the camp got bad, but nevertheless preferential treatment.

There were no gas chambers or other means of mass execution, but the internees said there were many individual executions by hanging or shooting in the basement of the camp crematorium.

Barracks 61 of the hospital section, which inmates said was about the worst in the compound, looks like a conventional one-story wooden army barracks. Inside, it is divided into two rows of four-tier shelves divided at 5½-foot intervals by upright partitions.

In each hole, about 18 inches high, as many as six men were quartered. Three in a cubbyhole could lie comfortably on their backs. With six, the men had to lie on their sides. There were no mattresses on the boards and few men had blankets. The patients there had pneumonia, dysentery, typhus and almost every other type of disease.

YANKS LIBERATE 350 POLISH WOMEN

BPU ASTEINKOPF

BLANKENHAIN, Germany, April 16—(AP) American troops sweeping through the area near Weimar today liberated 350 Polish women fighters—330 of them officers or officer candidates—captured by the Germans in the collapse of Gen. Bor's ill-fated revolt in Warsaw last October.

The 89th Infantry division released the officer group, ranging in age from 14 years up to a 64-year-old feminine captain, from a stockade in the woods near this town, which is nine miles south of Weimar. The Fourth Armored division liberated 20 combat riflewomen along with 900 other Allied prisoners found in another camp in the area.

The women soldiers, some dressed in freshly-washed pants and shirts borrowed from American prisoners held in the same camp, almost mobbed their grimy liberators. All were fairly bursting with excitement. They estimated that 3,000 fighting Polish women were captured in Warsaw and scattered in camps throughout Germany.

The women said their former leader, Gen. Bor (his real name is Lt. Gen. Tadeusz Komorowski), was held until recently at another camp in this area, but that the Nazis moved him when American forces approached. This was the first word that Bor was alive since his revolt was crushed last Oct. 3.

"Some of us girls were treated as war prisoners and thrown into camps like this," said Pvt. Eva Domaszewicz. "Others were condemned as bandits and either shot or put at forced labor."

Just before American troops burst into their camp the officer group of captives had a brisk skirmish with some German women who tried to lower a white surrender flag which the Poles had raised as a signal to the approaching forces. The flag was up and down several times before the prisoners got the upper hand. They finally raised a red and white Polish flag which they had stitched from a petticoat.

The feminine officers lack almost everything a woman needs, from hairpins to stockings. There is nothing uniform about their uniforms, and there has been much improvisation. Insignia secretly fashioned from tin cans in past months began appearing on caps, and one set of captain's bars not long ago was part of a tin of corned beef.

Reich Toymakers Digging Graves

By Wade Werner

Ohrdruf, Germany, April 13 (AP—Delayed)—This is the great rocking-horse town.

From its four toy factories in peacetime gaily painted wooden steeds used to gallop forth at Christmas time to find places in children's homes in many countries.

But nobody is making rocking horses here this afternoon. Nobody is thinking of Christmas.

Now Digging Graves

Fifty German civilians—some of them skilled toymakers—are swinging picks and wielding shovels near the summit of a hill overlooking the Ohrdruf concentration camp. They are digging mass graves for foreigners who died or were killed there and also for two Nazi guards who met an untimely end.

30.24-24837

Immediate burial is imperative as a sanitary measure.

About 90 bodies are laid out on the grassy hilltop, most of them naked. Many show the traces of quicklime spread over them when they were stacked in a shed to await cremation.

It was in the shed that American troops found them when they captured the camp.

SS Trousers On One

A few yards away from these bodies lie those of two Germans, one in the SS (Elite Guard) trousers and boots he wore when he was killed during the fight for Ohrdruf; the other, in civilian clothes.

It seems the latter offered to show American GI's the concentration camp, about which they were asking. While he was showing them around, some former inmates denounced him as an SS guard who a few days ago was maltreating prisoners.

They emphasized the accusation with trench knives, adding him to the other dead on the hilltop.

BROOKLYNITE NEARS GOAL

Pilot Has 6½ Planes to Credit —Father Got 7 in World War I

AN EIGHTH AIR FORCE FIGHTER BASE, in England, April 16 (AP)—Lieut. Clinton Burdick of 19 Montgomery Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been slowly nearing his goal as a fighter pilot, that of beating his father's record of destroying seven German planes in World War I.

Young Burdick is only half a plane behind now, having splintered three on the ground, shot down three and shared a fourth in the air for a total of six and one-half.

"When the war broke out I told dad I would beat his record," Lieutenant Burdick said. "I am still a half plane behind, but the war isn't over yet."

Lieutenant Burdick, a 20-year-old graduate of the Poly Prep Country Day School in Brooklyn, was employed by the British Ministry of War Transport in New York City before enlisting in the Army Oct. 22, 1942. He came overseas last October. His father is Howard Burdick of the same address.

'Great Defeat In Ruhr'

United States 1st Army, Germany, April 16 (AP)—The Ruhr pocket action is "one of the greatest defeats any German army ever suffered on German soil," a 1st Army staff officer said tonight as 1st and 9th army troops took their one hundred and seventy-six thousandth prisoner from the trap.

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's 1st Army was in the final stage of writing off the great battle of annihilation.

About 30,000 German troops still are believed to be in the pocket.

"Establishing of the Remagen bridgehead was dramatic," the staff officer declared, "but the Ruhr pocket has been one of the biggest defeats for the Germans."

YANKS IN GERMANY TAKE RICH PRIZE

With the Ninth Army, April 16 (A. P.).—The Thirtieth Infantry Division has captured a German Army proving ground with more than 2,000 artillery pieces—a rich war prize. Many of the field pieces were of types never seen before by American military experts. Some were gigantic guns, far greater than any yet used by the enemy on the western front.

The proving ground is at Wolmirsted, six miles north of Magdeburg. It will take weeks for the American and British experts to complete their examination of the weapons.

Headquarters, U.S. 9th Air Force, April 16 (AP)—American and Russian planes met and exchanged greetings over the central German battle zone today.

Both the American and Russian flyers were speeding along at tree-top level when the meeting took place. The Russians apparently were first to recognize their allies for they suddenly started aerial acrobatics.

There was a friendly waggling of wings and maneuvers before the Allied planes departed for their respective fields.

EISENHOWER LIVING IN RAILWAY COACH

London, April 16 (A. P.).—A London & North Eastern Railway sleeping car has been converted into an armored coach for Gen. Eisenhower and is now on the Continent for his use. The car contains a conference room and a combined dressing and sleeping compartment. The roof, sides and ends are armor-plated and the windows, of bullet-proof glass, have steel shutters.

No V-E Day While Pockets Hold Out

An Advanced Command Post, April 16 (AP)—The war in Europe probably will not end until Allied troops have occupied Germany completely, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower told a group of visiting United States radio correspondents today.

The General said he did not believe there would ever be a formal German surrender.

"Nazi units, including divisions, corps, armies and finally army groups will give up separately as they exhaust their ammunition and gasoline, or find themselves hopelessly trapped by Allied encirclement," he said.

"But there will be no announcement of V-E day until all important enemy pockets on the Western front have been wiped out."

Praising the size and skill of the Russian armies as well as his own, Eisenhower said the Soviet drive from the east could be expected when ground conditions permitted.

As to which Allied army would finally enter Berlin, the supreme commander pointed out that his single purpose in this war always has been to crush the German armed forces. He said he was not interested in geographical points.

Dutch Nazi Shoot Americans

With Canadian Troops in Holland, April 16 (AP)—A British medical officer has reported that Nazi Dutch SS (Elite Guard) troops shot and killed six members of a United States Flying Fortress crew parachuting to earth from their burning plane near Apeldoorn.

The pilot and two other wounded men were brought in by Germans, who said the pro-Nazi Dutch had deliberately shot the Americans, according to the medical officer. The latter, a major, is in charge of Allied war prisoners in St. Joseph's Hospital near Apeldoorn.

'I Am Only An Empty Bottle,' Melancholy Ex-Duce Laments

Bad Blankenburg, Germany, April 16 (AP)—Gen. Vittorio Foschini, former Minister of Information for the Italian armed forces, says that when he handed in his resignation, fifteen months ago, Benito Mussolini told him "I do not blame you—all my collaborators have turned villain."

Mussolini put his head down on his desk and said "I am only an empty bottle . . . only an empty bottle," according to Foschini.

The former Italian official, his wife and 80-year-old Count Ettore Tolomei, former administrator for southern Tyrol, were held under guard by the Germans until just before the Americans arrived. American military police assumed custody of them.

But Germans Got There First

In an interview yesterday Foschini said the German "rescue" of Mussolini was not the spectacular job the Nazis pictured it.

"The Premier's guard," Foschini related, had been notified not to resist "if somebody comes for him." He said the order was given with the idea the Allies would get him, but the Germans got there first.

Foschini said that in one of Mussolini's fits of melancholy the former Italian dictator remarked: "If I turn against the Germans they will kill my son Vittorio. They are holding Vittorio hostage."

The voluble Foschini, who said he was arrested in February, 1944, declared that on the eve of the execution of Mussolini's son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Count's wife, Edda, pleaded with her father for his life.

"There was a terrible scene," said Foschini. "Edda went into hysterics. Il Duce threw up his hands and said: 'I can do nothing. I am a prisoner of the Germans.'"

Mrs. Foschini is the former Gabriella de Montemayor, daughter of the Marquess Guilo de Montemayor. She said an uncle, Richard Salmona, lived at the Ambassador Hotel in New York city.

Madam Is Indignant

With her eyes flaming she described life under the Gestapo.

"Why, in Weimar," she related, "I asked the chambermaids to wash the baby's things and they told me to do it myself. I told them I had never done anything like that in my life. I finally went down in the laundry room and asked one of the laundresses if she would do my washing. She threw a tub of dirty water over me and shouted 'Swine.'

"I threw a pail back at her.

"In Friedreich Roda they kept us in a cheap little hotel. Soldiers kept coming to the hotel with their women in the morning, in the evening and at night. We simply had to leave that immoral place. So we went to the Gestapo and told them we had to have another hotel. They moved us, but do you know they made us go in a truck."

Schuschnigg Alive, Held In Camp, Austrian Says

By J. W. Gallagher

On the Elbe River, Germany, April 16 (AP)—A former Austria official arrested by the Nazis wit Kurt Schuschnigg said today th former Chancellor of Austria wa alive and in a concentration cam at Oranienburg.

The official, who was taken int German custody after his country' absorption into the Greater Reich asked that his name not be use for fear of Nazi reprisals.

He said Schuschnigg, who op posed the German-Austrian An schluss, was still in good health s far as he had heard and was livin in a small house in the middle o an SS (Elite Guard) camp a Oranienburg.

Former Vienna Mayor

The informant also reported tha among the 12,000 prisoners i the dreaded Dachau concentration camp in Austria were a former Vice Premier of Austria and Richard Schmitz, one-time mayor of Vienna.

He expressed belief that Pasto Martin Niemoeller, German Pro estant leader arrested in 1937, was still alive in Dachau. He said that Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler recently had the grandchildren of Franz Josef, last Austrian Emperor, thrown into the camp. It was believed they were taken into custody out of fear that Austrians might rally around them politically.

United States 9th Army troops occupying Halberstadt have found Baron Carl von Karnvinsky, former under secretary of state and head of the statistical department of Austria.

Out On Probation

Like other Austrian officials, Karnvinsky was sent to Dachau after the Anschluss. Two years ago was released on probation and given a small job in Magdeburg.

"I had to sign a paper when I was let out of Dachau to the effect that I'd never tell what I had seen there," he said. "I know Himmler will kill me if I say anything. I know it. There are Werewolves (Nazi underground terrorists) everywhere."

Yanks Uncover Huge Nazi Plant Producing Planes Underground

TARTHUN, Germany, April 16—(AP) A $10,000,000 Nazi factory 600 feet underground operating with a planned production of fuselages for 700 jet fighter planes a month was uncovered here yesterday by the U. S. Second Armored division.

One of the keys in the vast underground system built by the Nazis to thwart bombings, the plant gave insight into the ingenious industrial empire conceived only for war by Adolf Hitler.

"To look at this place you'd never think there was anything here," declared Pvt. Henry Mickey, Pulaski, Va., one of the guards of the huge underground plant just outside this town, which is 39 miles northwest of Hal[illegible].

The factory is in an active salt mine. From the outside it looks like any other salt mine with a couple of buildings, a railroad siding and a tower or two.

The 2,000 workers employed were scattered out for a mile or two from the plant. Truck traffic was kept at a minimum.

All the factory installations were in huge chambers several hundred feet long and wide at the mine's 900-foot level. Another 600 feet farther down was the regular salt mine which was worked to keep up the deception.

Single engined Heinkel-162's were being built. The factory director said they had a speed of 600 miles an hour. Scores were still on the assembly lines.

Fuselages were lifted at night by freight elevator to railroad cars which ran them some 15 miles away to Bernburg, where the wings and engines were put in at another secret factory.

The director of the factory said it was moved here from above ground at Schoenebeck on the Elbe last August.

The factory was run so quietly that not many German civilians knew about it. One of those who knew, however, was an angular man who identified himself as Frank Cornelis and said he had lived at Everett, (Boston) Mass. He said he was born in Boston and claimed American citizenship, but that he was brought to Belgium by his parents in 1932.

When the Germans called for wor[illegible] come to the Reich he volunteered and apparently was accepted, although he had an American passport.

"I have a brother in the American army," he said. Asked why he built planes which would be used against his brother, he replied:

"I had to eat, didn't I?"

Like other workers he was paid the equivalent of 40 cents a day.

Because the steam power was cut off one had to go down into the mine in a small electric cable elevator. It was an odd feeling to drop 900 feet into a dark hole depending on enemies to see that one got there safely. Just to make sure everything went well, Lt. Col. Eugene Traham of Lafayette, La., took the mine director along on the inspection tour.

Branching off from the salt mine tunnels were workshops filled with the latest machine tools. There were hundreds of lathes.

sh Colonel Says Nazis Lynched U. S. Flyer

United Stat[illegible]h Armored Division in pril 16 (A.[illegible]berated British prisoner today tha[illegible]ivilians had killed two merican a[illegible] by lynching and the [illegible]cking him[illegible] wounded.

"One American airman was lynched and left hanging to a lamp post in Chemnitz," said the Briton, a medical lieutenant-colonel captured in Greece in 1941 who had been in charge of a hospital prison camp overrun by the Fourth Armored Division.

"Another airman was kicked to death in the Chemnitz railroad station," the colonel added. "We will produce eyewitnesses of these atrocities for the war crimes investigationg committee.

"What I would have to say about the Germans would burn the insulation from the wires. Take a look around here and you will see enough of their work."

Many Amputees In Camp.

This hospital camp is shared by 900 Allied soldiers, including 100 Americans. Men in one ward hobbled about on stumps where feet used to be. They were victims of frostbite caused by bailing out at high altitudes or by winter marches from as far away as upper Silesia with nothing but bread crusts to eat.

In another ward lay men recovering from battle casualties, with arms or legs amputated.

Outside, clustered about a garbage bin, was a group of Russians, many with legs or arms gone, ravenously licking the inside of empty C ration cans. When one man gave the can a swipe with his tongue he would pass it on to another.

Russians Just Skin and Bones.

The Russians were nothing but skin and bones. None had had a square meal since the Germans got them. Their eyes were sunken in their bearded faces. The appearance of Third Army tank men made no impression on them. Constant hunger apparently had affected their minds.

The Americans, who also had lost considerable weight, did what they could for the Russians by sharing their own Red Cross food parcels, because the Russians got none. For the Russians the Germans had a special big box-like coffin mounted on wheels and with a sliding bottom. When loaded with bodies it would be rolled over a pit and the bottom could be jerked out.

Liberated Americans said that a few hours before the Fourth Armored rolled up 200 half-starved Polish and Rumanian Jewish women were herded down the road past the camp by German women guards in uniform who lashed stragglers with leather thongs.

GERMAN PLANE MAKERS SEIZED

Some Nazi Mayors End Lives When Caught.

Calbe, Germany, April 16 (AP).—Three men claiming American citizenship who helped to build German warplanes have been captured by the United States Ninth Army. One ran a hnge underground aircraft factory at Eschershausen and the other two were engineers in the same factory. Two of them said they had worked in Detroit and the third was from Chicago. (Fuller identification was not contained in this censored dispatch.)

The aircraft plant had three types of slave laborers, conscripted workers from France, Poland, Russia and other occupied countries, criminal prisoners from Germany and political prisoners.

Moving eastward out of the Westphalian [illegible] belt, the Ninth Army is entering territory occupied by undiluted Nazis. The people are sullen and surley. Into this area Adolf Hitler packed many secret industries, foreign labor camps and some of his prize Nazi leaders.

Here is a brief picture of some of the savage and somewhat incredible life in the area which has been uncovered by the Eighty-third Division:

Ordered by the Americans to provide food for the Poles, Czechs and Russians starving in labor camps, a Nazi party leader and Mayor of the small town of Klienemuhlingen killed his wife and two children and then himself. Nazi leader Erwin Link in Haberstadt killed himself when American officers approached his hiding place. Two other Nazi mayors committed suicide when the Americans took their towns.

In Halberstadt some Americans noticed a dirty handkerchief waving feebly from a stick poked out of a barred window in a castle dungeon. Breaking through two doors they found seven Russian prisoners who said they had been there fourteen days without food. Lieut.-Col. James Hanrahan of Des Moines, Iowa, military governor for the town, ordered German doctors to tend the Russian prisoners.

A German general trying to get to Berlin infiltrated his automobile into an American column until he was halted and taken prisoner. A Danish SS general also was captured. All he wanted was not to be sent back to Denmark. A German major-general was found shot to death on a street in Calbe.

They told today of watching the Germans erect posts in the ground in front of their prison windows and of waiting for the day when they would be led out before a firing squad and tied against the poles, but that day never came.

Nazis Leave Condemned

Two days ago the Germans went away and left the condemned Americans locked in their cells. After a while they heard a jeep outside and a doughboy saying: "I guess we had better shoot the damn locks off."

The four prisoners had been sentenced to death after the Germans planted "verboten" articles in their bedding.

"It was just after they had brought in a whole bunch of prisoners from the Ardennes and they might have wanted to make an example for them," said Sgt. Gervis R. Dickerson, Pelly, Tex., who was captured at Alsdorf on Oct. 15 and liberated by men from his own division when the veteran 30th took over this ancient Saxon town.

The Nazis had [illegible]ntez a pistol in D[illegible]ring roll call at the Faulenbuster Stalag 11-B on Oct. 29, 1944.

Propaganda papers were planted in the blankets of the other three—Cpl. Julius C. Lewis, Brutus, Mich., and Pvt. Kenneth K. Evans, Pontiac, Mich., both from the 820th tank destroyer battalion, and Sgt. Eugene R. Manfredonio, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

The four men were taken to Hannover, where their trial before a grey-uniformed German military court began Jan. 2. They were represented by a civilian counsel who talked to them through an interpreter who "couldn't understand us any more than we could understand him." The four were convicted and were sentenced to death.

"We were asked if we had anything to say for ourselves and we all did," said Manfredonio.

"Dickerson stood there with a Bible in his hands and swore on that Bible that we were as innocent as new-born babes. He told them we were all too young to die." W were talking for our lives.

"After that they paraded through the streets of Hannov and the civilians just stared at us

The four American soldiers we brought here Jan. 9 and thrown unheated and poorly lighted sing cells where they were kept for a but 10 minutes out of every 24 hours.

"They let us out five minutes each day for washing and five minutes for a walk in the yard," Dickerson said.

The men were allowed no books or magazines and had nothing to do but sit by themselves in the bitter cold or look out of a window by standing on a bed which was nothing but a board platform with no mattress or covering.

Evans talked once and they handcuffed him to the bed.

Each received a half a loaf of bread every three days and to this was added three small potatoes for dinner and a dipper of soup for supper. As they were not registered prisoners they did not receive Red Cross packages. They lost on the average about 25 pounds.

Today they sat around a table in a rather comfortable room. They could not walk much because their legs were not used to it.

"I'm glad for Gene," Dickerson said, motioning to Manfredonio. "His wife is expecting next month. He has been awfully worried. The waiting. That was what was bad."

"In some ways we were lucky," said Lewis. "My buddy and I were captured in the Ardennes bulge. They made us ammunition carriers and we went right up under our own artillery fire. After they had finished with us they took us out to kill us. The guards marched us up a road and when they got us to a ditch they opened fire from behind. I rolled into the ditch and lay there until they walked away. My buddy was dead as hell. I crawled away and got captured again. But I'm lucky, I'm still alive."

BRUNSWICK, Germany, April 15—(delayed)—(AP) Four U. S. soldiers sentenced to death by a German military court sweated it out for 93 days in solitary confinement before their rescue by advancing American divisions Friday.

French Casualties Heavy At Bordeaux

Paris, April 16 (AP) — French forces battling to reopen Bordeaux to shipping and wipe out 20,000 pocketed Nazi troops have scored an initial victory with the capture of Royan at the mouth of the Gironde River.

French tanks and infantry charged into the city of 10,000 on the river's north bank in savage fighting yesterday.

American bombers, American artillery and French naval units pounded the German positions before the land assault.

French Casualties Heavy.

Resistance was described as bitter on Point de Grave, on the south side of the mouth of the Gironde, with the French suffering heavy casualties. They were driving headon against a strong enemy line crossing a narrow tongue of land, and had little room in which to maneuver.

Bordeaux, fourth largest city in France, has been in Allied hands since last October, but the Germans pocketed along the Gironde have prevented use of the port for shipping.

Red Cross Girl Makes Emergency 'Chute Jump

Cannes, France, March 28 [AP—Delayed] — Doris Anderson, 28, American Red Cross Club girl of Miami, Fla., made an emergency parachute jump from a B-26 in the Alps recently and "was glad to land without ruining my Nylon stockings."

The pretty brown-haired girl said today she was en route to Cannes from Paris to recuperate from pneumonia and had thumbed a ride on the first military plane available. The engines conked out in bad weather when flying at a height of about 8,000 feet.

The crew chief, she said, had commented that "women are in the way" and ignored her until the plane looked as if it would crash. Then he helped her put on a parachute and "told me to pull the rip cord like hell," she said.

Miss Anderson said she was "darn mad at them for letting me go first." "I dropped 4,000 feet before I began pulling the rip cord which cut my hand and ruined my fingernails," she said.

Exchange of Leopold Falls Through

Brussels, April 16 (A. P.).—The Brussels newspaper Laatste Nieuws said today that negotiations had fallen through to free the interned Belgian King, Leopold, and some French political chiefs who have sought refuge in Swiss territory. The newspaper said the negotiations were undertaken by the Swiss Government.

defensive death-stand against what he called the "last massed" Russian offensive against the Nazi capital.

The Red Army airborne troops dropped in Berlin's defense ring somewhere between the city's eastern limits and heights won by the Red Army 23 miles to the east, the Berlin radio commentator, Ernst von Hammer, said, as German reports indicated that four Russian armies totaling perhaps 2,000,000 men were on the move.

Begins At 3.50 A.M.

The long-expected offensive began at 3.50 A.M. yesterday, the German high command announced, and drove forward along a 120-mile front, at two points 85 miles from the American 3d and 9th armies. Berlin conceded that a rapid linkup was possible.

Hitler, who issued a special order of the day announcing the Russian offensive some hours after the German high command had done so, commanded east-front soldiers to "drown the Bolshevik assault in a blood bath" and hinted darkly at German treachery, warning his soldiers to watch for German officers who might give retreat orders.

Guns Heard In Berlin

The fire of 1,000 Russian guns was heard throughout the day in Berlin, the enemy admitted, as Soviet assault units battled under cover of hundreds of planes bombing and machine-gunning German positions on Berlin's eastern approaches.

All along the front, Red Army engineers were speeding amphibious tanks and armored units into bridgeheads across the Oder and Neisse rivers which were being built up hourly. At least two new footholds across the Oder were reported—the latest at the river's elbow east of Eberswalde, 17½ miles northeast of Berlin.

German Commentator Reports That Russ Paratroops Have Landed Less Than 23 Miles From Capital

Overshadowed by the great operation, which was not yet officially confirmed by the Soviet high command, were Red Army drives in Austria, Czechoslovakia and East Prussia.

In the Austrian Alps, Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian Army battered through 1,100-foot hills to within 29 miles east of Austria's second city of Graz by capturing Fuerstenfeld in the Feistritz River Valley. Other spearheads battered through the Danube Valley to a point 59 miles east of Linz.

18 Miles From Bruenn

Farther north, Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2d Ukranian Army made a 12-mile breakthrough in southern Moravia and plunged within 18 miles southeast of the Czechoslovak war-production city of Bruenn (Brno) by the capture of Horni Bojanovice. In East Prussia, Russian rearguards left only 44 square miles of the Samland Peninsula in enemy hands and thrust within 2 and 10 miles of the escape ports of Fischhausen and Pillau.

Late German broadcasts asserted that Soviet parachute troops who landed within Berlin's defense ring had been encircled and wiped out. But at the same time the enemy said that Soviet assault waves had torn a deep breach in enemy lines on both sides of Frankfurt on the Oder, 33 miles east of Berlin, as they battled to break a corridor through to the paratroopers.

Indirect Russ Confirmation

Indirect confirmation that the offensive had opened came from Moscow.

"The attack on Berlin from the east and west has started," a Soviet historian, Eugene Tarlel, said over the Moscow radio, while an Associated Press correspondent cabled through censorship: "There is reason to believe that the offensive of which the Nazis are in such dread is upon them."

The Triple Assault

According to German reports, the Russian grand strategy was developing into a triple assault that menaced Berlin frontally and threatened to link with American armies both north and south of the capital.

The attacks were coming from these directions:

1. Frontally, Marshal G. K. Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army was striking from bridgeheads across the Oder east and northeast of Berlin, on a 57-mile front from the Oder-Neisse River confluence near Fuerstenberg, 43 miles southeast of Berlin, to Wriezen, 23 miles northeast.

Infantrymen, supported by more than 200 tanks and a relentless artillery bombardment, struck west of the Oder fortress of Kuestrin and won control of high ground 3 miles west of Seelow, which is 26 miles east of Berlin. Here they were 23 miles east of Berlin.

Bridgeheads Linked

Zhukov's forces had slashed across the railroad defense line running east of Berlin from Wriezen to Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, Berlin admitted, and were storming a vital rail junction on that line 2 miles north of Seelow.

Capture of the heights linked several minor bridgeheads across the Oder between Kienitz, 32 miles northeast of Berlin, and Lebus, 32 miles east, Berlin said, and a battle was raging.

2. North of the central sector, the 2d and 3d White Russian armies of Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky and Alexander M. Vasilevsky were reported tearing up communications between Berlin and the Baltic port of Stettin.

Stettin Being Shelled

In this sector, the enemy said, the combined armies established a bridgehead across the Oder River "just a few hours ago" in the area of Schwedt, 42 miles northeast of Berlin and 28 miles southwest of Stettin. The Moscow radio reported Stettin was under artillery fire.

The "hotly contested" bridgehead was within 15 miles of the Berlin-Stettin superhighway and 94 miles from the American 9th Army which crossed the Elbe River at Haverberg northwest of Berlin. Berlin said the Red Army intended cutting communications between Berlin and Stettin and flanking both cities.

3. Southeast of Berlin, Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army was reported striking west from new bridgeheads across the Neisse River within 50 miles northeast of Dresden for a linkup south of Berlin with the American 3d Army, 85 miles away.

Russians In Final Assault, Hitler Warns Troops

London, April 16 (AP)—Adolf Hitler declared tonight that the Russians, Germany's "arch enemy," had launched their final, long-expected offensive on the Eastern front, and exhorted his soldiers to beware of treacherous officers.

The offensive had been announced a few hours earlier by the German high command. Berlin broadcasts said Soviet armies set the massive onslaught in motion along a front of more than 100 miles at 3.50 A.M., with the objective of joining the Americans north and south of the capital. The Russians were reported breaking through German defenses and smashing to within 25 miles of Berlin.

Seelow Heights Captured

Transocean, German news agency, announced tonight that the Russians had captured the Seelow Heights, about 23 miles east of Berlin, and linked up their bridgeheads southwest and northwest of Kuestrin.

["The attack on Berlin has started from the east and west," Eugene Tarle, Soviet historian, said today in a Moscow broadcast on the Red Army hour program. The broadcast was recorded by the FCC.]

Remarks On Roosevelt Death

Hitler's fanatical appeal to his Eastern front soldiers dramatically focused the conditions within his Reich. His order of the day hinted darkly at Russian treachery, told Germans they must fight furiously to save their women from rape and murder, and held out the hope of a turn in the tide now that President Roosevelt is dead.

"For the last time the Jewish-Bolshevist arch enemy (Russia) has launched his massed attack," he proclaimed.

"Watch particularly for the few treacherous officers and soldiers who, in order to secure their miserable lives, will fight against us.

"Anyone who orders you to retreat and is unknown to you must be arrested immediately and if necessary disposed of, whatever his rank."

Calling upon the East front to "drown the Bolshevist assault in a blood bath," he declared the Russians would "suffer the old fate of Asia—they must and will perish front of the German capital."

"You yourselves know what fat threatens, particularly the Germar women, girls and children."

"Soldiers in the East, you yourselves know what fate threatens, particularly the German women, girls and children," Hitler asserted. "While old men and children are being murdered, women and girls are being reduced to the status of prostitutes, the remainder led away to Siberia."

"Expected Since January"

"We have expected this offensive and since January of this year everything has been done in order to build up a strong front. A tremendous artillery concentration is meeting the enemy," Hitler continued.

"This time the Bolsheviks will suffer the old fate of Asia—they must and will perish in front of the German capital.

"Whoever at this moment does not fulfill his duty is a traitor to onr nation.

"Berlin remains German," he declared. "Vienna will again become German. Europe will never become Russian."

Calls For "Blood Bath"

He concluded with an appeal to "drown the Bolshevik assault in a blood bath."

"At the moment when fate has eliminated the greatest war criminal of all times, the turn of the tide will come," he said.

Offensive Described

The German communiqué said the big Soviet streamroller swung into action from the mouth of the Neisse River, southeast of Berlin to the Oderbruch, a low plain on the west bank of the Oder, northeast of the capital.

"Bitter fighting is in progress on the entire front," said Berlin's war bulletin.

APR 17 1945

New Oder Bridgehead

German broadcasts reported that a new bridgehead across the Oder River had been forged in the first hours of the offensive in the Schwedt area, 30 miles south of Stettin and 44 miles northeast of Berlin.

Schwedt is 105 miles from Seehausen, where American forces stand on the Elbe.

However, Russian and American forces were even closer to a junction north of Berlin, German broadcasts indicated. The Russians were reported attacking close to Wriezen, 24 miles northeast of Berlin and 91 miles from the American 9th Army on the Elbe at Tangermuende.

Southeast of Berlin, a Transocean broadcast said, the Russians lashed out in the Fuerstenberg area on the Oder toward Beeskow, 87 miles from American forces attacking in the Dessau area.

"The first Russian aim seems to be to enlarge the Kuestrin bridgehead," the German radio said in referring to the Seelow operations. "They tried to overrun the German front with 200 tanks there. Some breaches could be sealed off."

The Germans reported several weeks ago that the Russians reached Seelow, but were driven back 7 miles.

Reported Past St. Poelten

At the southern end of the front, Moscow dispatches said the Russians had driven well past St. Poelten, 28 miles west of Vienna, in a drive up the Danube Valley in Austria.

Berlin said the Russians in southeastern Moravia, the central section of Czechoslovakia, were driving strongly from Goeding toward Austerlitz, the battlefield where Napoleon with his outnumbered French won a classic victory over Russian and Austrian forces in 1805. Austerlitz is 12 miles west of the Czechoslovak munitions city of Bruenn.

On both sides of Ratibor, just beyond the northern Moravian border and 85 miles northeast of Austerlitz, the Germans said Marshal Ivan Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army was attacking afresh.

Artillery And Bombing

The German account said Stalin's spring offensive, which Moscow has been forecasting as a blow to end the war, opened at 3.50 A.M. with a tremendous artillery barrage and attacks by swarms of bombers. Powerful infantry and tank forces then swung into action, the high command said.

One German military spokesman said the Soviet offensive extended below the confluence of the Oder and Neisse from Forst to Muskau, 15 miles below Forst and 100 miles east of Leipzig.

The German accounts of attacks at Schwedt and Forst indicated therefore that three huge Soviet armies—Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian, the 1st White Russian, and Konev's 1st Ukrainian armies—had swung into the offensive with the aim of joining with the Americans both north and south of Berlin, besides making a frontal attack on the city.

Von Hammer Reports One Break

Ernest von Hammer, commentator for the German International Information Bureau, said:

"After a heavy artillery barrage, which was met by German artillery with withering effect, and after violent air attacks, the Russians, who had brought up their assault forces yesterday, launched their expected all-out offensive.

"According to reports so far available, they were checked at all points with the exception of one local breach."

Von Hammer said the Russians also opened strong attacks this morning in the Forst area, about 40 miles south of Frankfurst, and that they were repelled by the Germans.

Hitler in Appeal to Troops

Calls on German Soldiers to Halt Russians—Slurs President Roosevelt.

APR 17 1945

London, April 16 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler tonight issued an order of the day to German soldiers on the eastern front calling on them to stop the Russians before they destroyed the Reich and the German people.

The text of the order as broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press follows:

"Soldiers on the eastern front: For the last time the Jewish-Bolshevist arch enemy has launched his massed attack. He is trying to destroy Germany and to wipe out our people.

"Soldiers in the east, you yourselves know what fate threatens particularly the German women, girls and children while old men and children are being murdered, women and girls are being reduced to the status of prostitutes. The remainder are led away to Siberia.

"We have expected this offensive and since January of this year everything has been done in order to build up a strong front. A tremendous artillery concentration is meeting the enemy. Our infantry losses have been made up with numerous new units. Alarm units, new formations and Volkssturm reinforce our front. This time the Bolsheviks will suffer the old fate of Asia—they must and will perish in front of the German capital. Whoever at this moment does not fulfill his duty is a traitor to our nation.

"The regiment or division which leaves its position acts so basely that it must be shamed by our women and children who in our towns are standing up to the bomb terror. Particularly watch the few treacherous officers and soldiers who, in order to secure their miserable lives, will fight against us in the Russian way and perhaps even in German uniform. Any one who orders you to retreat and is unknown to you must be arrested immediately and if necessary disposed of, whatever his rank. If in these days and weeks to come every soldier on the eastern front fulfills his duty, then the last assault of Asia will break in the same way in which the invasion of our enemy in the west will fail in the end, in spite of all his efforts.

"Berlin remains German, Vienna will again become German and Europe will never become Russian. Form a fanatic community to defend not the empty conception of the Fatherland, but for the defense of your home, your wives, your children and our future. At this moment the eyes of the whole German people are resting on you, my soldiers in the east, and the nation hopes that your steadfastness, your fanaticism, your weapons and your commanders will drown the Bolshevik assault in a blood-bath.

"At the moment when fate has eliminated the greatest war criminal of all times, the turn of the tide will come."

6,000 PLANES HIT REICH IN MIGHTY DAYLIGHT ATTACK

Strategic Air War Over, Bombers to Be Used for Tactical Operations.

LUFTWAFFE SMASHED

APR 17 1945

Allies Hammer 40 Enemy Airfields, Aerial Assault Continues.

LONDON, Tuesday, April 17—(AP) At least 845 German planes were destroyed yesterday by Allied fighters in a cataclysmic blow against the Nazi air force and last night an observer commented, "the Luftwaffe has been knocked out."

At the same time Gen. Carl A. Spaatz issued a special order of the day saying the strategic air war against Germany had ended victoriously and that hereafter U. S. heavy bombers would be used for tactical operations.

Giant Attack Continues

More than 6,000 Allied planes joined in the daylight assault on the enemy, and the German radio reported the air attacks were being continued through the night by both Russian and British bombers. The "achtung" warning service said Berlin had been raided three times before midnight.

The U. S. Eighth Air force, which sent nearly 2,100 warplanes from bases in Britain during the day, reported early this morning eight heavy bombers and 34 fighters were missing.

Approximately 2,000 fighter pilots participated in the history-making blast against Germany's hoarded frontline planes, splintering 812 of them on the ground and shooting 33 others from the sky.

Upwards of 40 enemy airfields in the Pilsen-Prague area of Czechoslovakia were strafed by U. S. Eighth Air force fighters which had escorted heavy bombers on a mission against communications targets. Tactical air forces based on the continent fanned out in a series of attacks against enemy airdromes and targets over a wide area.

This great assault, overshadowing the previous single day's record of 377 planes destroyed, made last Tuesday, raised to at least 2,953 the number of enemy aircraft wrecked in the first 16 days of April.

One competent air observer who could not be named, said "the Luftwaffe has been knocked out. It still has the planes—although the rate of production has greatly diminished while the number of its fighting craft destroyed has greatly increased—but the Germans have not the fuel or the pilots to fly what is left of their frontline planes. The Luftwaffe now has been reduced to nothing more than a nuisance value."

Strategic Air War Over

Spaatz, commander of the U. S. strategic air forces in Europe comprising the Eighth air force in Britain and the Fifteenth air force in Italy, said in his special order that "the advances of our ground forces have brought to a close the strategic air war" and declared that hereafter the heavy bombers and fighters of the strategic air forces would operate in conjunction with tactical units.

Actually, the concentration of the power forces of heavy bombers in direct tactical support of the ground forces already has begun. In yesterday's operations 450 Flying Fortresses smashed enemy troops positions around Bordeaux for the third straight day and another force of 750 Fortresses and Liberators attacked rail targets in Bavaria ahead of the advancing ground troops.

Mustangs and Thunderbolts, whose services as escorts for the heavy bombers were scarcely needed, dropped down for strafing runs and destroyed at least 647 planes on the ground. They shot down three others in combat during the Nazis' only effort at interception.

Some 1,000 Ninth air force fighters and fighterbombers, at a loss of two planes, wrecked 159 enemy aircraft on 19 airdromes and belted down 23 others in combat.

Pilots of the First Tactical air force added six more kills on the ground and one in the air while RAF Mustangs shot down six during an escort mission for Lancasters bombing the Baltic port of Swinemund north of Stettin.

Reconnaissance in recent days indicated the enemy was moving many planes to southern Germany, possibly for a last ditch stand, and the new attack was intended to knock out this concentration.

Planes Loaded with Bombs

Col. Ben Rimerman of Omaha, Neb., commander of the 353rd Mustang group, who himself destroyed six parked planes, said "some of the aircraft must have been loaded with bombs and gassed up for a mission, for when we hit them they burned a few minutes and then blew up with a terrific explosion."

Spaatz, in his order of the day to personnel of the U. S. Eighth and Fifteenth air forces, said:

"The advances of our ground forces have brought to a close the strategic air war waged by the United States strategic air forces.

"It has been won with a decisiveness becoming increasingly evident as our armies overrun Germany. From now onward our strategic air forces must operate with our tactical air forces in close cooperation with our armies.

"All units of the United States strategic air forces are commended for their part in winning the strategic air war and are enjoined to continue with undiminished effort and precision the final tactical phase of air action to secure the ultimate objective—the complete defeat of Germany."

Today's aerial assault began early in the morning when some 450 Flying Fortresses bombed German positions in the Bordeaux area for the third straight day.

Then a fleet of 750 American Liberators and Flying Fortresses, escorted by more than 850 Mustangs and Thunderbolts, struck the Regensburg area in Bavaria.

A railyard and bridge at Regensburg, yards at Landshut, and Plattling and a bridge at Straubing, all from 24 to 34 miles south and southeast of Regensburg, were the main targets. All are important traffic links necessary to maintain German mobility in the zone being compressed by Allied drives from east and west.

Enemy Troops Raked

In Magdeburg they knocked out an ammunition dump and raked enemy troops ahead of American forces southeast of the city.

More than 150 Marauders and Invaders smashed supply dumps at Zorbst, and a force of 100 other bombers destroyed a rail station and many surrounding buildings at Gunzenhausen, 26 miles southwest of Nuernberg.

Twelve Thunderbolt pilots of the 9th Air Force silenced four huge railway guns shelling American armored forces southeast of Leipzig, blowing them up after a ground controller had radioed for help. The guns, camouflaged on rail cars, were detected by Major Harry Peterson, Dallas, Texas, formation leader.

3,500 Planes Rip Nazi Supply Routes In South

London, April 16 (AP)—More than 3,500 Allied planes scoured Germany from Berlin to Regensburg, in Bavaria, today, hitting at least fifteen rail yards and bridges along routes through which the Nazis are straining to get supplies into southern Germany.

Some 750 United States 8th Air Force heavy bombers hit the Regensburg area, striking at rail junctions, bridge and airfields in front of Hitler's mountain redoubt, while more than 850 United States 9th Air Force medium bombers ripped similar targets in central Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Three Night Blows At Berlin

Berlin was bombed three times during the night.

Today's big fleet of American heavy bombers hit freight yards and rail bridges in Regensburg itself, bridges at Straubing, 24 miles to the southeast, and freight yards at Landshut, 35 miles south of Regensburg, and Plattling, 32 miles to the southeast.

This morning 450 Flying Fortresses bombed German ground installations on the Gironde estuary at Bordeaux for the third consecutive day.

Again flying without fighter cover, the Forts concentrated their loads in the Pointe de Grave area on the south side of the estuary where the Nazis had several guns guarding the port entrance.

Berlin residents were kept in shelters for two hours last night during three attacks by RAF Mosquitos.

Pottsdam Aflame

Airmen reported that fires set in the western suburb of Pottsdam by the heavy RAF raid Saturday night were still burning. One Mosquito was lost.

More than 1,300 American heavy bombers attacked German pockets of resistance around Bordeaux yesterday in support of the surprise land and sea assault to open the big French port.

They dropped more than 460,000 gallons of liquid fire on ground installations in the form of a new fire bomb that resembles extra fuel tanks carried by fighter planes. Results were described as spectacular and successful.

Explode On Contact

An inflammable jellylike substance is placed inside tanks fitted with detonators which explode on impact. The contents are splashed over a 60-yard area. The bombs are highly effective against trenches, machine-gun nests, field-gun positions and pillboxes.

Over the week end 81 German planes were shot up on the ground and in the air, bringing to 1,474 the number destroyed by Allied pilots in the last eight days.

mable jelly-like substance is placed inside tanks fitted with detonators which explode on impact. The contents are splashed over an area of sixty yards.

Four large railway guns which have been shelling American armored forces southeast of Leipzig were silenced today by twelve Thunderbolt divebombers.

"The bombs hit five ammunition cars and blew one of the guns sky-high," said Lieut. Barton P. Christopher of 142 East 61st street, New York city.

PUSH TO 'END WAR' HELD ON IN ITALY

U.S. 5th Army Joins British 8th In Assault

Howard M. Norton says Nazi cave defenses in Italy are invulnerable except to T.N.T. ..... Page 4

Rome, April 16 (AP)—An offensive described by Field Marshal Sir Harold L. Alexander as "the last battle which will end the war" was launched today with American 5th Army troops joining in the assault begun a week ago by forces of the British 8th Army in a mighty effort to drive the Germans from northern Italy.

A bombardment by 1,233 heavy bombers of the United States 15th Air Force preceded the American jumpoff in mountainous territory heavily mined and bitterly defended south of Bologna. German defenses were saturated by nearly 25,000 bombs, with the carpet of explosives falling at points within 5½ miles of Allied lines.

Much Hard Fighting Ahead

Special orders of the day, issued by Alexander and by Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the 15th Army Group, expressed confidence that the present attack would attain its objective—complete defeat of some 26 Nazi divisions in Italy—but also warned that there was much hard fighting ahead.

Allied artillery poured 75,000 shells into enemy positions during last night. Many Germans were found in dazed condition when doughboys overran their first objectives below Bologna early today.

By midafternoon Allied infantry was locked in savage combat with Germans manning the strongest mountain defenses the enemy ever has thrown up on this rugged peninsula—defenses he has had 5) months to prepare.

In spite of this, 5th Army troops captured a dominating 2,200-foot peak just east of Highway 64 three hours after the attack began. Fighter-bombers raging ahead of the ground troops had torn huge chunks out of the granite peak with bombs which threw stones hundreds of feet high.

Riflemen advancing between Highway 64 and a point some 4 miles east of Highway 65—the main Bologna-Florence route—found the going extremely rough as they ground out yard-by-yard gains against mortar and machine-gun crews dug in almost elbow to elbow at many places.

The slopes of two heights west of Highway 65, Monte Rumici and Monte Adone, which command the Savenna Valley as well as the Bologna-Florence road, were under bitter attack.

8th's "Unique Opportunity"

Lieutenant General Sir Richard McCreery, commanding the 8th Army, told his advancing troops: "We have the unique opportunity to destroy the enemy in his present positions, because, owing to his lack of fuel, he is incapable of large-scale and rapid movement."

The Germans fought viciously, but steadily lost ground in their efforts to defend the vital Argenta Gap, key to the Po River and Ferrara. The 8th Army shoved the Germans to within a mile of Argenta, established another bridgehead across the Sillaro 2½ miles southwest of Bastia, and drove on to the next canal barrier.

Nazis Dug Out Of Caves

A special fighting unit under Lieut. Melvin M. Smith, Waco, Texas, worked through the village of Furcoli and dug the remaining Nazis out of fortified caves on the forward slope of Monte Rumici, establishing a road block.

East of Highway 65 other American troops battered at dominating features in an advance which was measured in yards in the early hours of the day, but slowly picked up speed.

Troops commanded by Lieut. Robert A. Armstrong, Brooklyn, N.Y., and Lieut. Leo Goldberg, the Bronx, finally dug the Nazis out of the rubble of a church graveyard after an eight-hour struggle.

The American 10th Mountain Division, which Marshal Alexander recently nicknamed the "Cat's Whiskers," seized Monte Pienna and Monte Sette Crocci in the first stages of the attack. These peaks are a few thousand yards northwest of Vergato, German bastion on Highway 64 about 17 miles southwest of Bologna. Casigno, a village a mile east of Vergato, also was taken.

Allies Attacking On The Entire Italy Front

Rome, April 16 (AP)—Gen. Mark W. Clark announced today that the "spring offensive in the Mediterranean theater has begun," with the United States 5th and the British 8th armies engaged in operations along the entire Italian front.

The 8th struck on the eastern end of the front a week ago and the 5th jumped into the fight today along the central and western sectors.

1,233 Bombers Strike First

The 5th's attack was preceded yesterday by a raid by 1,233 heavy bombers of the United States 15th Air Force on German targets south of Bologna. At places the carpet of bombs fell within 5½ miles of 5th Army lines.

The experience of the 8th Army in its week-old offensive indicates that the 5th will face bitter and bloody fighting in its effort to break out of the mountains south of Bologna and into the broad Po Valley.

The Germans have chosen to fight for northern Italy despite military disasters which are ripping the Reich apart.

"Only Need One Mighty Punch"

Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander in chief in the Mediterranean, in a special order of the day declared:

"German forces now are very groggy and only need one mighty punch to kn[illegible]hem out for good.

APR 17 1945

30.24-24841

The moment now has come for us to take the field for the last battle which will end the war in Europe.

"It will not be a walkover. The mortally wounded beast still will be very dangerous . . . but the end is quite certain. . . . You who have won every battle you have fought are going to win this one."

Air Records Broken

The 15th Air Force broke all previous records for number of planes employed and tonnage dropped over the mountains south of Bologna.

Medium bombers attacked ahead of 5th and 8th Army troops. The 10th Mountain Division seized Mount Pigna and Mount Sette Croci in an advance through wide fields of anti-personnel mines.

Mount Sette Croci, a few thousand yards northwest of Vergato, German stronghold on Highway 64, was held by the enemy against heavy pressure for several months. Casigno, to the east, was taken.

8th Drives On Argenta Gap

Eighth Army troops, meanwhile, drove north toward the Argenta Gap, which opens on the flatlands leading to Ferrara and the Po River.

Polish troops, driving from captured Imola, closed in on Castel San Pietro, only 12 miles east of Bologna, after crossing the Sellustra River. On the right flank other Polish units captured a Sillaro River bridge intact and fanned out on the far bank.

In moving up the Bologna-Rimini highway toward Castel San Pietro, the Poles captured Toscanella. South of the highway, Mount Bello, commanding point in the Apennine foothills, was taken.

Leaflets Warn Residents

Thousands of leaflets were dropped prior to the heavy raids.

They warned residents in the 5th Army area that the Allies were fighting "the last great battles to liberate Italy and destroy the Nazi invader."

U. S. PILOTS HIT NAZIS WITH KITCHEN SINK

MORN

ROME, April 16—(AP) Two Milwaukee members of a Liberator bomber crew participating in the Fifteenth Air force's aerial support of the northern Italy ground offensive literally hit the enemy with the kitchen sink today.

The household fixture, hauled aboard the bomber attached to the 47th wing by Second Lt. Frank R. Oswald and bombardier-gunner Sgt. Ervin R. Dahlmann, was the crowning blow in a rain of explosives spread on enemy positions.

The Milwaukeeans found the sink in an abandoned schoolhouse and obtained permission to take it along in order to make the Germans feel literally the American slang expression. Dahlmann pushed it out after the bombs had been released.

34th Infantry Division In Combat 500 Days

NIGHT

Rome, April 16 (AP)—The veteran United States 34th Infantry Division claimed a record for American forces in this war today when it completed 500 days of actual combat.

As a matter of fact, 5th Army headquarters announced, there are some Iowa, Minnesota and Dakota National Guardsmen, who made up the original 34th in the division who have been in more than 600 days and are still going strong.

These men were with the 34th when it first sailed from the United States in January, 1942, and later, in November of the same year, when it went to North Africa.

The 34th, now commanded by Maj. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, of Chicago, has won nearly 22,000 awards, including nine Medals of Honor, 98 Distinguished Service Crosses, 1,052 Silver Stars, 15,000 Purple Hearts and three Presidential Unit Citations.

Nazis Build Defenses in Austria.

GHORM

Moscow, April 16 (A. P.).—Hurled back one-third the way to Linz on the Vienna-Munich trunk highway, the Germans massed anti-tank defenses today along the Erlauf River, fifteen miles west of fallen St. Poelten, seeking to block the big Soviet push along the Danube Valley in Austria.

Northwest of St. Poelten, Russian armor battered at a relatively large garrison holding out at Melk, an important Danube communications junction. Melk was in danger of being outflanked, however, by another arm of Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian Army pushing southwest of St. Poelten.

Progress along the Vienna-Munich highway was hard because of the many natural obstacles. The Nazis had converted virtually every hill and ravine into anti-tank defenses. Tolbukhin employed cavalry, fast armored cars and light tank for his spearheads, which have cut behind some German positions.

REDS STAND FIRM ON POLISH ISSUE

LONDON, Thursday, April 17—(AP) The Soviet government continues to insist on the absolute necessity of participation by the Polish provisional government at Warsaw in the San Francisco conference, the Moscow radio said early today.

The Moscow broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor in London, took note of the American and British position that until reorganization of the Polish provisional government they do not consider it possible to invite its representatives to the conference.

The broadcast recalled an earlier Moscow announcement that in the event a Coalition government of Poland could not be agreed upon in time for participation in the United Nations conference, it would be necessary to invite the Warsaw Poles to San Francisco because "this government is exercising its authority throughout Polish territory and is enjoying the support of the Polish people."

Boh the United States and Britain have maintained that only through a reorganized provisional government as envisaged at the Big Three's Yalta conference could Poland be represented at San Francisco.

This view was reiterated in Washington by an official of the State department on March 31 after the Soviet news agency Tass had issued a statement saying the Russian government endorsed the bid of the Soviet-sponsored Warsaw Poles for inclusion in the conference.

(The Washington Star said Monday afternoon that it was reported Premier Stalin had agreed to establishment of a new Polish government, thus breaking the stalemate on the Polish question.)

with the forthcoming session of the Supreme Soviet, the Government—in view of the circumstances set forth—has accepted the invitation," the Kremlin said.

Stalin's decision was acclaimed in London diplomatic circles as the British press praised President Truman for a statesmanlike act in making a direct bid for Molotov's attendance.

The general view here was that the development had enhanced the outlook for the impending conference and that any decisions reached there would carry a weight which they would not have had otherwise.

Some observers saw in Stalin's decision a hint that agreement on the Polish problem was near—arguing that he would not have consented to have Molotov go to San Francisco unless he were sure a Polish delegation would be present.

Russ Sincerity Indicated

Moscow, April 16 (AP)—The decision of Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov to attend the San Francisco conference was said on good authority today to reflect the Soviet Union's sincere desire for earnest co-operation with her Allies in building a sound and workable peace.

Task More Difficult

This is a task generally regarded here as rendered more difficult by the death of President Roosevelt, which the Russians have taken very hard.

The whole nation is in official mourning for the late President, who has been paid high compliments by Russian press and officials as one of the main architects of the future peace.

REPORTS PAPEN PRISONER HERE

Paris Hears ex-Diplomat Has Been Flown to U. S.

London, April 16 (A. P.).—Dr. Mannfred Zapp, Nazi propaganda chief expelled from the United States in 1941, has been captured by American Third Army troops. European broadcasts declared last night that Prince August Wilhelm and Field Marshal August von Mackensen, 96 years old, who commanded the German eastern front in the first world war, also had been captured.

Meanwhile, Franz von Papen was reported to be awaiting processing in Europe as a bona fide prisoner of war. A Paris dispatch said that Supreme Headquarters would neither confirm nor deny reports that the notorious German diplomat had been flown to the United States.

Dr. Zapp, chief Nazi propaganda agent in the United States from 1936 to 1941, was seized by troops of the Eighty-ninth Infantry Division, Thoburn Wiant, A. P. correspondent, reported. The Eighty-seventh Infantry Division found at Bad Blankenberg Gen. Vittorio Foschini, formerly Benito Mussolini's Minister of Information for the Italian armed forces.

Americans Capture Alfred Krupp.

American troops, closing in on the Ruhr pocket, "this week came on the 800-room showplace of the fabulously wealthy munitions king, Alfred Krupp, who lived there with a staff of hundreds of servants," the Absie radio reported today. The broadcast quoted a London Sunday Express correspondent in describing the entry of American troops into the mansion of Herr Krupp, whom they dubbed "Little Alfi."

"Shortly after 10 o'clock last Wednesday, Lieut.-Col. Clarence M. Sasmoyan and his German-speaking adjutant, entered the museum-like entrance hall, some sixty meters long. Servants hurried, cringing, to receive them."

"Who lives here?"

"My master, the former engineer Alfred Krupp von Bohlen and Halbach."

"Yea, where is he?"

"Upstairs."

"Well bring him down at once, do you understand, at once."

"A few seconds later down came 'Little Alfi,' a picture of sullen arrogance, defiance and fright. On his head was a gray felt hat which he insolently retained. 'What's your name?' the colonel asked. Krupp gave his full name, with all his titles, and added: 'I am the owner of this property. What do you want?'

"'O. K. Buddy, you are the guy we want. Let's go.'

"In describing the scene later, the American officer said: 'The guy started to make a speech, so I just grabbed him by the neck and tossed him into a jeep. He is just a little weed, about 5 feet 6 inches. I wish you could have seen the chief rat when we started to question him. He was scared to death. Thin lips and hands trembling, and leg muscles working in and out like piston rods.'"

EXILE POLES REPLY TO MIKOLAJCZYK

CHRISTIE

London, April 16 (A. P.).—The Polish Government in Exile tonight denounced former Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk's indorsement of the Crimea conference decisions on Poland, and said that he had acted contrary to "unanimous Polish public opinion," and that he had made "more difficult the defense of the real interests of the Polish Republic." Mikolajczyk had said yesterday that "to remove all doubts as to my attitude, I wish to declare that I accept the Crimea decision in regard to the future of Poland."

Todays reply declared that Mikolajczyk, "by accepting without reservation the results of the Crimea Conference . . . clearly appears as a belated candidate for inclusion in conversations which are perhaps already in progress somewhere, and to which quite possibly he will not be admitted." The London Poles further charged his attitude may serve Russia "as a tactically convenient basis for negotiations."

Washington, London, and Moscow have urged the Poles to form a coalition government in time for participation in the San Francisco conference opening on April 25. A group of Polish leaders have been reported conferring with the Russian and Allied authorities for that purpose.

'Celebrators' Fill London Hotels

London, April 16 (AP)—Thousands of visitors are pouring into London and jamming hotels, hopeful of being here for the celebration that will take place when V-E day is proclaimed.

The police announced plans for concentrating hundreds of officers in central London, but the bobbies have been instructed to allow the celebrators "considerable latitude."

A gigantic aerial parade is expected as part of the V-E day show, and Sabbath strollers got a preview yesterday as more than 1,000 United States 8th Air Force Liberators flew low over London on their return from the attack on Germans pocketed in the Bordeau area.

Last night RAF planes engaged in exercises over the capital flashed "V's" to civilians and soldiers in the streets below. Held in the strong glare of searchlights, the planes switched their navigation lights on and off for the "V" sig

American servicemen questioned at a Red Cross club today.

And most of them do not want to see any proclamation of victory over Germany until the fighting is virtually over.

This reaction was summed up by Pfc. Merton Yahn of Suffern, N. Y., Eightieth Division infantryman just out of a hospital and en route back to join his Third Army outfit:

"I suppose it's all right if they want to proclaim the end of organized resistance, but it seems to me that it would be pretty foolish as long as we still have any real fighting to do. I'd hate to get killed after the folks back home had been told that the war was over—and I certainly think it would be very wrong to have any real celebrations any time before Japan was beaten."

DAILY BERLIN RIOTS CITED

APR 17 1945

People Held Ripe To Rebel For Food, Not Freedom

[Olle Ollen, Berlin correspondent of the Stockholms Morgontidningen, was one of the last two Swedish correspondents in Germany.]

By OLLE OLLEN

Stockholm, April 16 (AP)—Hunger riots were occuring daily in the northern and eastern sections of Berlin when I left the German capital, eight days ago.

On the eve of my departure, hungry mothers of starving children stormed food shops in the Alexanderplatz and almost lynched an SA (stormtroop) guard who tried to quiet them with the suggestion they economize on their bread rations.

The population is ripe for rebellion but it will be a hunger revolt, not a fight for freedom.

Freedom Forgotten

The Germans have forgotten what freedom is. As long as starvation stays away from their doors there never is any chance of insurrection even though 90 per cent of the capital's citizens heartily wish for a speedy end to the Nazi hierarchy.

Not even the iron grip of the SS (Elite Guard) can prevent hungry mothers from storming bakeries or bread wagons which are not provided with a military guard.

A month ago Berlin was an apathetic city, a city which, compared with Copenhagen, was like dough not yet in ferment. No machine-gun pistols rattled unexpectedly in the streets. No "freedom fighters" tried to accelerate with bombs the inevitable development. There were no great illegal organizations functioning, only weariness and loquacious hopelessness.

A Second Berchtesgaden

Suddenly the situation grew acute a week or so ago. Now only Allied columns with field kitchens can prevent a "mothers' hunger rebellion."

It is certain that the Nazis' last bastions will be defended by desperadoes who will fight to postpone their own doom and will not hesitate to use all means to prolong the struggle a few days or weeks.

Not all the arms and ammunition depots in the German citadel are emptied yet. There are huge caves blasted into the mountains at positions to which Hitler and other Nazi leaders plan to retire for a last fight.

Next to Berchtesgaden, Hitler's Bavarian headquarters, the most noted mountain fortress is located at Weinboehla, between Meissen and Dresden, where enormous installations have been built.

Not Everything Turned Over

There will be many a small citadel remaining inside zones already militarily liquidated. Hitler himself will observe his last birthday as dictator April 20 in his eagle's nest at Berchtesgaden, perhaps to stay there for good.

Hitler still has not turned everything over to his aides, even if Heinrich Himmler and the propaganda minister, Joseph Goebbels, are now chiefly responsible for the Nazi leadership.

Himmler is more active than ever before and permits himself to be seen much more often. He spends most of his time in his headquarters at Zossen, 22 miles south of Berlin, which is packed with arms and is the nerve center of military activity.

Goebbel's Palace Wrecked

Berlin's dictator, Dr. Goebbels, now lives in his fortress. His beautiful propaganda palace on Wilhelmplatz was completely destroyed by three direct hits during a Mosquito bomber raid.

If Goebbels can hold Berlin, certain key points surely will offer resistance. One of these is the inner city core around the so-called Bendler block. The area also embraces the Reichschancellory opposite the Tiergarten, the Unter den Linden artery from the Brandenburger Gate at the Tiergarten end to the cathedral, the Hallesches Gate, Anhalter Station, Potsdamer Platz and Potsdamer Bridge back to the Tiergarten.

in this zone there are many first-class barricades built by military experts. The Brandenburger Gate is closed except for a small traffic passage. Bridges are mined. Foxholes for rocket fighters dot the Tiergarten. Tanks have been dug in. Trench systems connect camouflaged fuel and ammunition dumps.

Furniture Vans As Plugs

Supplies of food, ammunition and medicine are stored in great quantities. The anti-aircraft is prepared for a long siege.

Around this core lie many lesser barricades.

Most of Berlin's furniture vans have been converted into barricade plugs. They are filled with stones and sand and will be rolled into the openings when the storm breaks.

Spain Lifts Curb On News

APR 1

Madrid, April 16 (AP)—Foreign correspondents were informed today that the Spanish Government had lifted its censorship on all news sent by them to the outside world.

Jose Lequerica, Foreign Minister, received all United Nations press representatives and announced: "I only want to tell you that henceforth your telegrams will be subjected to no censorship whatsoever. The only request I make it that you tell the readers this."

After a moment of silence from a score of newsmen who had worked under the censorship of the Falange party since the Spanish civil war, one correspondent asked whether correspondents might not be called to account for what they had transmitted, after a period of time without censorship.

Something Universal

"I believe something of that kind is true in all countries," Lequerica replied.

He said the Spanish domestic press would continue under the usual Falange censorship.

The first uncensored news dispatch sent from Spain since July 18, 1936, was filed today by the Associated Press.

No More Censorship

The dispatch reported Foreign Minister Lequerica's announcement declaring that henceforth all censorship on Spanish news to the outside world was eliminated.

Spain by no means a free press now, but has taken a long stride in that direction. The domestic press will continue to be censored by the Falange party.

The order, approved by Generalissimo Francisco Franco and his Cabinet, was a triumph for Lequerica, who has apparently been convinced that what was being said about Spain outside the barriers of censorship was even worse than what could be truthfully said once that barrier was torn down.

Censored Dispatches Listed

Spanish news recently censored included dispatches that:

A large republican tricolor of red, yellow and purple floated from the tower of the pantheon of famed Spaniards in downtown Madrid on April 14, the anniversary of the proclamation of the republic. It remained on the tower until early afternoon when firemen finally pulled it down.

Tiny republican flags were plastered on the walls of several workers' suburbs the same day.

Police and troops patrolling Madrid were increased in number on April 13. On the eve of the republican anniversary, some troops in the Madrid garrison slept in their clothing, with side arms and hand grenades beside them.

Eliminates Russian News

The domestic press eliminates every news item from a Russian source, almost everything favorable to Russia and everything referring to republican Spaniards which is not unfavorable.

Spain has said nothing about demonstrations in France favoring the republic unless they are fortunate enough to own a radio.

Other news stories suppressed recently by Falangist censorship were:

That this correspondent believes it will not be long before some step will be taken to separate the Falange party from the state and to authorize certain "safe" rightist parties like the Monarchists, the Carlists and even the Accion Popular to organize openly and to publish their own newspapers.

Arrests Still Made

That leftists—mainly socialists and syndicalists—are still being arrested and jailed in Spain and that many persons arrested November 23, 1944, on political charges are still in jail.

That Spaniards are still condemned to death by military courts and executed for crimes having their origin in the civil war.

The censors were quick to eliminate any reference to Spain's former stand on world affairs and particularly any reference to Franco's attitude as indicated February 14, 1942, when he said: "If the road to Berlin is opened (to the Russians), then there would be not only a division of volunteers but a million Spaniards would offer themselves."

Franco Quotations Censored

Another Franco quotation methodically censored in recent months was "the Allies have lost the war. Nothing remains of their strength." That was in a speech on July 17, 1941, when Franco charged the United States with tying political strings to offers of economic aid.

These statements were made, however, in Spain's "nonbelligerent" days, when the Germans stood in the Pyrenees and the Allies had not yet landed in North Africa.

368 JAP PLANES BAGGED BY YANKS

Carrier Craft Attack Kyushu, Troops Land on Island Off Okinawa.

GUAM, Tuesday, April 17.—(AP) A new series of fanatical Japanese aerial raids on American forces at Okinawa and U. S. carrier plane strikes on the Japanese home island of Kyushu cost the enemy 368 warplanes destroyed and 60 damaged in four days, Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

These losses increased to 1,674 the number of Japanese planes destroyed off the Ryukyus and at Kyushu since March 18.

Nimitz also reported:

Yanks Land On Ie Shima

Elements of the 24th Army corps landed on little Ie Shima, three miles west of Okinawa's Motobu peninsula, yesterday morning. Against light initial resistance, they quickly captured the island's three-runway airfield.

Yanks have killed 9,108 Japanese and taken 391 prisoners through midnight Friday—the first 13 days of the Okinawa campaign. In addition, 85,000 civilians have been brought under jurisdiction of the American military government.

Land-based Army Mustang fighters from Iwo Jima bases attacked ground installations at Kanoya and Kushira on Kyushu island April 16. This was the first reported raid by bombers smaller than B-29s on any of the Empire's home islands.

On Okinawa, Marines continued their advance toward the island's northwest tip over rugged terrain. On the southern front, there was little change in the lines as naval guns and carrier planes continued to join field artillery in bombardment of the enemy's well-prepared positions.

Cargo Ship Damaged

Navy search planes heavily damaged a small cargo ship in the northern Ryukyus and Army Black Widow night fighters attacked military installations in the Bonins.

The Japanese launched heavy air attacks against American forces in and around Okinawa yesterday. Yank pilots, ships' gunners and land-based antiaircraft gunners destroyed 242 of the attackers.

Nimitz did not say whether American forces suffered damage in these attacks.

Nimitz disclosed that 9,108 Japanese troops had been killed on Okinawa and 391 taken prisoner up to Friday midnight. That covered the first 13 days of the Okinawa campaign. The prisoner figure was for military personnel only. Approximately 85,000 civilians have been placed under American military government supervision.

400 SUPERFORTS RENEW RAID ON BLAZING TOKYO

New Holocaust Is Visible From Record Distance of 150 Miles.

Pictures Show 27 Square Miles Wiped Out as Usable Industrial Area.

Guam, April 16 (A. P.).—Another 400 Superfortresses early today rained fire bombs on a Tokyo that was still burning after last Saturday's attack.

APR 17 1945

30.24-24843

Reconnaissance photographs showed that 296,000,000 square feet—ten and three-quarters square miles—of Tokyo's arsenal area were burned out on Saturday, bringing to twenty-seven and a half sqaure miles the area devastated in the two raids of March 10 and April 14. Saturday's fires swept over twice the target area, including the prized Itabashi arsenal.

In a broadcast communique, Japanese Imperial headquarters conceded that today's raid started "a considerable number of fires," and the Tokyo radio added that some of them burned for seven hours.

[At Washington this afternoon Air Force headquarters reported eleven Superfortresses missing—an unusually high percentage—but said that some may turn up later. Meanwhile, in a broadcast picked up by the FCC at San Francisco, the Tokyo radio said that the Russian embassy has been burned and destroyed by American bombings, and that fifteen Philippine-based American Liberator bombers yesterday attacked the cities of Taichu and Shinchiku on Formosa.]

Seen 150 Miles Away.

Returning pilots said that today's holocaust was visible 150 miles away. That is the furthest distance they have ever reported seeing flames.

The Tokyo target today was the southeastern corner of the city, one of its principal industrial areas. The section is bordered by Tokyo Bay on the east and the Tama River on the south.

Kawasaki, industrial suburb adjoining Tokyo on the south, was a second target today. Ninth largest city in Japan, it shares the Tokyo-Yokohama railroads, highways, power system and communications networks. The three cities combine to form a twenty-five-mile-long builtup area along the western shore of Tokyo Bay.

Tell of Destruction Wrought.

Japan's urban areas have been swept by low-level incendiary raids which have destroyed 43.7 square miles of Tokyo, Nagoya, Osaka and Kobe. Demolition raids already have knocked out one of the empire's two principal aircraft engine plants and left the other badly battered.

The staff of Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commander of the Twenty-first Bomber Command, announced today that the Mitsubishi engine works at Nagoya, a B-29 target on April 7, was "95 per cent destroyed—no longer a target." Photographs showed two of the three main assembly buildings 100 per cent gutted, the third 80 per cent destroyed. The Nakajima Musashino plant (near Tokyo) was "over half knocked out," the staff reported, but no estimate was given as to production curtailment. The Nakajima plant was last hit on April 12. The Mitsubishi and Nakajima Musachina plants have accounted for an estimated 75 per cent of all Japanese aircraft engine output.

The Shizuoka aircraft engine works eighty miles southwest of Tokyo also was described as "completely gutted and not now a target."

The Japanese have shown no ability to handle the heavy machinery repairs necessarily involved in rebuilding these plants, the staff announcement went on to say, and staff officers expressed the belief that total destruction of Tokyo would not be required to bring its war production to a full stop since shortages of food, shelter, clothing and fuel also hamper the enemy's war effort.

ERASING JAPS' OUTPUT IS AIM

U.S. Trying To Eliminate All Tokyo War Production

Guam, Tuesday, April 17 (AP)—Total elimination of Tokyo's war production became a definite goal today after American B-29's in a Monday predawn mass raid added destruction to the 27½ square miles of the city already in ruins.

Staff officers of Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Le May's 21st Bomber Command here figured all production would come to a standstill without actual destruction of the 65-square-mile urban industrial area.

Tokyo radio admitted the Monday raid on the southwestern section and on adjacent Kawasaki left fires burning for seven hours.

The Japanese Cabinet met in emergency session late Monday to discuss "the latest devastation of the war," Radio Tokyo said.

11 Bombers Missing

Another Tokyo report, lacking confirmation, said United States medium Mitchell bombers and navy carrier planes, striking Japan for the second successive day, raided Kyushu Island Monday.

This was the first report of any source of medium bombers, which could fly from Iwo Jima, attacking Japan's mainland since the Doolittle carrier-based Mitchells' daring 1942 mission.

Twentieth Air Force headquarters in Washington said eleven bombers (some of which may be reported later) had failed to return from Monday's incendiary raid, the second on Toyko in 48 hours. Possibly as many as 400 B-29's participated.

Crews of the Superfortresses saw fires still burning in the great arsenal area of northwestern Tokyo from Saturday's before-dawn raid by an approximately equal force.

Fires Are Extensive

Brig. Gen. John H. Davies, of Piedmont, Cal., who flew as observer with the Monday raiders, said anti-aircraft fire was "terrific" and Japanese night fighter planes were "extremely active."

The 20th Air Force communiqué reported: "Crews returning to their bases reported that fires merged into conflagration that was visible 100 miles at sea. One Superfortress crew was 137 miles en route home when it observed an explosion that 'illuminated the whole sky over Tokyo.'"

Monday's raid was the sixteenth attack on Tokyo by Marianas-based Superfortresses and the second on Kawasaki, industrial suburb just across the Tama River.

Nagoya Hard Hit

Le May's staff report said reconnaissance photographs disclosed at least 10.7 square miles of the arsenal area was burned in Saturday's raid. This brought the total burned in the two previous big incendiary missions (the first was on March 10) to a minimum of 27.5 square miles. Monday's destruction will boost this figure.

The staff also reported some 15½ square miles have been destroyed in Nagoya, Osaka and Kobe, and that demolition raids have knocked out one of Japan's two largest aircraft engine plants and "over half knocked out" the other. These plants, the Mitsubishi at Nagoya and the Nakajima Musashino near Tokyo, have produced an estimated 75 per cent of Japan's aircraft engines.

Japs' Artillery Fire Falls Off On Okinawa

Guam, April 16 (AP)—A noticeable decrease in Japanese artillery fire along the long-stalemated "Little Siegfried Line" on southern Okinawa was reported today as the campaign only 325 miles south of Japan itself went into its third week.

The Tenth Army Yanks, who control the central two-thirds of the Ryukyu island and were rapidly overrunning the northern tip, were deadlocked in the south for the ninth straight day yesterday but still were well ahead of schedule.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz' communique today reporting no change in the lines was interpreted here as meaning field commanders were saving American lives by holding up an offensive until the way is well blasted by artillery.

Marines Mopping Up

Marines were mopping up small enemy pockets in the northern end of the island—a job that could take weeks longer. The Leathernecks were within 10 miles of the northern tip.

Doughboys invaded Keufu, a small island in the Kerama group off Okinawa's southwest coast, on Saturday. Resistance evidently was slight. Seven Kerama islands were seized by the 77th Division just prior to the invasion of Okinawa Easter Sunday.

No further air activity against the American invasion fleet was reported. In three days last week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, more than 265 Japanese planes were destroyed in attacks—many of them suicidal—against United States shipping.

Tokyo Reports Raids

Tokyo radio claimed, without confirmation, that another large force carried out raids today on "the enemy task forces and carrier concentrations" around Okinawa.

Another attack by spear-carrying Nipponese was reported in the south on the 7th Division line Saturday night. More than 100 Japanese attacked Lieut. Col. Roy Green's 184th Regiment, mainly with six-foot lances tipped with metal points. More than half the attackers were killed. No American casualties were reported. Shortly after the landing attacks by lancers were reported.

Destruction of a Japanese troop column near Naha, the capital of Okinawa, by American artillery was described by the pilot of a "spotter" plane. He said when Yank artillery shells fell into the enemy troops "it was the worst carnage you ever saw. The Japanese were blown in every direction."

Defenses On Line

Along the Okinawa line the Japanese massed tremendous concentrations of artillery and installed elaborate machine-gun nests, pillboxes and concrete blockhouses—everything needed to make a last-ditch stand.

The enemy must fight and die on the 85 square miles of southern Okinawa still in his hands. The Japanese have failed to break through the American sea defenses to reinforce their hard-pressed garrisons.

From Okinawa, Associated Press Correspondent Vern Haugland said Japanese trapped on Motobu Peninsula of the island's west side opened up for the first time with shells. They fired at Nago on the southern base of Motobu and Bise at the northwestern tip.

Yanks Withholding Push Till Pathway Is Blasted Clear Through Line.

Guam, April 16 (A. The Americans control the central two-thirds of the island and were rapidly overrunning the north end, and though they continued deadlocked in the south for the ninth consecutive day they were still well ahead of schedule.

Today's communique reporting no change in the lines was interpreted here as meaning that the field commanders were saving American lives by holding up an offensive until the way is well blasted by artillery.

Another attack by enemy spearmen in the south on Saturday night was reported. More than 100 Japanese attacked, mainly with six-foot lances tipped with metal points, and more than half were killed. No American casualties were reported.

The destruction of a Japanese troop column near Naha, the capital of Okinawa, by the American artillery was described by the pilot of a spotter plane, who said: "It was the worst carnage you ever saw. The Japanese were blown in every direction."

Along the Okinawa Line the Japanese have massed tremendous concentrations of artillery and installed elaborate machine-gun nests, pillboxes and concrete blockhouses—everything needed to make a last-ditch stand. It was obvious today that they must fight and die in the eighty-five square miles still in their hands, for every effort to break through the American sea defenses to reinforce their hard-pressed garrisons has failed.

No further air activity against the American invasion fleet was reported. In three days last week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, more than 265 Japanese planes were destroyed in attacks against American shipping. The Tokyo radio reported that another large force carried out raids today on our task forces and carrier concentrations around Okinawa. This enemy assertion was not confirmed here, however.

2 Formosa Cities Bombed, Tokyo Says

San Francisco, April 16 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that fifteen Philippine-based American Liberator bombers attacked the cities of Taichu and Shinchiku on Formosa yesterday.

The B-24's flew "several sorties," bombing chiefly "military installations," said the domestic broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

New Public Relations Officer Serves Nimitz

Guam, April 16 (AP)—Capt. Fitzhugh Lee today took over the duties of public relations officer for Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. He replaces Capt. Harold B. Miller, who is proceeding to Washington for reassignment.

Born in the Philippines 39 years ago, Captain Lee is a graduate of Annapolis and has served on many types of naval vessels. He was graduated from Pensacola, Fla., as a naval aviator, in 1929.

Lee commanded the escort carrier Manila Bay in actions in support of American landings at Leyte, Mindoro and Lingayen Gulf.

Mrs. Lee and one daughter live at New Rochelle, N.Y.

AMERICAN TROOPS TIGHTEN NOOSE AROUND BAGUIO

BERGHOLZ

MANILA, Tuesday, April 17—(AP) Strongly supported by bombers and fighters, 33rd division Doughboys drew their noose tighter around the Philippine summer capital of Baguio on northern Luzon Sunday while Liberators swept choice targets from Formosa south to New Guinea.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today the Yanks around Baguio, within three miles of the important city at one point, were overcoming strong Japanese pockets of resistance.

Jap Attacks Repulsed

Several enemy counter-attacks at night were repulsed.

Japanese strong points were being reduced also in the bitterly-held watershed district northwest of Manila as supporting aircraft raked the entire Luzon area with 700 tons of explosives.

Heavy bombers with a fighter escort dropped 111 tons of bombs on four airdromes in western Formosa, destroying at least 16 — and probably 21 — parked planes. Rail yards and rolling stock were hammered.

19 Ships Sunk

Bombers patrolling the China sea sank or damaged 19 ships, including a destroyer escort. The heaviest bag was found in the coastal shipping lanes between Shanghai and Saigon, French Indo-China.

In addition, four small freighters were wrecked in the Makassar straits of the Dutch East Indies.

Raids by Philippine-based American fliers throughout an Asiatic bombing front extending some 1,600 miles north-south and a like distance east-west, were reported by Gen. Douglas MacArthur in his Monday communique.

The Yank airmen struck heavily throughout the Philippines, blasted Formosa, hit shipping in the Makassar strait immediately east of Borneo, bombed strategic Japanese centers and communication lines along the coasts of China and Indo-China and raided the big Nipponese base at Davao, southeastern Mindanao.

Yanks Get Closer To Baguio

Manila, April 16 (AP)—American troops edged closer to the Philippine summer capital of Baguio today as Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced 8,156 more Japanese dead had been counted in the Philippines during the last week and 205 captured.

Maj. Gen. Ennis P. Swift's 1st Corps, converging through the rugged Benguet Mountains from three directions on Baguio, were within about three miles of the city limits at the nearest point.

MacArthur's Japanese casualty count for the week brought to 323,215 the total killed and captured in the entire Philippines campaign.

Another Island Occupied

There was no new announcement of American casualties—by latest previous report around 30,000 killed, missing and wounded.

Fourteenth Corps troops occupied another small island, Cagararay, off the southeastern Luzon coast.

Thirteenth Air Force Liberators swooped down on Japanese convoys in the Dutch East Indies, making their largest kill in two weeks. In Macasar Strait and Brunei Bay they sank two freighters and possibly a third, damaged four others and a destroyer and gunboat and wrecked several small craft.

Laurel In Tokyo

Dr. Fernando D. Manalo, a Filipino physician who escaped from the Japanese in Baguio, said that Jose Laurel, Philippine puppet president during the Japanese occupation, had fled to Tokyo.

Laurel was previously reported to have gone to Japan by air with Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, Japanese commander in chief in the Philippines.

Dr. Manalo, head of the Notre Dame Hospital in Baguio, said several Americans had died during Japanese captivity in the summer capital. They included E. J. Halsema, 63, last American mayor of the city.

Snake Theory Blows Up

Okinawa, Ryukyus, April 15 [AP — Via Navy Radio] — Among the things blown up on this island since the April 1 American landings were some favorite preinvasion theories.

First there was the snake theory. Before landing, all troops were given pamphlets that described the two most horrible and deadly kinds of snakes inhabitating the Ryukyus—the mamushi and gahu.

Thus far, on the testimony of hundreds of soldiers, only three snakes have been found. A corporal thinks he saw a small one, but it was so charred from shelling he is not certain whether it was a snake or a piece of rope.

Another casualty was the theory that malaria and typhus plagued the island. The troops ate thousands of atabrine pills and took shots for typhus. Everyone turned yellow from atabrine and had sore arms from the shots, but Medical Corps doctors say they have found no typhus or malaria yet.

after noon. The attack was described as heavy. Mitchells involved in such an attack would probably come from Okinawa, 325 miles south of Kyushu.

Japs Claim More Ships

A Japanese imperial communiqué claimed that Nipponese planes, continuing "savage attacks" on American ships around Okinawa, sank seven and damaged fifteen since last Thursday. It reported land battles on Okinawa "are gradually becoming fierce."

"The enemy is apparently making full preparations for an offensive on southern Okinawa in spite of painful blows sustained under our counteroffensives," the communiqué said. "Our garrisons are continuing shelling and suicide drawn-sword attacks at the most opportune moments to crush the enemy's preparations for an offensive."

JAP CABINET HOLDS EMERGENCY TALKS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16—(AP) The cabinet of the bomb-battered Japanese empire was reported by radio Tokyo Monday to have held an emergency session to talk over "measures to be taken against the latest devastation of the war."

The devastation in question was left in Tokyo's industrial heart and nearby Kawasaki by waves of American Superfortresses—totaling perhaps 400—which struck the Nippon capital early Monday, Tokyo Time (Sunday U. S. Time). It was the second B-29 hit in the Tokyo region within 48 hours and the Japanese acknowledged that fires raged for seven hours.

In another broadcast, recorded by the FCC, Tokyo said about 100 American carrier and land-based aircraft teamed for the second straight day to blast Kyushu, southernmost of Japan's main islands, for 50 minutes. This unconfirmed report, if true, would mark the first strikes against Japan-proper by Yank medium bombers, which could fly from Marine-captured Iwo Jima or Okinawa.

Tokyo said the Kyushu daylight raid on Miyazaki and Kagoshima prefectures, was heavy.

Kyushu Raided 2d Day In Row, Tokyo Reports

San Francisco, April 16 (AP)—American carrier planes, operating with land-based aircraft, raided Japan today for the second successive day, Tokyo radio reported.

"Approximately 100 small-type carrier planes and a small force of B-25's" (Mitchell medium bombers) strafed and bombed Kyushu Island for 50 minutes this afternoon, Tokyo said in a broadcast picked up here.

Also Reports Boso Raid

Yesterday, the radio reported, 40 "small-type planes and carrier-based planes" raided Boso peninsula, eastern arm of Tokyo bay on Honshu Island, for 50 minutes.

There has been no American confirmation of either report.

Today's raiders were said to have swept over Miyazaki and Kagoshima prefectures of Kyushu, southernmost island of Japan, shortly

Noting that land battling on Okinawa was "gradually becoming fierce," a Tokyo Imperial headquarters communique said "the enemy is apparently making full preparations for an offensive on southern Okinawa in spite of painful blows sustained under our counter-offensives." It added that Japanese fliers sank seven ships and damaged 15 in the Okinawa region since last Thursday.

The Japanese claimed 70 of B-29s in the latest raid on Tokyo sector were shot down. The 20th air force in Washington officially reported 11 of the big planes missing, but there was a possibility that some of these might turn up later.

Radio Tokyo devoted a bit of time Monday to discussing assignment of Russia's foreign commissar Molotov to the San Francisco conference. It was the guess of the Japanese that "Molotov must be sent in order to see that America does not pull her (Russia) into this (Far Eastern) war."

General Sultan Wins 2d Cluster To D.S.M.

Calcutta, April 16 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Daniel Isom Sultan, commander of United States forces in the India-Burma theater, was presented his second Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal today for his service in clearing the enemy from the land route to China and making possible the opening of the Stillwell Road.

The award was made by an American, Lieut. Gen. R. A. Wheeler, deputy Allied commander of the Southeast Asia Command.

Sultan, 59-year-old native of Oxford, Miss., won the D.S.M. during the first World War, when he was a colonel serving on the general staff in France.

Taungup In Burma Taken From Japs

Calcutta, April 16 (AP)—The capture of Taungup, last objective in the bloody Arakan campaign on the west coast of Burma by British and Indian troops of the 15th Army Corps, was announced today by the Southeast Asia Command.

Taungup was the only remaining supply base for the Japanese in the wide Arakan coastal area. The Japanese had heavily fortified the town on the sea side expecting a frontal amphibious attack. The 15th, however, landed at Letpan, 42 miles to the north and, in a southward drive outflanked the town on the land side.

Sixty-two miles to the east lies the Irrawaddy River port of Prome. Taungup is 125 miles southeast of Akyab.

In Central Burma, south and east of Meiktila, British 14th Army tanks and mechanized equipment were reported slashing through bewildered Japanese forces attempting to flee eastward toward Thailand. A security blackout has been clamped temporarily on details of the British attack in the Meiktila area.

Warplanes of the Eastern Air Command, ranging over all of Japanese-held areas of Burma, shot up numerous enemy strong points.

Reconnaissance photographs, Allied headquarters said, show that recent raids on Bangkok, the capital of Thailand, have been highly successful and that large fires have been started at important storage areas along the Mandalay-Rangoon railway.

JAPS LOSE TAUNGUP

Calcutta, April 16 (A. P.).—The city of Taungap, last Japanese supply base in Arakan on Burma's west coast, has been captured by the Fifteenth Indian Corps. Taungup lies 125 miles southeast of British-held Akyab and sixty-two miles west of Prome on the Irrawaddy River. Bombers of the Eastern Air Command attacked enemy targets both north and south of Taungup. A road to the east was hit and a large oil fire started northeast of the coastal base.

Fourteenth Army troops were making rapid progress in cleaning out the remaining Japanese forces in Meiktila area of central Burma.

Reds Already Move Germans To Russia to Rebuild Cities

210,000 Taken From Balkans—Allies Got Soviet to Curb Action Somewhat—Truman Faces Big Problem.

Washington, April 16 (A. P.).—Soviet policy declarations calling for transportation of Germans into Russia to help clean up and rebuild war-wrecked cities already have been put into effect in the Balkans.

This became evident today from diplomatic information reaching Washington. It disclosed that:

1. About 70,000 men and women out of the half-million Germans in Romania—where they fought with and supported the Nazi armies—have been removed to the Soviet Union. Originally Moscow wanted to take virtually the entire half-million, but American and Allied intervention against such a wholesale transfer caused Russia to reconsider.

2. An estimated 100,000 Germans have been removed from Yugoslavia. Presumably they also were sent into Russia, but Marshal Tito handled the operation himself and refrained from reporting on it to his western Allies. All that seems reasonably well established is that they have gone from Yugoslavia.

3. In addition, still another 40,000 persons, who originally lived in Bassarabia, now Russian, have been sent back to that former Romanian province from Romania. They fled from Bessarabia as the Reds closed in, and the Russian explanation for returning them is that they are displaced peoples being put back into their homes. This explanation has been accepted here.

The First Headache for Truman.

There have been some signs that able-bodied Germans were being moved out of Hungary, but little information has come through on that. Bulgaria had little German population to begin with, and the Russians ran into no problem there in that regard.

This problem of moving portions of enemy man power into Russia is likely to be among the first diplomatic headaches besetting President Truman. It may be high on the agenda of any talks President Truman has with Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov. There is no doubt among diplomats here that Russia intends to use such man power as she finds desirable.

The subject came up at Yalta but evidently without agreement. Nor is it generally known here how many Germans Russia would like to import.

Roosevelt Favored Move.

Shortly after Yalta the issue was raised at a White House news conference. President Roosevelt said that after seeing the destruction of Crimean cities he thought it might be a good idea to use Germans to clean them up.

Some of President Truman's advisers are known to be opposed to the Russian plan, but the belief among diplomats is that Moscow will not be swerved from its purpose by the western allies. The beginning already made in the Balkans may be taken as evidence that this is the case.

On the other hand, considerable encouragement is felt here that arguments presented by American and other diplomats in the case of the Romanian-Germans evidently helped to cut the number transported from a possible half million to 70,000 or less.

Truman May Change Policy.

The whole issue is part of a much broader question—that of German reparations. Despite the imminent end of the war in Europe virtually no progress has been made on this.

At last reports Isador Lubin, President Roosevelt's choice for American member of the reparations commission to meet in Moscow, had not left Washington. Since he still was here when President Truman took over at the White House it is a question whether he ever will get to fulfill the mission. His assignment is understood to be among the first and most urgent which President Truman might want to review.

Stalin Pictured As Stabilizing Big 3 Basis

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Signs mounted today that Big Three relations, which dipped sharply less than two months after Yalta, are returning to a basis of firm co-operation looking toward San Francisco.

Marshal Stalin's accession to President Truman's request that Soviet Foreign Commissiar Molotov head the Russian delegation to the United Nations meeting marked the first step in the direction of a possible smoother Allied relationship.

Polish Problem

Diplomats were hopeful that Stalin's attitude toward Truman would mean a break in the two-year-old Polish dispute which was coming to a head when President Roosevelt died.

One indication that an agreement may be near was given in London yesterday by former Polish Premier Staislaw Mikolajczyk, a storm center in the Yalta-established Moscow commission designated to work out a new Polish regime.

The United States and Britain insisted that he be included among the Poles invited to discuss its establishment. Russia, however, reversing a previously favorable attitude toward the former Premier, refused to admit him.

"Russ Friendship Necessary"

Mikolajczsyk said yesterday he considered "close and lasting friendship with Russia a keystone of future Polish policy."

"To remove all doubts as to my attitude," he said, "I wish to declare that I accept the Crimea decision in regard to the future of Poland."

This statement, it is felt here, may pave the way for an agreement among the Big Three on which Poles should be included in the discussions.

Another sign of a turn in Russian policy came in a Pravda article dressing down the noted Soviet writer, Ilya Ehrenburg, one of the Soviet Union's severest critics of the Allies.

APR 17 1945

Rebuked By Superior

Ehrenburg's superior, Georgy Alexandrov, denounced the pamphleteer's famous theme that all Germans were war criminals and equally liable to punishment.

This unusual Russian press argument seemed to indicate a shift in policy toward expressing public disagreement with London and Washington.

Many diplomats felt that Stalin may have decided to take special plans to build a friendly basis for his relations with Mr. Truman, realizing that the latter's inexperience in foreign affairs leave his actions possibly open to more criticism in this country than Mr. Roosevelt might have incurred.

Down-The-Line Meat Price Rise Requested

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Higher ceiling prices for beef cattle, with the cost passed on to consumers, was recommended to the Senate Agriculture Committee today by J. E. McDonald, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture.

His view that cattle producers should be paid more than the OPA now allows coincided with developing sentiment in the committee for some price relief to encourage production and to combat black markets.

Unlike McDonald, however, several committee members indicated that they preferred paying producers a subsidy rather than increasing prices to consumers.

Others To Appear

McDonald and Tom Linder, Georgia's Commissioner of Agriculture, were the first of some twenty state representatives who appeared to testify at the committee's investigation into the nation's food situation.

Both the Georgia and Texas commissioners predicted that production of important food crops in their States this year would be less than last year. Among the reasons they gave were OPA price policies, unfavorable weather conditions and shortages of labor and farm machinery.

McDonald said that in view of the "unusual prosperity and high wages," he saw no reason why the Government should "pay part of the people's grocery bills" through subsidies.

Thomas Cautious

Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), committee chairman, expressed fear, however, that higher retail prices might increase pressure for breaking the Administration's stabilization pogram.

Senator Butler (R., Neb.) said the state commissioners could make a valuable contribution by devising a practical formula to assure that any subsidy payments reached the producer.

Recommendations of the commissioners will be presented in a joint report to be submitted to the committee tomorrow.

Several committee members talked of an increase in retail ceilings as possibly desirable.

Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.), who termed some revision of the price structure necessary "all down the line," said "I assume some increase in retail prices would be necessary."

Overall Cut Held Possible

He expressed belief that a slight retail increase could be made with the total cost to consumers actually decreasing. This could result, he said, because much of the available meat now is being sold at inflated prices through the black market.

Senator Bushfield (R., S.D.) said he thought the black market "comes down pretty much to a question of prices."

"The black market could be wiped out in 24 hours if fair prices were received all down the line to the producer," Bushfield commented.

Feeders Called "Bottleneck"

Senator Wherry (R., Neb.) said he believed the whole meat difficulty could be straightened out by an increase of about 1½ cents a pound in retail prices.

Wherry is one of those who contend that the present 'bottleneck' is in the situation of feeders—those who buy thin cattle and feed them to heavier weights before marketing. He says they are "squeezed" between prices of live cattle on the range and the price packers can pay.

The American Meat Institute took a similar position in a report compiled in Chicago at OPA's request.

Asserting that shortages appear slightly worse than a month ago with no immediate relief in sight, the institute added:

"Prevailing ceiling relationships continue to discourage more adequate beef production. . . . If cattle feeders were provided a real incentive for expanding operations, they could substantially increase the nation's meat supply when this is most urgently needed."

Senator Johnson (D., Col.), agreeing with Wherry as to where the trouble lies, urged a subsidy for feeders, terming them the "weak link" in the meat-producing chain.

Foresees Effect On Labor

Johnson said he regarded subsidies as "obnoxious" but that they would "hold the line" against inflation.

Contending that labor's "no strike" pledge was given on the assumption that prices would be stabilized, he said an increase in retail meat prices might be regarded by labor unions as a release from the pledge.

The House food investigating committee, headed by Chairman Anderson (D., N.M.) left Washington yesterday for Chicago to open on-the-spot inquiries into shortages and black markets.

Representatives Set Probe

At the same time, Representative Jenkins (R., Ohio) said the 44-member Republican congressional food study committee would conduct an independent investigation to "inject some plain American common sense into the muddled and disorganized food situation."

Jenkins said various subcommittees of the party group would study specific food problems.

Adjust Meat Demands To Supply, Forces Urged

Chicago, April 16 (AP)—Chairman Clinton P. Anderson of the House Food Investigation Committee today recommended that United States military and war services "should adjust their (meat) specifications on a realistic basis in keeping with the existing meat supply."

Anderson (D., N.M.) included the recommendation in four suggested steps "that might be taken now" to aid in relieving the meat shortage.

Procedures Recommended

In a statement at the opening of the committee's two-day investigation of meat shortages, Anderson suggested these procedures as possibly effective in eliminating meat shortages:

1. The WFA (War Food Administration) might serve notice of its intention to re-examine all slaughter permits so that all handlers of permits could show with affirmative evidence that they had been properly marketing their products and were, therefore, entitled to a continuance of the permit.

2. Federal inspection might be rapidly extended to virtually all slaughterers . . . so that more meat and eventually virtually the entire volume of meat might pass under Federal examination and be thereafter subject to check on inventories and disposals.

3. The United States military and war services should adjust their specifications on a realistic basis in keeping with the existing meat supply.

4. Extend the coverage of "set asides" to many additional plants in keeping with the extension of Federal inspection.

Temporary Relief Needed

Sidore Vice, attorney for the Small Packers' Association of Chicago, told the committee that "unless the non-processing group of beef slaughterers receives immediate temporary relief they will be compelled to close their plants within the next few days."

Vice, who said he also represented "five important nonprocessing slaughterers" of the Milwaukee area who supply that region with 50 per cent of its slaughtered cattle, urged that the same amount of general subsidy as is received by processors be granted to the nonprocessors.

"It is either bankruptcy and jail if we continue under present regulations," he said.

W. S. Greathouse, president of Frye & Co., Seattle (Wash.) meat processors, told the committee "there is a black market, and it has and will continue to procure live stock."

"If it can't procure live stock at the public yards, it will procure the animals elsewhere," he said. "Against it, the legitimate processor is at a hopeless disadvantage. He cannot buy at prices which will permit him to break even. We must have legitimate processors free to operate and we must have enforcement in which the public has confidence."

Alternative Cited

"Let me assure you," he told the committee, "that the question rapidly is becoming 'Who is not in the black market?' rather than 'Who is in the black market?' Legitimate processors have been faced with the alternative, as their funds have dwindled from losses, of closing their plants or of going into the black market.

"We do not defend their acts, but many have made choice of the second alternative. Consumers are storing meat in lockers without points. Chain stores are operating packing plants at a loss to supply their retail markets. All of these factors are in a mounting black market."

Offers Double-Barreled Remedy

Greathouse offered a double-barreled "remedy" for violations of meat-rationing regulations:

"First, give the legitimate processor a chance to exist and to oppose the black market. OPA complains that it cannot keep raising prices to 'compete' with the black market, so it evidently proposes to drive out legitimate business in order that the black market will have no competition," he said.

"Second, enforcement should be in the hands of those experienced in handling enforcement. We need a more detached viewpoint than OPA has on enforcement. Enforcement should be in the hands of the Department of Justice."

The committee will hold similar hearings, at which packers, feeders and producers will testify, in Cleveland Wednesday, Boston April 23 and New York April 24-25.

MORGENTHAU SEEN STAYING AT POST

WASHINGTON, April 16—(AP) Henry Morgenthau, Jr., is expected to stay on for the time being as Secretary of the Treasury, but Capitol Hill looks for possible changes eventually in this cabinet post and others.

At the Treasury plans were proceeding unchanged today, under Morgenthau's direction, for handling of the Seventh War Loan starting May 14 and the administration's drive for congressional approval of the Bretton Woods monetary agreements.

It was considered likely that Morgenthau would stay on through the Loan drive, at least.

Clarification of whether he is to remain indefinitely, with policies unchanged, was urged by Rep. Wolcott (R-Mich) today before any action is taken toward ratifying the Bretton Woods agreements.

Wolcott, Republican leader of the House Banking committee, suggested in a statement to newspapermen that the new administration make a definite assertion on possible changes in personnel and policy in the Treasury.

His proposal came as Chairman Spence (D-Ky) announced the banking group would resume Wednesday its public hearings on the Bretton Woods agreement, drawn at a meeting of delegates from 44 nations and designed to establish a World Bank for reconstruction and development and an international currency stabilization fund.

Wolcott prefaced his statement by pointing to speculation that Morgenthau may not remain in the cabinet.

Japanese Fliers Now Shy At Suicide, Says Observer

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16—An Army observer just back from Okinawa said today Japanese pilots no longer will volunteer for suicide flights and therefore whole squadrons are being designated by their commanders.

Lieut. Col. Robert C. Williams of Spring Valley, N. Y., a ground force observer, told a news conference that one enemy pilot captured at Leyte talked freely after his rescue and capture. This pilot had "missed" his target either deliberately or unintentionally and crashed into the sea.

The enemy pilot said his squadron commander had gone to a meeting, then returned and informed his men they had been selected as a suicide squadron to attack American ships. Colonel Williams expressed belief that this case was true of the other suicide outfits now operating.

Colonel Williams said that "our Nisei (Americans of Japanese birth) are doing a splendid job" on Okinawa.

Navy Nurse Drive Tops Its Quota Of 2,500

Washington, April 16 (AP)—A navy recruiting drive to enlist 2,500 nurses has topped its goal but 4,000 additional doctors are needed, Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire said today.

The Navy's surgeon general advised the 500 nurses who applied for navy service but were not appointed, to seek duty with the Army, which needs 12,000 nurses.

Submarine Commander Hollingsworth Cited

Washington, April 16 (AP)—The Navy today announced the award of the Legion of Merit to Commander John Christie Hollingsworth, 35, commanding officer of the submarine Scamp. The craft was announced as overdue and presumed lost April 12.

The citation for the medal, awarded before the submarine was lost, praised Hollingsworth's "exceptionally meritorious conduct" as commander of the Scamp, and said his actions were "an inspiration to his officers and men."

Hollingsworth was a native of Dawson, Ga. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hollingsworth, live at Emory University, Ga., and his wife at Groton, Conn.

HANNEGAN CONFERS AT THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 16—(AP) Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan conferred at length today with President Truman. He said later "No jobs were discussed."

Asked if he intended to "come into the government," Hannegan told reporters :

"I didn't talk about anything like that. I just wanted him to know I was anxious to be of assistance in any way he could use me."

Ed Pauley, treasurer of the Democratic National committee, accompanied him to the conference.

A reporter asked whether Pauley was discussed for the job of Federal loan administrator, now vacant because of Fred M. Vinson's promotion to war mobilization and reconversion director.

"The question of jobs was not discussed at all," Hannegan asserted.

COMMANDER MISSING

Washington, April 16 (A. P.).—Commander Charles L. Crommelin, 36 years old, one of five brothers in naval service, has been missing since March 28 in the Pacific, the Navy reported today. Holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross and Gold Star in lieu of a second, he had been leader of a carrier air group since August, 1943. No details of his loss were given by the Navy.

A native and resident of Wetumpka, Ala., he is one of nine children, five boys and four girls, of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Crommelin Sr. of Harrogate Springs, Wetumpka. All of the boys entered the Navy and four are naval aviators.

Commander Crommelin attended high school in Montgomery, Ala., was graduated from Annapolis in 1931 and received flight training at Pensacola, Fla. His wife lives at Coronado, Cal.

'BIG 5' MINISTERS PLAN TO DISCUSS POLISH QUESTION

APR 1 7 1945

WASHINGTON, April 16 — (AP) Washington officials were preparing for a conference of Big Five foreign ministers probably this week-end with some hope that a solution for the Polish dispute may be in the making.

While no concrete moves have appeared as yet to break the impasse over Poland, there is a possibility that by the time Russian Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov gets here, the situation may begin to clear.

He is expected by the end of the week.

British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden and Chinese foreign minister T. V. Soong are already in Washington. French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault is expected soon.

Eden arranged a conference this evening with Senator Connally (D.-Tex.) foreign relations chairman and a delegate to next week's United Nations meeting in San Francisco.

Meanwhile, the foreign affairs problems demanding decisions by President Truman grew to include Soviet transfer of Germans from the Balkans into Russia to help clean up war devastation.

The question of reparations was brought up at Yalta, but apparently without agreement. American officials are still discussing the policy of this government. Isador Lubin, appointed by President Roosevelt to go to Moscow as American member of the Reparations commission, is still in Washington with no sign when he will leave.

Diplomatic information here indicates some 70,000 Germans from Romania have been taken to Russia, an estimated 100,000 have been taken somewhere—presumably Russia — from Yugoslavia, and there are signs that able-bodied Germans are being taken from Hungary. Detailed information is scant.

APR 1 7 1945

Only Allied intervention, it was understood, caused Russia to reconsider an original plan to take virtually all of the half-million Germans in Romania where they fought with and supported Nazi armies.

FDR Favored Plan

Shortly after the Yalta conference President Roosevelt indicated sympathy for the idea of using Germans to clean up the destruction he saw in the Crimea, but no actual policy of that sort has been indicated, and some of Mr. Truman's advisers are known to be opposed to the Russian plan of labor reparations.

There is no inclination here to believe that the Russians will be swerved from their purpose. Rather the operation in the Balkans is taken as an indicator of what they propose for Germany itself.

In addition to Stalin's decision to send Molotov, main hope for a break in the Polish mixup is pegged on a statement by former Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk in London last night, and on speculation as to what has happened to fifteen Poles whom the Polish government in London reported as having disappeared.

There was some speculation that this group, including important leaders who might be acceptable to the United States and Britain as members of a new Polish government, may be negotiating directly with Russia.

While this might mean that the Kremlin is by-passing the deadlocked Allied commission in Moscow, it gives rise to the possibility that the Russians can find Poles for the new government who could gian British and American recognition.

Tokyo Says Okinawa Drive Looms

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16 (AP) —Noting that land battling on Okinawa was "gradually becoming fierce," a Tokyo Imperial headquarters communiqué said "the enemy is apparently making full preparations for an offensive on southern Okinawa in spite of painful blows sustained under our counter-offensives." It added the assertion that Japanese fliers had sunk seven ships and damaged fifteen in the Okinawa region since last Thursday.

STRIKE AT FORD PLANT CUTS PLANE OUTPUT

DETROIT, April 16—(AP) A walkout of 550 workmen tonight on the giant Willow Run bomber plant's final assembly line impaired still further the output of B-24 bombers, a Ford Motor Co. spokesman declared. Three hours later, however, 300 of the assemblers returned to their jobs, leaving 250 on strike.

Meanwhile, three plants of the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Co. remained closed by a week-old strike of some 5,000 employes despite efforts of the regional War Labor board to effect a return to work.

Nearly 300 workers left the bomber plant's assembly line this morning in a resumption of a strike which started last week. A company spokesman, who said 900 employes remained on the line tonight, stated that the walkout today followed a two-day suspension of two employes whom management believed responsible for labor disturbances. There was no comment from officials of Local 50, United Automobile Workers (CIO).

Guatemala City Reports Revolution In Honduras

Guatemala City, Guatemala, April 16 (AP)—Frontier reports to the newspaper Nuestro Diario said tonight that a revolt in Honduras was gaining headway and that revolutionists had captured the towns of Santa Rita and Dulcenombre.

Two well-armed, reinforced columns of rebels were reported to have withdrawn into the mountains from Copan and Florida to avoid Government troops.

[Dispatches from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, said the situation in that country was "tranquil," but bandits were being pursued into the mountains in the department of Copan.]

Cuban Senator Sends Out Duel Challenge

Havana, April 16 (AP)—Senator Eduaro Chibas, one of Cuba's delegates to the recent inter-American conference in Mexico City, was challenged to a duel today by Senator Santiago Rey. Rey said Chibas insulted him in a recent speech assailing Rey's administration while Governor of Las Villas province.

Berlin Writes GI Lament, Hymn For Filipinos

APR 1 7 1945

New York, April 16 (AP)—Irving Berlin came home today from a three-month tour of Pacific war areas with a new song, a serviceman's lament to be home again, don a blue serge suit, have breakfast in bed and date a girl wearing a dress—not a uniform.

A chorus of the tune, titled, "Oh, To Be Home Again," goes:

Oh, to be home again, cross the foam again, and be home again,
Just one morning, pounding my head, just one breakfast served in my bed;
Oh, to emerge again, in blue serge again, for a splurge again,
To spend a week off your feet, with a napkin and a sheet,
Oh, how I long to be home.

Also Hymn For Filipinos

Berlin told of the song at a press interview and also of a hymn he had written for the Philippines. He said he wrote the second song, "Heaven Watch the Philippines," because "all the Filipinos were singing 'God Bless America,' and I thought they might like their own sang."

Words to the Philippine song, dedicated to General MacArthur, are:

Heaven watch the Philippines,
Keep her safe from harm;
Guard her sons and their precious ones
In the city and on the farm.
Friendly with America
Let her always be;
Heaven watch the Philippines
And keep her forever free. . . .
And keep her forever free.

330,000 Saw His Show

The composer, who toured through New Guinea and the Philippines with "This Is the Army," said the show played to 330,000 service personnel.

He added that the production had earned more than $10,000,000 for army emergency relief in three years.

Final Rites for President In Hyde Park Family Garden

APR 1 7 1945

World Statesmen, Military, Civilians and National Figures Pay Final Tribute at Grave of Deceased Chief.

Roosevelt Estate, Hyde Park, N. Y., April 16 (A. P.).—Franklin Delano Roosevelt, world traveler in search of lasting peace, slept today in the spot on earth he loved above all others, the garden of his family home in the quiet of Krum Elbow's 1,100 acres.

In burial rites majestic in their simplicity, the four-term Chief Executive was laid to rest yesterday behind the hemlock hedge which borders the century old garden, a cherished pride of the Roosevelt family.

His modest-mannered successor, President Truman, joined other high Government dignitaries in the ceremony, then sped back to Washington to shoulder in earnest the crushing task which fell his lot Thursday when a cerebral hemmorhage killed President Roosevelt.

With President Truman went Mrs. Roosevelt, back to the White House to terminate the first-family housekeeping she began March 4, 1933.

Neighbors of Hyde Park mingled with Cabinet officers, Supreme Court justices, congressional and military leaders and foreign executives to pay final homage to the man who gave up the country squire life he wanted, to lead an embattled nation through its greatest conflict.

Among the funeral guests were Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada, who placed his own floral offering at the green-carpeted graveside, and Alfred Clay, son of a farmer on the Roosevelt estate and boyhood playmate of the late President.

The presidential train, in a funeral role for the first time since the death of Warren G. Harding, rolled into the Roosevelt estate for the last time at 8:40 A. M. yesterday.

The booming thunder of a 21-gun presidential salute started the burial services a few minutes before 10 A. M. The guns were fired at 15-second intervals. Between the reports only the startled chirping of birds in the trees and hedges disturbed the

At 10:02 A. M. Marine captain snapped "present arms" to the military guard of honor as down the valley came the muffled roll of drums. The body of President Roosevelt began the short, slow journey to the final resting place he chose.

A military band broke into the brisk strains of "Hail to the Chief," then turned to the somber, mournful chords of a Chopin funeral dirge.

At 10:36 A. M., ten body bearers from the armed forces lifted the Navy flag-draped casket from a gun caisson and carried it inside the garden to the graveside. Behind the caisson stood a horse draped in black, carrying only the boots and saber of a symbolic rider.

Mrs. Roosevelt and two of her children, Elliott, an Air Forces Brigadier General, and the daughter Anna, stood dry-eyed before the grave. To Mrs. Roosevelt's right were the top military commanders of the nation, members of the cabinet and of the Supreme Court. To her left stood official delegations from both branches of Congress.

White-bearded George W. Anthony, 78-year-old rector of St. James Episcpal Church in Hyde Park, walked slowly to the grave to intone his church's burial service. A spring breeze ruffled his white hair and plucked at his surplice as he spoke. His voice came sharp and clear on the morning air.

"To Almighty God we commend the soul of our brother departed——."

The guests, heads bared, kept their eyes fixed before them.

"Father in Thy gracious keeping leave us now Thy servant sleeping——."

A baby cried. Its father gathered it in his arms and walked outside the garden.

"Grant unto him, Oh Lord, eternal rest.——"

Mrs. Roosevelt lowered her head momentarily.

"Rest in peace. Amen!"

linu the high-banked flowers. Rifles raised they fired three quick volleys into the blue sky. The body bearers carefully folded the flag which draped the President's casket and presented it to Mrs. Roosevelt. She, in turn, handed it to Elliott.

The service was over at 10:50 A. M., less than an hour after the opening salute.

The Government guests filed out of the garden to return to their trains and war-busy Washington. Mrs. Roosevelt stepped aside to exchange a few words with Dutchess county relatives.

President and Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret, chatted briefly with James F. Byrnes, the former War Mobilization director who stood with them through the service. Soon the garden was deserted, save for a few of the M. P.'s who have guarded Krum Elbow since the war started. The President and the guests had departed.

Workmen lifted spades and the Hudson valley soil began thudding on the presidential burial vault.

Suddenly through a gateway in the hedge came Mrs. Roosevelt, quiet and alone. She stepped across the lawn and looked a long minute into her husband's grave.

Then she departed, too.

A lone M. P. with a rifle on his shoulder stood guard tonight at the grave. Every two hours a fresh soldier would take up the vigil, walking slowly back and forth.

Similar changes of guards were made as the body was borne northward from Warm Springs, Ga., to Washington, and on to the family home here.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Receive Bulk of Husband's Estate

Will Bequeaths All Income from Trust Fund to Widow.

NEW YORK, April 16—(AP) The late President Franklin D. Roosevelt in his will filed today bequeathed to his widow, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, all the income from a trust fund to be set up from his residuary estate.

Upon her death, one half of the remaining principal, with any accumulations, is to be paid equally to his children or their heirs.

Divided Into Trusts

The other half is to be divided into separate trusts, to be held by the trustees for the benefit of the children and grandchildren.

The will, filed in Dutchess County's court, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was made public here by John C. Farber, of the law firm of O'Connor and Farber, who said in a statement:

"No attempt has been made as yet to place any valuation upon the assets of the estate."

Upon the death of Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, the late President's mother, on Sept. 7, 1941, Mr. Roosevelt received nine-tenths of her net estate of $1,089,872 and her Hyde Park, N. Y., property.

Mr. Roosevelt last year conveyed the main house and adjacent grounds of the Hudson valley estate to the Federal government, with the provision that Mrs. Roosevelt and their children could live there during their lifetimes.

The will, executed Nov. 12, 1941, shortly after his mother's death and a few months after his meeting with Prime Minister Churchill to frame the Atlantic Charter, provides that Mrs. Roosevelt have the right to select any personal property she desires.

Mr. Roosevelt directed that his five children each shall have the right to select one-fifth of the remaining personal property. Any not chosen by them will be offered as a gift to the government for display at the Franklin D. Roosevelt library or the main house at Hyde Park.

The late President asked that his family leave "the greater part of the personal property" at the main house for the government "so that the general character of the house be not altered."

APR 17 1945

The will added that this should not be construed as a restriction on members of the family. Mr. Roosevelt, however, asked his heirs "to select only such articles of personal property" as they "may be in a position to use personally in their own homes."

Mrs. Roosevelt was given the use of property at Campobello island, New Brunswick, Canada, upon certain terms and conditions.

Church Receives Bequest

Specific cash bequests were made to St. James church, Hyde Park, the Georgia Warm Springs foundation and personal employes and servants.

A provision in the will directing payment of a stated income to and payment for the care of Miss Marguerite A. Le Hand, for many years confidential secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, lapsed because of her death July 31, 1944.

Executors and trustees of the estate are the late President's eldest son, Marine Colonel James Roosevelt; Basil O'Connor, his former law partner, long-time personal friend, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and chairman of the American Red Cross, and Henry T. Hackett, a personal friend and a Poughkeepsie attorney.

The following specific bequests were contained in the 14-page printed will:

To St. James church "the sum of $5,000 to be added to the cemetery fund and used for the upkeep of the Roosevelt family burial lots, the grave of my wife and myself, and for general cemetery upkeep purposes."

To Georgia Warm Springs foundation "all of the real estate located in Meriwether county, state of Georgia, owned by me x x x, with all the buildings and improvements thereon together with all personal property located thereon x x x."

To persons "who are my employes or servants at the time of my death and whose salaries or wages are at that time being paid by me personally the sum of $100.

Mr. Roosevelt directed that his wife must select personal articles within six months and the children by three months after that.

Will Lists Property

The will listed the personal property as "jewelry, books, paintings, pictures, works of art, statuary, silver, plate, china, glass, ornaments, rugs, tapestry, automobiles and boats and their equipment, household furniture and equipment and other tangible personal property x x x wherever located, except such personal property bequeathed to Georgia Warm Springs foundation.

No mention was made of Mr. Roosevelt's famous stamp collection.

The late President authorized the executors "to fix the time within which the government of the United States shall elect to accept all or any part of the said personal property" not taken by the heirs.

Any remaining personal property, the will stated, "may be sold by my executors in whole or in part at public or private sale or sales."

The trustees were charged with managing, selling, exchanging, investing and re-investing the trust fund.

Mr. Roosevelt directed that one half the net income from this fund be paid his wife in quarterly installments and annual payment to her of the net income after payment of other monies to Miss Le Hand.

Miss Le Hand would have received a sum deemed necessary by the trustees to pay her medical bills and up to $1,000 annually for living expenses.

Mrs. Roosevelt was charged with the responsibility for keeping the Campobello island property in repair, pay all taxes and assessments levied after her husband's death and pay all costs of maintenance.

She must notify the trustees within six months of her intention to use the property.

Mr. Roosevelt directed that a simple stone be erected over the grave of himself and his wife in the garden of the Hyde Park estate.

Witnesses to the will were Miss Grace Tully, confidential secretary to the late President; Thomas J. Qualters, Secret Service man assigned to Mr. Roosevelt, and William F. Snyder, a member of the law firm which filed the will.

Skaneateles, N.Y., April 16 (AP)—Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright, wife of the lieutenant general who was taken prisoner by the Japanese at the fall of Corregidor in 1942, said today she doubted the authenticity of a radioed message, purportedly from the general.

The message, broadcast from Tokyo and recorded at San Francisco, was addressed to "relatives in Dallas, Texas." Mrs. Wainwright said the general had no relatives in Dallas. Because of this, she added, she doubted the message was authentic.

Mrs. Wainwright last heard from her husband in August.

NAZI EMBASSY IN SPAIN EXPECTED SURRENDER

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The French press agency, in a wireless dispatch dated Madrid and heard by FCC monitors, said yesterday that the German embassy in the Spanish capital had expected German capitulation yesterday.

The dispatch added that in Barcelona the personnel of the German consulate had "remained on the premises the whole day awaiting events."

The French agency reported that messages had been received in Madrid explaining that the anticipated capitulation had not come about because Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler "achieved a victory in favor of fanatical resistance to the bitter end."

It added that during the period of waiting in Madrid the German ambassador's personal secretary had fled to the south, refusing to return despite being threatened with loss of citizenship, and that the director the Banco Germanico had severed relations with the embassy and applied for Spanish nationality.

By Kelman Morin

PARIS, APR. 12--(AP)--From a German prison camp a French soldier came home today and this is what happened when he opened his door --

They told his wife two days ago. They always give 48 hours notice. The French are like that in the breadth of their understanding.

They understand what may have happened to a woman who has been left alone for five years.

This wasn't one of those cases. This was the other kind. The woman had waited and waited well. Everybody knew that.

When they told her she stood for a moment without moving. "He's coming home," they said. The color drained from her face. She looked stunned. "He's been cleared and the Americans are flying his section back to Paris," they said.

APR 17 1945

A smile like sudden incandescene burst over her face and she murmured "thank you" and again "thank you so much" and then she turned and ran.

She spent the whole two days cleaning their home. It isn't a very big house, but she started in the attic and went right through to the cellar, sweeping, dusting, polishing. She moved every stick of furniture, like they do with spring cleaning in America.

APR 17 1945

Neighbors who knew so well what this would mean offered to help her, but she refused. "It isn't work," she said. "You understand how it is when one's husband is coming home after five years."

They told her he would arrive before noon.

She arranged everything. She went to the groders and the butchers and handed over all her ration tickets. When they showed their surprise she said "Never mind. It isn't every day that one has something like this."

APR 17 1945

She laid places for two at the table.

It was the first time since the tragic summer of 1940 that she had set the table for two, two large soup plates, two napkins, two sets of everything.

APR 17 1945

Throughout the house it was like that. Two of everything. Two armchairs fronting the fireplace, two sets of towels in the bathroom and two pillows on the bed. Everything was ready.

Not quite everything. She suddenly remembered how he liked his salad -- with just a touch of white pepper. There wasn't any white pepper in the house. Almost in a panic she stripped off her apron and ran through the street to the grocers.

APR 17 1945

He opened the door while she was away.

He called her name and only the echo of his voice answered him.

Then he saw the table set for two. He went through the house. Everywhere there was something for two.

Then he heard her footsetps and suddenly they were looking at each other. She started to speak. He struck her across the mouth, savagely. Then with his fist he struck her again and again until she fell.

He walked out of the door. He had disappeared.

BY ALVIN J. STEINKOPF
WEIMAR, GERMANY, APRIL 16-(AP)-YOUNG AMERICANS OF THE 80TH DIVISION BREAKING INTO THE NOTORIOUS BUCHENWALD CONCENTRATION CAMP A FEW MILES OUTSIDE OF WEIMAR BROUGHT FRESH AIR, HOPE AND LIBERTY TO 21,000 MISERABLE, SICK, AND RAGGED MEN.
TENS OF THOUSANDS OF OTHERS HAD DIED BEFORE THE AMERICANS GOT THERE, AND MANY REMAINING WERE TOO FAR GONE TO BE SAVED. IN THE FIRST 24 HOURS OF AMERICAN ADMINISTRATION A FEW MORE THAN 150 SUCCUMBED TO MALNUTRITION AND DISEASE. IN THE NEXT SIX HOURS, 39 MORE DIED.
ALL THAT THE SMALL AMERICAN MILITARY GOVERNMENT STAFF COULD DO IMMEDIATELY WAS INCREASE THE SOUP RATION--ADDING MEAT AND VEGETABLES--AND RELEASE FIVE INTERNED DOCTORS TO HELP THE SICK.
THE AMERICANS FOUND A SHOCKING MESS, BUT INMATES SAID BUCHENWALD HAD BEEN IMPROVING LATELY, WITH THE GERMANS APPARENTLY CLEANING IT UP IN EXPECTATION OF THE AMERICANS' ARRIVAL.
THERE ONCE WERE MORE THAN 50,000 PRISONERS AT BUCHENWALD, BUT SHORTLY BEFORE THE AMERICANS CAME THE NAZIS MARCHED 20,000 TO 30,000 EASTWARD.
I SAW SEVERAL INMATES DIE IN BARRACKS 61.
BODIES WERE HAULED TO A SIX-BURNER CREMATORIUM.
BARRACKS 61 OF THE HOSPITAL SECTION, WHICH INMATES SAID WAS ABOUT THE WORST IN THE COMPOUND, LOOKS LIKE A CONVENTIONAL ONE-STORY WOODEN ARMY BARRACKS. INSIDE IT IS DIVIDED INTO TWO ROWS OF FOUR-TIER SHELVES DIVIDED AT 5 1/2 FOOT INTERVALS BY UPRIGHT PARTITIONS.
INTO EACH HOLE, ABOUT 18 INCHES HIGH, AS MANY AS SIX MEN WERE QUARTERED. THREE IN A CUBBY HOLE COULD LIE COMFORTABLY ON THEIR BACKS, WITH SIX, THE MEN HAD TO LIE ON THEIR SIDES. THERE WERE

NO MATTRESSES ON THE BOARDS AND FEW HAD BLANKETS. THE PATIENTS HAD PNEUMONIA, DYSENTERY, TYPHUS AND ALMOST EVERY TYPE OF DISEASE.

APR 1 1945

OUTSIDE THE HUDDLE OF CONCENTRATION BARRACKS ARE IMPOSING STONE BUILDINGS WHICH HOUSED AN SS DETACHMENT NORMALLY REPUTED TO HAVE A STRENGTH OF 3,000. LT. WITH THE U.S. 90TH INFANTRY NEAR THE CZECHOSLOVAK BORDER, APRIL 16-(AP)-DOUGHBOYS OF THIS DIVISION COMMANDED BY BRIG.GEN.HERBERT L. ENNEST OF RICHMOND,VA., ARE LOOKING FORWARD TO THE LIBERATION OF STILL ANOTHER NAZI-OPPRESSED COUNTRY--CZECHOSLOVAKIA--NOW LESS THAN EIGHT MILES FROM THEIR FRONT-LINE FOX HOLES.

AFTER DRIVING ACROSS GERMANY AND CAPTURING HOF, LAST LARGE CITY BETWEEN THEM AND THE CZECH BORDER, THE DOUGHBOYS ARE EAGER TO GET INTO CZECHOSLOVAKIA FOR TWO REASONS:

FIRST--THEY WANT TO TEAR THE GERMAN YOKE FROM THE NECKS OF THE CZECHS, WHOSE YOUNG NATION WAS BORN WITH UNITED STATES ASSISTANCE.

SECOND--THE RULE AGAINST FRATERNIZING WITH CIVILIANS WHICH HAS BEEN EFFECTIVE IN THEIR MARCH THROUGH GERMANY WOULD NOT APPLY IN FRIENDLY CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

THE CZECHS ARE WAITING FOR THE AMERICANS WITH OPEN ARMS, ACCORDING TO REPORTS REACHING COL.J.W.BEALKE, OF BOONVILLE,MO., COMMANDER OF THE 358TH REGIMENT.

THE LIBERATION SPRIT BEGAN SWEEPING THE 90TH AFTER BEALKE'S THIRD BATTALION, COMMANDED BY MAJ.CHARLES B.BRYAN OF JOHNS ISLAND, S.C., PUSHED INTO HOF, A CITY OF APPROXIMATELY 48,000.

PREVIOUSLY THE 90TH'S RECONNAISSANCE TROOPS, COMMANDED BY CAPT. THOMAS DYE OF DES MOINES, IOWA, CUT THE BERLIN-MUNICH SUPERHIGHWAY NORTHWEST OF HOF WITH UNEXPECTEDLY LITTLE TROUBLE.

THEY CAPTURED 1,100 PRISONERS, AND 3,000 PATIENTS IN 10 HOSPITALS. THEY SEIZED THE AIRPORT, WITH 22 JUNKERS 88'S AND TRAINING SHIPS, WAREHOUSES CONTAINING LARGE STOCKS OF MILITARY SUPPLIES, AND A PLANT FILLED WITH AT LEAST 10,000 PARACHUTES AND PARATROOPERS' PACKS COMPLETE WITH GERMAN-RUSSIAN PHRASE BOOKS.

LT.LEO MILLER, 2011 EAST CHERRY ST., SEATTLE, WASH., COMMANDING THE SECURITY GUARD PLATOON ATTACHED TO BRYAN'S BATTALION, SAID THE GERMANS SENT GROUPS, EACH COMPOSED OF 10 ELDERLY MEN, INTO THE HILLS AROUND HOF TO SNIPE AT THE AMERICANS.

"BUT THEY QUIT AS SOON AS WE BEGAN SHOOTING," HE ADDED.

STAFF SGT.TROY K.FOUGHT, OF LOCUST GROVE,OKLA., GUARDING THE PARACHUTE PLANT, SAID "IT WAS CONSIDERATE OF THE GERMANS TO LEAVE THE PLACE IN SUCH GOOD ORDER."

MAJ.WILLIAM FALVEY, KNOX, IND., SAID 70 UKRAINIAN WACS WERE AMONG THE PRISONERS TAKEN AROUND SAALE LAKE, NORTHWEST OF HOF. THEY HAD BEEN ASSIGNED TO UNFEMININE JOBS.

WITH THE U.S. FIRST ARMY BESIEGING LEIPZIG, APRIL 16-(AP)-LT.GEN. COURTNEY.HODGES' ARMORED AND MOTORIZED INFANTRY COLUMNS OPENED THE FINAL ASSAULT ON LEIPZIG TODAY. AFTER KNOCKING OUT 409 OF THE ESTIMATED 1,000 LEVELED ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS DEFENDING THIS GERMAN CULTURAL, INDUSTRIAL AND MILITARY SUPPLY CENTERS.

THE NEAREST AMERICAN THRUST TO LEIPZIG DURING THE DAY WAS AN ADVANCE BY THE 69TH INFANTRY DIVISION TO GRUNA, FOUR MILES TO THE SOUTH BUT ACTUALLY A PART OF THE METROPOLITAN OUTSKIRTS. IN A WIDE SWING AROUND BEHIND THE CITY, THE NINTH ARMORED DIVISION DROVE TO BENNE, 10 MILES DUE EAST.

WITH INFANTRY FORCES ALREADY THROUGH THE MAIN DEFENSE BELT OF STATIC ANTI-AIRCRAFT DEFENSES ON THE WEST, THE GREAT CITY WAS CAUGHT IN A GIGANTIC THREE-PRONGED DRIVE FROM THE WEST, SOUTH AND EAST.

WD438PEW

SVENTH ARMY FORCES ATTACKED ACROSS BROAD ROLLING WHEAT AND RYE FIELDS WHERE IN 1813 AN ALLIANCE OF PRUSSIANS, RUSSIANS, AUSTRIANS AND SWEDES HAMMERED APART NAPOLEON'S "GRAND ARMY," CRIPPLED BY ITS DISASTROUS RETREAT FROM RUSSIA, IN THE FAMOUS FOUR-DAY "BATTLE OF THE NATIONS."

SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF LEIPZIG, WORLD RENOWNED ART, MEDICAL AND PUBLISHING CENTER, WAS REPORTED TO BE DESTROYED BY BOMBINGS WHICH THE CITY'S EXTREMELY HEAVY CONCENTRATION OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT COULD NOT FEND OFF. ITS WAR-CROWDED POPULATION OF NEARLY 1,000,000 PERSONS WAS REPORTED ALREADY SHORT OF FOOD, LINING UP BY THE THOUSANDS IN FRONT OF WHAT STORES WERE STILL OPEN.

IN THE THREE-WAY PUSH ON THE CITY HISTORY WAS AGAIN REPEATING ITSELF. THE AMERICAN COMMANDERS WERE FOLLOWING ALMOST EXACTLY THE SAME TROOP MOVEMENT PLAN BY WHICH THE ATTACKING FORCES OF THAT DAY POUNDED NAPOLEON'S GRENADIERS FROM LEIPZIG IN A THREE DIRECTIONAL PUSH ALMOST 132 YEARS AGO.

(A BLUE NETWORK CORRESPONDENT REPORTED THAT GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS HAD BEEN BROUGHT FROM THE RUSSIAN FRONT TO HELP DEFEND LEIPZIG.)

SMASHING ON BEYOND LEIPZIG OTHER NINTH ARMY ARMORED UNITS REACHED THE MULDE RIVER AT THREE POINTS DURING THEIR DRIVE TOWARD THE ELBE. HEAVY FIRE WAS ENCOUNTERED WHEN THE AMERICANS RAN INTO ONE GERMAN FORCE CONSISTING LARGELY OF 12-YEAR-OLD BOYS, HITLER JUGEND YOUTHS, AT HOHNBACH, 20 MILES SOUTHEAST OF LEIPZIG. THESE SCHOOLBOY SOLDIERS FOUGHT FIERCELY TO HOLD A ROAD BLOCK, EMPLOYING RIFLE, PANZERFAUST AND BAZOOKA FIRE.

THE AMERICAN TROOPS CAPTURED 15 LOCOMOTIVES INTACT AT BOTHEN, NORTHWEST OF HOHNBACH.

INFANTRY TROOPS SMASHING TOWARD LEIPZIG FROM THE WEST CRACKED THE CITY'S MAIN DEFENSE BELT BY TAKING MERSEBURG AND LEUNA, TWO STRONGPOINTS.

ONE OFFICER DECLARED THAT "THE SITUATION IS BREAKING--WE ARE

THROUGH THE MAIN PART OF THE ~~DEFENSE BELT~~ NOW. AND IT WILL BE GOING DOWNHILL FROM NOW ON."

APR 17 1945

B14

AT MERSEBURG, THE INFANTRYMEN CAPTURED A GERMAN AIR FIELD AND 29 AIRCRAFT--12 JETS, 10 FOCKE-WULFS AND SEVEN OTHERS--ALL IN GOOD CONDITION. THEY ALSO TOOK OVER A BENZENE FACTORY AT LEUNA AND A SYNTHETIC RUBBER PLANT NORTH OF MERSEBURG AT SCHKOPAU.

THE TOWN OF BORMA, 12 MILES SOUTHEAST OF LEIPZIG, WAS SURRENDERED BY TELEPHONE. MEMBERS OF A TANK UNIT CALLED THE BURGOMEISTER FROM THE VILLAGE OF THRANA AND TOLD HIM: "GIVE UP OR YOUR VILLAGE WILL BE DESTROYED IN BATTLE BY OUR GUNS."

A HALF-HOUR LATER THEY REACHED BORMA AND FOUND THE BURGOMEISTER, ALONG WITH A PARTY OF HIS VILLAGE OFFICERS, STANDING AT THE EDGE OF TOWN WAVING WHITE FLAGS, AND WAITING TO CARRY OUT AMERICAN ORDERS.

RECAPITULATION OF THE GERMAN DEFENSES OF LEIPZIG INDICATED THAT THE CITY WAS HELD BY APPROXIMATELY 30,000 REGULAR ARMY AND VOLKSTURM TROOPS LED BY A GENERAL--DESPITE HIS OWN DESIRE TO YIELD THE CITY.

IT WAS REPORTED THAT THE COMMANDING GENERAL FAVORED SURRENDERING THE CITY BECAUSE HE FELT THAT IT WAS HOPELESS TO ATTEMPT TO DEFEND IT WITH THE FORCE AVAILABLE. BUT THAT HE HAD BEEN OVERRULED BY THE BURGOMEISTER, A STRONG NAZI WHO GOT AN ORDER FROM HIGHER HEADQUARTERS TO CONTINUE THE FIGHT.

THERE WAS NO DOUBT OF THE SENTIMENT OF THE LEIPZIG CIVILIANS. THEY WANT TO SURRENDER.

THE CITY AND ITS SUBURBS WERE CROWDED WITH THOUSANDS OF GERMAN AND AMERICAN HOSPITAL PATIENTS AND PRISONERS.

AIR REPORTS SAID THE GERMANS WERE STILL TRYING TO SEND MILITARY SUPPLIES INTO THE CITY FROM THE EAST. FOUR HUNDRED RAIL CARS ARRIVED FROM THE ELBE RIVER IN THE LAST 24 HOURS.

BESIDES THE VOLKSTURMERS AND 32 BATTALIONS OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERY TROOPS, THE LEIPZIG GARRISON CONTAINS MANY ENGINEERS AND ORDNANCE MEN WHO HAVE BEEN THROWN INTO FRONT LINE ROLES.

ACCORDING TO INFORMATION OBTAINED BY AMERICAN OFFICERS, STREET RUBBLE HAS BEEN SMOOTHED OVER AND SOWN WITH MINES. PILLBOXES THROUGHOUT THE CITY HAVE BEEN CAMOUFLAGED WITH BIRCH TREES, GRASS AND SHRUBBERY AND BRIDGES, INCLUDING THE ZEPPELIN BRIDGE ACROSS THE ELSTER RIVER, HAVE BEEN RIGGED WITH EXPLOSIVES.

INFANTRYMEN OF THE 69TH DIVISION FOUGHT TODAY TO A POINT WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF THE CITY. AT ZWENKAU THEY WERE ENGAGED BY 15 GERMAN RAILROAD GUNS AND SCORES OF LEVELED ANTIAIRCRAFT GUNS. OTHER FORCES WERE CUPPING THE CITY FROM WEST AND EASTWM

"IT LOOKS AS IF THIS WILL BE THE TOUGHEST FIGHT SO FAR TO TAKE ANY GERMAN CITY," SAID MAJ. VICTOR G. CONLEY OF WEST ROXBURY, MASS. "CERTAINLY IT IS THE TOUGHEST ONE OUR DIVISION HAS TAKEN ON."

IN LEIPZIG AND THE SUBURBS, THE AMERICANS HAVE BEEN TOLD, ARE AN UNDERGROUND AIRDROME WITH 100 JET-PROPELLED PLANES, A LARGE SUBTERRANEAN AMMUNITION FACTORY, A SYNTHETIC RUBBER PLANT WHICH WAS WORKING 72 DAYS AGO, AND A ROCKET FACTORY.

HUNDREDS OF 88 MM. GUNS GUARD THE APPROACHES.

BUT THE 69TH DIVISION HAS FOUND A WAY TO DEAL WITH THEM. IT CAPTURED 1,900 PRISONERS AND KNOCKED OUT 72 GIANT ACKACK GUNS YESTERDAY WITH A LOSS OF ONE MAN KILLED AND FEWER THAN 80 OTHER CASUALTIES.

ADD ROME XX FIXED

ALLIED TACTICAL PLANES CONTINUED TO GIVE THE ADVANCING TROOPS CLOSE SUPPORT THROUGHOUT THE BLAZING DAY, BUT AT SOME POINTS VISIBILITY WAS SO POOR THE PLANES RETURNED TO THEIR FIELDS RATHER THAN TAKE CHANCES ON HITTING ALLIED FORCES.

AMONG THE AMERICAN FORCES ATTACKING IN THE APENNINES WAS THE 34TH INFANTRY DIVISION, WHICH SPENT ITS 500TH DAY IN THE LINE, THE LONGEST COMBAT TOUR OF ANY AMERICAN UNIT. THE DIVISION LEFT THE U.S. IN JANUARY, 1942, AND HAS FOUGHT THROUGHOUT THE NORTH AFRICAN AND ITALIAN CAMPAIGNS.

EIGHTH ARMY FORCES ON THE RIGHT END OF THE LINE PUSHED NORTH FROM THE FLOODED AREA SOUTHWEST OF LAKE COMACCHIO TOWARD THE ARGENTA GAP, ONE OF THE LAST BARRIERS BEFORE THE FLATLANDS LEADING TO FERRARA AND THE PO RIVER.

POLISH TROOPS UNDER MAJ. GEN. BOHUSZ-SCYSZKO WHO YESTERDAY CAPTURED IMOLA, KEY ROAD CENTER 19 MILES SOUTHEAST OF BOLOGNA, DROVE FORWARD ALONG ROUTE 9, CROSSING THE SELLUSTRA RIVER AND CLOSING IN ON CASTEL SAN PIETRO, ONLY 12 MILES FROM BOLOGNA. TOSCANELLA, FOUR MILES UP THE HIGHWAY FROM IMOLA, WAS TAKEN. OTHER POLISH FORCES ON THE RIGHT FLANK CAPTURED A BRIDGE OVER THE SILLARO RIVER AND FANNED OUT ON THE FAR BANK.

FIFTH ARMY TROOPS ON THE WESTERN COASTAL SECTOR CAPTURED MONTE GRUGOLA AND OTHER HILLS FROM WHICH THE GERMANS HAD BLOCKED THEIR PROGRESS FOR TWO DAYS. ELEMENTS OF THE NEGRO 92ND INFANTRY DIVISION THREW BACK AN ENEMY COUNTERATTACK.

THE EXPERIENCE OF THE EIGHTH ARMY IN ITS WEEK-OLD ATTACK INDICATES THE FIFTH ARMY FACES MUCH BITTER AND BLOODY FIGHTING. IT IS EVIDENT NOW THAT THE NAZIS HAVE CHOSEN TO FIGHT TO THE LAST FOR NOTHERN ITALY, DESPITE THE MILITARY DISASTER UNFOLDING IN THEIR HOMELAND.

ALEXANDER, ALLIED COMMANDER IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, TOLD THE ATTACKING FORCES:

"FINAL VICTORY IS NEAR. GERMAN FORCES NOW ARE VERY GROGGY AND ONLY NEED ONE MIGHTY PUNCH TO KNOCK THEM OUT FOR GOOD. THE MOMENT NOW HAS COME FOR US TO TAKE THE FIELD FOR THE LAST BATTLE WHICH WILL END THE WAR IN EUROPE.

"IT WILL NOT BE A WALKOVER. THE MORTALLY WOUNDED BEAST STILL WILL BE VERY DANGEROUS X X X BUT THE END IS QUITE CERTAIN X X X. YOU WHO HAVE WON EVERY BATTLE YOU HAVE FOUGHT ARE GOING TO WIN THIS ONE."

CLARK TOLD HIS TROOPS: "IT IS MY GREATEST HOPE THAT THIS WILL BE THE LAST MAJOR OFFENSIVE THAT WILL BE CONDUCTED BY THE 15TH ARMY GROUP. IF WE CARRY OUT THE ATTACK WITH MAXIMUM FURY AND WITH RELENTLESS THOROUGHNESS SO THAT THE ENEMY IS FORCED TO RETREAT, SURRENDER OR DIE, WE MAY WELL REALIZE YOUR HOPE AND MINE THAT FURTHER MAJOR OPERATIONS WILL BE UNNECESSARY."

OFFICIAL SOVIET DISPATCHES, MEANWHILE, SAID NOTHING ABOUT ANY RED ARMY ACTIVITY ALONG THE ODER-NEISSE-SPREE RIVER LINE, BUT THERE SEEMS GOOD REASON TO BELIEVE THAT THE ZERO HOUR IS APPROACHING FOR AN OFFENSIVE ON BERLIN.

CONSERVATIVE MILITARY QUARTERS IN MOSCOW CONSIDER THAT THE GERMANS, WHO HAVE BEEN REPORTING RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE GESTURES ALONG THE ODER EAST OF BERLIN, ARE MERELY TRYING TO DRAW A STATEMENT FROM THE RED ARMY ON ITS PLANS FOR A SPRING OFFENSIVE WHICH EVERYONE KNOWS IS COMING SHORTLY.

SCOUTING CERTAINLY IS GOING ON ALONG THE ODER-NEISSE-SPREE RIVER LINE AND THE RUSSIANS HAVE GONE OUT BY NIGHT AND SEIZED PRISONERS TO GET INFORMATION, BUT THE GREAT END-THE-WAR RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE HAS DEFINITELY NOT BEGUN.

"WHEN THIS OFFENSIVE STARTS THE WHOLE WORLD WILL KNOW ABOUT IT," A RUSSIAN OFFICER DECLARED. "THE GERMANS SHOULDN'T BE SO IMPATIENT. IT'S COMING."

FOR WEEKS NOW MARSHALS GREGORY K.ZHUKOV AND IVAN S.KONEV HAVE BEEN BUILDING UP THE FRONT IN THAT SECTOR. IT IS ALSO PROBABLE THE BULK OF TWO OTHER WHITE RUSSIAN ARMIES HAVE BEEN MOVED WESTWARD FROM THE BALTIC SEA CAMPAIGNS.

OKINAWA, APRIL 15 (DELAYED)-(AP)-ALWAYS I HAVE TOLD MYSELF WITH SATISFACTION, THAT I HAVE NO RACE PREJUDICE.

NOW, SITTING A THOUSAND MILES OR SO FROM HOME, I'M FORCED TO ADMIT I WAS WRONG. I HATE JAPANESE.

HERE'S THE REASON:

APR 17 1945

THE OTHER DAY I LEARNED THAT AN OLD PAL, LT.TED GRISET OF BROWNSVILLE, TEX., WAS ABOARD A HOSPITAL SHIP IN THE HARBOR. I WANTED TO SEE HIM BECAUSE HE'S A GOOD FRIEND OF MINE, AND GENERALLY CAN BE TRUSTED TO POUR A DRINK. DESPITE THE FACT HE'S A BACTERIOLOGIST, TED DEALS OUT A FINE BRAND OF CONVERSATION.

MAJ.GEN.MAURICE L.SHEPHERD OF SALEM, ORE., 24TH ARMY CORPS PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICER, SAID HE WAS TIRED OF HERDING CORRESPONDENTS AROUND AND HE'D COME ALONG.

I HAD MY FIRST BATH IN MANY DAYS, SHAVED CAREFULLY, AND PUT ON A SPIC AND SPAN SUNTAN UNIFORM I HAD BEEN SAVING FOR JUST SUCH AN OCCASION. GEN. SHEPHERD DID LIKEWISE, ALTHOUGH I FEEL THE CREASE IN MY TROUSERS WAS BETTER THAN HIS.

WE HAD A FINE VISIT WITH GRISET, AND WERE INVITED TO RETURN TO THE HOSPITAL SHIP. WHEN WE GOT ASHORE WE WERE FEELING VERY PLEASED WITH OURSELVES AND THEN:

A COUPLE OF NASTY NIPPONESE PILOTS CAME OVER DROPPING BOMBS, STRAFING, AND MAKING SQUINT-EYED NUISANCES OF THEMSELVES. "SHEP" AND I HAD TO HIT A MUDDY, FOUL-SMELLING SLIT TRENCH IN OUR FANCY UNIFORMS. FOR A GENERAL, "SHEP" CAN DO A LOT OF FANCY CUSSING. IT SOUNDED LIKE A CROSS BETWEEN AN ENRAGED MARINE AND WALL OF ACK-ACK AS HE CONSIGNED THE SONS OF HEAVEN TO VARIOUS PLACES, AND DROPPED A COMMENT HERE AND THERE ON THEIR PROBABLE ANTECEDENTS.

BUT THERE WE WERE. NO MORE CLEAN UNIFORMS AND NO LAUNDRY FACILITIES. WE HAD AN INVITATION TO VISIT GRISET AGAIN, THE GENT WHO USUALLY IS GOOD FOR A DRINK.

IF WE RETURNED TO THE HOSPITAL SHIP IN OUR TRENCH-DAUBED UNIFORMS BACTERIOLOGIST GRISET WOULD HOWL FOR HIS FUMIGATING SQUAD.

I HATE JAPANESE.

MANILA,MARCH 23 (DELAYED)-(AP)-LIFE HAS CRAWLED BACK INTO THE HAGGARD RUINS OF THIS CITY, AND THE WAY IT REASSERTS ITSELF SOMETIMES DRAWS PITY BUT MORE OFTEN PROVOKES ANGER.
MILITARY FEAR HAS LEFT THE SURVIVORS OF MANILA'S HORRIBLE CAMPAIGN. THEY WERE SHAKEN BUT SAFE. THOSE WHO SUFFERED MOST WERE CONTENT TO REST AND WAIT. THOSE WHO SUFFERED LEAST CAME OUT TO PREY ON THE LIBERATORS.
NIGHT LIFE BEGAN AMID THE RUINS. GRIMY CAFES AND SO-CALLED NIGHT CLUBS BLOSSOMED IN THE DRAB STREETS WHICH WAR HAD NOT TOUCHED. THERE WERE GIRLS AND LIQUOR FOR TIRED, STILL SHAKEN SOLDIERS WHO CAME WITH BULGING POCKETS INTO THE ONLY CITY THEY HAD SEEN IN YEARS OF CAMPAIGNING.
IN A MONTH, BOOTLEG LIQUOR HAD KILLED 12, BLINDED OTHERS AND SENT SCORES MORE TO HOSPITALS, WITH EVERYTHING FROM PARALYSIS TO DYSENTERY.
THIS WAS ENOUGH TO SOUR THE FIRST CONTACTS BETWEEN THE AMERICANS AND SOME OF THE PEOPLE THEIR BUDDIES DIED TO RESCUE. IT WAS FAR MORE FLAMBUOYANT THAN THE QUIET, HONEST ENDEAVOR OF RESPONSIBLE FILIPINOS TO RE-CLAIM THEIR SHATTERED LIVES. FURTHERMORE, IT IS SYMBOLIC OF THE RESTLESSNESS AND UNCERTAINTY CHARACTERIZING THE CITY.

Ninth Army Beats Off Fierc Nazi Attacks in Drive on Berlin.

PARIS, Wednesday, April 18 — (AP) American armies which already have virtually bisected Germany, broke into the prize cities of Leipzig and Magdeburg yesterday as British tanks tore loose on a 22 mile sweep that carried within 25 miles of the great port of Hamburg.

Duesseldorf, last major city in the Ruhr still held by the Germans, also was entered by Doughboys who now have whittled down the Ruhr pocket to 125 square miles from its original 3,000 square miles

Germany Cut in Half

A Berlin military commentator asserted that Germany had been cut in half and now was forced to fight on two separate battlefields. He did not say whether this meant that American and Russian forces had linked up or merely that the Reich had been cut in two geographically by American units reaching Czechoslovakia.

For the most part the American armies concentrated their might on clearing out fierce pockets of Nazi resistance which have developed in the big cities and there was no indication that the final drive on Berlin had begun — although the U. S. Ninth army enlarged its bridgehead across the Elbe river south of Magdeburg to a depth of five miles.

Supreme headquarters disclosed early today that these bridgehead forces under Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson had blasted off the heaviest counterattack thrown against the Allies since their crossing to the east bank of the Rhine weeks ago.

SHAEF said the Germans launched their counterattacks some time Monday and the battle raged into the night, but by Tuesday morning it had been thoroughly repulsed.

The biggest advances in 24 hours were rolled up by British armor striking northward toward the Nazis' important Baltic ports. Resistance suddenly slackened on Lt. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's front and a breakthrough to the Elbe river on a broad front was expected soon.

The British Seventh armored division slashed across the Berlin-Bremen railroad in its 22-mile northward thrust and the 11th Armored division drove eight miles north of Uelzen, although there still was heavy fighting in that city in the outskirts of Verden, 20 miles southeast of Bremen.

In northern Holland Canadian troops liberated Harlingen and closed up to the eastern end of the Zuider Zee causeway and cleared a 20-mile stretch of the Baltic Sea coast. In western Holland they cleared the communications center of Apeldoorn as Germans opened the Sluice gates of the Zuider Zee to flood lowlands between Utrecht and Amsterdam.

In the American mop-up of Nazi cities, Leipzig, Germany's fifth largest, was almost encircled. The 69th division burst into its eastern outskirts against resistance that was lighter than expected, and last night was within 2 1-2 miles of its bomb-shattered center.

Magdeburg, 60 miles southwest of Berlin, was being assaulted by infantrymen of the 30th division and tanks of the Second Armored division and for four hours during the day was attacked from the air by fleets of fighterbombers striking at 20-mile intervals.

The Nazi party convention city of Nuernberg, broken into Monday by the Seventh armys 45th infantry now was three-fourths surrounded and falling a block at a time despite fanatical German resistance.

Third army troops opened an assault on Chemnitz, city of 334,000 after the Germans rejected a demand for its surrender. The Americans were two miles away on the west and an undisclosed distance on the north.

A late front dispatch said that Lt. Gen. George S. Pattons 90th infantry division, which with the 26th infantry is driving toward Czechoslovakia on a 15-mile front, has pushed eastward two miles during the day to within four miles of completing its stab across the waist of Germany.

Surrender Ultimatum Rejected

The German garrison of Chemnitz, beleaguered fortress city 38 miles west of Dresden, rejected a Third army ultimatum to surrender and was being stormed from less than two miles away.

Lt. Gen. Courtney Hadges First army troops crashed through Leipzigs outer defenses on the fourth day of the battle for that city and were meeting lessening resistance as they fought into its bomb-shattered outskirts. Some captured Nazi garrison members proved to be military mental cases, and some uniformed women were killed as they manned defense guns.

Two crack divisions of Lt. Gen. William Simpsons Ninth army—the 30th infantry and the Second armored—launched an all-out assault on Magdeburg after heavy aerial preparation and were reported making "excellent progress through the streets of the industrial city on the banks of the Elbe river.

It was the first real attempt to take Magdeburg since it was reached a week ago, though Ninth army troops had crossed the Elbe both above and below the city.

A front dispatch said Yank infantry was methodically approaching the citys center, but that Simpsons tanks were being hampered by thick smoke screens laid down by German guns from across the Elbe.

APR 18 1945

British Tanks Break Loose

Troops of the 1st and 9th Armies linked up at Bernburg, a short distance from the Elbe some twenty-seven miles due south of Magdeburg. The 9th Army's bridgehead across the Elbe at Barby, southeast of Magdeburg, remained intact. German forces by-passed by the 9th Army north of Magdeburg made an attempt to break through and escape up the Elbe to the north but were turned back after overrunning an American anti-aircraft position.

On the north tanks of the British 2d Army broke loose through weakening Nazi resistance for a thirteen-mile gain south of Hamburg. Schnewerdingen, twenty-five miles from the Elbe on the approaches to Hamburg, was captured by the British 7th Armored Division, which pushed on to within fifteen miles of the Elbe.

The British took 5,000 prisoners Monday, bringing their total since the Rhine crossing to 70,000. Montgomery's 11th Armored Division reached a point ten miles due south of Luneburg, the last big town on the British right flank. The Nazi garrison of besieged Bremen still was fighting stubbornly.

Zuider Zee Six Miles Off

Canadian troops cleared Apeldoorn, in Holland, and drove to within six miles of the Zuider Zee at Barneweld, which they were mopping up. In northern Holland they captured the Port of Harlingenach and now hold a ten-mile stretch of the Netherlands coast. The Germans were reported opening dikes in the Zuider Zee and flooding great sections of lowland. The Nazis threw two counter-attacks against the Canadian bridgehead over the Kusten Canal south of Pappenburg, but both were beaten back.

French forces continued their assault against forts guarding the Atlantic port of Bordeaux, where a German garrison still held out. It was announced that German Admiral Michaelis was captured with his entire staff in the seizure of the Royan pocket, near Bordeaux, two days ago.

The 69th Infantry Division, fighting into Leipzig, was reported within two and a half miles of the heart of the city, but Hal Boyle, Associated Press correspondent, predicted it might take two or more days to mop up the big military depot and road-rail hub. Boyle said the German garrison still had a narrow escape route open north of Leipzig, but that it was under fire of American guns.

It was estimated that the equivalent of two German divisions already had been destroyed on the perimeter of Leipzig, Germany's fifth city. Ranstadt, a suburb less than five miles west of the city, had been cleared and the 9th Armored Division wheeled around the city into Borsdorf, less than four miles to the east.

263,000 Seized in Ruhr

On the southern flank the United States 45th Division was fighting through the streets of the Nazi congress city of Nuernberg, which it entered Monday. Nuernberg, an important traffic center, is ninety miles from Munich and 153 from Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat. Lauf, eight miles northeast of Nuernberg, was captured.

While the 3rd Army's 87th Division was capturing Plauen and pushing on five miles to the east and southeast, the 89th Division moved nine miles on a ten-mile front and captured the towns of Werdau and Greiz and fought into Waldhaus Forest.

The 1st Army led Monday's prisoner bag with an amazing 97,118—88,144 from the collapsing Ruhr pocket. More than 263,000 prisoners now had been taken in the Ruhr, and the tremendous problem of processing them was delaying the final mop-up there. The enemy's 5th Panzer and 15th Armies had been destroyed.

The 1st Army's prisoner total since D-Day stood at 659,117, the 3d Army's at 485,206 and the 9th's at 344,938.

Blast Gestapo Building

R. A. F. Again Smashes Quarters of Nazi Units in Denmark

LONDON, April 17 (AP).—Six Royal Air Force Mosquito bombers attacking at roof-top level sent high explosive bombs through windows and doors of the Gestapo headquarters building at Odense, on Fyn Island in Denmark, today.

Pilots said the building was badly damaged by blast and fire.

The planes, making a short trip from Belgian fields, carried two extra bombs under their wings. None was lost. One mosquito was from a R. A. F. film unit and recorded the whole action.

This was the third Gestapo headquarters smashed by Mosquitoes in Denmark in the last few months.

3d Is Only Six Miles From Border Of Czechoslovakia

APR 18 1945

Paris, April 17 (AP)—The Germans launched a heavy attack today on the 9th Army's Elbe bridgehead pointing toward Berlin, but the Americans beat off the attack without losing ground.

APR 18 1945

To the south, the 3d Army captured the big Saxony rail center of Plauen, in effect cutting Germany in two. The 90th and 26th infantry divisions advanced on a 15-mile front and the 90th reached a point only 4½ miles from the Czechoslovakian border.

At besieged Chemnitz, the Nazi commander rejected an ultimatum to surrender.

[A Nazi radio commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, said tonight that Germany had been cut in two by drives from the east and west and now was forced to fight on two separated battlefields.

No Explanation Given

He gave no details. It was uncertain whether the broadcast meant that American and Russian forces actually had joined in eastern Germany, or that the 3d Army had invaded Czechoslovakia. The Americans were 6 miles from the republic hours ago and reaching its borders would divide Germany geographically, although not strategically.]

More than half of Germany was conquered, 101,000 square miles under Allied and Russian banners and 84,000 square miles remaining to the Germans.

Leipzig Defenses Cracked

The 1st Army cracked the defenses of Leipzig and fought within sight of the city and also linked up with the 9th Army at Bernburg, 12 miles southeast of Barby, where the Elbe bridgehead is being strengthened.

DAY

British armor drove to within 30 miles of Hamburg and 15 of the lower Elbe against resistance deteriorating so rapidly that "a quick breakthrough to the river on a broad front can soon be expected," Associated Press Correspondent Robert Wilson reported. The British also besieged Bremen.

Big Loss Inflicted

The Germans attacked General Simpson's 5-mile-deep Elbe bridgehead in the Barby sector 52 miles southwest of Berlin with 2,000 infantrymen and 30 tanks.

The 2d Armored and 83d Infantry divisions beat back the Germans—drawn from Berlin and the Eastern front—inflicting serious losses and destroying 15 to 20 of the tanks.

In the center of the Western front 1st Army troops crashed through a crumpled belt of 1,000 leveled anti-aircraft guns in their drive to Leipzig, Germany's fifth city. German military mental cases and uniformed Nazi women auxiliaries were among the captured gunners. The 1st Army knocked out 324 flak guns, bringing the total for four days to 732.

The Indian Head (2d) Division cleared Ranstadt, a suburb less than 5 miles west of Leipzig. The 9th Armored Division wheeled in a giant circle around the city into Borsdorf, less than 4 miles to the east. The 69th Division completed a three-way clamp on the city, moving to within heavy mortar range of its southern limits.

Part Of Garrison Seized

Some 4,437 prisoners were seized from the Leipzig garrison yesterday.

The Nazis had turned the city into one of their main military supply depots. First Army officers said so some of the defending troops were "jibbering imbeciles and screaming maniacs." Some wore uniforms, some civilian clothes. Some of the sullen girls at the defense guns were killed as they fired on American troops.

Column 2

After cracking the chief Leipzig defense belt, the 1st Army Infantry was reported meeting "only negligible small arms fire." The doughboys moved slowly in to envelop the bomb-shattered city where a million civilians are reported hiding in cellars.

Two Divisions Destroyed

Two Nazi divisions have been destroyed on the outer perimeter.

The 7th Army's Thunderbird (45th) Division fought in the second largest Bavarian city of Nuernberg and other troops captured Rothenburg, more than a third destroyed by bombs the day before Easter.

On the 9th Army sector, one armored and one infantry division fought into the streets of Magdeburg in an all-out attack on the Elbe city, first entered April 11. The push started at 3.15 P.M. after a heavy air attack.

144,000 More Captured

Resistance to the Hell on Wheels (2d Armored) and Old Hickory (30th) divisions was light and both made excellent progress.

The prisoner bag on the Western front for April went past 750,000 when 144,000 more Germans were captured yesterday.

The American 1st Army captured 97,118 prisoners yesterday, 88,144 of them from the collapsing Ruhr pocket.

The total for the Ruhr pocket rose to 263,000 and must be nearly drained dry by now, with Field Marshal von Model's 5th Panzer and 15th Armies about liquidated finally.

The 3d Army took 32,269, breaking its previous one-day record.

Cities captured included Merseburg, Royan on the French Atlantic coast where the port of Bordeaux was being pried open, Witten, Arnsberg and Offenburg.

30 Miles From Dresden

Bremen, Chemintz and Dessau were besieged by troops within 2 miles or less of the cities. Fighting went on in Halle and Uelzen.

Troops advanced to within 30 miles of Dresden, to a point opposite Emden, 9 of Oldenburg, 17 of Utrecht, 38 of Amsterdam, 65 of Pilsen, 87 of Prague, 90 of Munich and 153 of Hitler's hideout at Berchtesgaden.

Pace Is Slowed

Pilots reported sea traffic from Holland, indicating the Germans were trying to abandon the Netherlands to reinforce their lines guarding Berlin and the threatened North Sea ports.

The Canadians cleared out all northern Holland except isolated pockets, capturing bitterly contested Apeldoorn, a manufacturing center about 17 miles northwest of Arnhem. Port Harlingen, in the north, fell as General Crerar's troops occupied 10 miles of the North Sea coast.

The pace of General Eisenhower's offensive definitely was slowed, partly because of stretched supply lines and partly because of stout German resistance in the besieged cities.

For all practical purposes, the capture of Plauen cut Germany in two because it cut some of the last remaining rail and road links. The Nazis, however, still have routes through Czechoslovakia. Plauen had a large tank factory and textile, lace and embroidery industries.

933 Nazi Planes Bagged

The German air force was declared officially to have been knocked out yesterday with the destruction of 933 planes, most of them aground. Some craft with the swastika still may fly, but American air spokesmen said the Luftwaffe was finished as a threat. In the first sixteen days of April, 3,462 German planes have been destroyed.

Hundreds of miles behind the main front, General Le Clerc's French 2d Armored Division captured Royan and besieged Pointe de Grave in an effort to erase 21,000 German troops and open the Atlantic port of Bordeaux, 60 miles up the Gironde River, to shipping.

Germans Open Dykes

The Canadians whittled down a larger pocket in Holland which may contain 200,000 Germans. The hard-pressed Germans opened the Zuider Zee dykes at Hilversum, sending salt water toward Utrecht, 17 miles from Canadian lines. General Crerar's army was 38 miles east of Amsterdam and across the Kusten Canal on its right flank.

Floodwaters from the Zuider Zee inundated the blooming tulip fields north of Utrecht and southwest of Amsterdam.

The flood-control system is an essential part of the defenses of Holland and its greatest cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, The Hague and Utrecht. The sweep of Canadian tank columns northwest of Arnhem upset German defense aims and the Nazi commanders resorted to flooding sooner than they had planned. The Canadians reached Barneveld, 18 miles northwest of Arnhem.

Germans Panicky

Ahead of the Allied armies, pilots saw panicky movements of German vehicles south and southwestward from Berlin through the narrowing corridor between the Allies and Russians.

The slowup of American armor and infantry came on a line which probably will be the postwar zone of Russian military occupation, and this stirred some speculation that the Allies from the west were not intended to move into the so-called Russian eastern zone. There was nothing officially to substantiate that assumption. But it was likely that events of the next few days might clarify the situation.

RUSSIANS ENTER SAXONY IN DRIVE TOWARD U.S. ARMY

Crack Tank Defenses to Nazi Capital, Conquer Samland Peninsula.

ADVANCE IN AUSTRIA

WHEELER

Germans Say 'Organic Structure' of Front Has Ceased to Exist.

LONDON, Wednesday, April 18.—(AP) The Germans said today Russian forces were driving hard within 18 and 20 miles of Berlin in two sectors while another Soviet force speared into the Nazis' southern escape corridor through Saxony.

Moscow maintained silence on the operations along the 150-mile front from the Bohemian border to the Oder estuary, proclaiming in its latest communique liquidation of all the remaining area of the Samland peninsula of East Prussia except the escape port of Pillau. It also announced capture of the important Austrian oil producing center of Zistersdorf, 25 miles northeast of Vienna.

Reds Drive into Saxony

The Nazi High command announced a Soviet jump-off from Neisse river bridgeheads along a 33-mile front from Forst to Rothenburg, headed toward a junction with American forces driving into Saxony from the west. Then the German army clamped a news blackout on place names.

German commentator Max Krull, discussing Allied "breakthroughs" from the east and west, asserted the "organic structure of the German front has ceased to exist. The terms westfront and eastfront have lost their meaning."

NIGHT

The Neisse river plunge was described by the Nazi Transocean news agency as one of two prongs, one from Muskau toward Spremberg on the Spree river and another through Niesky, 11 miles northwest of Goerlitz and 48 miles northeast of Dresden.

The Berlin radio said the Oder offensive was clutching at Berlin from the northeast, east and southeast. One column that stormed the river west of Zehden was reported sending tanks to the main Berlin-Stettin road near Eberswalde, 18 miles from the capital.

Battle Rages at Wriezen

Other forces, the announcement said, were pressing a frontal assault in the Frankfurt-Kuestrin-Zellin triangle, using six divisions. Heavy fighting was reported around Wriezen and in the Seelow heights area. The Germans said the Russian spearheads cut the Seelow-Alt Friedland road less than 20 miles east of greater Berlin and had penetrated deeply-staggered defenses beyond.

A third push was reported to have reached Muellrose, 28 miles southeast of the Capitol.

Other Russian forces were pushing up the road to Bruenn in Czechoslovakia and westward on separate fronts toward Linz and Graz. Fighting also flared in upper Silesia where the German High command said fierce conflict was raging in the area of Ratibor.

Associated Press Correspondent Eddy Gilmore said Moscow residents were expecting some announcement regarding the Berlin drive and that significance was attached to Red army reports of increasingly large numbers of German tanks and guns destroyed in unspecified localities.

Unofficial reports to the Soviet press said the Red army was "making steady progress east of Berlin" and that it already had overcome "great chains of "dragon's teeth" antitank defenses and an elaborate system of underground forts.

The German reported action in Silesia near the Saxon border would put the Russians within 75 miles of a link-up with the American troops driving on Dresden. A union in this corridor would cut Berlin's defenders from a retreat route into the Bavarian mountain redoubt.

Nazi war reporter Lutz Koch, broadcasting from the Neisse front, said the Russians were striking toward Cottbus as well as Spremberg and that several localities retaken by the Germans in counter-attacks were lost again "against superhuman masses of tanks, artillery and hundreds of mortars."

He said the Russians had thrown several bridges across the Neisse and were bringing up a continuous stream of reserves.

Another German commentator said Red air force bombers and fighter-bombers cascaded high explosives incessantly on German positions around Berlin, lighting the area with flares for night attacks and continuing their operations throughout the day.

Apparently the Germans were going to make a desperation stand in the capital. Swedish reports said 500,000 troops, sinewed with SS (Elite Guard) units, composed the capital garrison.

Reds Cut Road Only 20 Miles From Berlin

London, April 17 (AP)—Russian spearheads have cut the Seelow-Alt Friedland road less than 20 miles from Berlin, and penetrated the deeply staggered defenses beyond, a German broadcast declared tonight.

Simultaneously, the German high command said the Russian 1st Ukrainian Army of Marshal Ivan Konev had surged across the Neisse River farther south, and the German radio said the Soviets had reached a point only 75 miles from a junction with the American 3d Army, advancing toward Dresden.

20 Miles At Two Points

The enemy said the massive Soviet drive on Berlin had reached to points 20 miles northeast and 28 miles southeast of the capital, as well as plowing in from due east of Berlin.

The German command said sectors of the Berlin front had been torn open, but later were sealed off.

Moscow still had not confirmed the Berlin-bound drive.

One German war reporter said Red Army bombers were cascading high explosives incessantly on Nazi positions. The enemy also said Soviet airborne troops had landed less than 23 miles from Berlin.

An afternoon German broadcast declared Russian tanks were in action "east of Eberswalde," only 20 miles northeast of Berlin on the main highway and railroad to Stettin.

DAY

Austrian Oil Center Taken

Russian troops driving through Austria captured Zistersdorf, oil center, 16 miles north of Vienna. Marshal Stalin announced tonight in an order of the day.

Earlier the Germans said Soviet airborne troops had landed less than 23 miles from the Reich capital.

The German communiqué said Konev was attacking along a 33-mile front from Forst to Rothenburg, near the Saxony border.

Across Neisse In Two Places

The Germans said Konev sent his forces across the Neisse at two points. At the southern end of his attack front, the Germans declared, Konev plunged to Niesky, 48 miles northeast of Dresden and 75 miles from the United States 3d Army vanguard attacking toward that great city.

On the northern end, Konev struck forward 2½ miles from Muskau at the Neisse toward Spremberg, 15 miles farther west on the Spree River. Spremberg is 46 miles northeast of Dresden and 76 miles from the United States 1st Army at Wurzen.

150-Mile Blazing Front

Niesky is 8 miles from the Saxony border and 12 northwest of Goerlitz, where, Transocean said, the Russians had a bridgehead over the Neisse.

The Neisse River offensive, said Transocean, set the front inside Germany ablaze for more than 150 miles from the Bohemian border to Schwedt, south of Stettin.

The same agency declared the Russians were attacking incessantly with six armies in the Oder River bend triangle of Frankfurt, Kuestrin and Zellin, and that the "attacks are being intensified hourly."

The Germans also admitted new retreats in Austria and Moravia.

Harder Resistance Urged

Hard on the heels of the order of the day in which Adolf Hitler sought to rally his eastern armies for a death stand, the military command on the Oder River called upon "every single German soldier" to make his watchword "they shall not pass."

Reporting the military appeal, the German Transocean agency quoted the army command as telling the troops in the field:

"To gain time means to gain everything. To lose our nerve means to lose everything."

One German commentator announced Russian capture of important heights 23 miles from the capital, near Seelow, 9 miles west of the Oder at Kuestrin.

The Russians still maintained silence about the long-awaited Oder River offensive which the Germans said burst forth at 3:50 A. M. yesterday on a front of 120 miles. Berlin said that a Russian linkup with American forces, last reported some seventy-five miles away, was likely in the near future.

The rumble of Russian guns was plainly heard in Berlin as the Red Army forged new crossings of the Oder.

440 MORE NAZI CRAFT BAGGED, 403 ON GROUND

Total Of 4,139 German Planes Destroyed In Last 16 Days

CHAMBERLAIN

London, Wednesday, April 18 (AP)—Allied fighters destroyed at least 440 German planes yesterday, raising enemy losses to 2,937 in 11 days with attacks on jammed Nazi airfields in Germany and Czechoslovakia, while 1,000 American heavy bombers blasted targets in the likely junction area of American and Russian ground forces.

Of the German aircraft losses, at least 403 were on the ground.

Thus far this month more than 4,139 enemy planes have been destroyed by American and British flyers, the heaviest blow coming Monday, when 1,016 enemy planes —estimated at one-fourth of the remaining German air force—were destroyed, and 700 others were damaged.

Eighth Air Force losses during Tuesday were announced as ten bombers and fourteen fighters, while the 9th Air Force reported it lost six fighters and no mediums or bombers from 2,000 sorties during the day.

NIGHT

Less Than 3,000 Planes Left

The Germans, according to best available figures, now were down to less than 3,000 planes of all types. Many of these have been damaged and many others are grounded for lack of fuel.

A mopping-up force of more than 850 8th Air Force fighters destroyed 269 enemy planes on the ground and 13 in the air Tuesday in strafing the area bounded by Dresden, Munich and Prague.

Ninth Air Force pilots hit 16 airdromes, mostly around Eger, Czechoslovakia, smashing 132 enemy planes on the ground, destroying 11 in the air and damaging at least 126 on the ground.

Other tactical air units on the Continent reported destruction of at least 15 German planes in the air.

Through The Night

The general assault continued during the night, with the German radio reporting that Mosquitos were over central Germany and the Berlin area, following up the day's American heavy-bomber blows.

The targets of the heavy bombers included three switching yards at Dresden, lying midway between the Eastern and Western fronts, and five rail junctions across the Czechoslovak border on the main lines connecting the key cities of Dresden, Prague and Munich. The Czechoslovak towns of Kladno, Beraun, Karlsbad, Falkenau and Aussig were bombed by American planes for the first time.

A large underground oil-storage depot at Raudnitz, 22 miles north of Prague, also was bombed.

Magdeburg Attacked

Meanwhile, more than 400 twin-engined bombers of the United States 9th Air Force carried out a continuing assault at twenty-minute intervals against defended positions in Magdeburg on the Elbe River. The attacks lasted four hours.

Enemy equipment directly in front of the United States 1st, 3d and 9th armies was raked by 600 fighter-bombers of the 9th Air Force.

For the third straight day strong formations of escorted United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators continued supporting the Allied general offensive on the Italian front, hammering German positions near Bologna while large forces of tactical warplanes blasted the Nazis in the battle area and the Brenner Pass line.

Lightnings resumed dive-bombing attacks in Austria, knocking out the Seefeld bridge 10 miles west of Innsbruck, and hitting the approaches to the Mairhof bridge 5 miles farther west.

Pilots reported that on some fields in Germany Nazi planes of every type are found lined up wingtip to wingtip like sitting ducks. The last really good bases remaining to the Germans are deep in Czechoslovakia.

It is estimated that at least 75 per cent of the planes remaining to the Germans are concentrated in the south, where they can be used in the expected final stand of the Nazis.

Freight yards at Pilsen, in Czechoslovakia and at Schwandorf, 50 miles east of Nuernberg, were smashed Monday night by RAF Lancasters. Schwandorf is on one of the main lines from Munich to the Danube and the Austrian frontier.

British Mosquitos paid their nightly visit to Berlin and the Germans indicated that Russian bombers had attacked the German capital for the first time since the late Summer of 1941.

REVEAL YANKS SMASHED 1116 NAZI PLANES

Revised Figures Are Based on Camera Records of Yesterday's Exploit.

HEAVY BOMBERS BLAST REICH

JAMESON

U. S. Squadrons Attack Railways at Dresden and Near Czech Border Further South.

APR 1 8 1945

London, April 17 (A. P.).—Roughly 1,000 American heavy bombers today attacked German railways at Dresden and along the Czech frontier to the south, while the destruction of the Luftwaffe was continued by fighter pilots who knocked out a total of 1,116 planes yesterday, 103 more than was announced this morning.

The revised figures showed that during the first sixteen days of April 3,699 German planes were destroyed, of which 485 were shot down in combat. Allied losses for the same period were 485 planes. The enemy's losses represent half of the estimated reserve strength of the German air force at the time of the Rhine crossing.

Air force officials worked all night checking and rechecking the record-smashing claims turned in by fighter pilots—727 by pilots of the American Eighth Air Force. All claims were verified by combat films. (Cameras on fighter planes are synchronized with the guns).

DAY

Months of relentless bombing of German oil plants had had their effect. The German air force had ample planes in reserve—probably 3,500—but at the crucial moment there was no fuel to get them into the air.

There was no let-up in the heavy bombing campaign which Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the American Strategic Air Forces in Europe, declared last night had switched from strategic to a purely tactical job in support of the ground forces. As he was issuing an order of the day to American airmen saying that the strategic air war had been won, British heavy bombers were winging to Czecho-Slovakia and southern Germany, where they attacked German rail bottlenecks in direct support of the American Third and Seventh armies.

Pilsen Rail Yards Hit.

One British force made a 1,400-mile round trip from England and attacked freight yards at Pilsen. Another hit Schwandorf, on one of the main lines from Munich to the Danube and the Austrian frontier.

The east and west fronts now are so close together in this area that blocking of rail lines there will severely hamper German defenses on both sides. The yards at Pilsen, where several lines meet, carry arms from the Skoda works direct to both fronts.

American Eighth Air Force fighters set the pace in yesterday's free-for-all Luftwaffe hunt with at least 644 enemy planes reported destroyed on the ground and three more shot down in combat. Lieut. Anthony J. Coletti destroyed six planes aground.

"German aircraft were burning and blowing up all over the place," said Lieut. Col. John B. Landers, of Joshua, Texas. Capt. Robert H. Ammon, of Reading, Pa., set an individual record by destroying eleven on the ground. His camera verified his claims.

The 8th announced that eight heavy bombers and 34 fighters were missing from yesterday's operations, carried out by nearly 2,100 planes.

FREE SCOTLANDER ROILS PARLIAMENT

London, April 17 (A. P.).—A rebellious young Scotsman today defied the centuries old tradition of Parliament and was denied, at least temporarily, the seat he had won in the House of Commons at a by-election at Motherwell, Scotland. Dr. Robert McIntyre, first to be elected as a Scottish Nationalist, walked into the well of Commons unaccompanied by the two sponsors required by a rule of 1688. He bowed jerkily as he approached the Speaker and appeared to ignore the tumult touched off among both Liberals and Conservatives over his departure from established custom.

DAY

Nearly an hour later, after an acrimonious debate in the course of which Prime Minister Churchill once intervened, the House refused by a vote of 273 to 74 to suspend the rule concerning sponsors.

"I cannot advise the House on this occasion to depart from precedent," Mr. Churchill said. "I think these are days when Parliament and the British House of Commons is very much under the gaze of the whole world, and the admiring gaze of a large part of it, and we should not in the least shrink from upholding the ancient customs and traditions which have added to our dignity and to our power."

McIntyre stood silent at the bar during the debate. He said later that he would maintain his refusal to accept sponsors, because of an election pledge to remain free from "all London-controlled parties." He said he would go to the House again tomorrow to "see what happens."

Formal V-E May Be Far Away

FRANCIS

APR 18 1945

London, April 17 (AP)—A statement by General Eisenhower that there will be no announcement of V-E Day "until all important enemy pockets on the Western front have been wiped out" indicated today that the formal end of the war in Europe may be weeks, if not months, away.

The Allied Supreme commander told a group of American radio correspondents who visited an advanced command post yesterday that the war in Europe probably will not end until Allied troops have occupied the Reich completely.

Will Give Up Separately

Reiterating his belief that there would not be a formal German surrender, Eisenhower added:

"Nazi units, including divisions, corps, armies and finally army groups, will give up separately as they exhaust their ammunition and gasoline, or find themselves hopelessly trapped by Allied encirclement."

Eisenhower's statement might mean that no V-E Day proclamation will be issued until after Adolf Hitler and his fanatical Nazi cohorts are rooted from their mountain redoubt in Bavaria into which they are reportedly streaming for a death stand.

May Take Months

Military men have estimated that it may take months to reduce Hitler's cragged fortress.

It must be remembered that there are millions of men in Germany under arms—how many no one knows. There are certainly enough to put sizable forces in the pocket along the Baltic and North seas from Stettin to Bremen, as well as in the Bavarian Alps.

In addition, there are more than a half million Nazi troops outside the Reich. Anywhere from 300,000 to 350,000 remain in Italy, 80,000 to 120,000 in Holland, 20,000 in the Bordeaux area and perhaps another 60,000 in other French Atlantic coast pockets. Allied troops battling the Germans in those war theaters can testify to the effectiveness of Nazi die-hard resistance.

DAY

200,000 In Norway

Perhaps as many as 200,000 German troops remain in Norway, where reports say they have been heavily resupplied recently.

It is by no means certain that the fall of Berlin and a solid juncture of Russian and American forces would immediately shake Nazi hands from military reins all the way from Italy to Norway. Unless it did, it seems unlikely that Washington, London and Moscow would feel justified in declaring major opposition at an end.

Obviously any such declaration made prematurely would do great harm to soldier and civilian morale.

It is doubtful if either the GI or the civilian at home would feel "organized resistance" had ended if the troops were still engaged in "guerrilla warfare" that was producing thousands, or even hundreds of casualties daily.

London, April 17 (A. P.).—The Evening Standard said yesterday the German radio had announced that Lieut.-Gen. Kurt Dittmar, German military commentator generally regarded as the voice of the German High Command, had been listed a suicide. However, other London monitors did not hear the broadcast.

The Zurich correspondent of the London News Chronicle said today that Frau Gertrud Scholz-Klink, leader of the Frauenschaft ((Nazi Women's League), had committed suicide at Konstanz, near the German-Swiss frontier. The dispatch was reported to the Office of War Information. There has been no confirmation from other sources. Frau Scholz-Klink, an ardent Nazi party member, was director of the National Training School for Women Leaders established by the party at Hohenfels Castle in Coburg, which now is in American hands.

Churchill Pays Tribute To Roosevelt For Himself And For Great Britain

London, April 17 (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill eulogized Franklin D. Roosevelt today "as the greatest American friend we have ever known," but told Commons that President Truman was "a successor who comes forward with a firm step and sure conviction to carry on the task to its appointed end."

The voice of the 70-year-old Prime Minister broke at times as he spoke. Earlier, at a memorial service in bomb-scarred St. Paul's Cathedral attended by the King and Queen, Churchill wept.

The royal family of England and the country's leading statesmen were joined by American soldiers and civilians in the simple but solemn 40-minute tribute at St. Paul's. Inside the cathedral some 2,200 persons gathered and in the warm sunshine other thousands stood silently in the street as St. Paul's muffled bells tolled the requiem.

Wartime Friendship Told

A partial text of Churchill's tribute to Roosevelt in the House of Commons follows.

"My friendship with the great man to whose work and fame we pay our tribute today began and ripened during this war. I had met him, but only for a few minutes, after the close of the last war, and as soon as I went to the Admiralty in September, 1939, he telegraphed inviting me to correspond with him direct on naval or other matters if at any time I felt inclined. Having obtained the permission of the Prime Minister, I did so.

"Knowing President Roosevelt's keen interest in sea warfare, I furnished him with a stream of information about our naval affairs and about the various actions, including especially the action of the Platte River, which lighted the first gloomy window of the war.

"Bitter Loss To Humanity"

"I conceived an admiration for him as a statesman, as a man of affairs, and as a war leader. I felt the utmost confidence in his upright, inspiring character and his outlook, and a personal regard—an affection I must say—beyond my power to express today. It is a loss, indeed a bitter loss, to humanity that those heartbeats are stilled forever.

"President Roosevelt's physical affliction lay heavily upon him. It was a marvel that he bore up against it through all the many years of tumult and storm. Not one man in 10,000,000, stricken and crippled as he was, would have attempted to plunge into a life of physical and mental exertion and of hard, ceaseless political controversy.

Sympathy With Britain

"Not one in a generation would have succeeded. There was never a moment's doubt in this war upon which side his sympathy lay. He never lost faith in Britain.

"The bearing of the British nation when we were all alone filled him and vast numbers of his countrymen with the warmest sentiments toward our people. He and they felt the Blitz of the stern Winter of 1940-41, when Hitler set himself to rub out the cities of our country. There is no doubt that he felt the Blitz as much as any of us did, and perhaps more indeed, for imagination is often more torturing than reality.

"When I became Prime Minister and the war broke out in all its hideous fury, and when our own life and survival hung in the balance, I was already in a position to telegraph to the President on terms of association which had become most intimate, and to me most agreeable.

Last Messages Thursday

"This continued through all the years of the world struggle until Thursday last when I received my last messages from him. These messages showed no falling off in his accustomed clear vision and vigor on complicated matters. This correspondence, which greatly increased after the United States' entry into the war, comprises, to and fro between us, over 1,700 messages. Many of these were lengthy messages.

"To this correspondence there must be added our nine meetings. Comprising in all about 120 days of close personal contact.

"There is no doubt that the bearing of the British and above all the Londoners, kindled a fire in American bosoms far harder to quench than the conflagrations from which we suffered. There was also at that time apprehension widespread in the United States of America that we should be invaded by Germany after the fullest preparation in the Spring of 1941.

Willkie's Visit To England

"It was in February that the President sent to England the late Mr. Wendell Willkie, who, although the political rival and opposing candidate, felt as the President did on many important points. Mr. Willkie brought a letter from Mr. Roosevelt which the President had written in his own hand. This letter contained the famous lines of Longfellow.

"'Sail on, O ship of state; sail on, O union strong and great. Humanity with all its fears, with all the hopes of future years, is hanging breathless on thy fate.'

"At about that same time he devised the extraordinary measure of assistance called lend-lease, which will stand forth as the most unselfish and unsordid financial act of any country in all history.

"Air Of Purification"

"At Yalta I noticed that the President was ailing. His captivating smile, his gay, charming manner, had not deserted him. But his face had a transparency, an air of purification, and often there was a faraway look in his eyes. When I took leave of him at Alexandria I must confess that I had an indefinable sense of fear that his strength and health were on the ebb.

"But nothing altered his inflexible sense of duty. To the very end he faced his task unflinchingly. One of the tasks of the President is to sign, maybe a hundred or two, state papers every day. All this he continued to carry out with the utmost strictness. And when death came suddenly upon him he had finished his mail, that portion of his day's work was done.

"In Battle Harness"

"As the saying goes, he died in harness, and we may well say in battle harness like his soldiers, sailors and airmen who died side by side with ours and carrying out their tasks to the end all over the world. What an enviable death was his.

"He had brought his country through the worst of its perils, and the heaviest of all its trials, victory, had cast its sure and steady beam upon him.

"He had broadened and stabilized in the days of peace the foundations of American life and union. In war he had raised the strength, might and glory of the great republic to a height never attained by any nation in history.

Breadth Of American Effort

"On her left hand she was leading the advance of our conquering Allied armies into the heart of Germany. On her right, on the other side of the globe, she was irresistibly and swiftly breaking the power of Japan.

"And all the time ships, munitions, food, supplies of every kind were on every side, aiding on a gigantic scale her Allies in the course of the struggle.

"But all this was no more than worldly power and grandeur had it not been that the causes of human freedom and social justice, to which so much of his life had been given, added a lustre to all this power and pomp of warlike might, a lustre quite of its own which will long be discernible amongst men.

Successor "With Firm Steps"

"He has left behind him a band of resolute and able men handling the numerous inter-related parts of the vast American war machine.

"He has left a successor who comes forward with firm steps and sure conviction to carry on the task to its appointed end.

"For us it remains only to say that in Franklin Roosevelt there died the greatest American friend we have ever known (cheers)—and the greatest champion of freedom who has ever brought help and comfort from the New World to the old (cheers)."

vigor upon perplexing and complicated matters.

No Words For Admiration

With deep emotion Churchill, gifted in finding words for almost any occasion, said that this time words failed him in trying to convey his admiration for Roosevelt.

"I conceived an admiration for him as a statesman, a man of affairs and as a war leader," the Prime Minister said. "I felt the utmost confidence in his upright, inspiring character and outlook, and a personal regard and affection beyond my power to express today.

"It is a loss, indeed a bitter loss, to humanity that these heart beats are stilled forever. There is no doubt that the President foresaw the great danger closing in on the prewar world with far more prescience than most well-informed people on either side of the Atlantic."

He "Felt The Blitz"

Churchill said the aerial bombardment of London "kindled fires in American bosoms far harder to quench than our own conflagrations," and that as for Roosevelt, "there is no doubt he felt the blitz as much as any of us and perhaps more, for the imagination is often more torturing than reality."

The Prime Minister said that at Yalta "his captivating smile and his gay, charming manner had not deserted him, but his face had a transparency, an air of purification even. There was a faraway look in his eyes."

The House chamber was hushed as Churchill spoke of the man whom he has said in the past he was glad to serve as a lieutenant.

The Prime Minister preceded his eulogy with a motion that the King express Britain's sorrow to Mrs. Roosevelt on behalf of the Government.

"Died In Battle Harness"

Roosevelt, he said, "died in battle harness like his soldiers, sailors and airmen, who, side by side with ours, are carrying out their task to the end all over the world."

"What an enviable death was his," Churchill said. "He had brought his country through the worst of its perils and victory had cast its sure and steady beam."

Speaking of President Truman, Churchill said Roosevelt "left behind him a band of resolute and able men handling the numerous interrelated parts of the vast American war machine.

"He had left a successor who comes forward with a firm step and sure conviction to carry on the task to its appointed end," he said.

In Memorial Service

The Prime Minister and a somber King and Queen joined American service men and women this morning in a 40-minute tribute to President Roosevelt in battle-scarred St. Paul's Cathedral.

Princess Elizabeth, heir presumptive to the throne, accompanied King George and Queen Elizabeth. With Prime Minister Churchill was his daughter, Sarah.

The high and the humble were in the gathering of 2,200 which filled the cathedral. Other thousands stood in the streets in the warm spring sunshine.

A Tribute And A Prayer

The dean of the cathedral said in his introduction that the ceremony was twofold in its nature:

A tribute to the services which President Roosevelt "gave to the welfare and peace, not only of his own people, but of all the peoples of the world," and a prayer that "the great causes for which Franklin Delano Roosevelt labored may be brought to fruition for the lasting benefit of all the nations of the world."

With the exception of the introduction it was a regular Anglican service.

United States Ambassador John G. Winant read a lesson from the Book of Revelations.

23d Psalm Read

The service included one of Roosevelt's favorite psalms, the 23d, and the Battle Hymn of the Republic. After the blessing the clear notes of "Last Post," sounded by the buglers of the Royal Marines, echoed under the vaulted dome.

The singing of "the Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save the King" concluded the ceremony. The gathering stood quietly as the King and Queen and Princess Elizabeth and other members of the royal party filed out of the cathedral.

Great Honor

Selection of St. Paul's Cathedral for the services, as well as the attendance of the royal family, indicated the British Government's desire to accord the late President all the honors at its command.

St. Paul's customarily is the scene of Britain's great national memorial services, such as those for King George V.

The King was greeted at the steps of the cathedral by the Lord Mayor of London, bearing a pearl-hilted sword which has been the symbol of the city's independence since the days of Queen Elizabeth.

Received By Archbishop

The monarch touched the sword in recognition of his confidence in the city's governors, and then walked slowly up the steps and was received by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the dean of St. Paul's.

Inside the cathedral the British rulers were joined by Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, King Haakon of Norway, King George of Greece, King Peter of Yugoslavia, President Wladyslaw Raczkwieiecz of Poland, Princess Julianna of the Netherlands and Crown Prince Olaf of Norway. The Princess Royal and the Duchess of Kent also were in the royal group.

The British Cabinet was seated behind the King and Queen while members of Parliament and the peers had special seats in the nave.

Women In Black

In the body of the cathedral American soldiers, WACs, WAVES and civilians mingled with generals and admirals. Nearly every man in civilian dress wore a black tie or mourning band and nearly all the women were in black.

The men and women stood in solemn silence as Churchill walked slowly in with lowered head behind the white and gold robed dean, who led him to his seat.

Winant With War Leaders

The Prime Minister bowed gravely to United States Ambassador John G. Winant, seated with Generals Koenig and Doolittle and Admiral Stark.

Mrs. Roosevelt's cousins, Mrs. Fellowes Gordon, Mrs. Warren Robbins, Lady Humphrey Clarke and Mrs. Hubert Martineau, had special seats of honor behind the King.

About 500 persons were seated in the crypt beneath the bomb-damaged cathedral to hear the services through loud-speakers

Churchill Hails Roosevelt As Great Champion Of Freedom

APR 18 1945

London, April 17 (AP)—In deeply emotional terms, Prime Minister Churchill today eulogized Franklin D. Roosevelt as "the greatest American friend we have ever known and the greatest champion of freedom who has ever brought help and comfort from the New World to the Old."

His death, the 70-year-old British Premier said in Commons, was a "bitter loss to humanity," but coming on the eve of victory, it was "an enviable death."

Earlier at a memorial service in St. Paul's Cathedral, attended by the King and Queen, Churchill had burst into tears.

Feared For Health

He said he had noticed at Yalta that President Roosevelt was ailing, and that when they parted at Alexandria, he "had an indefinable sense of fear that his health and strength were on the ebb."

The British Premier disclosed that the correspondence between himself and the late President had comprised "more than 1,700 messages," and said that messages he received from Roosevelt on the day of his death "showed no falling off in his accustomed clear vision and problem and general war situation.

He declared he wished to avoid "discussions which may in any way impair the prospects of a definite improvement in regard to the various subjects which were discussed at Yalta and have not yet reached their full fruition."

A debate at this time "might lie awkwardly with the general movement of events," Mr. Churchill told Commons, adding:

"Serious changes in the world position have taken place since the order of business was planned. And now that the foreign secretaries of Russia, Britain and the United States will have an opportunity of a meeting, which had been greatly needed since we left Yalta, I should not like to plunge into discussions which may in any way impair the prospects of a definite improvement in regard to the various subjects which were discussed at Yalta and have not yet reached their full fruition.'

London, April 17 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, in order to clear the stage for fast-developing international events, dropped plans today for a report Thursday to Commons on the Polish problem and general war situation.

He declared he wished to avoid "discussions which may in any way impair the prospects of a definite improvement in regard to the various subjects which were discussed at Yalta and have not yet reached their full fruition."

"Might Be Awkward"

A debate at this time "might lie awkardly with the general movement of events," Churchill told Commons, adding:

NAZI GOVERNMENT DEAD, BRITISH SAY

LONDON, April 17 — (AP) The British foreign office and war office disclosed tonight that the German government had acknowledged its inability to function normally as a power under international conventions governing the exchange of war prisoners.

An official announcement said the German government had informed the British government through the protecting power, Switzerland, that it could not undertake further exchange of seriously sick and wounded prisoners of war under the Geneva prisoners of war convention "until two months after completion of necessary arrangements."

The announcement continued:

"The German government did not specify what it meant by necessary arrangements. But it can only refer to formal acceptance by the Germans of definite proposals for an exchange at a specified date and place.

"This notification was in reply to proposals made by his Majesty's government on the 13th of March for a further exchange in Switzerland on April 25. The Swiss government agreed to the use of its facilities for the proposed exchange and offered to make hospital trains available to transport the repatriates.

His Majesty's government's proposals were in accordance with its policy of endeavoring to make exchanges with Germany of sick and wounded prisoners of war as continuous a process as possible.

"Five exchanges have taken place with Germany since the outbreak of the war. A total of 7,601 sick and wounded British Commonwealth prisoners of war and 2,235 protected personnel have been repatriated in these operations.

"In the circumstances it seems unlikely that the German government will now be able to give effect to any agreement for exchange of prisoners of war."

$8,000,000 Addition To Parliament Asked

London, April 17 (AP)—Construction of an $8,000,000 addition to Parliament was proposed today by a joint committee of the houses of Commons and Lords.

The plan would provide 237 additional rooms and be in line with the original design of Sir Charles Barry, architect of the present building.

SS Troops Burn 1,100 Prisoners To Death

EUNSON

Gardelegen, Germany, April 16 [AP — Delayed] — German SS (Elite Guard) troops burned to death 1,100 political prisoners here within the last few days while evacuating a concentration camp at near-by Mieste, 30 miles northwest of Magdeburg, a survivor said today.

The informant, one of six persons who escaped from the ghastly death roundup, said Belgian, French, Polish and Dutch prisoners were marched into a great brick warehouse near here. Straw which had been strewn two feet thick on the floor then was ignited, turning the building into an inferno.

Today a pile of charred bodies six feet high can be seen.

German Sailors Called Into Army

London, April 17 (A. P.).—The Berlin radio today ordered all German sailors not on duty at German naval bases to report at once to the nearest German army command posts. Sailors in north German ports previously had been reported thrown into infantry "alarm" units.

Attlee for Strong World Peace Force

London, April 17 (A. P.). — Deputy Prime Minister Clement Attlee told the Commons today that, while the British would not go to San Francisco "with our minds rigidly made up," the world security conference must have forces of "such an overwhelming armed strength not merely to defeat an aggressor but to prevent aggression."

"If we are in favor of that, we in Britain must be prepared to make our contribution," he said, opening a debate on the conference.

"We are trying," he said, "to do what we failed to do after the last war, to make an universal, flexible and enduring organization to keep the peace."

R. A. F. Planes Bomb Gestapo Offices

Even Censors Agree England Was Hot

London, April 17 (A. P.).—After a third effort, correspondents were permitted today to clear a piece about the weather. The first two efforts came a cropper on 1940-model censorship rules which were adopted to hamper the then powerful German air force.

But the censors were as firm as they were affable, so here is the weather report, as approved after three tries:

It was very warm yesterday. Heat records were broken in some places, and tomorrow it can be told where and how hot. Today it can only be said it was 96 at Dover Strait.

MILE-LONG PLANT UNDER NAZI HILL

STENCOPF

With the Third Army, April 17 (A. P.).—The Eighty-ninth Infantry Division stumbled onto a great underground Nazi jet-plane assembly plant in an unsuspected nook of this countryside today. No fewer than 22,000 workers, German and foreign, were engaged in the excavation and operation of this factory on the edge of the village of Kalla.

The plant was about a mile long and an eighth of a mile wide and was composed of about eighty tunnels thirty feet wide and twenty feet high with rock and glistening tile walls. On the level summit of the hill into which it was dug there was a level mile-long take-off strip. A cable hoisted the planes up a runway to the field and the planes were exposed outside for only a short time before they were in the air.

Every power operation was electric so there were no tell-tale smokestacks.

The Second Armored Division discovered another undergorund jet-plane factory yesterday near Tarthun.

Yanks Captured in Tunisia Are Liberated in Germany

APR 18 1945

GALLAGHER

With Second Armored Division on the Elbe, Germany, April 13 (Delayed) (A. P.).—This is Friday the thirteenth, but it is the luckiest day in the lives of some fifty Americans who fought and lost in the days when the war was young.

They are American prisoners of war, liberated today. Most of them were captured twenty-seven months ago by Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel when he inflicted the first defeat on a fledgling American Army in the battle of Faid Pass in Tunisia. On February 17, 1942, Rommel's forces suddenly burst out of Faid Pass, swallowing up a good part of the Thirty-fourth Infantry Division and the First Armored Division.

At least part of them were found in a prison camp at Shaken-Sleben, Germany, to be freed by advance units of the Second Armored Division which landed in Africa with them more than two years ago.

Watch U. S. Power Roll By.

Released from the camp, the liberated Americans stood watching one part of the armored column drive toward the Elbe, while from the opposite direction came truckloads of German prisoners.

"Boy, I want to search those guys," Private Raymond E. Underwood of San Diego, Cal., declared. The liberated Americans were all in good spirits, although thin from their prison camp starvation diet.

Private Everil Myers of West Carrollton, Ohio, who was captured at Faid Pass while with the First Armored Division, said that "the worst thing about those Germans was that they starved us all the time."

Private Wilbur Jensen of Carlton, Neb., was enthusiastic about the American armored advance.

"Boy, look at this," he declared. He was also captured at Faid Pass. "We didn't know how to fight in those days," he added. "We were just experimenting. But they sure know how now."

Kept Up With the News.

The Americans said they kept up with the war news while they were in prison.

Private John S. Marsh of Pittsburgh, Pa., another Thirty-fourth veteran captured at Faid Pass, said that the prisoners kept up with news events so well through the prison grapevine that they knew of the invasion of France nine hours after it happened.

"We were standing on the roof of a factory when our tanks came by on a road a mile or two away," said Private Edward Palak of 84 West 170th street, New York city, who was with the Thirty-fifth Division. "We really sweated them out," he said.

Private Herbert Jesse of Bloomfield, Neb., another Thirty-fourth veteran captured at Kasserine Pass, said that "most of us did not think we would be free until the war was over."

Among those liberated was Private Joseph G. Mile of 861 East 230th street, the Bronx, who was captured at Fondouk.

Marched Between Lines.

None of those freed today was in the death march of Americans from East Prussia. They came west from the Oder River, and then marched east again when the American and British advance started.

They said their German guards beat them if they didn't work, and Pfc. Alfred Boccacoi of Rochester, N. Y., who was with the Thirty fourth Division, declared he had been put on bread and water for three days because he reported for sick call. All the men worked ten hours a day on railroads or in factories. They said that if they didn't work they didn't eat.

"We were always hungry," said Pfc. Raymond Johnson of Louisville, Ky. He was captured at Faid Pass.

Joseph Dix of Galivants Ferry, S. C., also captured at Faid Pass, said that "sometimes we got kind of low, but we never thought once that Germany would win the war."

Royan Fortresses 'Impregnable'

By Belman Morin

Royan, April 17 (AP)—The entire terrain fronting the handsome crescent beach at captured Royan, one of the fortresses barring the use of the port of Bordeaux, is a mass of gun positions.

Seeing the Nazi-constructed fortifications, completed in the spring of 1943 according to dates neatly placed on them, you could not help imagining what would have happened if the D-day landings had been there instead of in Normandy.

Along the shore at intervals of about 30 feet are circular pits sunk in concrete for mortars. In narrow spaces between what used to be seaside hotels massive concrete walls had been built and pierced for machinegun emplacements.

Four Forts

Four glowering forts command both the beach and the mouth of the Gironde, through which ships must pass to Bordeaux.

These gun towers are four-decker jobs. Artillery is mounted on the topmost tier. On the floor beneath gun crews took their meals and relaxed.

Below that at ground level were sleeping quarters and still farther below—there is now about 30 feet of reinforced concrete overhead—the Germans had stored food and ammunition aplenty.

Could Not Be Knocked Out

Neither air nor naval bombardment could have knocked out these positions. They took direct hits from the heaviest bombs without being smashed.

What accounted for their collapse?

The German defenders of those particular positions simply quit. They surrendered when tanks and a regiment of Zouaves attacked, although the thick concrete protecting the defenders had hardly been chipped.

These were Germans who were just tired of war.

NAZI SUICIDE SLEW CAPTOR'S UNCLE

Naumburg, Germany, April 17 (A. P.).—The American Army sergeant who found Paul Georg Hinkler dying on Friday said today that he wishes he had taken the 53-year-old Nazi leader alive so that he might have been placed on trial for his crimes.

"He was the man who murdered my uncle in 1940," said Sergt. Gerald Herrnstadt of New York city, who fled Germany in 1938. "He had plenty to answer for."

Hinkler killed himself in the attic of his home at nearby Nissmitz. His wife described him as a good man, saying: "To the best of my knowledge he shot only twelve persons." His death resulted—after his capture—from poisoning rather than shooting, as was originally reported.

'Follow God, Not Hitler'

In Thuringia, Germany, April 15 (AP—Delayed)—A tall, gray-eyed American chaplain held Catholic services today for 7,000 Nazi prisoners in the courtyard of a captured enemy warehouse barracks.

Spreading his altar cloths on a bale of hay atop a freight platform, Lieut. Col. Peter J. Quinn, of Vicksburg, Miss., chaplain of the 69th Infantry Division, celebrated the mass for ragged prisoners just brought in from the battlefront. In his sermon he told them:

"If you had followed your God instead of Hitler you would be living at home now in peace. Return to your God and live in His ways."

German Requests Service

The service was arranged by request of a German officer.

Two American Catholic soldiers, who until three days ago had been prisoners, were in the strange congregation. They were Pfc. Bennie R. Montoya, 23, of Santa Fe, N.M., and Pfc. Robert E. Killeen, 19, of New Orleans. Both had been caught in the German December offensive in the Ardennes.

Americans Avoid Damage To Medieval German City

By The Associated Press.

ROTHENBURG, Germany, April 17—This 1,000-year-old village, reputed to be the best example of a medieval walled city in the world, was captured today by Fourth Infantry Division troops, who carried out instructions to take it without shelling.

But the picturesque old Protestant stronghold was found a third destroyed by the daylight bombing raid on this area the Saturday before Easter.

It was an arduous job to take the town without inflicting more damage. The Americans had been opposed by mines and shells and sniper fire on the perimeter of the village yesterday before three infantrymen in a jeep bearing a white flag delivered an ultimatum to the German commander, a major.

At dawn the major begged for more time to consider the ultimatum. The Fourth Division then attacked.

GEN. EISENHOWER FOR UNIFIED FORCES

An advanced Command Post, April 17 (A. P.).—It is Gen. Eisenhower's expressed hope that some day all American service organizations—the Army, Navy and Air Force—will come together under a single body.

A West Pointer himself, Eisenhower declared there might even be one land-sea-air academy for all three branches. At least he tacitly suggested they should spend some months together during their academic training to develop a closely knit friendship.

He reiterated his belief that there is no such thing as an air war, a sea war or a land war. With customary vigor of expression, he insisted that all services support each other, and one cannot fight without close co-ordination from the others.

Men Rescued

Fallingsbostel, Germany, April 17 (AP)—British tanks broke through a barbed-wire barricade yesterday and liberated 20,643 Allied prisoners, including 2,84[illegible] Americans, from two prisoner-of-war camps just across the road from a huge SS training school.

Freed from Stalag 11B were 13,720 men, including 2,472 Americans. At adjacent Stalag 357 the British liberated 6,923 prisoners, including 372 Americans.

'Special Enemies' of Reich Freed From Gestapo Grip by 1st Army

UNITED STATES FIRST ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Germany, April 17 (AP)—A First Army task force yesterday stormed through a Mulde River village and captured a gray stone prison housing "special enemies of Germany," but it was forty-eight hours too late to liberate some prominent captives.

The Germans had rushed many American and British prisoners by night from this evil-smelling camp, where they had been held as hostages. Yesterday the Germans tried to evacuate 1,000 other Allied prisoners, but they refused to leave because they could hear American guns and knew that freedom was near.

The order came from the First Army headquarters to liberate the prisoners if possible. Lieut. Col. Leo Shaughnessey of Woburn, Mass., led the task force, made up of men from the Ninth Armored Division and the Sixty-ninth Infantry Division.

From the windows of their massive prison on a hilltop cheering prisoners watched the battle below.

Among them were Col. Florimond Duke of Greens Farms, Conn.; Lieut. Col. William Herbert Schaefer of Mount Carmel, Ill.; Capt. Alfred Suarez of Peoria, Ill.; Capt. Guy Nunn of Los Angeles, Calif., and Lieut. Maurice Shannon of Gadsden, Ala.

Americans Sentenced to Die

Liberation was a reprieve for Colonel Schaefer, who had been sentenced to die because he had objected to posting of Nazi propaganda leaflets on the prison bulletin board.

This was the camp for men who were suspected as special cases or who had tried time and again to escape. They told of cruel Gestapo treatment.

The American troops entered the town this morning while the last snipers were being cleared from their hiding places. British, French and other Allied prisoners gave the liberating soldiers a rousing welcome as they swung open the thick prison gates, where some men had been held prisoner for more than five years.

LOCAL NAZIS KILL FAMILIES

Police Chief, Mayor Commit Suicide, SS Man Tries To

APR 18 1945

Pegau, Germany, April 17 (AP)—A wave of suicides and murders among Nazi party leaders accompanied American capture of this small town 10 miles southwest of Leipzig.

As the Yanks tore into the outskirts, the burgomeister shot and killed himself. The police chief killed himself and three members of his family. Farther into town, a middle-aged SS trooper shot his wife and two daughters to death and then tried to slash his wrists with a razor.

Berserk For Fear

"The burgomeister committed suicide because he couldn't stand defeat following so close on the heels of his own personal disgrace," an officer said. "He was in the Nazi doghouse because he couldn't get the Volkssturm home guard troops to take up arms and fight."

The police chief apparently went berserk in fear of retribution.

Lieut. George D. Fexy, Allied Military Government officer, was driving into town behind advance elements when he heard shots inside a house.

Better Death

"When we investigated we found this middle-aged SS trooper in a room moaning and blood spurting from his wrists. He had slashed them with a razor. In the bedroom lying fully clothed were the bodies of his wife and daughters who were about 17 and 19 years old. He had just killed them. Before we sent him to a military hospital, he pointed at the bodies of his wife and daughters, and said:

"'It is better for them this way than to live under American rule.'"

Dentz Treason Trial Scheduled Tomorrow

Paris, April 17 (AP)—Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, former high commissioner of Syria and one of the most prominent figures in the Vichy regime, to face a French "purge" court, is scheduled to go to trial tomorrow on charges of high treason.

Dentz is accused of permitting the Germans to use airbases in Syria in 1941 in their effort to support Axis-inspired anti-British rebels in Iraq. When the British replied by invading Syria, Dentz resisted with a six-week campaign which cost hundreds of lives before he finally capitulated and signed an armistice.

The Great 'What-Is-It?' Captured In German Depot

German Proving Grounds, Hillersleben, German, April 17 (AP)—This German army testing ground for new weapons is an inventor's nightmare, containing everything from a mammoth armored what-is-it to a bayonet-corkscrew-bottle opener combination gadget that looks like the Nazi version of what no kitchen should be without.

It will take months of work by American and British ordnance men to make head or tail of the great mass of equipment and gadgets they found here.

It would be funny except for the fact that everything built here was built with the idea of killing people.

The Great What-Is-It

First, there is the great what-is-it. Nobody has yet figured out what it is or what it may have been intended to be, but it is certainly the largest land-going contraption likely ot appear in this war.

It has four wheels, each nine feet tall and having wooden pads. It probably weighs about 100 tons and is heavily armored.

The machine has places for two drivers, who would sit in an armored compartment twelve feet above the ground. The top of the contraption is flat, like the deck of a ship, and is fitted with bolts to which something could be attached. Its double belly is broken into two compartments, each filled with wires and electrical equipment.

The great what-is-it is undoubtedly unfinished, but it has to be seen to be believed.

30-Foot Barrel

Then there is a new anti-tank gun with a barrel at least 30 feet long an a bore firing a shell of at least 120 millimeter size.

There are hundreds of other guns, most of them anti-tank weapons, and it is apparent the Germans were concentrating on high-velocity guns in their experiments.

Some guns have been sabotaged, but most are intact.

The [illegible] depot covers hundreds of acres, housing thousands of types of guns, shells and sights.

Millions of dollars' worth of precision equipment and materials was captured intact and only experienced scientists will be able to sort out the devices.

The Germans made decided efforts to smash their optical experiments which seemed to indicate they thought they had something the Allies do not possess.

One prize was a giant howitzer of 380 millimeter size or larger, with a bore almost as wide as the barrel was long.

Allies Pierce Mined Nazi Areas In Italy

APR 18 1945

Rome, April 17 (AP)—Fifth Army troops fought through bitterly defended and heavily mined areas south of Bologna today, measuring their advances by yards in the second day of the general Allied offensive.

Toward the west coast, Lieut. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott's men gained 1,000 to 2,500 yards, but on his army's right flank advances were limited by interlacing enemy defenses and closely co-ordinated enemy small arms and mortar fire.

Attack Pins Down Foe

Declaring that "this army is fit and ready to fight," Truscott said such resistance had been expected because the Germans still are estimated to have 25 divisions in Italy.

"By atacking, we are preventing the Germans from pulling out at the last minute to other fronts," said Truscott.

The 8th Army, which already was driving up the Po Valley in its phase of the offensive before the 5th Army jumped to the attack yesterday, has taken 6,000 prisoners since beginning its advance April 9.

Gurkhas Enter Cartura

A Gurkha brigade of the 8th Army consolidated a bridgehead over the Silaro River southwest of Massa and drove forward 2,000 yards, entering Cartura, about 12½ miles east of Bologna.

Polish troops advanced northwest and west against opposition after capturing Castel Guelfo in bitter fighting.

Eighth Army forces also pressed beyond Argenta. A new crossing of the Sillaro was made 3 miles southwest of Bastia.

Although 8th Army troops, fanning out west of the Silaro, were advancing relatively fast, the 5th was meeting resistance everywhere.

500th Day Of Combat

The United States 34th Division marked its 500th day of combat by capturing a church in Gorgognano after a hand-to-hand fight that developed when the Americans advanced over ground well sown with mines. Gorgognano is 1,000 yards northeast of Belmonte.

Units of the United States 10th Mountain Division captured Monte Frosca and the town of Tole, northwest of Vergato, German road bastion on Highway 64 about 17 miles southwest of Bologna.

The 10th beat off ten counterattacks and took 500 prisoners.

Yanks Take Calvenzano

Other American troops cut Highway 64 three miles nearer Bologna, capturing Calvenzano and continuing northeastward as South Africans with the 5th captured Monte Sole and Caprara.

The Mediterranean Allied Air Force supported with more than 1,100 fighters and fighter-bombers attacking enemy positions and vehicles yesterday.

An overcast limited activities of heavy bombers, but mediums attacked Reno River bridges in the Bologna area and troop concentrations.

VON MODEL CALLED A SUICIDE WHILE TRAPPED IN RUHR

9th Army Gets Unconfirmed Report—Nazi Woman Leader Ends Life.

United States Army on the Elbe, Germany, April 17 (A. P.).—Reports from the Ruhr pocket said tonight that Field Marshal Walther von Model, commander of the annihilated German Fifth Panzer and Fifteenth armies, had committed suicide. His body, however, has not been found.

Model commanded Army Group G which was trapped in the Ruhr by a First and Ninth Army junction April 1. He was an army group commander on the Russian front before being shifted to the west. Recent reports said he had replaced Field Marshal von Rundstedt as overall western commander, but these never were confirmed.

5TH AND 8TH INCH FORWARD

7,000 Germans Captured In "Last Battle For Italy"

HEINRICHS

Rome, April 17 (AP)—Allied 5th and 8th armies, closely supported by terrific air bombardments, made small gains on all sectors today as the Germans, clinging desperately to their northern Italy battle line, fought back with the same old tenacity.

Fifth Army troops attempting to break out of the mountains south of Bologna threaded their way through extensive mine fields and interlocking defenses while British 8th Army troops sloshed about in the boggy country of the lower Po Valley where there are more canals than roads.

Nazis Short Of Transport

With their shortage of transport the Germans' only hope is to back up to the Po in slow, conrtolled steps. A quick Allied breach of their lines would mean a costly retreat and hasten the inevitable disaster which awaits the enemy in Italy.

The spring offensive which Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander described as the "last battle for Italy" already has picked up 7,000 German prisoners.

South of Bologna the veteran United States 34th Division captured a ridge at Gorgognano after a bitter hand-to-hand struggle.

Monte Mosca and the town of Tole, 4 miles northwest of Vergato, bloody German road bastion 17 miles southwest of Bologna, fell to elements of the United States 10th Mountain Division. The Germans hurled ten futile counterattacks.

Highway 64 south of Bologna was cut by other American troops northeastward. South African troops attached to the 5th Army captured Monte Sole and Caprara.

On the west coast American and Brazilian troops pushed forward 1,000 to 2,500 yards in a drive toward the great Italian naval base at La Spezia.

On the eastern flank of the Italian front the 8th Army continued to fan out northeast of Bologna.

Polish troops captured Castel Pietro, 12 miles southeast of Bologna.

Southwest of Massa Lombarda, a Gurkha brigade of the 8th advanced 2,000 yards and took Cartura, 12½ miles northeast of Bologna. Polish troops captured Castel Guelfo, 16 miles northeast of Bologna.

1,000 Planes Pace Attack

Throughout the day more than 1,000 planes of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force joined in the offensive with bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters.

Argenta, center of a gap leading to Ferrara and the Po Valley, was by passed by units of the 8th which established a bridgehead across the Marina Canal, the next water barrier.

While the progress along the front was slow, an official announcement said the offensive was rolling forward "according to plan."

Medicina, 14 miles northeast of Bologna, was captured. It formerly was the headquarters of the German 1st Parachute Division.

The crack United States 1st Armored Division, fighting in the mountains south of Bologna, captured Mount Radichio and Mount Milano.

Gen. Trezzani Former Prisoner in U. S., Succeeds Gen. Messe

ROME, April 17 (AP).—The Italian Cabinet today appointed General Claudio Trezzani, fifty-four years old, formerly a prisoner of war in the United States, as chief of the Italian armed forces, replacing General Giovanni Messe.

Trezzani, an infantry officer, became a general in 1941. He recently has been serving as head of the armed forces' central commission on promotions.

The Cabinet thanked General Messe for his work in reconstruction of the armed forces, but made no announcement regarding his future position.

Urges Reforestation and Use of Country's Wealth

ROME, April 17 (AP)—Col. Charles Poletti of the Allied Military Government called on Italians today to undertake large-scale reforestation as the solution of many of their agricultural problems and declared: "The Allies have more faith in Italy's future than some Italians."

Speaking at the ceremony marking the first anniversary of the Pontifical Commission for the Assistance of War Victims, Colonel Poletti said that "Italy has much wealth and Italians ought to exploit it more fully."

Msgr. Ferdinando Baldelli, president of the commission, thanked Colonel Poletti for his assistance and presented to him a mosaic figure of Christ made in the Vatican mosaic factory.

Paris Excited By 'Juncture'

Paris, April 17 (AP)—Paris was thrown into excitement at noon today by the appearance of an extra edition of the newspaper Liberation Soir with an enormous headline reading "Junction Made," reporting a meeting of Russian and American forces. The report was wholly without confirmation at supreme Allied headquarters.

The newspaper quoted the French radio as quoting in turn a "secret German radio station" to the effect that American and Russian advanced elements had met in the Elbe Valley between Pirna and Tetschen, southeast of Dresden.

NEW FINNISH CABINET GETS TWO MORE REDS

HELSINKI, Finland, April 17 (AP)—The Finnish Government swung a little more to the left today when Premier Juho K. Paasikivi, after more than a week of negotiations, announced the formation of a new Cabinet that included two more Communists.

Only three changes were made in the Cabinet, which now has ten Leftists among eighteen members.

The new men are Social Democratic Editor Eino Kilpi, Social Minister, and the two Communists, Matti Janhunen, Deputy Social Minister, and Yrjo Leino, Deputy Communications Minister.

C. J. A. Enckell remained as Foreign Minister, but otherwise there were numerous exchanges in posts among old members. Former Deputy Social Minister Yrjoe Leino, a Communist, replaced Kaarlo H. Hillilae as Minister of the Interior, while Mr. Hillilae became National Supply Minister. Onni A. Hiltunen became Minister of Finance, exchanging posts with Johan Helo, who became Minister of Education.

Moscow Insistent on Poland

Soviet News Agency Repeats Demand for Warsaw Representation at Parley.

Moscow, April 17 (A. P.).—A statement by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, reiterated today Russian insistence that the Soviet-supported Polish Provisional Government should have representation at the San Francisco World Security Conference.

The statement underlined the Soviet hope that the United States and Britain would change their minds at the last moment and work out an arrangement under which the Warsaw Poles would be invited to the discussions of post-war security.

The present commission working on the reorganization of the Polish Provisional Government has come forward with no new developments. Inasmuch as Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov and United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, two-thirds of the commission, are going to the United States, no new developments are likely from this quarter.

Stockholm, April 17 (AP)—Two Swedish travelers who arrived in Malmo today from Germany said Hitler visited Berlin over the week end and was still in the imperiled capital on Monday.

The Führer was reported to have landed secretly at Rangsdorf airfield outside Berlin.

One traveler said he saw Hitler riding in an army car through Berlin with an escort of six motorcycles.

German Navy Desertions Reported

Stockholm, April 17 (AP)—The newspaper Expressen said today that German crews of a Norwegian torpedo boat and a Nazi mine sweeper who deserted from the German Navy had told Swedish naval officials "all German warships in Norwegian waters will reach Sweden within a week."

The crewmen brought their vessels to Swedish ports for internment Monday.

Yanks Capture Two Thirds Of Ie Island, Encircle Japs

ERICSON

Guam, Wednesday, April 18 (AP). Destruction of at least 2,280 Japanese planes since carrier sweeps of the Ryukyus and the Japanese mainland started, March 18, in advance of the Okinawa invasion, April 1, was reported by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz today.

United States infantrymen, meantime, held two thirds of Ie Island—just off the west-central coast of Okinawa. Yanks of the 24th Corps were meeting only moderate resistance on the 10-square-mile island, valuable for its captured airfield.

Only a few Japanese observation planes were over the Okinawa area yesterday, while a strong force of Superfortresses was hammering six key airbases on Kyushu in a heightening campaign to neutralize air fields from which the enemy has been striking the United States invasion armada.

Suicide Flyers Resisted

About 1,600 planes of the 2,280 shot down or destroyed by United States forces were credited to flyers from Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's fast carrier task force, which prepared the way for the Okinawa invasion.

This mighty force has engaged in three major air battles since D-day, protecting American troops and ships from heavy air strikes, including Kamikaze (suicide) flyers bent on self-destruction in crash dives.

Six hundred planes in the toll were accounted for by anti-aircraft gunners, planes of escort carriers and planes based on Okinawa itself.

In addition, British Fleet carriers covering the southern flank of the invasion with strikes against Formosa and the southern Ryukyus destroyed 80 Japanese planes in the same period.

71 Planes Destroyed Daily

The American total amounts to an average of 71 planes destroyed a day.

On Ie Island, the 10th Army doughboys were advancing through heavily mined terrain against a Japanese garrison of 1,000 troops compressed in the eastern sector. Artillery was landed to support the assault troops.

The 1,000-man Japanese garrison on Ie was encircled and marked for annihilation. A four-strip airfield, suitable for bomber takeoffs only 325 miles south of Japan itself, was seized shortly after the Monday invasion.

Infantrymen on southern Okinawa still were deadlocked in the fiercest artillery engagement of the Pacific war. Marines pressed through small pockets of resistance on the Motobu Peninsula and the northern tip of Okinawa.

Kyushu Airfield Raided

An airfield on Kyushu, southernmost mainland island of the Japanese group, was raided by Marine Mitchell bombers Monday, and the next day Fleet bombers destroyed two cargo ships and a warehouse on Tanega Island in the northern Ryukyus.

Fleet planes sank three freighters and damaged three others in waters east of the Ryukyus.

A few Japanese reconnaissance planes were reported in the Okinawa area throughout yesterday, but no attack in force was announced.

Nimitz reported that mopping-up operations on Iwo Island continued during April "as our forces developed that island as an airbase."

He said 22,731 Japanese troops were killed from February 19, D-day, through last Saturday. The captured totaled 624.

American Marine casualties on Iwo—bloodiest conquest of the Pacific campaign—have been given as 4,189 dead, 15,308 wounded and 1 missing—a total of 19,938.

Japanese defenders of little Ie Island were trapped on the southeast corner.

The four-strip airfield and a half dozen villages were taken quickly after 24th Army Corps units landed on Ie on Tuesday.

The Nipponese defenders, estimated at 1,000 by Yank officers, were trapped on 557-foot Mount Iegusugu, said Vern Haugland, Associated Press correspondent.

Sought As Bomber Base

The airfield, with runways up to 5,110 feet long, will provide a base for bomber operations against Japan.

Artillery carried the burden of activity on the southern Okinawa front, where 24th Corps lines wedged the entire defenders of Naha City into the south fifth of the island.

Sixth Marine Division troops on Motobu peninsula, on the northern Okinawa front, enveloped an enemy pocket of an estimated 1,800 to 2,500 men, mostly Okinawa home guardsmen. It was the first large Japanese force encountered in this sector.

Other Marine units meanwhile pushed northward from Motobu peninsula over brush-covered terrain toward the tip of the island.

Nimitz made no mention of any new Japanese air assaults on the American invasion fleet off the Ryukyus, but reported that from March 18 to April 17 American forces destroyed more than 2,200 Japanese aircraft in attacks on the home islands of Japan and island groups in the Ryukyus.

Aircraft from carriers of the Pacific Fleet destroyed more than 1,600 of these, he said. The rest were accounted for by anti-aircraft guns ashore and afloat. In addition, British Fleet units destroyed more than eighty enemy planes.

Indication that there may be a serious pilot shortage in Japan was seen in the rescue from the sea of one enemy pilot who appeared to be about sixteen years old, a correspondent reported.

A Japanese communique claimed that air and surface "suicide" attacks sank eighteen United States ships and damaged thirteen from Saturday through Monday and were still continuing. But the Domei news agency added: "It cannot be said that a crippling blow has been dealt the enemy, in spite of his great losses. More and more reinforcements are being brought up. The next few days will tell whether the relentless attack by our planes or whether the enemy's strength in supplies has won."

Ie Airfield Use Foreseen

Guam, April 17 (AP)—American doughboys pressed today for quick conquest of Ie Island, only three miles west of Okinawa, so its three-runway airfield could be put into operation for stepped-up bombing of the Japanese homeland.

Ie is only 980 air miles from Tokyo, nicely within range of B-24 bombers.

Until a few days ago, the Japanese had used Ie's strategic airfield for persistent but unsuccessful aerial assaults upon the Okinawa invasion forces. Then they crossed it with trenches, to make the strips unusable if captured.

368 Planes Bagged

Latest of the enemy's desperate aerial attacks—mounted from the northern Ryukyus and Kyushu—cost them 368 warplanes and increased losses for the March 18-April 16 period to 1,674 in the Ryukyus-Kyushu area. These assaults were directed at Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's fast carrier task force as well as the Okinawa invasion forces.

Mitscher's carrier pilots raided the northern Ryukus Thursday through Saturday and struck Kyushu airfields and installations Sunday and Monday, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said in today's communiqué, confirming earlier Tokyo radio reports.

Kyushu Raid Reported

The Japanese Domei news agency today reported without confirmation that Okinawa-based fighters and bombers struck Japanese air bases on Osumi peninsula on the southern extremity of Kyushu Monday. It also said carrier planes attacked Kagoshima and the southern part of Miyazaki prefecture in renewed assaults on Kyushu. Domei said damage was negligible.

Mitscher's pilots and carrier force gunners destroyed 186 Japanese planes in their Ryukyu-Kyushu forays. Carrier pilots, ships' gunners and combat air patrols destroyed another 182 enemy aircraft in defending Vice Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner's amphibious force off Okinawa. These aerial actions extended from Thursday through yesterday—five days.

No Damage Mentioned

Nimitz said nothing regarding possible damage to either Mitscher's or Turner's forces.

The communiqué did report, however, that:

Iwo Jima-based army Mustang fighters made their first raid on Kyushu yesterday, attacking Kanoya and other airfields.

Yanks on Okinawa killed 9,108 Japanese troops and took 391 prisoners through midnight Friday. The last report on American casualties there was 2,695 — 432 killed, 2,103 wounded and 160 missing—through April 9.

Gun Duel Continues

Battle lines on southern Okinawa remained unchanged, as the thunderous artillery duel continued. On northern Okinawa Marines pressed their mop-up of enemy pockets of resistance and other leathernecks moved closer to the island's northern tip.

Elements of the 24th Army Corps landed on Ie Island yesterday morning against initially slight but increasing opposition.

Ie airfield is on limestone tableland and can be quickly repaired and made a potent American airbase. Thus far, only Yontan and Katena airfields on Okinawa are being used by American planes.

Third Raid In Four Days

Guam, April 17 (AP)—American Superfortresses today added their might to the campaign to destroy airfields in southern Japan that spring suicide attacks on United States forces on and around Okinawa.

They swept out from their bases in the Marianas for their third assault within four days on the Japanese homeland, battering at six airfields on Kyushu.

Probably 150 of the sky giants were in the force that carried the aerial assault on Kyushu's airdromes into the third consecutive day. Earlier strikes were made by Pacific fleet carrier planes.

Unlike their fire attacks of Saturday and Monday, which ignited industrial areas in and near Tokyo, today's raiders loosed demolition bombs on the targets' air installations. Results of the raid were not yet available. Bombing was from a high but unspecified altitude.

Six Places Targets Of B-29's

The tactical campaign to knock out Kyushu's airfields was launched Sunday by carrier planes. They hit major bases at Kanoya and Kushira, a Pacific fleet announcement said, and destroyed 87 enemy planes.

Kanoya, East Kanoya, Izumi, Kokubu and Nittagahara, all in southern Kyushu, and Tachiarai in the northwest part of the island were the objectives of the B-29's.

The Superfortresses had hit Tachiarai in two previous raids and East Kanoya three times. The other places felt their sting for the first time.

B-29's Raid Jap Suicide-Attack Air Bases

Guam, April 17 (AP)—Six separate groups of Superfortresses blasted enemy airfields on Kyushu Island today with the avowed purpose of neutralizing southern Japanese bases which have been hurling suicide planes against American naval and land forces around Okinawa for a week.

It was the third day of American air raids on Kyushu airdromes, 325 miles north of Okinawa.

Carrier aircraft destroyed 109 Nipponese planes and damaged 60 in sorties over Kyushu Sunday and Monday, making a total of 1,674 Nipponese aircraft destroyed in a month around Kyushu and the Ryukyu Islands. Many of them were downed in suicide attacks. Mustang fighters from Iwo Jima also raided Kyushu yesterday.

Six Airfields Hit

Today's blow was struck by "a large task force" of B-29's against six airfields, five of them on southern Kyushu. It was the fourth Super fortress blow against Japan's southernmost home island in three weeks.

The Japanese Domei news agency said "some 80" Superforts raided airfields for an hour and a half in midafternoon in what was "believed to be a tactical bombing attack aimed at destruction of our air strength."

Today's targets included airfields at Tachiarai, Kanoya, East Kanoya, Izumi, Kokubu and Nittagahara. The last five are in the southern sector of Kyushu, around Kagoshima Bay.

Tachiarai was hit twice before by B-29's and East Kanoya three times. Others were Superfortress targets for the first time. Kanoya was attacked Sunday by carrier planes and Monday by Mustangs, which couldn't find an enemy plane to shoot.

Hangars Knocked Out

Previous Superfortress attacks on Tachiarai knocked out the machine works, about nine hangars and more than a score of buildings.

The new attack was made without escorting fighters. It was acknowledged that it was not a low-level attack, although the altitude was not specified.

Eleven B-29's were reported missing from yesterday's 400 plane incendiary raid on Tokyo, which rekindled the enemy capital after fires last Saturday burned out 10¾ square miles of the industrial

23 Maru Jap Ships Hit By Bombers

Manila, April 17 (AP)—Philippine-based bombers knocked 23 ships out of Japan's sorely pressed merchant fleet Sunday and heavily pounded Formosa airdromes and port facilities at Davao, on southeastern Mindanao, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today.

The biggest bag was off the China coast, between Shanghai and Saigon, where Yank flyers sank or damaged two large freighter-transports and eleven smaller vessels.

Strong forces of Liberators dropped 111 tons of bombs on four airdromes on western Formosa. At least 16 planes—probably 21—were destroyed on the ground.

More than 200 tons of explosives were dropped in two days on Davao's bivouacs, supply and defense sectors and power plants. Doughboys are cleaning out the Zarboanga Peninsula, on the southwest corner.

On northern Luzon 33d Division infantrymen beat back several night attacks in their slow, three-way drive on Baguio.

8 Square Miles In Tokyo Ruined

Twenty-first Bomber Command Headquarters, Guam, Wednesday, April 18 (AP)—Photographs revealed that 8.1 square miles of southern Tokyo and Kawasaki were burned out in the Superfortress low-level incendiary attack before dawn April 16, 21st Bomber Command Headquarters reported today.

Five and two tenths square miles, or 3,330 acres, of South Tokyo were destroyed, together with 2.9 square miles of Kawasaki, adjoining Tokyo on the south.

ROCKEFELLER H... IN OKINAWA CLASH

Guam, April 17 (A. P.).—Major Winthrop Rockefeller, son of John D. Rockefeller Jr., and regimental supply officer with the 77th Division, is recovering at a Guam hospital from flash burns suffered in a Japanese air attack off Okinawa April 2.

The tall, lean, Rockefeller was burned on the hands and face. He had lost almost his sweeping moustaches which were singed, but his face is unscarred.

"I was very lucky to come out as I have," he related. "When it happened I thought I was hurt a lot worse." Rockefeller has recovered sufficiently to attend a recent dance at which hospital nurses were guests. He served with the 77th Division in the Guam and Leyte invasions and while at Guam saved an enlisted man who had been thrown from a landing craft into a deep hole in a reef.

Other Side of the Story.

San Francisco, April 17 (A. P.).—The Emperor Hirohito today donated 10,000,000 yen (roughly $2,400,000 at the pre-war rate of exchange) for relief of the "increasing number" of Japanese raid victims, Domei, the Japanese official news agency, declared in a broadcast dispatch recorded here by the FCC.

"The war situation is extremely grave," the Emperor said in a rescript. "The enemy raids on our empire and his invasion of our possessions in the empire are being intensified."

The Emperor turned the money over to Premier Suzuki with the request "to heed our deep concern and to leave the populace with nothing to be desired in the way of aid and relief," Domei said, and Suzuki promised "to render the utmost service to the war victims and to set his Majesty's mind at ease by making every effort to carry out the war to crush the enemy."

DOOLITTLE RAID CHECKED JAPS

Blitz 3 Years Ago Changed Trend In Pacific War

San Francisco, April 17 (AP)—Jimmy Doolittle's raid on Tokyo three years ago tomorrow changed the trend of the Pacific war.

That was because bombs and incendiaries dropped for the first time on Japan's homeland left the very real threat that it could happen again.

To answer that threat, Japan's military leaders pulled a strong Japanese carrier fleet out of the Indian Ocean and sent it speeding back to protect its homeland.

It was the strongest carrier fleet ever assembled up to April, 1942, consisting of five first-class carriers, three battleships, heavy and light cruisers and destroyers.

Planes Held In Japan

To intercept future possible United States carrier-borne bombers, the same frightened leaders also tied up many planes in Japan—sorely needed in the South Pacific—and helped the United States to get a precarious toehold on Guadalcanal four months later.

Those 80 volunteer army flyers taking off from the navy carrier also gave the shot in the arm needed by discouraged Allied fighting men in the Pacific after taking beatings at Pearl Harbor, Wake, Bataan, Hong Kong, Singapore and Burma.

Pearl Harbor convalescents in Oahu hospitals cheered themselves hoarse at the good news.

The famed carrier Enterprise, it can now be revealed, not only accompanied the Hornet but also did hard work on that historic raid.

Enterprise pilots closely patrolled the seas during extremely dirty flying weather while the Hornet's deck was tied up with the sixteen twin-engined Mitchell bombers.

First Telling Blow

Doolittle's blow was the first telling offensive struck by an army and navy team working together—and that helped in those wrangling days of Pacific retreating.

Critics, merely evaluating damage inflicted by Doolittle's flyers and failing to note the global aspects, have said that the raid was premature, caused little damage to Japan's war machine and forewarned her to put factories underground and fireproof her industrial areas.

They do not know that the Japanese fleet was rampaging at will in the Indian Ocean during early April, 1942, after knocking out the British Eastern Fleet consisting of the obsolete aircraft carrier Hermes and heavy cruisers Dorsetshire and Cornwall.

Ceylon Base Raid Cited

Flyers from the same Japanese fleet hit the important British supply base of Colombo, Ceylon, and the only naval base in the Indian theater, Trincomalee, burning out hangars and military installations.

The same powerful fleet supported the Andaman Islands landing and another at Akyab, near sprawling, helpless, teeming Calcutta.

The situation in early April was desperate. There was disaffection in India, and Germany, sweeping all before her across Africa, was threatening Alexandria for a possible Nazi-Japanese juncture.

After the defeat of the British Eastern Fleet, the Indian Ocean supply line was unguarded and it was imperative that supplies go through to the beleaguered Russians and the British in Egypt.

Jap Tide Sweeping On

That was not all. In the other direction, the Japanese sweep of conquest engulfed Rabaul and was moving inexorably on to the Solomons.

Airfields for the envisioned Tokyo-Guadalcanal air express defense were being hastened to completion with Korean and native slave labor.

Then Doolittle struck out of a clear sky, at noontime—even interrupting a baseball game—so complete was the surprise.

The powerful Japanese carrier fleet left off its bloody work in the Indian Ocean and hastened back to the Japanese homeland. It never returned.

Likewise, airplanes badly needed in the Southwest Pacific never got there—they were impounded to protect the homeland.

The Doolittle flyers who were shot down and wounded and those captured and beheaded (by Tokyo's boasting admission) helped hold the far-flung line in the Pacific-Indian Ocean. They made the present Okinawa offensive possible

Iwo Mopping-Up Continues

Namitz Says 22,731 of Foe Have Been Killed, 624 Captured

GUAM, April 18 (Wednesday) (AP).—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported today that mopping up operations on Iwo Island continued during April "as our forces developed that island as an air base." He said 22,731 Japanese troops were killed from Feb. 19, D Day, through last Saturday. The captured totaled 624.

American Marine casualties on Iwo—the bloodiest conquest of the Pacific campaign—have been given as 4,189 dead, 15,308 wounded and 141 missing, a total of 19,938.

YANKS CLOSE IN ON BAGUIO

MacArthur Troops Free 7,000 Civilians In Philippines

Manila, Wednesday, April 18 (AP). American troops have reached the outskirts of the enemy's mountain citadel of Baguio on northern Luzon and already have rescued more than 7,000 civilians, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

The majority of those liberated were Filipinos. Others included nationals of the United States, the British Commonwealth, Russia, China, France, Poland, Switzerland, Spain, Turkey, Cuba, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Germany and Austria.

General Roxas Freed

Their rescue was made possible, MacArthur explained, by the pressure of his forces which enabled them to escape their Japanese captors at night and make their way into the American lines. There they were being cared for by the Army.

Among those freed was Brig. Gen. Manuel Roxas, former Speaker of the Philippine National Assembly.

Four members of the Cabinet of the Filipino collaborationist government were captured.

Heavy Air Attacks

"They will be confined for the duration of the war as a matter of military security," MacArthur said, "and then turned over to the Government of the Philippines for trial and judgment."

They were listed as Jose Yulo, chief justice of the Supreme Court; Antonio de Las Alas, Minister of Finance; Teofilo Sison, Minister of the Interior, and Quentin Paredes, Minister of Justice.

Heavy air attacks by Philippine-based bombers and fighters continued in the Visayan Islands, Mindanao, Borneo, Formosa, along the Asiatic coastline from Shanghai to Singapore, and in French Indo-China.

Enemy shipping was heavily hit, with more than a score of vessels ranging from barges to an 8,000-ton transport destroyed or damaged. Also included were a destroyer, a submarine chaser and four troop-laden barges.

Maj. Gen. Percy W. Clarkson's 33d Infantry Division reached the outskirts of Baguio Monday, meeting only scattered resistance. The approach was made on Highway 9.

A line was established about 4 miles from the center of the town—summer capital of the Philippines.

Igorotes Save Refugees

Other 33d Division elements approaching from the southwest were within 3 miles of Baguio, but were traveling over a more difficult route.

Headquarters disclosed that as the 33d drew near on Sunday, runners were organized from among the Igorotes. They used a secret mountain trail to bring bands of refugees through the lines to safety. It took four days to make the trip out.

General Roxas, who had been captured with his men on a south Philippine island, withstood continuous Japanese efforts to win him over to collaboration.

He declined Japanese receptions under the pretense of illness until Premier Hideki Tojo came Manila. Then, still feigning illn he allowed himself to be carri to a reception hall long enough pay his respects. He was taken Baguio late last year.

U.S. Planes Battle Jap Push In China

MOOSA

Chungking, April 17 (AP)—American planes were hurled today against a Japanese drive which appeared aimed at Chihkiang, in western Hunan province, whose fall would deprive the United States 14th Air Force of an offensive base and place the enemy 250 miles southeast of Chungking.

While the Chinese high command detailed fresh successes in the mounting counteroffensive in western Hupeh and Honan provinces to the north, an American communiqué disclosed that close support had been given defending Chinese ground forces in Hunan along what apparently is a front of more than 90 miles.

2 River Towns Recaptured

The Chinese high command said its troops dealt heavy blows to this new drive, which was launched late last week.

Meanwhile, the high command said the big Han River towns of Siangyang, 50 miles southeast of the former United States air base at recaptured Laohokow, and Icheng, 25 miles to the southeast, were recaptured in battles which cost the enemy heavy casualties.

In southwest Honan, 53 miles north of Laohokow, Chinese troops were reported smashing into Sichwan on the Honan-Shensi railway, 37 miles from the Shensi border. In Laohokow itself, remnants of a suicide garrison were being wiped out, the high command said.

Chinese Retake 2 Han River Towns

Chungking, April 17 (AP)—Counterattacking Chinese have recaptured the Han River towns of Siangyang and Icheng in western Hupeh province after inflicting heavy casualties on the Japanese, a special Chinese communiqué announced today.

The bulletin said the final assault on Siangyang, which is about 50 miles southeast of the former United States airbase at Laohokow and 170 miles northwest of Hankow, was launched last midnight. More than 500 Japanese were killed and large quantities of supplies taken, the communiqué stated.

DAY

Capture of Icheng, 25 miles southeast of Siangyang, was reported after fierce fighting throughout the night.

Reducing Garrison

In Laohokow, Chinese were reducing the last of the Japanese garrison, which is said to be making a suicide stand in the compound of the Catholic church.

Fifty-three miles north of Laohokow, the Chinese reported they were smashing into Sichwan, on the Honan-Shensi highway 37 miles east of the Shensi border.

Still farther north, Chinese regulars and guerrillas captured the highway center of Nanchao, thus imposing a threat to the Japanese flank thrusting into southern Honan province.

Yenangyaung-Chauk Oil Fields Goal Of British

Calcutta, April 17 (AP)—British 14th Army tanks opened a two-way drive today on the Yenangyaung-Chauk oil fields on the east bank of the Irrawaddy in central Burma, as one column speared into the outskirts of Singu and another captured the road junction of Gweygo, Allied headquarters announced.

The British drove into the northern suburbs of Singu, five Chauk, 31 miles southwest of Pakokku, and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. Newly captured Gwegyo is 37 miles south of Pakokku and about 25 miles north of Yenangyaung.

East of the Mandalay-Thazi railway in hill country, the Japanese retreating southward abandoned heavy equipment. Considerable quantities of artillery were buried or destroyed by the fleeing enemy.

South of Meiktila, where the British were said to be making good progress, a security silence still blanketed operations. Armored advances, however, were said to be hampered by bad weather.

Foes in Ryukyus Refine Japanese Suicide Trick

Hide in Hole and Blow Selves Up as Tanks Pass Over

IE ISLAND, Ryukyus, April 17 (AP).—Japanese soldiers on this tiny island off the west coast of Okinawa are pulling the old suicide trick with a new angle.

They dig a hole, cover over the top and camouflage it. Inside, varying numbers of Japanese hide with a big explosive charge, waiting for an unsuspecting tank or mobile gun to rumble over. When the machine is overhead, the Japanese detonate the charge.

Private First Class Michael Katona, Trenton, N. J., and Private First Class Jerry Buckley, of Philadelphia, told the story.

Katona said: "The tank went over the top of a hole full of Japs. They blew themselves up with a terrific explosion which raised the tank into the air, but did not damage it."

"There were pieces of Jap bodies flying all over the place," interposed Buckley.

"Those Japs were splattered all over us—I was an awful mess," Katona resumed.

British Open Burma Drive

CALCUTTA, April 17 (AP).—British 14th Army troops began a two-pronged drive in Burma today toward the Yenangyaung-Chauk oilfields on the east bank of the Irrawaddy River, sixty miles southwest of Meiktila.

Allied headquarters announced one column has captured Gwegyo, eight miles w[illegible]Kyaukpadaung and twenty-five miles north of Yenangyaung that that other forces had entered the northern outskirts of Singu, thirty-one miles southwest of Pakokku. The Japanese suffered heavy casualties on the approaches to Singu.

Jap Civilian 'Suicide Corps' To Be Formed

San Francisco, April 17 (AP)—A civilian suicide corps to help repel a homeland invasion will be organized in Japan April 25.

Japan's last-ditch organization program will start the same day the United Nations peace conference opens in San Francisco.

Some 200,000 national and provincial leaders of Japan are to attend the ceremony, the Domei news agency said today in a domestic broadcast recorded here.

Last March 14 Tokyo announced a civilian "special attack" (suicide) corps would be used to bring the spirit of physical self-sacrifice to the "highest degree."

Last week the enemy radio reported the Cabinet of Premier Baron Admiral Kantaro Suzuki had approved organization of the suicide group on a national basis to meet an "imminent" invasion.

INDIA'S FREEDOM VITAL TO PEACE, GANDHI DECLARES

BOMBAY, April 17 — (AP) Mohandas K. Gandhi said in a statement tonight that "an indispensable preliminary to peace is the complete freedom of India from all foreign control."

He asserted that the present delegation appointed to represent India at the San Francisco conference was but a "camouflage" and ought to be dropped.

The statement, on which Gandhi refused to enlarge because he is observing a period of silence, added that "such representation will be worse than no representation. Either India at San Francisco is represented by an elected representative or represented not at all."

Propped on pillows on a sheet-covered floor at Birla house, and apparently in the best of spirits and health, Gandhi received correspondents in a combination reception room and office. The writers were barefooted or in their stocking feet.

After the correspondents had seated themselves on the floor, to the accompaniment of little bobbings of the head and touching of his palms in a sort of salute, Gandhi fiddled with a stack of correspondence while a secretary passed around copies of the 700-word statement.

"I reiterate my conviction that there will be no peace for the Allies of the world unless they shed their belief in the efficacy of war and its accompanying terrible deceptions and fraud, and are determined to hammer out a real peace based on the freedom and equality of all races and nations," Gandhi said in his statement.

"The exploitation and domination of one nation over another can have no place in a world straining to put an end to all war."

Then the statement called for the complete freedom of India, "not merely because it is a classic example of imperialistic domination, but especially because it is a big, ancient and cultured country which has fought for freedom since 1920 deliberately with truth and non-violence as its only weapons."

Will Be Example

"The freedom of India will demonstrate to all the exploited races of the earth that their freedom is very near and that in no case will they henceforth be exploited."

Gandhi contended the peace must be just—neither punitive nor vindictive. "Germany and Japan should not be humiliated," he said. "Therefore the fruits of peace must be equally shared. The effort then will be to turn them into friends."

He said there should be no armed peace, but conceded the necessity of an international police force. "Even this," he added, "will be a concession to human weakness and not by any means an emblem of peace."

Concluding his statement, he quoted from a resolution of the Congress party Aug. 8, 1942 calling for a world federation in which an independent India would be "on an equal basis with other countries in the solution of international problems."

"Thus the demand for Indian independence is in no way selfish. Its nationalism spells internationalism," he said.

Ackerman Off for Manila.

Legislators' Trips To Front Hit

Washington, April 17 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall has protested against members of Congress visiting battlefronts on their own.

One of President Roosevelt's last communications to congressional leaders included a memorandum on the subject from the army chief of staff. Marshall said the War Department welcomed official overseas inspection by congressional subcommittees, but would prefer that members not request transportation abroad as individuals.

Chairman Thomas (D., Utah) said the memorandum was read to the Military Committee before it voted last Tuesday to send a subcommittee to inspect battlefronts.

Danger Mentioned

As he recalled, Thomas said, the memorandum mentioned the element of danger and the strain imposed on commanding officers in affording protection for visitors.

Several House members recently have visited the European fronts as individuals. Many have gone to London as guests of the British Government, and, once that close, the inclination to visit the battlefronts has been strong.

Thomas said the Senate subcommittee probably would not be appointed for some time since no senator wants to leave Washington in the present phase of a shift from one presidential administration to another.

Senators who have indicated they would like to make the trip include Chandler (D., Ky.), Hill (D., Ala.), Gurney (R., S.D.) and Revercomb (R., W.Va.).

President's Wife Appoints Secretary

Washington, April 17 (A. P.).—The appointment of Miss Reathel Odum as secretary to Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the President, was announced today by James L. Reinsch, the President's secretary in charge of press and radio relations.

"F. D. R. Lake"

Washington, April 17 (AP)—The 151-mile lake formed by Grand Coulee Dam in north central Washington has been named "Franklin D. Roosevelt Lake" in honor of the late President.

PUBLIC IS THANKED BY MRS. ROOSEVELT

Washington, April 17 (A. P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today asked President Truman to thank the public for the "outpouring of affectionate thought" which followed her husband's death. Her letter to the President, dated April 17, follows:

"My dear Mr. President:

"There have been many thousands of letters, telegrams and cards sent to me and my children which have brought great comfort and consolation to all of us. This outpouring of affectionate thought has touched us all deeply and we wish it were possible to thank each and every one individually.

"My children and I feel in view of the fact that we are faced with a paper shortage and are asked not to use paper when it can be avoided, that all we can do is to express our appreciation collectively. We would therefore consider it a great favor if you would be kind enough to express our gratitude for us.

"Sincerely yours,

"ELEANOR ROOSEVELT."

Lend-Lease Aid to Russia Exceeds 16 Million Tons

More Than 8 Billion Spent for Supplies to Soviets

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP).—The United States has shipped to Russia more than 16,250,000 tons of war materials and food since October, 1941, when the Soviet lend-lease program started.

Leo T. Crowley, Foreign Economic Administrator, said the value of the supplies was $8,225,000,000 through February of this year, most of it furnished under lend-lease.

The total does not include thousands of airplanes delivered under their own power by American and Russian pilots.

The aid furnished Russia counts to 31.7 per cent of all transferred to allied nations the inception of lend-lease ley reported.

MacArthur Accuses Japanese Of Atrocities in the Philippines

APR 1 8 1945

Washington, April 17 (A. P.).—The Japanese were accused of "barbarous and appalling atrocities" during the defense of Manila in a report by Gen. Douglas MacArthur released today by the War Department.

A summary of the report, which said it was based on documented evidence and sworn testimony, charged that babies were "repeatedly stabbed and slashed with bayonets, even in their mother's arms; women and young girls were violated . . ."

The report was issued as Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo went before the House to recite a grisly account of Japanese atrocities in the Philippines.

Hundreds of persons, the MacArthur statement declared, were bound and soaked in gasoline "or encircled with blazing fuel. Survivors report that the Japanese mocked and laughed at their victims," the statement added.

The report was issued by the War Department with the explanation that such "heinous" acts are normally considered improper for detailed disclosure, but that the department had a duty to reveal to the American nation and the world "these deliberate atrocities."

Many instances of alleged atrocity were cited.

"Men between the ages of 16 and 60 were ordered seized and shot down. Execution parties moved from house to house with hand grenades and torches. Hundreds were packed into dungeons to perish of starvation and suffocation."

Gen. Romulo's Charges.

In an address prepared for delivery in the House, the Philippine Resident Commissioner, who recently returned from the islands, presented as part of his talk officially collected affidavits and photographs. He said they provided proof "of the complete destruction of Manila and the premeditated, systematic massacre of its civilian population under orders of the Japanese Supreme Command."

"Manila is dead," Gen. Romulo asserted, "and Tokyo must die—not in reprisal but as a defense measure necessary to insure Pacific peace."

"No human dignity is left to the piled carcasses that sicken the air over the ruins of a city that was once the pride of the Orient," he said. "They are but evidence, rotten and indivisible in death of loyalty between two worlds. The men and women, and the babies who died with them, were butchered under orders of the Japanese Supreme Command because as Filipinos they represented loyalty to America."

An Order for Butchery.

Gen. Romulo quoted these words from a Japanese group order of February 13, 1945, after American forces were in Manila: "Even women and children have become guerrillas. . . . All people on the battlefield with the exception of Japanese . . . will be put to death."

The Commissioner then added: "In war there are always atrocities; . . . but never before has the blame been directly placed on higher authority, on the actual command of a nation ignorant of mercy or morality, that has ignored every rule of the humane decencies and as a nation openly taken the brand of the criminal Cain."

He recited as among the atrocities:

"In Looban asylum the Japanese herded together 2,000 children, refugees and demented people, chained the doors, surrounded the building with machine guns, and set the place on fire.

"Everywhere, with the burning went wholesale massacre. Priests, nuns, refugees, mothers carrying babies in their arms and babies yet unborn—all were locked into churches, asylums, hospitals whose ashes now mingle with the ashes of the innocent dead. . . .

"Where else in all history has there been such a scene of terror as was uncovered behind the locked double doors of Fort Santiago—by comparison the black hole of Calcutta was a place of light. In one room in that place fifty bodies were found, hands bound, bullet riddled; thirty in another stone dungeon; between 250 and 300 in still another, putrid bodies, piled together, and these men and women had been pushed in there while still alive and left to die. . . .

Where Liberty Means Death.

"The broken walls of Manila scream with the agony of those whose only crime was loyalty. . . .

"There are no blue stars, no gold-starred flags in the windows of Manila. For that matter, there are no windows left unshattered. Many of our dead were civilians and others were fighting without uniforms. There were no medals or promises of reward or glory offered to the Filipinos who continued to fight for America, who continued to risk not only their own lives but those of their wives and children."

The Filipino, Gen. Romulo said, is going to ask Congress for aid in rehabilitating his country, something he said will be difficult, for "it is not easy for a Filipino to ask for help."

But what happens now in the Philippines, he went on, "will influence the future of the Pacific peace and that of all the world.

"You have set American standards there," he told the House, "and upon it rests future understanding between all men. . . .

"There will be those who will say the Filipinos cannot have independence and rehabilitation together. They must choose independence or rehabilitation. . . . We ask for liberty as well as for life. Without rehabilitation, liberty will mean death to us. Without liberty, the dead of Manila would be needless sacrifice. . . . We who are the bruised and battered fledgling of the Far East in this war, cannot believe that our mother eagle will abandon us in our stumbling attempt to soar alone."

REDUCTION IN TARIFF IS FAVORED BY TRUMAN

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP) President Truman threw his full support today behind the Roosevelt foreign trade policies but a stormy battle over them in the House Ways and Means committee seemed unavoidable.

The committee starts hearings tomorrow on the proposal of the late President which would give the administration sweeping new authority to reduce duties in negotiated trade pacts with other nations.

The tariff is an ancient dueling ground between Republicans and Democrats and this new plan may provoke the most exciting battle since the Hawley-Scott act of 1930.

The President took his stand at his news conference today, declaring he was in favor of the legislation as it was introduced.

Robert Nathan Named to Job in Reconversion

Is Appointed by Vinson as Deputy Director; Left W.P.B. to Go Into Army

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP).—Fred M. Vinson, Director of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, announced today the appointment of Robert R. Nathan, thirty-seven years old, as deputy director for reconversion.

Mr. Nathan, former chairman of the War Production Board's planning committee, left the W. P. B. in 1943 to enter the Army as a private, subsequently receiving a medical discharge.

Mr. Nathan, who had been connected with the defense effort almost from its start, was influential in W. P. B. policy-making until industry figures headed by Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric, took leadership in the policy sphere.

Before joining the National Defense Advisory Commission in July, 1940, Mr. Nathan had been with the Commerce Department and held a wide variety of positions outside the government. He is a native of Dayton, Ohio.

In another development, the government presented today a post-war pattern for Western steel which pointed toward heavy increases over pre-war production and manufacturing levels for the eleven Westernmost states.

A report drawn for the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines by H. Foster Bain, consulting engineer, recommended: An aggressive marketing program to develop new outlets for plant products; adjustment of freight rates to put Western points on a level nearer Eastern industry, and adaptation of Western plants to Western needs.

CAA Seeks Funds For Seadrome

Washington, April 17 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Administration plans to anchor a floating weather station, built on the seadrome principle, in mid-Atlantic next year—the war and Congress permitting.

Its plans were disclosed today when the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a $960,000 appropriation for construction of one seadrome. Senate and House must approve before the fund becomes available. Then it can be built only if war priorities permit.

As explained by Charles I. Stanton, deputy CAA administrator, the station will be a miniature of the giant seadromes once proposed as midocean landing facilities for airplanes.

Stanton said engineers figured a diamond-shaped drome, 180 by 90 feet, could be constructed for $960,000. On the deck would be offices, a radio room and living quarters for a crew of seventeen.

If finally approved, he added, the seadrome will be anchored on the route between Bermuda and the Azores.

While too small for use by airplanes, the weather seadrome may provide important data on the feasibility of such man-made islands.

YOUNG MEN PICKED AS TRUMAN AIDES

Connelly Will Handle Appointments and Reinsch Press and Radio Relations

APR 1 8 1945

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—President Truman picked two young men today to fill key positions in his White House staff.

Matthew J. Connelly, 37-year-old investigator for Congressional committees and recenly Mr. Truman's executive secretary, was appointed as his confidential secretary.

The important post as secretary in charge of press and radio relations went to James Leonard Reinsch, 36-year-old radio executive from Atlanta, Ga.

At separate news conferences, the new secretaries said that they first met President Truman during his Senate career, Mr. Connelly as chiem investigator for the War Investigating Committee in 1941 and Mr. Reinsch in 1943 while he was testifying on radio legislation at hearings by a Senate committee, of which Mr. Truman was a member.

Mr. Connelly was born Nov. 19, 1907, at Clinton, Mass., and Mr. Reinsch June 28, 1908, at Streator, Ill. The latter spent most of his life in Chicago and other Illinois cities until he became associated with the radio stations of former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio, of which he was managing director at the time of his appointment. He started with Mr. Cox in 1934, when he went to Dayton, Ohio, to set up station WHIO of The Dayton Daily News for Mr. Cox. Te other stations are WIOD of The Miami Daily News and WSB of The Atlanta Journal.

Bans Stay: Truman

Washington, April 17 (AP)—There will be no lifting of the ban on horse racing, the midnight curfew or the brownout in the foreseeable future, President Truman said today.

He added that all these restrictions had, in his opinion, been good for the morale of the country.

Truman was asked at his first news conference about reports that former War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes's wartime prohibition against racing might be lifted May 10.

The Chief Executive stated he did not intend to lift the ban. He said that it had done a lot for the moral well-being of the country.

Asked whether there might be another decision after V-E day, he said he did not have the answer to that question.

Prelude To Parley At Frisco

Washington, April 17 (AP)—American delegates to San Francisco have agreed to back a plan permitting the proposed assembly of all United Nations to recommend—but not force—postwar treaty revisions.

The delegates expect to offer this plan in the form of amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks formula for a world organization designed to keep the peace.

They practically wound up their pre-conference work today, but will meet again tomorrow to give final approval to a draft of proposed changes for presentation to the United Nations meeting opening April 25.

Islands Present Problems

Still in abeyance, however, is the troublesome question of trusteeships for the captured islands of the Pacific and for some territories in other parts of the world.

The delegation discussed the trusteeship question at length in its closed session today. It was reported leaning strongly toward mandate control by individual nations rather than international government of the territories involved.

It was learned authoritatively that the amendments approved—subject to final decisions at San Francisco—represent compromise versions of proposals made by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.). They call for the insertion of the word "justice" at pertinent points in the preamble of the world organization charter and deal with the treaty revision question.

To Submit Proposal

With reported unanimity, the delegates agreed to submit to the conference a proposal that the general assembly of the international organization be empowered to investigate and discuss prior political decisions that threaten to disrupt the peace. It also could make recommendation to the eleven-member council.

These might include recommendations for the alteration of treaties, if the terms of the treaties were regarded as threatening to bring about another war.

But it was emphasized that the council, to be made up of representatives of the Big Five Allies and six smaller nations, would have no power to order or otherwise force countries which have signed a treaty to change its terms.

Would Use Public Opinion

Presumably, the council could debate the matter and make recommendations if it chose, thus bringing the weight of public opinion to bear on the nations in question.

But the American amendments will make no reference to council action, although it was the council rather than the general assembly which Vandenberg sought to make the implement of his original treaty revision amendment.

The Dumbarton Oaks formula would give the general assembly, in which all nations will have membership, the right "to discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security" that a member might raise. It could make recommendations to the security council, but could not act on matters being dealt with by the council.

Would Lie With Council

The real power of action would lie with the council itself to investigate a series of moves pointed toward peaceful settlement of disputes before force was brought into play.

The trusteeship question apparently has found delegation members divided over methods, rather than principles.

In this, as in other matters, the delegation's decision is likely to be backed by the White House.

It is reliably reported that a majority of the delegates favors the idea of mandating certain islands and possessions to individual nations, rather than having international commission control.

Favored By British

The British have favored this sort of trusteeship, but it has been generally understood in the past that the State Department favored joint control by several nations instead of one.

In his last news conference President Roosevelt discussed the trusteeship question at some length.

Then he said that we must accept trusteeship over the Pacific islands which were mandated to the Japanese after the last war because the Japanese abused their privileges and fortified the atolls.

When he was asked what he meant by "we," he said the United Nations—the ones which had been doing the fighting. That seemed to indicate control by the Big Five—the United States, Great Britain, Russia, China and France—of strategically important areas.

Navy Wants Bases

But there is some doubt that the Navy, particularly, wants other governments to share in the control of such islands as Iwo Jima. It was wrested from the Japanese at the cost of American lives and the Navy wants bases there and along the whole string of islands that runs south to Guadalcanal.

There are strong indications that the majority of the American delegates are in sympathy with this viewpoint.

British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden said today that it could be assumed that the first of the quarterly Big Three foreign secretary meetings planned at Yalta will be held in Washington before the San Francisco conference.

Eden Holds Conference

Eden spoke to reporters after spending an hour and a quarter with Edward R. Stettinius, Secretary of State, discussing "the international situation that confronts us and preparations for the San Francisco conference."

He said that they discussed Poland, but declined to comment on whether he found grounds for optimism over the touchy Polish diplomatic tangle.

"We've had some useful discussion on all problems," Eden said.

U.S. TO SEIZE STRUCK PLANT

APR 18 1945

Ickes Directed To Operate Cities Service Refinery

Washington, April 17 (AP)—President Truman tonight directed Interior Secretary Ickes to seize the Cities Service Refining Corporation plant at Lake Charles, La., strike-bound because of a controversy over rental charges in a near-by housing project.

In a subsequent statement, Fred M. Vinson, war mobilization director, declared that the company and the union (the Lake Charles AFL Metals Trades Council) have a contract which is "mutually satisfactory," and that "neither is responsible for the stoppage of production."

"All Federal agencies, including, but not limited to, the National War Labor Board, the War Manpower Commission, the National Selective Service System and the Department of Justice, are directed to co-operate with the petroleum administrator to the fullest extent possible in carying out the purposes of this order," Truman's executive order said.

Termination Of Seizure

He directed the Secretary of War to take such action "as may be necessary" to provide protection to persons employed or seeking employment at the plant.

He directed Ickes to permit the management "to continue with its managerial functions to the maximum degree possible."

He said the order will terminate when Government possession is no longer necessary to the war effort, and in no event more than 60 days after the restoration of productive efficiency.

Production Stoppage

In his statement released through the White House, War Mobilizer Vinson declared:

"A production stoppage has existed in this plant for several days.

"This plant is one of the largest 100-octane gasoline producing refineries in the country.

"Its operation is vital to the effective prosecution of the war.

Barricade Prevents Passage

"The production stoppage exists because of a barricade which prevents safe access to the plant.

"This barricade is manned by a group of men dissatisfied with their rents in a near-by priavtely owned and privately operated housing development.

"The company and the union have a contract which is mutually satisfactory and neither is responsible for the stoppage of production."

Authorized To Operate Plant

Ickes, as petroleum administrator, was authorized to take possession of and operate the plants and facilities of the corporation in and around Lake Charles.

President Truman said in his executive order that because of the interruption in the plant's activities the war effort "will be unduly impeded or delayed."

PRESIDENT HOLDS FIRST PRESS TALK

APR 18 1945

WASHINGTON, April 17 — (AP) Harry S. Truman got an "A" from Washington's press and radio corps today on his first news conference test.

The biggest turnout of newsmen and women ever to jam the oval room was on hand to see how the new president would handle himself. Here's what they applauded:

1. The conference was called for 10:30 a. m. and that's when the doors were thrown open.

2. They got some sort of an answer to every question, and promptly.

3. Standing, President Truman noticed the plight of a reporter at the rear, who was repeatedly interrupted and left talking to himself as those on the front row dominated the questioning. Mr. Truman hushed the front-row questioners. Invited the downtrodden fellow far back to take the floor.

At the end, there was a spontaneous burst of hand-clapping. It was a gesture of goodwill and frankly, of actual relief in the case of some particularly close to Mr. Truman and eager to see him acquit himself well.

The President announced that he'll hold only one conference a week at least for a while, instead of Franklin D. Roosevelt's two They'll be held in the morning one week, and in the afternoon the next, and he'll select the day according to how much he has to say.

He will receive no complaints about his cut-down schedule if it doesn't threaten to become fixed practice. For the moment there is little disposition among White House reporters to object—while Mr. Truman is getting under way.

The President was dressed in blue suit, blue tie and pocket handkerchief. Except for some ash trays and a few pencils his desk was clear. This was in contrast to the intriguing litter of mementoes that had accumulated on Mr. Roosevelt's desk.

U. S. to Redeploy War Machine Four Months Ahead of Schedule

APR 18 1945

WASHINGTON, April 17 — (AP) The United States will be able to throw its full military weight against Japan four months sooner than originally scheduled.

Despite the continuation of the war against Germany, it was disclosed authoritatively today, a general tightening up of plans including new shipping arrangements has set ahead the date on which America's military machine in Europe can be redeployed in the Pacific. The original redeployment date was not revealed.

Some items of equipment intended originally for Europe have already been sent to the Pacific.

When V-E day comes, it is expected that the Allied ship pool will be thrown into the task of redeployment, augmented by shipping taken from Germany.

After V-E, cargo ships will serve a dual purpose. They will carry food and other relief supplies to Europe, and after refitting, bring troops back to the United States for reassignment to the Pacific.

At that point, it is believed in Army quarters that a 16 per cent cutback in new materiel requirement will be possible. The Army hopes to recover about 70 per cent of the equipment in Europe.

Need for some items will increase, however, principally bombs as a result of increased air operations, and artillery.

Trucks will remain in high demand, as will cotton for uniforms. The Army, using 18,000,000 pairs of shoes this year, wants 28,000,000 in 1946.

Rayon yarn for mosquito netting will be another critical item.

Among military men, there is a disposition to discount any hope for improvement in the civilian gasoline supply situation immediately after V-E. It is expected by these experts that any savings effected by termination of European operations will be at least counterbalanced by greater demands n the Pacific.

PATTON, HODGES NOMINATED AS 4 STAR GENERALS

WASHINGTON, April 17 — (AP) A belated fourth star for the shoulders of Lt. Gen. George Smith Patton, Jr., came into view today as the story-book soldier slugged the last few miles through Germany.

President Truman nominated Patton to become a full general along with Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges. The President also nominated nine major generals to be lieutenant generals.

There is little doubt that prompt Senate approval will be given to the promotion of the tempestuous Patton. Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, was called before a closed session of the Senate Military committee last month to explain the omission of Patton and Hodges from a list of nine other lieutenant generals nominated for four-star rank.

President Truman, a member of the military committee before he became vice president, apparently shared the expressed views of his former colleagues that the active field commanders should be accorded recognition. Patton commands the Third army and Hodges the First army in the fighting in Nazi Germany.

The military career of the gun-toting, tank riding Patton has been marked by spectacular ups and downs.

His slashing successes in North Africa and Sicily were obscured by a soldier-slapping incident for which he was officially rebuked by General Dwight D. Eisenhower, European commander-in-chief. In his official report of the case, General Eisenhower said "Patton has in thousands of cases personally supported, encouraged and sustained individuals."

Patton, who personally apologized to the soldier, Pvt. Charles H. Kuhl of Mishawaka, Ind., and expressed his regrets to the entire Seventh army, was retained in command, but later relinquished it to take command of the Third army.

The President also nominated Captain Clyde B. Camerer, medical director of the Navy, for the rank of rear admiral and Captains William W. Warlick and Ruthven E. Libby to be commodores in the Navy. Camerer's home is in Kimmundy, Ill., and his wife is now at the Navay hospital, Parris Island, S. C. Captain Warlick's home address is Annapolis, Md., and his wife now makes her home at West Medford, Mass., while Captain Libby's home is Spokane, Wash. His wife now lives at Arlington, Va.

WILEY IN TIFF WITH WALLACE

Hot Preview Of Battle Over Tariffs

Washington, April 17 (AP)—A brief, hot preview of approaching congressional battles over tariffs developed today when Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce, and Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) clashed over broadening and renewal of the reciprocal trade law.

At the height of the argument—which broke in a Senate small business subcommittee hearing on foreign trade—Wallace leaned forward in the witness chair and told Wiley:

"Senator, you're just talking for a third world war."

Calls Wallace Cockeyed

Face crimson, the Wisconsin Senator retorted:

"That's a hell of a fine answer. You're getting cockeyed, that's what's the matter with you!"

Wallace, testifying on ways he said would increase foreign commerce with particular emphasis on helping small business, had indorsed a bill which would come up before the House Ways and Means Committee tomorrow renewing the reciprocal trade agreement law and authorizing the President to make a further selective 50 per cent cut in duties.

If enacted, the law will permit a total reduction of 75 per cent in some of the Smoot-Hawley tariff rates.

"Disturbed Enormously"

Wiley expressed fear that such an action might "open the flood gates" for importation of European goods at such low prices that American manufacturers could not compete. He said that before the war a shoe manufacturer in his home town of Chippewa Falls, Wis., learned that he could buy foreign-made shoes that were coming into this country through a reciprocal trade treaty cheaper than he could make them. The Senator asked Wallace what he thought of that.

It was then that Wallace charged that Wiley was "talking for a third world war." The Cabinet official said "It disturbs me enormously" to hear talk such as that.

Cites Hope Of The World

Wiley rejoined that he didn't see "how you could make a community prosperous by putting its basic industry out of business simply to encourage foreign trade."

3024 24877

He remarked later to a reporter that Wallace was talking about a national income of about $170,000,000,000 a year, of which about $10,000,000,000 would be represented by export trade.

"That's sixteen to one," Wiley said. "It seems to me we'd better think more about the sixteen-seventeenths than we do of the one seventeenth. The only hope of the world is a sound and prosperous America."

Sees More Jobs

Earlier, in a prepared statement, Wallace said the Commerce Department believed an export trade in excess of $10,000,000,000 a year could be achieved "if proper measures are taken."

"In dollar terms," he said, "this would mean a level of trade at least double what it was in 1929 and three times what it was in the years just preceding the war. In terms of employment, it would mean about 5,000,000 jobs directly related to export trade, as compared with less than 2,500,000 before the war."

He asserted that passage of the proposed reciprocal trade bill "is imperative if an expanding and healthy postwar foreign trade is to be built and maintained."

The only other witness, William L. Clayton, Assistant Secretary of State, also declared that passage of the legislation "is essential to any intelligent American postwar policy in commercial matters."

NATION WILL NOT 'FALTER,' TRUMAN TELLS U.S. FORCES

APR 1 8 1945

America to Pursue Cause for Which Roosevelt Gave Life.

'GREAT LEADER' LOST

New President Speaks to Armed Forces Throughout the World.

WASHINGTON, April 17 — (AP) President Truman told the armed forces of the United States throughout the world tonight that the nation would not falter in the cause for which President Roosevelt gave his life.

"All of us have lost a great leader, a farsighted statesman and a real friend of democracy," he declared. "You have lost an old friend of the services.

"Our Hearts Are Heavy"

"Our hearts are heavy. However the cause which claimed Roosevelt also claims us. He never faltered—nor will we!"

The address, broadcast to the men and women of the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard, as well as to the people of the United States, was recorded for rebroadcasting in order to conform to the conveniences of fighters in every battle zone over the globe.

To the armed forces of the United States throughout the world:

After the tragic news of the death of our late Commander-in-Chief, it was my duty to speak promptly to the Congress and the armed forces of the United States.

Yesterday, I addressed the Congress. Now I speak to you.

I am especially anxious to talk to you for I know that all of you felt a tremendous shock, as we did at home, when our Commander-in-Chief fell.

Have Lost Great Leader

All of us have lost a great leader, a farsighted statesman and a real friend of democracy. You have lost a hard-hitting chief and an old friend of the services.

Our hearts are heavy. However, the cause which claimed Roosevelt, also claims us. He never faltered—nor will we!

I have done, as you do in the field, when the commander falls. My duties and responsibilities are clear: I have assumed them. These duties will be carried on in keeping with our American tradition.

As a veteran of the First World war, I have seen death on the battlefield. When I fought in France with the 35th division, I saw good officers and men fall and be replaced.

I know that this is also true of the officers and men of the other services, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard and Merchant Marine.

I know the strain, the mud, the misery, the utter weariness of the soldier in the field. And I know too his courage, his stamina and his faith in his comrades, his country and himself.

We are depending on each and every one of you.

Yesterday I said to the Congress and I repeat at now:

Praises Armed Forces

"Our debt to the heroic men and valiant women in the service of our country can never be repaid. They have earned our undying gratitude. . . America will never forget their sacrifices. Because of these sacrifices, the dawn of justice and freedom throughout the world slowly casts its gleam across the horizon."

At this decisive hour of history, it is very difficult to express my feeling. Words will not convey what is in my heart.

Yet, I recall the words of Lincoln, a man who had enough eloquence to speak for all America. To indicate my sentiments, and to describe my hope for the future, may I quote the immortal words of that truly great Commander-in-Chief:

"With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphans—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

Artist May Not Finish Portrait Of Roosevelt

New York, April 17 (AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Shoumatoff, Russian-born woman artist who was painting President Roosevelt's portrait last Thursday afternoon a few minutes before he collapsed and died, said through her attorney tonight that she did not believe she would finish the picture.

Charles M. Siegfried, of New York city, her attorney, said the portrait was "substantially complete," but he did not think Mrs. Shoumatoff would do further work on it. Mrs. Shoumatoff turned inquiries about the picture over to her attorney after receiving many calls about it at her home in Locust Valley, Long Island.

Siegfried said that numerous offers to buy the portrait had been made, but that no action would be taken until the artist had conferred with members of the Roosevelt family.

Lend-Lease Extension Is Signed By Truman

Washington, April 17 (AP)—President Truman signed the lend-lease extension bill today.

In a statement, the President declared the measure a "mighty instrument for victory" and one of the "growing monuments to the boldness, imagination and effective statesmanship of Franklin Roosevelt."

"Lend-lease," he said, "will be carried on until the unconditional surrender or complete defeat of Germany and Japan."

Witnesses Of Signing

The signing was witnessed by Secretary of State Stettinius, Chairman Connally (D., Texas) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Chairman Bloom (D., N.Y.), of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representative Eaton (R., N.J.).

The bill, extending lend-lease aid to the United Nations an additional twelve months from June 30, was signed after the President had conferred briefly with delegates to the forthcoming United Nations conference at San Francisco.

Stettinius and the congressional delegates remained over to watch Mr. Truman approve the lend-lease legislation.

Signed As Vice-President

The occasion was historic for several reasons. Among others, it was the first time White House attachés could recall in which a President has signed a bill which he previously had signed as Vice President and presiding officer of the Senate.

It was the same measure on which Truman voted as Vice President, after the Senate had rejected by a 39-39 tie vote an amendment by Senator Taft (R., Ohio) to place new restrictions on the postwar use of lend-lease materials. The Vice President cast his vote with the opposition.

"Somebody Stole It"

The occasion was not without its humorous aspects. After photographers and reporters had been called in for the signing it was discovered that the bill had not yet arrived at the President's office.

After waiting about five minutes, the President remarked with a wry smile:

"Somebody stole the bill."

An attaché rushed it in a short while later, however.

When the ceremony started, it was noted the President had only five pens to be distributed among the seven officials who witnessed the event. A search of near-by stenographers' offices yielded two more pens.

At one point during the wait President Truman remarked:

"I've got so much work to do I don't know which way to turn."

"I thought it was a cinch after being a senator," Senator Vandenberg remarked.

Foreign Economics Administrator Leo Crowley and Oscar Cox, deputy foreign economics administrator, also witnessed the signing.

House Group Approves 25-Billion Navy Bill

APR 18 1945

Washington, April 17 (AP)—A $24,879,510,564 supply bill to support the Navy's knockout drive against Japan won House Appropriations Committee approval today. It will finance operations for the year starting July 1.

With it, the committee sent to the House floor a formal report voicing hope "the end may not be far distant" and explaining that the large outlay was necessary because "we can ill afford to proceed on hopes or assumptions."

The total in the bill—$23,400,502,133 in new appropriations and the balance in contract authority and reappropriations—was $6,903,560,155 less than was made available to the Navy during the current fiscal year. A large part of the present fund, however, will not be obligated until the new fiscal year starts.

Total Of 105 Billion

It boosts to $105,611,276,729 the cash Congress has voted the Navy since July 1, 1940.

To justify the latest outlay, the committee called to the attention of Congress this statement made to it by Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King during hearings on the bill:

"We cannot show our full offensive strength against Japan unless it can be adequately supported. That means a full pipe line from the plants on the continent to ships at sea off the Japanese coast; a pipeline that is kept full until the final defeat of Japan. . . . Most certainly we dare not plan to fire our last bullet on the day of victory."

Surpluses After War

"Full pipelines," the committee commented, will mean surpluses after the war. It added that a regulated check on inventories will hold them to a minimum.

Large individual cash items in the bill included $7,297,119,126 for naval personnel; $7,133,347,800 for fleet support and operation; $2,481,050,000 for naval aviation; $2,870,000,000 for ship construction, and $1,739,231,400 for public works.

Part of the construction fund will be used for 308 combat vessels, including 2 big battleships, 2 45,000-ton carriers and 12 escort carriers.

Ship Berthing Facilities

A small but significant allotment was $20,000,000 to start work on facilities for the berthing of inactive ships after the war. Admiral F. J. Horne, vice chief of naval operations, told the committee of tentative plans for postwar retention of 1,191 combat ships and 4,639 auxiliaries and smaller craft, in addition to thousands of non-combat vessels.

Ships properly laid up and kept in condition, Horne told the committee, can be used for active service for as long as 50 or 60 years, possibly longer.

Except for twelve combatant units expected to be completed in 1947, the committee said, the calendar year 1946 will see the navy's gigantic combat ship construction program completed.

Public Works Budget Cut

The committee cut a large chunk, $134,004,211, from the budget estimates of $422,102,624 for Navy public works projects within the continental United States, but allowed the full estimate of $986,000,000 for advance-base projects.

It restricted the travel and transportation fund, commenting that "there is just too much travel being performed; travel which is not essential or contributory to the war effort," and called for a curtailment of "white-collar and service personnel." To effect hte latter recommendation, it voted a limit of 17,000 on civilian personnel that may be employed by the Navy in Washington. The present budget ceiling is 20,000.

Against Use Of Private Firm

The committe also assailed a proposal to employ Pan-American Airways to operate air transport service between San Francisco and Hawaii at a cost of $15,100,000, the Navy to furnish planes and equipment.

"It is a sad commentary upon our vast pilot training program if the Navy has to rely upon a private concern to pilot a few planes between San Francisco and Honolulu," the committee said.

It cut the item to $5,000,000 "solely to allow sufficient time for the Navy to prepare to operate the service itself."

Suicide Of Nazi Woman Reported

New York, April 17 (AP)—The Zurich correspondent of the London News Chronicle said today that Frau Gertrud Scholz-Klink, leader of the Frauenschaft (Nazi Women's League), had committed suicide at Konstanz, near the German-Swiss frontier. The dispatch was reported to the Office of War Information. There has been no confirmation from other sources.

Frau Scholz-Klink, an ardent Nazi party member, was director of the national training school for women leaders established by the party at Hohenfels Castle in Coburg, which now is in American 3d Army hands.

Ex-German Officers Reported Fighting Nazis

New York, April 17 (AP)—Among Red Army parachutists which Berlin reported were dropped behind German lines in the capital's defense ring were "officers of von Paulus's army in German uniforms," a special Berlin correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Stockholms Tidningen said today.

Gen. Friedrich von Paulus is the German general captured at Stalingrad who is now a prominent member of the Union of German Officers in Moscow which has engaged in anti-Hitler propaganda.

The dispatch, which was reported to the OWI, said these parachutists caused "great confusion among the defenders."

Adolf Hitler warned yesterday, in an order of the day, against Germans fighting for the Russians, and said they might even be in German uniforms.

Basil O'Connor To Form Memorial Committee

New York, April 17 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today approved plans to create a memorial President Roosevelt.

Basil O'Connor, friend and former law partner of the late Chief Executive, said Mrs. Roosevelt had asked hi mto form a committee for the purpose of selecting the memorial.

The committee will be comprised of men and women who were friends of the late President and familiar with his activities and ideals, O'Connor said.

The minister, enroute to the San Francisco conference, said the gift was part of an interchange made between the heads of the states. He did not know the type of plane given to the king.

Mrs. Roosevelt Resun[illegible] Column, Asking Unity

APR 18 1945

New York, April 17 (AP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today resumed her column, "My Day," in which she said, "When you have lived for a long time in close contact with the loss and grief which today pervades the world, any personal sorrow seems to be lost in the general sadness of humanity."

The column, copyrighted by United Feature Syndicate, was interrupted by the death of President Roosevelt last Thursday.

"There is only one way in which those of us who live can repay the dead who have given their utmost for the cause of liberty and justice," Mrs. Roosevelt wrote. "They died in the hope that, through their sacrifice, an enduring peace would be built and a more just world would emerge for humanity."

"Any man in public life is bound, in the course of years, to create certain enmities," she added. "But when he is gone, his main objectives stand out clearly and one may hope that a spirit of unity may arouse the people and their leaders to a complete understanding of his objectives and a determination to achieve those objectives themselves."

TRUMAN CHOOSES SNYDER AS HEAD OF LOAN AGENCIES

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP) President Truman today chose an old friend, John W. Snyder, St. Louis banker, for federal loan administrator. It is his first major appointment.

Congressional reaction to the nomination was prompt and favorable and Jesse Jones, former loan administrator, said the President "could not have made a better appointment."

Will Replace Vinson

The 48-year-old Arkansas native would take the place vacated by Fred M. Vinson when he was named director of War Mobilization recently.

Synder, like the president an artillery captain in the last war and vice-president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, has known Truman a quarter century.

From 1937 to 1940 he managed the St. Louis agency of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and in 1940 became executive vice-president of the agency, director of the Defense Plant corporation and assistant to the RFC director. He has held his present bank post since Jan. 1, 1943.

Senator Wagner (D-NY), chairman of the Banking committee which will consider the nomination probably next Tuesday, told reporters he became acquainted with Snyder when he was an official of the DPC and considers him "a very able administrator."

"The president has selected him and I should think the committee will report his nomination favorably to the Senate," Wagner said.

Senator Briggs Pleased

Senator Briggs (D-Mo) said: "John Snyder is 100 per cent." Appearing highly pleased with the appointment, he said he had known Snyder 10 or 12 years and considers him admirably suited to the job.

Chairman George (D-Ga) of the Senate Finance committee told reporters Snyder has "good business experience and is well qualified for the job." George commented that Snyder represents " a conservatively liberal viewpoint.

Senator Guffey (D-Pa), one of the group which had urged President Roosevelt to name "liberals" to appointive places, said he was satisfied with Snyder, who is regarded as closer to the Jesse Jones school of thought than to the Henry A. Wallace school.

"Mr. Snyder is from Missouri and he is the President's personal friend," Guffey said. "I don't think any question will be raised about him."

Senator Donnell (R-Mo) said he knew Snyder as a man of standing in his community and knew of no present objections to him. However, Donnell said he would make inquiries about the appointee.

Rejected, Truman Now Commands Whole Army

[This is the second of a series of dispatches on the life of President Truman. The writer, George K. Wallace, is a veteran political writer of the Kansas City Star and has known the new President intimately since his entry into politics.]

By George K. Wallace

Independence, Mo., April 17 (AP). Three great loves have influenced and guided President Truman's life since before the turn of the century — affection for family and friends, for military life and for politics—and the military influence was as strong for twenty years in the middle part of his life as politics have been later.

President Truman, if he had had his way, would be a colonel of artillery in Europe or the Pacific today, instead of Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the United States.

For, with the coming of World War II, Harry S. Truman got out his old World War I uniform and tried it on. It fitted as well as it always had, and Truman tried valiantly to enter again the service in which he had served actively and inactively for 36 years. But he was 56 years old, a Senator in Washington, and not considered longer able physically to serve.

Watched Expenditures

Rejected, Truman decided that the next best thing he could do was to watch as closely as possible the Government expenditures in the war effort, to be sure money wasn't being wasted. Economy and value in Government spending always had been his pet theory, and fifteen years earlier he had nearly worn out Kansas City luncheon clubs expounding this theory at any and all opportunities.

Remembering some of the exposures of graft that followed the first conflict, Truman said:

"It doesn't do any good digging up dead horses after the war is over like the last time. The thing to do is dig this stuff up now and correct it. If we run this war program efficiently, there won't be any opportunity for someone to stir up a lot of investigations after the war, and cause a wave of revulsion that will start this country on the road to unpreparedness after the war is over."

Brought Committee Into Being

Truman sponsored a resolution to set up a committee to check on war expenditures. The Senate approved, but cut the appropriation to $15,000 and handed Truman the chairmanship because it was his idea.

Truman took that routine committee chairmanship and, by hard work, intelligence and luck, ran it out to the Presidency.

Truman's interest in military affairs began somewhere about 1898 —probably inspired by the Spanish-American conflict while Truman was a sophomore in the Independence High School. Truman was an avid reader and read everything he could find on military subjects. His greatest hero was Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Truman joined the Missouri National Guard in 1905 when he was 21 years old. He was assigned to Battery B as a buck private, and for ten years Truman served there while helping his father run the family farm.

When World War I came, Truman helped to organize the 2d Missouri Field Artillery, which became the 129th Field Artillery of the 35th Division when mobilized on the United States' entry into the war.

Gets Gold Bar

Truman took officers' training at Camp Doniphan and was graduated as a second lieutenant. In France a few months later, he entered another officers' school, won his captaincy and was assigned to command of Battery D of the 129th.

Harry Truman performed some feats with his battery that old line experts hardly could believe. Judge Albert A. Ridge, who served with him, now says: "I saw him calculate firing data in his mind faster than some officers could do with instruments. He was a wonder.

"Once in the Vosges Mountains in Alsace, Battery D was ordered to fire gas barrages. The Germans opened up and shells began cracking all around. Truman stood in the open giving commands, he didn't know the meaning of fear."

Loaned Men Money

"Truman slept in the same mud and ate out of the same pots and pans that we did," Eugene P. Donnelly, now Jackson County Public Administrator, recalls. "When his men started on leave Truman would call them individually and ask them how they were fixed financially. If they were short Truman would lend them 250 francs personally."

"Truman was a stern disciplinarian," Donnelly says, and Judge Ridge adds, "he didn't hesitate to send us to the guardhouse. That fellow had humility, but not from timidity. It rather was from a realization of his obligations.

"He'll never go high hat," both men agree today. "He's smart enough to know he's a little man who will seek all the best advice he can get. Mothers of service men will know there's a man in the White House who knows what it is to fight and be a soldier."

Level Headed, Says Associate

"Harry always had a level head," Edward Jacobson, another who served under Truman in France and later a business associate, says. "At Doniphan he was appointed regimental canteen officer and his canteen was the only one in the 35th Division that functioned completely smoothly. Harry was cited for this work."

Truman barely got into the Army because of his eyes, another associate recalls:

"He wanted so much to get in that he persuaded the examining sergeant to whisper the letters to him as he looked at a chart. He passed, and later, facing another examination, he succeeded in signing a waiver."

Mustered Out A Major

Truman was mustered out a major May 6, 1919, and returned to Independence. Soon afterward he entered the Field Artillery Reserve as a colonel and still holds his rank. He sought active duty under this rank after World War I broke out.

Truman helped organize and became head of the Battery D organization which meets annually. He has attended almost every reunion and his old battery mates are his closest friends, personally and in politics. Some of them eventually will show up in Washington as counsellors and friends.

The constitutional and military history of the United States today are his favorite studies. He is even yet an ardent amateur military strategist and, as President Roosevelt took great interest in his old first love—the Navy—so President Truman likely always will be close to the Army, and particularly the field artillery, whose song he plays and sings with his buddies on any appropriate occasion.

HOOVER DEMANDS SECURITY CHARTER DEFINE AGGRESSOR

PHILADELPHIA, April 17. — (AP) Herbert Hoover said tonight the San Francisco charter should agree upon a definition of aggression "to include direct or indirect subsidized governmental propaganda in other nations."

In an address prepared for a meeting of the foreign policy association here, broadcast by NBC, the former President declared:

"Aggression in this world is not confined to the old-fashioned threats or to military action or even to economic pressures. Our experience with the Nazis who infiltrated their poisonous propaganda and fifth columns into the lands of peaceful neighbors should indicate that there is a new form of aggression in the world.

"Therefore the San Francisco charter should agree upon a definition of aggression to include direct or indirect subsidized governmental propaganda in other nations. The enforcement of such a provision would help cure that cause of wars which grows out of crusading faith, political or otherwise."

Urging that "fundamental political rights" of the men and nations be guaranteed in the charter, Hoover said:

"Americans must face brutal facts. As the result of this war the area of human freedom will shrink by whole nations. It is shrinking in many nations. Are we going to dodge these issues at San Francisco?"

He also recommended that the security council control military alliances, which he said "make for balances of power," and urged that "Senator Vandenberg's proposal that the assembly be given freedom of initiative be adopted."

In addition, he continued, "we should provide for peaceful revision of onerous treaties between nations at, say, 10 year intervals," inasmuch as if we "attempt to freeze the world again, it will explode again."

"The aggressor will again be anyone who violates the then existing situation," he declared. "Thus the world organization and thus the American people automatically become the guarantor of a new status quo."

Hoover opened his speech with a tribute to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I know I express the sorrow of the American people that Mr. Roosevelt was not spared to guide the San Francisco conference," he said. "The problems remain and we must carry on. In this spirit President Truman has announced that the conference will proceed as planned. And it becomes our duty to give every support to President Truman in his gigantic task."

Wainwright's Wife Believes

Skaneateles, N.Y., April 17 (AP)— Mrs. Jonathan M. Wainwright said today that the text of a message reported by Tokyo to be from her husband, Lieutenant General Wainwright, who was taken prisoner at Corregidor, had convinced her that the message was authentic.

Mrs. Wainwright said the text, transmitted by the War Department, referred to a friend by his nickname. Previously she had said she doubted authenticity of the message, because it also was reported to be addressed to "relatives in Dallas, Texas." She said the General had no relatives there.

The text:

"I am well and comfortably housed. Please inform all the family and Jimmy. Wire Mrs. Osborn, of Paris, Texas, that her brother is well."

Mrs. Wainwright, who said this was the first word received from her husband since August, explained that "Jimmy" referred to Adjt. Gen. James A. Ulio, associated with her husband in the Philippines, and that the brother of Mrs. Osborn was a "Sergeant Carroll," who was the General's orderly.

Prisoners at Roosevelt Mass

ATTICA, N. Y., April 17 (AP).— German prisoners of war voluntarily attended a memorial mass for President Roosevelt Sunday at the Attica internment camp. The Rev. Peter L. Mellerski, camp chaplain, said the Germans unanimously agreed to participate, although they were told they had the right to refuse. The prisoners responded to prayers offered by the Rev. Peter Ebner, of St. Mary's Church, Buffalo, who officiated at the mass, which was conducted in German.

Captive Germans Wait On Yanks

Fort Sheridan, Ill., April 17 (AP). A steak dinner served by German prisoners of war, and a full night's sleep in bunks made up by the prisoners, were the United States Army's offering last night to 176 American soldiers repatriated from Nazi prison camps.

The 37 officers and 139 enlisted men from Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Minnesota were among the first large contingent of repatriated prisoners brought back to America.

They were to leave the fort today for twenty-one-day furloughs, after which they will be sent to rest camps at Miami Beach, Fla., or Atlantic City, N.J.

Fort officials said there were no men in need of hospital care, although several wore the Purple Heart. Generally healthy in appearance, the soldiers said they had had opportunity to gain back most of the weight that imprisonment had taken from them. Some had lost 50 pounds.

The officers were held at Oflag 64, Shubin, Poland, 85 miles south of Danzig. The enlisted men are from Stalag 3-C, near Kuestrin, Germany. Some had escaped, but most were liberated in the Russian advance.

In the group were 64 men from Illinois, 54 from Michigan, 19 from Wisconsin, two from Indiana and one from Minnesota. Time spent in the prison camps ranged from 30 days to two years.

Reports on their treatment varied from "not so good" and "fair" to "very well."

Auto Industry Aided by W.P.B. On Conversion

May Spend 35 Millions for New Plants, 40 Millions to Recast Equipment

DETROIT, April 17 (AP).—The nation's automobile companies have been authorized to spend $35,000,000 for the construction of new plants and additions and $40,000,000 for the rehabilitation of tools, equipment and certain other facilities that will be needed when civilian passenger-car production is resumed.

This was announced today by the Detroit regional office of the War Production Board, which said that an AA-3 priority rating, immediately behind that of military orders, has been given the projects.

J. A. Krug, W. P. B. chairman, disclosed last week that the auto industry had been authorized to order $50,000,000 worth of machine tools for civilian passenger-car production. The tools in this program will require from three to seven months for fabrication.

The newest authorizations—the most important steps yet taken looking to the reconversion of the automobile industry—follow a meeting Mr. Krug held here a fortnight ago with executive heads of virtually every automobile company.

Mr. Krug announced at that time the appointment of Henry P. Nelson, of the W. P. B. staff, to aid the car industry in its reconversion problems. Mr. Nelson has scheduled two meetings here tomorrow with industry heads following a conference with Mr. Krug in Washington. It is expected the meetings will have to do with the questions of obtaining machine tools, materials and metals to produce new passenger cars.

Industry authorities have emphasized that no date has been decided upon for resumption of car production, suspended since February, 1942. They have emphasized, however, that months of delay could be avoided by preliminary planning that would not interfere with the war effort.

It has been authoritatively estimated that from ten weeks to six months will be required to get passenger-car assembly lines back into production after W. P. B. authorization is given. About a year will be needed to attain a volume production level—a rate of not less than 2,000,000 units a year.

JAPS SAY TRUMAN AIMS UNWORKABLE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 17—(AP) Domei, the Japanese news agency expressed doubt today on whether President Harry S. Truman would be able to put into effect the "laudable ideals" he expressed in his first speech on democratic aims.

In the first Axis comment on Mr. Truman's presidential address before Congress yesterday, Domei repeated the old Japanese plaint that President Roosevelt had started the war by not "showing tolerance" for Japan, and added that Mr. Truman has been left "holding the bag."

The Singapore-dated dispatch, broadcast in English and heard by the Federal Communications commission, asked the question "can Truman himself put into practice his laudable ideals?" and then answered:

"Probably not, because in democracies of the Anglo-American type, the style of even the highest statesman is often cramped by forces and institutions bigger than himself."

Domei said that despite lip service to tolerance and world peace America is "irrevocably committed to the policy of brute force," but stand "resolutely in her path of aggression."

Tokyo radio said Emperor Hirhito had "donated 10,000,000 yen about $2,400,000 at prewar exchange rate, to aid the "increasing number" of Japanese victims of American Superfortress raids.

Domei quoted the Emperor as admitting the war situation "is extremely grave" and that "enemy raids on our empire and his invasion of our possessions in the empire are being intensified."

HE GAVE NO DETAILS. IT WAS UNCERTAIN WHETHER THE BROADCAST MEANT THAT AMERICAN AND RUSSIAN FORCES ACTUALLY HAD JOINED IN EASTERN GERMANY, OR THAT THE THIRD ARMY HAD INVADED CZECHOSLOVAKIA. THE AMERICANS WERE SIX MILES FROM THE REPUBLIC HOURS AGO AND REACHING ITS BORDERS WOULD DIVIDE GERMANY GEOGRAPHICALLY, ALTHOUGH NOT STRATEGICALLY.

NIGHT LEAD COMMONS-POLISH

BY ALEX SINGLETON

LONDON, APRIL 17-(AP)-CONCERNED LEST DEBATE INTERFERE WITH THE HARMONY OF THE COMING TALKS OF THE FOREIGN SECRETARIES OF THE UNITED STATES, BRITAIN AND RUSSIA, PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL TODAY CANCELLED PLANS FOR A WAR REVIEW THURSDAY IN WHICH HE HAD BEEN EXPECTED TO DISCUSS THE POLISH SITUATION.

"SERIOUS CHANGES IN THE WORLD POSITION HAVE TAKEN PLACE SINCE THE ORDER OF BUSINESS WAS PLANNED," HE TOLD COMMONS.

"AND NOW THAT THE FOREIGN SECRETARIES OF RUSSIA, BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES WILL HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY OF MEETING, WHICH HAD BEEN GREATLY NEEDED SINCE WE LEFT YALTA, I SHOULD NOT LIKE TO PLUNGE INTO DISCUSSIONS WHICH MAY IN ANY WAY IMPAIR PROSPECTS OF DEFINITE IMPROVEMENT IN REGARD TO THE VARIOUS SUBJECTS WHICH WERE DISCUSSED AT YALTA AND HAVE NOT YET REACHED THEIR FULL FRUITION."

CHURCHILL DID NOT ELABORATE ON THE NATURE OF THE "SERIOUS CHANGES" BUT FOREIGN SECRETARY EDEN ALREADY IS IN WASHINGTON, HIS TRIP TO THE UNITED STATES ADVANCED BY THE DEATH OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT. RUSSIA, AS A RESULT OF A DIRECT APPEAL BY PRESIDENT TRUMAN, HAS REVERSED HER PREVIOUS POSITION AND DECIDED TO SEND FOREIGN COMMISSAR VYACHESLAV MOLOTOV TO THE SAN FRANCISCO WORLD SECURITY CONFERENCE.

RUSSIA REITERATED THE STRONG FEELING THE KREMLIN HAS FOR THE INCLUSION OF THE WARSAW POLISH PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT IN THE SAN FRANCISCO CONFERENCE IN AN OFFICIAL STATEMENT ISSUED TODAY BY THE TASS NEWS AGENCY, WHICH SAID THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT STILL EARNESTLY HOPED THAT SOME LAST-MINUTE AGREEMENT WOULD BE WORKED OUT WHEREBY THE POLES WOULD BE INVITED.

TASS SAID IT SHOULD BE EMPHASIZED THAT THE SOVIETS AS WELL AS THE POLES FELT VERY DEEPLY ON THE LACK OF POLISH REPRESENTATION AND THEY WERE CONVINCED THE ALLIES DID NOT CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THE POLISH POSITION.

WITH THE 34TH INFANTRY DIVISION ATTACKING TOWARD BOLOGNA, APRIL 17 -(AP)-"THE CHURCH" WAS CAPTURED BY STORM YESTERDAY.

IT IS ONLY A SMALL HILLSIDE SHRINE WITH AN ATTACHED GRAVEYARD AT THE FORK OF ITALIAN MOUNTAIN TRAILS ABOUT 850 YARDS NORTHEAST OF MONTE BELMONTE. MAP READERS CALL IT GORGOGNANO CHURCH BECAUSE IT IS JUST A SHORT CLIMB FROM THE VILLAGE OF GORGOGNANO.

IT IS SIMPLY "THE CHURCH" TO THE U.S. FIFTH ARMY INFANTRYMEN WHO HAD BEEN HOLDING DOWN THIS STATIC SECTOR EAST OF HIGHWAY 65 ALL WINTER.

RIFLEMEN DUG THE GERMANS OUT OF CONCRETE PILLBOXES BUILT UNDER THE PILES OF ROCKS THAT USED TO BE THE SHRINE AND FROM MACHINEGUN POSTS THE NAZIS HAD SET UP IN THE GRAVEYARD.

THE ADVANCE MARKED THE 34TH INFANTRY DIVISION'S 500TH DAY IN THE LINE. THE GERMANS PLACED THE SHRINE UNDER MORTAR FIRE AFTER THEY LOST IT.

TWO COMPANIES UNDER LT. ROBERT ARMSTRONG OF 850 EAST 31ST STREET, BROOKLYN, N.Y., AND LT. LEO GOLDBERG OF 590 LEGGETT AVENUE, THE BRONX, N.Y., WERE ASSIGNED TO TAKE "THE CHURCH."

AN HOUR AND FIVE MINUTES AFTER THE JUMPOFF AT 3 A.M., ARMSTRONG'S COMPANY WHICH SPEARHEADED THE ATTACK OCCUPIED "THE CHURCH" FROM THE SOUTH SIDE. THE COMPANY LOG SAID. TANKS ACCOMPANIED THIS FORCE, BUT GERMAN ENGINEERS BLEW A CHARGE BLOCKING THE NARROW TRAIL SO THAT THE ARMOR COULD NOT GET THROUGH. THE INFANTRY HAD TO GO IN ALONE.

THE NEXT ENTRY IN THE LOG AT 7 A.M. SAID SIMPLY: "SEVENTEEN CASUALTIES; MORTAR AND SMALL ARMS FIRE; PULLED OFF."

COMPANIES I AND L EACH SENT IN A PLATOON FOR ANOTHER TRY AT NOON. THE PLATOON FROM COMPANY L WAS PINNED DOWN BY VICIOUS MORTAR FIRE AND THE OUTFIT FROM COMPANY I WENT AT IT ALONE. AGAIN THE INFANTRY GOT INTO THE RUBBLE OF THE SHRINE, BUT WAS ORDERED OUT.

FOUR MEN DID NOT WITHDRAW WITH THE REST. THEY ELECTED TO TAKE ON ALL THE DUG-IN GERMANS ON THEIR OWN. BUT IT GOT TOO HOT FOR THEM.

THEN AT 1:40 P.M. ELEMENTS OF BOTH COMPANIES WENT IN AND FINISHED UP THE JOB. THEY TOOK SOME PRISONERS. A FEW GERMANS GOT AWAY. MOST OF THE GERMANS WERE DEAD.

NUERNBERG, IN FACT, HAD BEEN SELECTED AS THE RALLY CITY SIX YEARS BEFORE HITLER CAME INTO HIS OWN. IN THE DAYS BEFORE HIS RULE THE NAZIS CONVENED ONLY EVERY OTHER YEAR. APR 18 1945

THEY MET IN NUERNBERG IN 1927, 1929, AND 1931 AS A PARTY OUTLAWED IN MANY GERMAN STATES, NOTABLY PRUSSIA, BUT PERMITTED IN BAVARIA.

WITH THEIR SEIZURE OF POWER THE NAZIS GAVE FLAMBOYANT EPITHETS TO THEIR ANNUAL NUERNBERG RALLIES. THE OFFICIAL NOMENCLATURE FOLLOWS:

HIGHLIGHTS OF THEIR ANNUAL PARTY RALLIES WERE: APR 18 1945

FIRST, HITLER'S PROCLAMATION AT THE OPENING WHEREIN INSTRUCTIONS WERE ISSUED FOR ALL MEMBERS AND FOLLOWERS ON WHAT TO DO IN THE ENSUING YEAR; SECOND, HIS ADDRESS ON "KULTUR" IN WHICH HE RIDICULED EVERY ART TENDENCY THAT DID NOT SUIT HIM, RANTED AT "THE JEWISH CONCEPTION OF ART," AND DERIDED WHAT HE CALLED BOLSHEVISM IN ART.

THE THIRD RALLY WAS MARKED BY THE GATHERING OF 100,000 "LITTLE HITLERS," MEANING REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PARTY THROUGHOUT THE REICH, FROM VILLAGE TO WHOLE PROVINCE. THIS MEETING WAS HIGHLY THEATRICAL, WITH SEARCHLIGHTS AROUND THE ENTIRE PERIMETER OF THE HUGE STADIUM POINTED UPWARDS IN SUCH A MANNER AS TO GIVE THE IMPRESSION OF A GOTHIC CATHEDRAL OF LIGHT.

WITH THE CANADIAN FIRST ARMY, APRIL 16-(AP)-CANADIAN ARMOR, STREAKING DUE NORTHWEST, ARE WITHIN 10 MILES OF THE SOUTHERN ZUIDER ZEE TONIGHT AND BETWEEN THEM AND THE ISSEL RIVER ARE ELEMENTS OF FOUR GERMAN DIVISIONS.

IN NORTHEAST HOLLAND, A HARD-FIGHTING GERMAN MARINE BATTALION HOLDING OUT IN GRONINGEN SUDDENLY CAPITULATED AND TURNED OVER THE CITY OF 150,000 TO THE VETERAN SECOND DIVISION, PRACTICALLY COMPLETING THE LIBERATION OF THIS NORTHERN PART OF HOLLAND. APR 18 1945

THE DRIVE TOWARD THE SOUTHERN ZUIDER ZEE, WHICH MIGHT SHORTEN THE BATTLE OF WEST HOLLAND BY WEEKS, CAME SUDDENLY FROM THE ARNHEM AREA AND REACHED A POINT SEVEN MILES FROM AMERSFOORT.

THE GERMANS WERE SO BUSILY FIGHTING ALONG HIGH GROUND LINE FROM APELDOORN SOUTH THAT THEY APPARENTLY WERE UNPREPARED FOR THIS PUSH THROUGH THE LOWLANDS AND NOW THE ENEMY'S 25TH ARMY COMMAND

IS FACED WITH THIS STERN DECISION:

APR 18 1945

SHALL IT LEAVE THE 10,000 OR SO GERMAN TROOPS IN THE APELDOORN AREA TO THEIR FATE AND FLOOD THE PATH OF THE CANADIAN ARMY PRESSING TOWARD AMERSFOORT, AMSTERDAM AND UTRECHT, OR SHALL IT SEND FORCES TO TRY TO HOLD OPEN THE 10-MILE-WIDE CORRIDOR SO THESE DIVISIONS CAN FALL BACK SOUTHWEST TOWARD THOSE BIG CITIES.

THE DECISION CANNOT BE DELAYED FOR MORE THAN A FEW HOURS, FOR AT LAST REPORTS CANADIAN ARMOR WAS ONLY A MILE EAST OF BARNEVELD AND BUT FOUR MILES FROM THE BROAD AMERSFOORT-APELDOORN HIGHWAY.

FURTHERMORE, THE BRITISH INFANTRY WHICH CAPTURED ARNHEM NOW HAD LINKED UP WITH CANADIAN TROOPS FIVE MILES NORTH OF ARNHEM, GIVING GEN. H.D.G. CRERAR'S CANADIAN FIRST ARMY CONTINUOUS COMMUNICATION ROUTES FROM THERE THROUGH NORTHEAST HOLLAND AND INTO GERMANY.

APR 18 1945

THE FORMAL SURRENDER OF GRONINGEN CAME AS A SURPRISE, [redacted] ALTHOUGH THE GARRISON HAD BEEN CUT OFF FROM ESCAPE. NORTHEAST HOLLAND NOW HOLDS NO ENEMY OTHER THAN SMALL POCKETS WHICH ARE BEING MOPPED UP.

ON THE NORTHEAST CORNER OF THE FRONT, CANADIAN ARMOR WAS HELD UP ON THE KUSTEN CANAL 12 MILES SOUTHWEST OF OLDENBURG BY FIERCE RESISTANCE.

POLES ALSO WERE HELD TO A STANDSTILL AT THE CONFLUENCE OF THE KUSTEN CANAL AND THE EMS RIVER, ALTHOUGH THEY BROADENED THEIR HOLD ON THE EMS ESTUARY OPPOSITE EMDEN BY FIVE MILES.

Then you ran into another character at Crailsheim where the American 10th armored division bumped the Germans out last Friday night, surprising quite a number of possibly prominent Germans civilians and Frau Marie Wohlmann, who used to be Marie Rahn, whose parents still live at 107 Maple Ave., Ithaca, N.Y.

Georgia James talked freely and tried hard to make it clear that she didn't like Hitler. Now Marie Rahn talked unwillingly.

Both married Germans for love and came back to Germany for love. Georgia James wants to return and is take her husband with her, if she can. Marie Rahn is not so sure.

Marie Rahn was born at Elbing, Germany, and went to the United States in 1927, and attended Cornell university in 1937. In 1938 she came back to Germany to marry Wohlmann and lived at Hamburg

She said she didn't know where her husband is, but that he may be on the Eastern front.

She said it would be a shame "lot of trap (correct) if this story appears in the New York Times." She added that she was NOT

FEARING THE APPROACH OF THE AMERICAN NINTH ARMY--WHICH HAD ALREADY BYPASSED THEM TO HIT THE ELBE--THE GERMANS REMOVED THE PRISONERS FROM MIESTE THURSDAY. THEY WERE BROUGHT TO GARDELEGEN, 25 MILES NORTH OF MAGDEBURG, FRIDAY NIGHT.

"WE DIDN'T THINK ANYTHING OUT OF THE ORDINARY IN BEING MARCHED INTO A LARGE BUILDING," ONE OF THE SURVIVORS SAID. "WE HAD WALKED INTO BUILDINGS JUST LIKE IT MANY TIMES BEFORE.

"WE BEAT OUT THE FLAMES SOON AFTER THE HITLER YOUTH WHO HAD BEEN LEFT TO GUARD US STARTED THE FIRE, BUT THEN THE ONES WHO HAD BEEN LEFT TO GUARD THE DOORS WITH MACHINEGUNS FIRED TRACER BULLETS INTO THE BUILDING, SETTING IT AFLAME AGAIN."

HOW ANYONE ESCAPED WAS HARD TO SAY. ALL THIS PARTICULAR SURVIVOR, A FRENCHMAN, KNEW WAS THAT HE SCRATCHED AND CRAWLED OVER THE BODIES OF THE LIVING, AND DYING AND THE DEAD UNTIL FRESH AIR HIT HIS LUNGS. THEN HE HID IN A WOODS UNTIL MORNING.

ABOARD A U.S.HOSPITAL SHIP, FEB 21-(AP)-(DELAYED)-MARINES ARE VERY TOUGH--EVEN WHEN THEY HAVE SHRAPNEL IN THEM. THERE'S NO WHIMPERING BOARD THIS HOSPITAL SHIP WITH ITS WOUNDED FROM THE BLOODY BATTLE OF IWO JIMA.

MANY ARE NOT BADLY INJURED. ONE GROUP OF IWO JIMA VETERANS, ALL OF WHOM SUFFERED BUT SLIGHT WOUNDS, GOT TOGETHER ON THE SHIP'S DECKS TODAY TO COMPARE TALES OF THEIR LUCKY ESCAPES.

"THOSE JAPS ACTED LIKE A DUNCH OF DOGGONE FOOLS," SAID PFC. JAMES MORAN, 22, OF (1220 PARK) INDIANAPOLIS.

MORAN WAS BUSY TOSSING GRENADES INTO JAPANESE PILLBOXES WHEN HE RECEIVED A SLIGHT LEG WOUND FROM SHRAPNEL.

"WE'D TOSS IN A FEW GRENADES AND OUT WOULD COME THOSE DOGGONE JAPS IN A FRANTIC CHARGE. THEN WE'D REALLY LET THEM HAVE IT," HE SAID.

SGT.JAMES D.SCROGGINS, 25, EL CERRITO, CALIF., COWBOY BEFORE HE JOINED THE MARINES, SAID HE'D LEARNED ONE THING, IF NOTHING ELSE, ON IWO JIMA. THAT WAS HOW TO DIG A FOXHOLE--FAST.

"TO SAY THAT I WAS SLIGHTLY SCARED IS PUTTING IT MILDLY," HE ADMITTED. "I DUCKED INTO A SHELL HOLE JUST IN TIME. ALL I GOT OUT OF IT WAS A VERY SMALL SHRAPNEL WOUND IN MY LEG."

CPL. LEROY CLINE, 21, LENOIR CITY, TENN., WHO RECEIVED A SLIGHT CONCUSSION FROM A CLOSE-RANGE EXPLOSION, WAS SITTING ON THE EDGE OF HIS FOX HOLE WHEN A TANK RAN OVER A LAND MINE.

"AND HERE I AM," HE GRINNED.

EDWIN R.RANDALL, 19, ST.JOSEPH, MICH., WAS MORE INTERESTED IN HIS FAINT, TWO-WEEK-OLD MOUSTACHE THAN HE WAS IN THE SHRAPNEL THAT HIT HIS LEFT CHEEK.

"THE SHRAPNEL DOESN'T AMOUNT TO MUCH, BUT I'VE GOT HIGH HOPES FOR MY MOUSTACHE," HE SAID.

PVT.SAMUEL SOLDANO, 21, OF (241 ELLERY) BROOKLYN, SAID HE DIDN'T KNOW HE'D BEEN WOUNDED, EVEN WHEN AN OFFICER TOLD HIM TO GO TO A MEDICAL AID STATION. HE WAS HIT IN THE LEG WITH "A VERY SMALL PIECE OF SHRAPNEL, ONLY ABOUT THE SIZE OF A DIME."

PFC.JOHN MILLS, 3720 62D ST., LONG ISLAND, N.Y., THINKS THE NEW YORK YANKEES SHOULD TRY IWO JIMA NEXT TIME THEY START SCOUTING FOR A NEW PITCHING STAFF.

"THERE WE WERE FLUSHING JAPS OUT OF THEIR PILLBOXES WHEN ALL OF A SUDDEN THIS FELLOW REARS UP WITH HIS GRENADE AND LETS FLY AND I'VE NEVER SEEN SUCH A GOOD HEAVE. ALL I GOT WAS A LITTLE NICK IN MY SHOULDER."

PFC.ARTHUR H.MEYER, 332 DIXIE HIGHWAY, ERLANGER, KY., FIGURES HE'S VERY LUCKY.

"A PIECE OF SHRAPNEL JUST BARELY NICKED MY NOSE AND RIGHT ARM," HE SAID. "ONLY THING THAT BURNS ME UP IS THAT I LOST THE PICTURES OF MY WIFE AND LITTLE GIRL."

PATRICK LYNSKEY, 20, CINCINNATI, O., WOUNDED IN HIS RIGHT WRIST, WAS CLEANING UP ENEMY PILLBOXES WITH HIS FLAME THROWER.

"WE WERE RUSHING THE WEST BEACH," HE SAID. "I SAW A LOT OF BOXES IN THIS PILLBOX AND THEY TURNED OUT TO BE FILLED WITH PARTIALLY CONSUMED BOTTLES OF SAKI WHICH THE JAPS WERE DRINKING WHEN WE BROKE UP THEIR LITTLE PARTY."

PFC.GEORGE THOMPSON, 7616 N.GREENVIEW, CHICAGO, SAID HE GOT INTO A SLIGHT ARGUMENT WITH A HAND GRENADE AND CAME OUT WITH A SMALL WOUND ON HIS LEG.

"I WAS STANDING UP ON TOP OF A PILLBOX FIRING DOWN INTO IT WHEN THIS JAP CAME UP OUT OF NOWHERE AND TOSSED A GRENADE AT US. I WAS SO SURPRISED I DIDN'T HAVE TIME TO GET SCARED," HE ADMITTED.

PFC.WILLIS RICE JR., 21, OF (910 W.10TH) ERIE, PENN., SAID EVERYTHING WAS GOING FINE UNTIL HE HAD TO STOP TO CLEAN HIS RIFLE.

"WE'D KNOCKED OUT TWO JAP PILLBOXES," HE SAID, "AND WE DUG IN FOR THE NIGHT.

"I FELT SOMETHING HIT MY SHOULDER WHILE I WAS CLEANING MY GUN. I FIGURED IT WAS A ROCK, BUT IT WAS A SMALL PIECE OF SHRAPNEL. A CORPSMAN FIXED ME UP AND I FINISHED OUT THE NIGHT THERE."

AMONG OTHER IWO JIMA SURVIVORS, ALSO ON THE LIST OF THOSE WHOSE WOUNDS WERE ONLY SMALL SHRAPNEL NICKS AND WHO RECEIVED TREATMENT ABOARD THE HOSPITAL SHIP, WERE PFC.WILLIAM L.ROSS, 402 6TH ST., WATKINS GLEN, N.Y.; SGT.JOHN S.HEATON, ALEXANDRIA, LA.; PFC.DONALD B.MATTHEWS, YOUNGSTOWN, O.; PFC.JAMES L. BRITISH PACIFIC FLEET (510)

BY MORRIE LANDSBERG

ABOARD A BRITISH FLEET CARRIER LEAVING FORMOSA, APRIL 13-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THIS BRITISH TASK FORCE STRUCK HARD TO NEUTRALIZE JAPANESE AIRFIELDS ON SAKISHIMA ISLANDS AND NORTHERN FORMOSA AND FOUGHT OFF PERSISTENT ENEMY AIR ATTACKS IN ITS COMBAT DEBUT IN THE PACIFIC.

WE WERE ON SCHEDULE TONIGHT AFTER TWO STRAIGHT DAYS OF RAIDS ON FORMOSA WHICH SHOWED A SWIFT ADAPTATION TO AMERICAN DEVELOPED CARRIER WARFARE IN THE PACIFIC BY THE VETERANS OF CLASHES WITH THE GERMAN LUFTWAFFE IN ICY NORTHERN WATERS.

FOR BRITISH CARRIERS IT WAS THE MOST CONTINUOUS OFFENSIVE OPERATION TO DATE. THE OFFENSIVE STRIKES LASTED NINE DAYS AGAINST SAKISHIMA AND FORMOSA AND BROUGHT DESTRUCTION TO AT LEAST 80 PLANES.

THE FLEET FUELED AT SEA.

THE JAPANESE FROM FORMOSA SUCCEEDED ONLY ONCE--BEFORE DAWN THIS MORNING--IN PENETRATING THE ALERT DEFENSES OF THIS POWERFUL BRITISH NAVAL FORCE WHICH IS UNDER THE TACTICAL COMMAND OF ADM. RAYMOND A.SPRUANCE'S FIFTH FLEET.

EVEN AFTER SNEAKING THROUGH THE PROTECTING SCREEN THE BOMBS FELL WIDE OF ONE CARRIER, CAUSING NO DAMAGE. THREE ENEMY PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN AND OTHERS WERE CHASED OFF.

THE BRITISH PILOTS EXPRESSED DISAPPOINTMENT THAT THEY COULDN'T GET A CRACK AT A SIZEABLE JAPANESE FORCE. AMONG THEM WAS LT.MICHAEL M.W.HANCOCK, 22, OF CATERHAM, COUNTY DURHAM, A PILOT ON ONE OF THE FIRST CORSAIRS USED IN THE ARCTIC, WHO TRAINED AT PENSACOLA FLA., AND BRUNSWICK, ME.

COMBAT AIR PATROLS WERE KEPT BUSY YESTERDAY THROWING BACK DAY-LONG ATTEMPTS BY JAPANESE PLANES TO REACH THE FLEET OFF THE EAST COAST OF FORMOSA.

A TOTAL OF 17 SNOOPERS WERE SHOT DOWN BY CORSAIRS, HELLCATS AND SEAFIRES--THE LATTER A SEAGOING VERSION OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE SPITFIRE.

THE INITIAL BRITISH PACIFIC FLEET ATTACKS MARCH 26-27 WERE AGAINST THE SAKISHIMA GROUP, A POTENTIAL STAGING POINT OF THE ENEMY STRIKES

AGAINST THE U.S. BEACHHEAD AT OKINAWA, 250 MILES NORTHEAST. FOR TWO DAYS, JUST THREE AIRBORNE JAPANESE PLANES WERE REPORTED.

ONE REASON FOR THE SCARCITY OF JAPANESE AIRCRAFT WAS THE FIGHTER UMBRELLA MAINTAINED OVER THE ISLANDS FROM DAWN UNTIL DUSK. WHEN THE BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS WERE NOT ATTACKING AIR FACILITIES ON THE ISHIKAGI AND MIYAKO ISLANDS, CORSAIRS OR HELLCATS CIRCLED THE AREA IN READINESS TO SHOOT DOWN ANY NIPPONESE WHO MIGHT HAVE TRIED TO TAKE OFF OR LAND.

ROYAL MARINE LT.COL.RONALD HAY, 29, OF COOKHAM BERKS, THE AIR GROUP LEADER, VOICED COMPLETE SURPRISE AT THE ABSENCE OF ANY JAPANESE REACTION.

APR 1 8 1945

HAY WAS AT NORWAY, DUNKIRK, WITH MALTA CONVOYS, THE BISMARCK BOMBING, THE NORTH AFRICA LANDING AND SUMATRA.

Hay 3/26/27 referring to March 26 attacks against Sakishima group

DA152FX

"APART FROM A SMALL AMOUNT OF FLAK, WE MIGHT HAVE BEEN FLYING OVER MALTA IN PEACETIME," HE REPORTED. "SO FAR WE HAVE BEEN ABLE TO DO JUST WHAT WE LIKE OVER THERE."

LT.CMDR.JAMES B.EDMUNDSON, 23, LONDON, THE AIR OPERATIONS OFFICER, SAID: "WE EXPECTED A RATHER HOT RECEPTION FROM THE DOORSTEP OF JAPAN BUT IT COMPARED POORLY WITH THE OPPOSITION WE USED TO GET AT SUMATRA."

ONE OF THE FIRST JAPANESE PLANES WAS SHOT DOWN APRIL 1 BY SUBLIEUTENANTS JOHN C.LEDDY, 21, LIVERPOOL, AND RONALD WATT, 22, SUNDERLAND COUNTY, DURHAM.

THE BRITISH CARRIERS STRUCK SAKISHIMA AGAIN MARCH 31, APRIL 2 AND APRIL 6-7, CRATERING THE RUNWAYS, KNOCKING OUT BARRACKS, ADMINISTRATION BUILDINGS, AN UNIDENTIFIED FACTORY IN TOMARI TOWN ON MIYAKO, AND OTHER INSTALLATIONS.

THE PILOTS DISCOVERED EARLY THAT THE JAPANESE WERE PUTTING DUMMY PLANES ON THE FIELDS WHILE ATTEMPTING TO HIDE THE FLYABLE AIRCRAFT.

THE PLANES FLEW THROUGH A HEAVY CLOUD COVER YESTERDAY TO ATTACK JAPANESE ARMY AIRFIELDS AT SHINSHIKU AND KIIRUN IN THE NORTH CENTRAL SECTOR OF FORMOSA. THEY HIT AGAIN TODAY.

IN THE VICINITY OF ZUIHO, FIGHTERS STRAFED A RAILROAD TRAIN PROBABLY DESTROYING THE LOCOMOTIVE. AT HOKUTO, TWO LARGE FACTORIES WERE STRAFED. FIGHTERS TURNED THEIR GUNS ON THE RAILROAD STATION YARDS AND BLEW UP AN OIL TANK AT MATSUYAMA TOWN.

TRAILS.

AMONG THE FILIPINOS RESCUED WERE BRIG.GEN.MANUEL ROXAS, FORMER SPEAKER OF THE PHILIPPINES NATIONAL ASSEMBLY, AND MILAGROS OSMENA, A DAUGHTER (BY HIS FIRST MARRIAGE) OF PHILIPPINE PRESIDENT SERGIO OSMENA.

THE TRIP USUALLY TOOK FOUR DAYS.

THE IGOROTES, REFUGEES AND AMERICAN PATROLS ALL SAID THE SECRET ESCAPE TRAIL WAS DOTTED WITH GRAVES OF THOSE WHO FAILED TO SURVIVE THE ARDUOUS TRIP.

LUIS GARCIA, 13, PARALYZED FILIPINO BOY, WAS CARRIED OVER THE MOUNTAINS IN HIS BED.

THE REFUGEES INCLUDED FOUR MEMBERS OF THE CABINET OF JOSE LAUREL, WHO COLLABORATED WITH THE JAPANESE AS THEIR PUPPET PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES. APPARENTLY THE FOUR PREFERRED TO SUBMIT THEMSELVES TO AMERICAN AND FILIPINO MERCY RATHER THAN RISK THE BLOODTHIRSTY WHIMS OF THE JAPANESE.

THEY CONFIRMED REPORTS THAT LAUREL HAD BEEN TAKEN TO JAPAN, ALONG WITH CAMILO OSIAS, MINISTER OF EDUCATION, AND BENIGNO AGUINO, HOUSE SPEAKER, THE LATER PARTICULARLY CENSURED BY FILIPINOS FOR HIS PRO-JAPANESE SPEECHES.

CATHOLIC SISTER AGNES MURPHY OF THE MARYKNOLL CONVENT IN THE BENGUET MOUNTAINS WALKED ACROSS THE RUGGED ESCAPE ROUTE BEHIND AN IGOROTE GUIDE. SHE REACHED THE AMERICAN LINES CHEERFUL, SAYING "I NEVER LOST FAITH OR HOPE."

THE JAPANESE HAD HUNTED HER FOR THREE YEARS. SHE SAID THAT AFTER THE JAPANESE INVASION SHE "LOST MYSELF" AMONG GERMAN NUNS IN BAGUIO. BUT WHEN THAT PLACE BECAME "TOO HOT" SHE FLED INTO THE HILLS AND LIVED IN A CAVE.

SHE CAME OUT WITH SISTER CARMENCITA GABRIEL OF MANILA.

THE MAJORITY APPEATED FAIRLY WELL FED BUT THEY SAID THAT MANY AGED AND SICK PERSONS STILL AROUND BAGUIO WERE IN BAD SHAPE. THEY REPORTED BAGUIO WAS ALMOST A COMPLETE WRECK.

PRESIDENT OSMENA'S DAUGHTER WAS CAPTURED IN HONG KONG BY THE JAPANESE. SHE WAS BROUGHT TO THE PHILIPPINES AND TAKEN TO BAGUIO, WHERE SHE BECAME ILL. AMERICAN ARMY PHYSICIANS DESCRIBED HER CONDITION AS VERY POOR.

AMONG THE RECENT REFUGEES TO REACH THE AMERICAN LINES WERE: MR. AND MRS. TOM HIGHSMITH OF CHICAGO; MR

MR. AND MRS. TOM HIGHSMITH OF CHICAGO; DR. R.R. BROWN OF VERMONT (NO TOWN GIVEN), HIS WIFE AND SIX CHILDREN; MR. AND MRS. FRANK GARDNER, JR., OF JOHNSTOWN, PA., AND FOUR CHILDREN OF THE LATE JAMES HENRY OF TENNESSEE (NO TOWN GIVEN)

IWO JIMA,TUESDAY, APRIL 17-(AP)-SEVENTH FIGHTER COMMAND MUSTANG PILOTS MAKING THEIR FIRST OFFENSIVE SWEEP OVER THE JAPANESE HOMELAND MONDAY FOUND HEARTBREAKINGLY "POOR HUNTING" ON THEIR 1,500 MILE ROUND TRIP.

THE P-51'S PREVIOUS MISSION OVER JAPAN HAD BEEN AS ESCORTS FOR SUPERFORTS, BUT ON THIS SWEEP THEIR TARGET WAS THE KANOYA AIRFIELD ON SOUTHERN KYUSHU, THE NEAREST LARGE AIRBASE FROM WHICH THE NIPPONESE CAN LAUNCH ATTACKS ON AMERICAN INVASION FORCES IN THE RYUKYUS. THEIR MISSION WAS TO DESTROY JAPANESE PLANES IN THE AIR AND TO STRAFE THOSE FOUND ON THE GROUND.

THE ARMY PILOTS TOOK OFF EAGERLY, ANTICIPATING PITTING THEIR "HOT" PLANES AGAINST CONCENTRATIONS OF JAPANESE AIRCRAFT. AFTER EIGHT HOURS IN THE AIR THEY RETURNED TIRED AND GRIMY WITHOUT HAVING FOUND A NIPPONESE PLANE.

OKINAWA,APRIL 15-(DELAYED)-(AP)-APPROXIMATELY ONE-FIFTH OF OKINAWA'S ESTIMATED 435,000 CIVILIANS ARE NOW IN CAMPS UNDER AMERICAN PROTECTION, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY.

BRIG.GEN.WILLIAM E.CRIST OF (1417 44TH ST.NW) WASHINGTON, D.C., DEPUTY COMMANDER FOR THE ISLAND'S MILITARY GOVERNMENT, SAID 60,000 CIVILIANS ARE IN CAMP AREAS UNDER "CLOSE CONTROL."

SOME 25,000 MORE HAVE EMERGED FROM HIDING PLACES BUT HAVE RETURNED TO VILLAGES AND FARMS UNDER SUPERVISION OF THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT. MILITARY GOVERNMENT TEAMS ARE HASTENING THE TASK OF GETTING ALL UNDER SUPERVISION, SCREENING MALES TO REMOVE ANY PRISONERS OF WAR AND PLACING THEM UNDER CONTROL OF THE TACTICAL FORCES.

CRIST, A NATIVE OF HARRISBURG,PENNA., SAID AT A PRESS CONFERENCE, "OUR FUNCTION IS TO RELIEVE THE TACTICAL FORCES OF THE BURDEN OF CONTROLLING CIVILIANS," AND TO MEET THEIR NEED FOR THE NECESSITIES OF LIFE. HE ADDED THAT IT IS PLANNED TO PLACE THEM IN CAMPS OF 10,000 TO 30,000 POPULATION AS SOON AS POSSIBLE, AND TO LET THEM HELP SUPPORT THEMSELVES.

THERE HAVE BEEN NO REPORTS OF CIVILIAN SUICIDES, CRIST RELATED.

"I WAS PLEASANTLY SURPRISED TO FIND A HIGHER STANDARD OF LIVING HERE THAN THE JAPANESE HAD AT SAIPAN AND TINIAN. THE PEOPLE ARE HEALTHIER AND BETTER DRESSED. THEIR KNOWLEDGE OF SANITATION IS RUDIMENTARY BUT WE ARE TEACHING THEM AND THEY ARE LEARNING FAST."

GOVERNMENTAL DISTRICTS ARE BEING ESTABLISHED WITH THE AID OF OKINAWAN LEADERS.

"WE TRY TO GIVE EACH LEADER A CERTAIN PRESTIGE; NOT BETTER FOOD FOR INSTANCE, BUT IT IS ARRANGED SO THEY WON'T HAVE TO STAND IN LINE. WE RECOGNIZE THAT THE ORIENG 'FACE' MEANS A GREAT DEAL," CRIST ADDED.

CAPTAIN CAMPBELL LED A FLIGHT OF MUSTANGS IN A SWEEP OVER KANOYE AIRFIELD ON SOUTHERN KYUSHU WHEN THE "SUNSETTERS" OF THE SEVENTH FIGHTER COMMAND MADE THE WORLD'S LONGEST FIGHTER MISSION OF APPROXIMATELY 1,500 MILES.

"WE'VE BEEN OVER JAPAN THREE TIMES NOW--TWICE AS ESCORTS FOR SUPERFORTRESSES AND ONCE ON FIGHTER SWEEP ALONE--BUT EVER SINCE WE SURPRISED THEM ON THE FIRST MISSION THE JAPS REFUSE TO COME UP AND FIGHT," CAMPBELL SAID.

WHEN THEY DIDN'T FIND ANY JAPS IN THE AIR, THE MUSTANGS YESTERDAY SWOOPED DOWN OVER THE KANOYE AND SATELLITE AIRFIELDS, WITH ALL SIX MACHINE GUNS FIRING ON EVERY MUSTANG, THE PLANES SWEPT OVER THE FIELDS AT A SPEED OF APPROXIMATELY 450 MILES PER HOUR AND AT HEIGHTS RANGING FROM 10 FEET TO 400 FEET.

SECOND NIGHT LEAD B-29S (130)

BY ELMONT WAITE

GUAM, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18-(AP)-HEAVY BOMBS OF B-29 SUPERFORTRESSES CRATERED RUNWAYS AND BLASTED BUILDINGS OF SIX PRINCIPAL JAPANESE AIRBASES ON KYUSHU, SOUTHERNMOST MAIN ISLAND OF JAPAN, AT 9 A.M. TODAY FOR THE SECOND TIME WITHIN 17 HOURS.

THE SIX TASK GROUPS OF B-29S TOOK OFF FOR THE MISSION EVEN BEFORE SIX EARLIER ONES HAD RETURNED FROM YESTERDAY AFTERNOON'S BLOWS AT THE SAME TARGETS--AIRFIELDS THAT SPRING SUICIDE ATTACKS ON U.S. FORCES ON AND AROUND OKINAWA.

THE TWIN RAIDS WERE HIGH LEVEL DEMOLITION ATTACKS. BOTH FORCES WERE DESCRIBED AS "LARGE"--PROBABLY AROUND 150 PLANES.

RESULTS OF THIS MORNING'S ASSAULT WERE NOT DISCLOSED IMMEDIATELY BUT THE SUPERFORTS BOMBED VISUALLY--AND THEREFORE ACCURATELY--AS THEY DID YESTERDAY.

THE B-29S ON YESTERDAY'S RAID SAW NO JAPANESE PLANES, ALTHOUGH THEIR TARGETS INCLUDED THE MOST IMPORTANT AIRFIELDS ON THE SOUTHERN END OF THE EMPIRE.

THE ATTACKS ON KYUSHU ARE A PART OF THE AERIAL WARFARE THAT HAS BEEN RAGING IN THAT AREA SINCE MARCH 18, PRIOR TO THE EASTER SUNDAY INVASION OF OKINAWA, STRATEGIC ISLAND IN THE RYUKYU CHAIN. THE ENEMY AIR FORCE HAS LOST 1,674 PLANES BETWEEN MARCH 18 AND APRIL 16 TO CARRIER PLANES, SHIPS GUNS, ANTIAIRCRAFT BATTERIES AND LAND-BASED AIRCRAFT. B-29S SHOT DOWN FOUR MORE OVER TOKYO MONDAY.

THE TOKYO RAID QUOTED JAPAN'S DOMEI NEWS AGENCY AS SAYING THE LATEST B-29 ATTACK ON KYUSHU WAS MADE BY "SOME 80" PLANES AND WAS

"THERE WERE PIECES OF JAP BODIES FLYING ALL OVER THE PLACE," INTERPOSED BUCKLEY.

"THOSE JAPS WERE SPLATTERED ALL OVER US--I WAS AN AWFUL MESS," KATONA RESUMED. "THERE WAS JAP BLOOD ALL OVER ME--WHATTA MESS. SAY, YOU OUGHTA PUT IN THE STORY THAT MY NAME--KATONA--MEANS SOLDIER IN HUNGARIAN."

THE ARMY'S COMBAT ASSAULT TROOPS LANDED AT 7:59 A.M. YESTERDAY, ONE MINUTE AHEAD OF SCHEDULE, ON BEACHES ON THE SOUTH AND SOUTHWESTERN SHORES. THEY ADVANCED RAPIDLY TO THE EAST AGAINST SPORADIC RESISTANCE, CHIEFLY SNIPER AND LIGHT AND HEAVY MACHINE GUN FIRE.

FROM EARLY MORNING THROUGH THE AFTERNOON MANY ENEMY PLANES ATTACKED AMERICAN SHIPS OFFSHORE. OF APPROXIMATELY 100 ATTACKING PLANES AT LEAST 70 WERE SHOT DOWN BY ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE AND BY COMBAT AIR PATROLS.

NO SHIPS SUSTAINED ANY DAMAGE.

I WENT ASHORE THIS MORNING AND WALKED ABOUT ONE MILE INLAND TO THE SOUTHERN END OF THE AIRFIELD. TWICE DURING THIS TRIP WE DUCKED INTO A DITCH AS ENEMY SNIPER FIRE CRACKED AROUND US. WE SKIRTED SEVERAL HEAVILY MINED AREAS.

THE AIRFIELD AND ITS APPROACHES AS WELL AS ALL LANDING BEACHES WERE MINED HEAVILY.

ON THE WAY BACK TO THE BEACH WE STOPPED AT CHARRED RUINS OF A SHELLED HOUSE WHILE I TALKED WITH A PLATOON SERGEANT. FIFTY FEET AWAY, A SOLDIER DROPPED WITH A SNIPER BULLET IN HIS LEG. A MINUTE LATER, HE WAS ATTENDED BY MEDICAL CORPSMEN, WHO CARRIED HIM TO AN AID STATION.

PER A. NORLIN, SWEDISH AIRLINES DELEGATE TO THE CONFERENCE, IN AN INTERVIEW DISCLOSED THAT "THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS OF REFUGEES FOUND EXILE IN SWEDEN WHERE LARGE NUMBERS HAVE BEEN RECEIVING MILITARY TRAINING UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF SWEDISH ARMY OFFICERS."

"MORE THAN 10,000 NORWEGIANS HAVVE BEEN TRAINED AND ORGANIZED IN SWEDEN TO RETURN TO THEIR COUNTRY WITH THE ARMIES OF THE ALLIES," HE SAID. "THEY HAVE BEEN EQUIPPED WITH SWEDISH MILITARY EQUIPMENT AND ARE READY NOW TO JOIN THE FORCES OF LIBERATION."

DESCRIBING SWEDEN'S NEUTRALITY DURING THE WAR AS A A MEASURE NECESSARY TO NATIONAL SURVIVAL, NORLIN ADDED:

"SWEDEN SUFFERED MANY HARDSHIPS IN 1941 AND 1942 WHEN ALL EXPORTS AND IMPORTS WERE SUSPENDED BECAUSE OF ECONOMIC ISOLATION ENFORCED BY GERMANY. HOWEVER, IN 1943 SWEDEN ADOPTED AN INTELLIGENT RATIONING PROGRAM WHICH WAS SO SUCCESSFUL THAT LARGE SUPPLIES OF FOOD AND OTHER NECESSITIES WERE SENT TO FINLAND, NORWAY AND HOLLAND THROUGH THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS.

NORLIN, WHO ARRIVED IN HAVANA AFTER A 39-HOUR FLIGHT FROM STOCKHOLM, SAID SWEDISH AIRLINES (A.B) BEFORE THE WAR OPERATED CONNECTING FLIGHTS TO MOST OF THE LARGE CITIES IN NORTHERN EUROPE, INCLUDING BERLIN, PARIS AND MOSCOWS. HE SAID SWEDISH AIRLINES POST WAR PLANS INCLUDE EXTENSION OF ROUTES TO NORTH AND SOTUTH AMERICA.

"THE AVIATION INDUSTRY OF SWEDEN AFTER THE WAR WILL BE DEVELOPED FAR BEYOND ITS PRESENT FACILITIES NOW LIMITED TO THE MANUFACTURE OF SMALL MILITARY AIRPLANES, PROPELLORS, ENGINES AND INSTRUMENTS," HE DECLARED.

NORLIN PREDICTED THE CONFERENCE "WILL ASSURE DEVELOPMENT OF AIR TRANSPORT ON A SOUND ECONOMIC BASIS WITH CLOSER COOPERATION BETWEEN ALL THE COMMERCIAL AIR LINES OF THE WORLD." HE FORESEES FASTER AND MORE ECONOMICAL POST WAR AIR TRANSPORTATION THROUGH USE OF ADVANCED EQUIPMENT DEVELOPED DURING THE WAR.

HE SAID THE SWEDISH DELEGATION WOULD PROPOSE THAT AFTER THE WAR ALL FIRST CLASS MAIL BE TRANSPORTED BY AIR AT EXISTING POSTAGE RATES.

Ninth Army Builds Up Bridgehead for Final Drive on Berlin.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

PARIS, Thursday, April 19. —(AP) Infantrymen and tanks of the U. S. Third army slashed across the border of Czechoslovakia yesterday, cutting Germany in two geographically, while other American forces conquered Magdeburg, 60 miles southwest of Berlin, and drove almost to the heart of Leipzig, the Reich's fifth largest city.

The historic crossing into the Sudetenland, which Hitler annexed in 1938, was made north of Asch by doughboys of the 90th infantry division riding in jeeps and on the backs of tanks. Last night they were reported two miles inside Czechoslovakia in the vicinity of Gott-Mannszgrun, 10 miles east of the German city of Hof.

The last eight miles of the plunge to the border was made without opposition—symbolical of the present low state of Nazi arms—but a dispatch said brisk fire was encountered after Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's men and armor had crossed the line southwest of Chemnitz, at the western tip of Czechoslovakia.

As Patton's veteran troops plunged into one of the last Hitler's stolen nations, three other American armies fought to clear the important cities of Leipzig, Nuernberg and Duesseldorf, and British armor closed within 18 miles of the great North sea port of Hamburg at the apex of an advance along a 40-mile front.

Front dispatches last night said the historic city of Leipzig, site of Germany's renowned fairs, might fall within hours to Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First army. On the sixth day of the siege of this city of more than 700,000 population doughboys had driven to the Elsterbecken canal and the Pliesse river, deep within Leipzig.

Use Flame Throwers

Magdeburg, the ruined industrial metropolis on the west bank of the Elbe river, was cleared by Lt. Gen William H. Simpson's Ninth army after two days of bitter fighting in which flame-throwing tanks were used to burn out the last fanatical Hitler youth snipers.

Far to the south fierce fighting raged inside Nuernberg, the Nazi party convention center, with Seventh army troops slowly driving back SS (Elite Guard) defenders.

Two other large cities, Halle and Dessau, both southwest of Berlin, also were under close siege by the First army and Halle was reported cleared except for its southern outskirts.

However, while these operations were underway there was an unexplained lull on the part of American armor and infantry in the most advanced positions, some of which have been reported as close as 75 miles to the Russians.

Ninth army troops continued to build up their bridgehead on the east bank of the Elbe, pointed toward Berlin, and beat off two small-scale counter-attacks during the day. But there still was no sign of a serious move toward the German capital.

The Nazi shrine city of Nuernberg had been penetrated at four different points by Lt. Gen. Alexander Patch's Seventh army, but enemy resistance still was fierce in that bastion at the approaches to Hitler's holdout fortress in the Bavarian Alps. Ninety-six guns defending the city had been destroyed, damaged or captured in the past 24 hours.

Streicher Flees City

Julius Streicher, the Nazis' master Jew-baiter and bully who had directed the defense of Nuernberg, was reported to have fled the city four nights ago. Women were reported manning guns inside Nuernberg, as they were in Leipzig. Among prisoners taken from the Nuernberg garrison was a soldier with one arm. Two others had legs missing.

Canadian forces topped off their steady successes in Holland by reaching the Zuider Zee in the northern Netherlands. They also closed up to the southern shore of the great inland sea and were moving steadily toward Rotterdam. Amsterdam and Utrecht. The Nazis now hold only a fragment of the whole coastline of northern Holland, at a point west across an estuary from Emden.

Duesseldorf, last big city held by the Nazis in the devastated Ruhr pocket, was falling to the 17th American Airborne division. Only 125 square miles of the trap remained to be wiped out, and the disaster to the German army there promised to eclipse even that of Stalingrad on the Russian front.

309,484 Prisoners

Up to Tuesday night a total of 309,484 prisoners had been taken in the blackened area which was the cradle of German military might, and there were believed to be still some 50,000 Nazis in the region. German losses in killed and captured at Stalingrad were over 312,000.

APR 19 1945

Hundreds of Allied warplanes hammered railroads and airfields the Germans need to defend Czechoslovakia against the deadly squeeze of the Russians and the Allies from the west and the east. In the day's principal attack more than 750 American heavy bombers pounded rail targets both in western Czechoslovakia and southern Germany and 600 escorting fighters slashed at airfields in the same area.

Train Yards Wrecked

Pilots reported that enemy movement by rail and highway had decreased markedly and said that trains and rail yards in Czechoslovakia from Eger to Karlsbad were in smoking ruins. A 47-car train headed southeast from Karlsbad was destroyed. Fighters wrecked seven tanks of an armored column spotted heading southwest, apparently toward Hitler's mountain redoubt.

Other Third army outfits pressed forward steadily behind the spearheading 90th infantry. The 89th infantry cleared Zwickau, 18 miles southwest of the besieged fortress city of Chemnitz, then crossed the Zwick Mulde river and drove five miles beyond to Thierfeld. Other 89th infantry units reached the area of Plohn, nine miles south of Zwickau.

The 26th infantry entered Weissenstadt, 16 miles northeast of Bayreuth, and the 87th infantry cleared Langenfeld, 10 miles southwest of Zwickau.

French troops driving southward toward Switzerland on the eastern bank of the upper Rhine, reached Dinghingen, 10 miles southwest of Offenburg, and pushed on through the heart of the Black Forest. The French took 1,800 prisoners Tuesday and surrounded another group of 2,400 south of Pforzheim.

(The Turkish radio reported a civilian uprising had broken out in Stuttgart, which is in the path of the French advance.)

French forces attacking the German held sea approaches to the Allied held Atlantic port of Bordeaux, captured another 700 Nazis, virtually ending the operation north of the Gironde river, but the Nazi garrison continued to fight hard south of the river.

The Ninth army's brilliant two-day mop-up of Magdeburg on the west bank of the Elbe apparently failed to yield Gen. Simpson's forces a bridge there across that stream. A front dispatch said the retiring Germans blew a highway bridge across the Elbe and were expected to destroy a rail span momentarily.

Magdeburg, once a city of 334,000 and the 20th largest in Germany, was badly smashed. In the assault which began after a heavy aerial bombardment early Tuesday the Second Armored division took the southern industrial section of the city, including a Krupp works, while the 30th infantry fought through the city's heart.

By noon Wednesday only a few blocks had not been cleared of snipers and of Hitler Youth fighting with the German version of the [illegible] flame-throwers. Tongues of flame sent licking among the rubble by American tanks soon stilled that last die-hard resistance. Some Nazis were holding out on an island in the middle of the Elbe opposite Magdeburg.

Before the firing had ceased the roads were filled with German refugees trying to get back into the ruined city and by former slave workers, who scrambled in the wreckage for food. There was no water.

Yanks Cut Germany In Two; Magdeburg Is Captured

APR 19 1945

APR 1 9 1945

Paris, April 18 (AP)—Tank-riding United States 3d Army Infantrymen invaded Czechoslovakia today, cutting Germany in two with a plunge into the Sudetenland, which Hitler annexed to the Reich after Munich in 1938.

The 90th Division invaded Czechoslovakia northwest of Asch in the northwestern tip of the country. The Americans had dashed 8 miles from the area of Hof, which is about 10 miles south of captured Plauen.

The last lap of the drive to cut Germany in two was made without opposition except for a brief flurry of gunfire in the German village of Prex, less than a mile from the border, a front dispatch said.

The 90th smashed 2 miles beyond the border to the vicinity of Gottmasgrun.

As General Patton's troops crossed the Czechoslovak frontier, the 1st Army stormed to within 4,000 yards of the center of surrounded Leipzig and the 7th Army cleared half the Nazi city of Nuernberg.

309,484 Captured In Ruhr

All along the front, General Eisenhower's armies were gathering strength for the final drive eastward to meet the Russians.

The Ruhr triumph assumed proportions of the greatest victory of the war, even more costly to the Germans than the defeat at Stalingrad. Already 309,484 prisoners have been taken from the trap and 50,000 more were expected to surrender today. The enemy also lost countless dead in the pocket.

The Germans lost 330,000 in killed and captured alone three years ago at Stalingrad in one of history's decisive battles.

DAY

Magdeburg Taken By Yanks

Supreme headquarters announced that 2,055,575 Germans had been captured in the West since D-Day. About 149,000 surrendered yesterday to swell the April total to 875,000.

In the meantime, the 9th Army captured Magdeburg, securing a firm anchor on the Elbe River opposite Berlin. The industrial and commercial center was the twentieth largest city of Germany before bombs and shells reduced it to the smoking ruins which the Hell on Wheels (2d Armored) and Old Hickory (30th) divisions captured.

Farther northwest, British tanks swept forward on a 40-mile front to within 18 miles of Hamburg and 12 of Harburg, which lies across the Elbe south of the great port. The British reached to within 8 miles of the lower Elbe and drove into the outskirts of Luneburg against scattered resistance.

Mountain Routes Still Open

The halving of Germany was of more geographical than immediate military importance, because the enemy still has circuitous contact between North and South Germany through the mountains of Czechoslovakia.

Censors would pass only the bare report that Czechoslovakia was entered.

Ahead of General Patton's army in Czechoslovakia, 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators smashed rail junctions on lines which the Nazis would need either to make a stand or escape into the redoubt to the south.

Battling In Suburbs Of Bremen

APR 1 9 1945

Eastern Czechoslovakia has been deeply invaded by the Russians, who today were fighting within sight of the industrial city of Bruenn. It was the seventh, or perhaps the eighth country invaded by General Eisenhower's western armies. The others were France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, German, and Monaco. Some of Eisenhower's forces in the Maritime Alps may have crossed the Italian frontier as well.

Final battles continued inside the cities of Halle, Dusseldorf, Dessau and the suburbs of Bremen. The 3d Army entered Zwickau. The 7th Army, outflanking beleaguered Nuernberg, closed to within 85 miles of Munich and 140 of Halle except the southern outskirts. The main First Army battle, however, was in the fifth largest city of Leipzig, which was surrounded and cut off. The stout outer ring of defenses, some manned by sullen German girls, was cracked and at last reports—many hours old—the infantry was nearing the center of the Saxony city. Other troops who by-passed Leipzig were at least twelve miles east.

Hitler's home at Berchtesgaden. Chemnitz was under frontal assault.

Flame-throwing American Ninth Army tanks reduced the last snipers' nests in Magdeburg west of the Elbe River. Most of the Germans surrendered. The Second Armored Division captured the industrial southern part of the city including its Krupp works. The Thirtieth Division fought through the heart of Magdeburg past its thirteenth century cathedral. Armaments and aircraft works were found badly smashed up. The whole city was a great ruin.

Civilians Rush for Water.

As the battle reached the Elbe—last river before Berlin—civilians emerged from cellars and rushed for water. The Germans blew the righway bridge across the Elbe but, at last reports, the rail bridge still was intact. Germans held out on Rothishorn Island in the river as late as noon, in ancient forts. Before the sound of battle had died down, refugees and civilians who had fled started clamoring to get back in the city. Thousands of impressed foreign laborers scrambled for food in the ruins.

The First Army cleared all of Aachen except the northern outskirts.

Streicher in Nuernberg.

Seventh Army Yanks moved through the great sports area of Nuernberg, where Hitler used to make flamboyant speeches to the Nazis.

Julius Streicher, the Nazis' master Jew-baiter, who directed the defenses of the city, fled three nights ago and was succeeded by Kreisleiter Naumeister.

City officials ignored leaflets and telephoned surrender demands and the old Bavarian city—one of the handsomest in Germany—was pounded to bits by a heavy barrage from guns in a ten-mile perimiter around the city where the Nazis racial laws were born.

Canadians were reported unofficially to have reached the southern banks of the Zuider Zee and moved to within twenty miles of Amsterdam, a city of 793,526 which is the largest in the Netherlands.

Another trap in the Harz Mountains was reduced to about 175 square miles, half its original size, by First and Ninth Army.

French Are Mopping Up.

A special French communique announced the elimination of the Royan pocket north of the Gironde estuary, leading to Bordeaux, and the surrender of the remaining Germans of the garrison of Pointe de Grave on the south side of the estuary was under final attack. Freeing the great Atlantic port would be a great boon to French economy.

Another "forgotten front" flared into action in the Maritime Alps, where French Gen. Molle's troops captured several peaks and entered Briel, near the Italian border.

The North Sea port of Emden was almost within small arms range of Polish troops on the Ems Estuary opposite the city. Stuttgart in the south was outflanked by the French Army, which was rolling up the last of the Siegfried Line in the Black Forest. The French moved twenty-five miles southwest of Stuttgart.

Horror and Filth in Nazi Slave Camp

39,000 Starved Prisoners and Uncounted Dead Found When British Reach Belsen.

FRYE

British Second Army Headquarters, Germany, April 18 (A. P.).—Prisoners in the Belsen concentration camp, a stinking, filthy horror, were freed on Sunday by Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's men. The camp contained 39,000 persons still alive and uncounted dead.

It contained typhus, typhoid, tuberculosis, nakedness, starvation, dumps of unburied corpses in vast heaps, mounds covering great burial trenches, one cavernous pit half-filled with blackened bodies. There were children—500 of them—in the midst of this. Babies were born here daily.

Monument of Death.

These were the findings of a senior medical officer of the British Second Army who has been at the camp three days and says that "anything you have seen doesn't even begin the story." The living are being moved to the relative luxury of a nearby army barracks. Soon none will be left here except those with communicable diseases, too ill to move.

Eventually, says this officer, the only conceivable disposition of this Nazi monument will be destruction by fire. There were 2,000 women in three compounds in this camp and nearly 12,000 men in two other compounds. In adjacent barracks, in one corner of the vast Nazi camp, are 15,000 more prisoners who are fairly recent arrivals.

"Horror camp" is what the medical officer calls it. After his arrival at the camp, SS guards under the direction of their commander still were shooting prisoners who were trying to steal potatoes. The SS had failed to abide by the surrender terms to turn in their arms, because they feared the vengeance of the emaciated victims of their inhumanity.

SS Cleans Up Camp.

The SS men were disarmed promptly when discovered and assigned to cleaning up the camp as a slight measure of retribution. How many died here there is no way of knowing. Indefinite reports say 30,000 died in the last few months.

In the middle of the camp there is a mound eighty yards by thirty yards of the naked bodies of women, piled table-high. While the medical officer was inspecting the camp, he saw four girls carry another corpse from the hut and add it to this fearful stack of death, which was in plain view of the children's compound. A woman laid the body of her own child on the heap.

Most of the dead were victims not of disease, but starvation. The rations were three daily issues of watery soup, made of meal and a few vegetables. Once or twice a week a few bits of meat were thrown into the cooking cauldrons, but the issue was by huts, not individuals. Each hut leader sent four persons with large metal containers to bring the rations, but, in practical effect, the distribution was not supervised, and those too weak to fight for their own food got none.

Six Stages of Starvation.

They would lie on the filthy floors of the huts until the last thin trace of life had disappeared, and no one noticed. The insufficient bunks were occupied by the wasted remnants of two to three persons. One double-decked bunk might contain six diseases, six stages of advanced starvation.

People still are dying. The medical officer said that even with the best possible care and most careful diets, thousands cannot be saved. Doctors among the prisoners told the British they were treating 1,714 women with acute cases—there are bunks for 474. Of the men, there are 2,242 acute cases, occupying 1,900 bunks.

The improvised hospitals arranged by the prisoners received 125 women and sixty men daily. All the doctors have had typhus, but recovered.

Children Kept Alive.

The officer said that large consignments of Red Cross parcels sent by Jews reached the camp but never were distributed and were not used by the Germans, withheld apparently out of sheer malevolence. There is no indication what proportion of these civilian prisoners is Jews, but the assumption is that it is high.

Some inadequate medical stores were found in the camp. The officer said that two bright spots were that the kitchens were clean and well kept and that the children were in comparatively good condition. The women had used their wasting strength to keep the children clean and to get them as much food as possible.

The SS masters occasionally gave the children small bits of candy, the prisoners said.

German Civilians Watch Yanks Move into Leipzig

BY DON WHITEHEAD AND HAL BOYLE

LEIPZIG, Germany, April 18 (AP) Capture of Leipzig was only hours away tonight as troops of the U. S. First army pounded through the streets while thousands of German civilians, apparently unmindful of the battle, poured from basements and air raid shelters to watch.

Some Germans laughed and waved in genuine display of relief that the Americans had arrived. They gave little heed to the rattle of machinegun fire and the crashing of shells at the Elster river, which runs through the city's center, where hard, muddy American Doughboys pushed the Germans after advancing block by block through the city.

American forces moving against the heart of Leipzig and attacking from the south and west were putting the squeeze on an estimated 40,000 Germans inside the industrial and art center, fifth city of the Nazi Reich.

Troops of the 69th infantry division battled at the south, second infantry troops hit from the west, and the Ninth armored division advanced from the south and west.

Eerie March in Rain

Doughboys moved into the outskirts last night on the sixth day of the siege. Entrance into the warcrowded city of 1,000,000 came after an eerie march through the rain. Brilliant lightning coupled with flaming artillery bursts to guide the long, dark columns to their objectives.

Enemy rifles made brief stabs of flame along the route but these small strongpoints were quickly knocked out. No Nazi artillery shells fell as the Americans plodded along, covered by their own artillery, the explosions of which were lost in the noise of thunderclaps.

Maj. Robert Rashid of Berlin, Wis., said "there was resistance along the way. The Germans were dug in along some railroad tracks in the batteries they had rimming the city."

Capt. Edward L. Callahan of 6624 Lebanon Ave., Philadelphia, led the first company of troops into Leipzig and his men were the first to reach the river, moving in last night against light resistance.

"We just barreled in and shot 'em up," Callahan said, as he waited in a hastily-evacuated Nazi SS (Elite Guard) headquarters for time to attack across the river.

Civilians in Leipzig reported that some 1,200 picked German troops left the city two days ago for the mountainous "national redoubt" in the Bavarian Alps.

American troops fighting for possession of the city have encountered various resistance, including grounded Luftwaffe pilots, boyish Hitler Youth soldiers — some of whom became hysterical at the sight of their comrades' blood. Nazi prisoners said the Germans had been planning to use women as anti-aircraft gun crews at the more than 1,200 weapons ringing the city.

This latter scheme was called off by the Nazi High Command after 169 women were brought in for training and were bombed by American planes. The women were going through the motions of operating guns in "dummy" practice, prisoners said, when American planes attacking the regular gun emplacements overshot their targets and dumped their bombs squarely in the middle of the women's detachment. It was slaughter The remaining women became so hysterical that the experiment was called off. Forty of these women have been captured by American forces.

East of Leipzig the enemy resistance consisted almost solely of Hitler Youth, driven to sacrifice by propaganda appeals to "stand and die."

Boys Run in Terror

In almost every village Ninth armored division tanks had to crack through a thin wall of these boy fanatics, who usually run in terror after firing a few rounds from panzerfausts. Eight miles northeast of the city 40 boys fought on the western edge of the city and fought hard with rifles and panzerfausts (bazookas). Flak gunfire has about ceased. We have captured or destroyed practically every gun stubbornly for several minutes to hold up an armored column. The tanks blasted the Nazi positions with high-velocity guns, killing 10 of the juvenile "supermen" with the first burst. The others threw away their guns and either ran away or stood waiting for capture.

Leipzig itself is a shambles. Approximately 75 per cent of all the buildings and homes have been destroyed or severely damaged by bombs. Entering troops found the city in military disorder and civilian chaos. There was no water and no electricity, and hundreds of thousands of regular residents and refugees hugged the walls in basements where they had been living in fear of bombings and artillery shells. Hospitals were filled to overflowing.

RANSOM GROUP GIVEN LIBERTY

Yanks Release 2,500 Jews Held By Hitler

With U.S. 9th Army on the Elbe River, Germany, April 18 (AP)—Approximately 2,500 Jews held by Hitler for ransom have been liberated by the 30th Division, it was announced tonight.

They were Jews held in a special concentration camp by the Nizas and exchanged for German prisoners through neutral countries. Some were freed by bribes from friends or relatives in North or South America.

No Food On Train

The 823d Tank Destroyer Battalion found the 3,000 prisoners packed like cattle in 45 cars, mostly freight, in the village of Garsleben, The Germans had been trying to rush the Jews to the Sudetenland from the concentration camp of Bergen-Belzen in the province of Hannover.

There were no sanitary facilities on the train and no food. Many of the captives had not eaten for three days and when released swarmed into a local bakery to lick up raw flour from the floor.

The commanding officer of the Tank Destroyer Battalion ordered the Orgomeister of Farsleben to kill some local cattle to feed the refugees.

Fifteen Have Typhus

Fifteen persons on the train had typhus an dsix more dead from disease when the train was found.

The train captain took the attitude he was "just a pawn" and was apathetic about the whole affair. At the same time he admitted that during the six months he spent at Bergen-Belzen 15,000 inmates died of various diseases. Persons released estimated that 25,000 had died of starvation in the last three months and said their bodies were placed in a crematory. When the smoke started attracting Allied aircraft the cremation had to be stopped.

NAZI MURDERER OF 1100 CAUGHT

Gardelegen, Germany, April 18 (A. P.).—The Nazi ringleader who planned and executed the mass slaughter by suffocation and fire of 1,100 political prisoners during an attempt to evacuate a concentration camp at nearby Mieste has been arrested and sent to a rear area prisoner of war cage, it was learned today. Many of his collaborators also have been captured by American soldiers who took this town, twenty-five miles northwest of Magdeburg. According to present plans, the ringleader will be brought back here for trial.

He is accused by the United States Ninth Army of having placed the victims in a brick warehouse which was turned into an inferno when Hitler Youth, on his orders, ignited gasoline-soaked straw on the floor. One of the six persons who escaped from the building said the victims included Belgian, French, Polish and Dutch prisoners.

The charred bodies in the warehouse were viewed by several thousand somber-faced American soldiers.

"I never was so sure before of exactly what I was fighting for," said a tall sergeant from Long Island. "Before this you would have said those stories were propaganda, but now you know they weren't. There are the bodies and all those guys are dead."

SULLEN MAGDEBURG DEFENDERS ROUTED

Hitler Youth Units and Civilians Crushed by Flamethrowers.

By WES GALLAGHER

MAGDEBURG, Germany, April 18.—(AP) The ancient city of Magdeburg was in American hands tonight after the last fanatical Hitler youth and sullen civilian resistor had been captured or burned to death by flame-throwing tanks.

Troops of the American 30th (Old Hickory) division seized the city bank and discovered considerable art treasures and $28,000,000 worth of German currency and silver.

Part of the city still was burning from the latest Allied air attacks as the U. S. Ninth Army's second armored and 30th infantry divisions gathered in about 1,000 soldier defenders of the town and killed considerable numbers of Hitler's juvenile warriors and Nazi civilians who had turned rifle and bazooka fire against the Americans.

This was the first time that civilians have been caught using the bazooka weapons—panzerfausts—in large numbers. Apparently the Germans were trying to turn the panzerfaust into a guerrilla weapon.

Flame-throwing tanks were brought into the town this morning and what resistance was left quickly disintegrated. American casualties were light, despite the etxensive use of the panzerfausts.

"These people have really gone to town with the panzerfaust," said Capt. David Easlick of Ann Arbor, Mich., operations officer for the first battalion of the 30th infantry's 117th regiment. "It looked like the Fourth of July last night," he added.

The civilians are as sullen as any yet encountered in Germany.

"We found plenty of civilians sniping and fighting with soldiers," said Major Harry Zeien of Fessenden, N. D., of the second armored division.

Only a fraction of the city's population of 306,446 was left in the city proper, which was badly destroyed by Eighth Air Force attacks on the Krupp tank factory, air craft works, synthetic oil plant and docks. The business and cathedral section of the city along the Elbe river were almost completely smashed.

Russians Make Stars From Nazi Red Tape

MAGDEBURG, April 18 (AP).—The American 30th Division has captured ten carloads of red tape, used by the Germans to make propaganda for the Nazi party.

Now former Russian prisoners of war are cutting red stars out of it.

U. S. Troops Capture Family of Fritz Kuhn

Former Bund Leader's Wife Got Funds From Nazi Party

BEFORE NUERNBERG, Germany, April 17 (Delayed) (AP).—Forty-fifth Division troops advancing toward Nuernberg caught up with the wife and twenty-one-year-old daughter of Fritz Kuhn, former German-American Bund leader, in a town north of Nuernberg yesterday.

Mrs. Kuhn was living comfortably on funds received from the Nazi party, but said she received no other special consideration. Both Mrs. Kuhn and her daughter, Waldraut, were arrested for further questioning.

Waldraut was born in Mexico City, as was her seventeen-year-old brother Walter. She had lived in the United States with her father and mother and went to school in Jackson Heights, New York City. She returned to Germany with her mother in 1938. Mrs. Kuhn returned to the United States to be near her husband, but returned to Germany in February, 1944, in a repatriation exchange.

TANKS SPEARHEAD RED ARMY DRIVE TOWARD CAPITAL

APR 19 1945

Millions of Russians Massed for Final Assault on Berlin.

USE NEW WEAPONS

Powerful Armies Pour Across Oder and Neisse Rivers in Attack.

LONDON, Thursday, April 19 — (AP) Millions of Russians, spearheaded by new "breakthrough" tanks and automatic weapons throwing 325 shells a minute, were reported by the Germans today to be pouring across the Oder and Neisse rivers northeast and southeast of Berlin and directly into the city's eastern environs.

Moscow gave no official confirmation of any assault toward Berlin. The Nazis, however, reported heaviest pressure on a 60-mile arc 18 to 20 miles east of the city and said other powerful armies had crossed the lower Oder below the Baltic port of Stettin toward the plains northeast of Berlin and were across the Neisse river in Saxony south of the capital.

The situation on the Neisse front was complicated by a confused German broadcast saying that Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukraine army had succeeded in a breakthrough and implying that this force might be within 44 miles of the American First army fighting at Wurzen in the Leipzig area.

The Nazi announcer Walter Estermann of the Transocean Agency said:

"The Germans are still keeping check on enemy ground gains accruing to him after a successful breaching of the fortified main battle areas. The enemy is meeting with a violent response from our troops in this (Neisse) area.

"This success would remain even if Konev's fast tank spearheads should break through the fortified clearing of the wood of Finsterwalde, (50 miles) south of Berlin within the next few hours and threaten Berlin from the south by bringing the frontal defenses on the Oder to crash.

"But theer is nothing to confirm as yet the real menace this attempt would present. As long as the German tank attacks can bind Konev on the new north-south line—the Cottbus-Spremberg line—a great swing to the northwest is still a paper proposition."

The towns of Cottbus and Spremberg are 13 miles apart on a line 18 miles west of the Neisse. This position would be 27 miles west of the town of Finsterwade and 73 miles east of the Americans at Wurzen.

Russia Remains Silent

Moscow maintained official silence concerning those fronts, but Russian newspaper dispatches from that zone said Soviet troops could see fires in Berlin. One dispatch reported a sharp tank battle to keep reinforcements flowing into a bridgehead across a "swift-flowing, deep" river. Either the Neisse or the Oder east of Berlin would fit that description.

In their communique the Russians only announced gains in a two-way drive into Czechoslovakia, both aimed at the arsenal city of Bruenn (Brno); extension of the wedge pushing northward from Vienna; and continuation of a fight to exterminate the German garrison of Pillau, last Nazi-held ground on the Samland peninsula of East Prussia.

In the fighting at Pillau, the Russians said they captured 8,730 Germans on Tuesday, making a two-day prisoner bag of more than 14,000.

Berlin correspondent Fritz Koeltz said the Russians were using artillery to an "unimaginable extent" in their advance on Berlin from the east, and estimated that the Red army had fired more than 10,000 tons of shells in the sector between Frankfurt and the Oder bend during the first three days of an attack that started early Monday.

By German accounts, the Russians were converging on Berlin in an arc extending from Eberswalde, 18 miles northeast of the capital, through Bad Freienwalde, Wriezen, Neutrebbin, Alt, Friedland, Waikow, Diedersdorf and an area between Muellrose and Beeskow, 26 miles southeast of Berlin.

Late last night the Germans added that new forces were moving into this arc west of Zehden, which is 32 miles northeast of Berlin.

The Nazis said that from Stettin to Goerlitz, 2,500,000 Russians were on the offensive.

The Germans said tonight that nine Russian armies totalling 2,500,000 men were hammering into Berlin's eastern approaches and that other powerful Soviet forces had driven flanking wedges across the Oder and Neisse rivers north and south of the capital on a 200-mile front between Czecho-Slovakia and the Baltic.

News Blackout

The nearest Russian units supported by masses of tanks last were reported 18 and 20 miles from the gutted city before Berlin imposed a partial news blackout on what may be the final big battle of the war.

Moscow remained officially silent on the Berlin drive but dispatches to Russian newspapers from the Oder river front said Red army men could see fires inside the capital. One dispatch reported a sharp battle along a "swift-flowing deep river" to keep reinforcements flowing into an unspecified bridgehead. The Oder river east of Berlin would answer that description.

The Germans said a Soviet force —perhaps Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's second White Russian army which cleaned up the Danzig pocket—had crossed the lower Oder below the great Baltic port of Stettin on a 17-mile front between Schwedt, 40 miles north of Berlin, and Greifenhagen, 12 miles south of Stettin.

The Nazis also reported that a terrific tank battle was raging between Cottbus, 49 miles southeast of Berlin, and Goerlitz, near the Saxon border where the third major Russian offensive apparently was driving for a linkup with the Americans at Wurzen, 90 miles due west in the Leipzig area.

The central front, roughly a 60-mile arc from Eberswalde, 18 miles northeast of Berlin, to Muellrose, 29 miles southeast of the capital, was described by the Germans as writhing with battle as the Soviets drove through massive defenses of dragon's-teeth, interlocking concrete pillboxes and gun-emplacements. The main effort was reported to be a frontal assault from Seelow heights on the Kuestrin-Muencheberg road, but other claws ripped southwest from Wriezen, 24 miles from Berlin, and another tore up from the Frankfurt area.

German propagandists exhorted Berliners to brace themselves for a struggle inside the city and the Nazi Transocean Agency in a night broadcast intimated it expected the Russians to be at Berlin's city limits by Friday, saying "tomorrow and the day after one of the bloodiest battles of this war will develop before the gates of Berlin."

The German radio claimed nearly 600 Russian tanks had been destroyed in the Kuestrin-Frankfurt area since the beginning of the offensive Monday morning.

The Nazis said their defensive positions were being hammered incessantly by low-flying Russian fighter planes and fighter-bombers and declared Soviet reinforcements were piling into forward positions "as though on a conveyor belt."

Victory Banners Ready

A Moscow dispatch from the front said Red troops had prepared victory banners to be nailed up in Berlin. A picture published in an afternoon paper showed Russians in possession of a huge system of steel and concrete pillboxes connected with deep underground passages, protected on the surface by dragon's teeth. The caption said: "Soviet troops smash these powerful fortifications which lead to Berlin."

Great rivalry was reported among the divisions over which would be first inside the German capital. One dispatch told of a group of Soviet officers who mounted a half-ruined building, saw fires on the horizon and heard a divisional commander say, "There, Berlin burns. We see it with our naked eyes."

The Nazi commentators said the Reds were driving for the Stettin-Berlin Railroad which lies 12 miles west of Schwedt and 6 miles west of Griefenhagen. At Griefenhagen two arms of the Oder would have to be crossed but once in the clear the Russians could cut north to take Stettin from the rear. From Schwedt they could push straight toward the north German plain for a meeting with the British and Americans, or throw a pincers southward on Berlin.

Reds Open Third Drive To Join Their Allies

APR 1 KASISCHKE

London, April 18 (AP)—German broadcasts declared today the battle for the eastern approaches to Berlin had "reached its climax," with Russian breaching defense lines only 18 or 20 miles from the capital, and that the Soviets had launched a third offensive south of Stettin aimed at linking with the Allies on the North German plain.

Front dispatches to Moscow asserted the Russians could see Berlin burning, but did not yet specify that any offensive was under way.

Nine Russian armies are smashing toward Berlin, the Germans said, conceding Red Army gains through the strong hedgehog positions in the blazing arc east and northeast of the bomb-shattered city.

New Drive Described

The Germans declared Stalin had thrown in a third offensive on a 17-mile Oder River front south of Stettin, intending to slice in between that Baltic port and Berlin, and join the Western Allies north and [illegible] Berlin. This drive has assumed great dimensions, the broadcasts said.

The Germans declared Marshal Ivan Konev had expanded his surge across the Neisse River southeast of Berlin to a 45-mile front, and was nearing Cottbus, on the Spree River, 48 miles from Berlin. Moscow has not confirmed any of these three enemy-reported drives.

"Hundreds Of Tanks"

Capt. Ernst von Hammer declared nine Russian armies were striking toward Berlin and "hundreds of tanks are rolling over the plowed-up battlefield . . . The battle has reached its climax."

Transocean said the Russians had pushed south from Wriezen and west from Seelow, where they would be less than 20 miles from Greater Berlin and astride main roads. One Russian frontal drive, it added, is hitting west along a main road from Kuestrin to Muencheberg, only 17 miles from Berlin. A deep penetration south of Frankfurt also was reported.

Transocean declared 2,500,000 Soviet troops were attacking toward the capital and "their 2,500 artillery guns and 1,600 mortars fired more than half a million salvos in the last 24 hours.

Bloodiest Battle Predicted

"Tomorrow and the day after one of the bloodiest battles of this war will develop before the gates of Berlin," the agency added, while propagandists called on Berliners to brace for a bloody struggle inside the city.

"History has singled out Berlin to be a breakwater of the Russian tidal wave after having stood up for years to Allied air onslaught," one declared.

Front dispatches from the Red Army, dated "near Berlin," said Russian troops carried banners ready to nail to flagpoles in the city. One Moscow newspaper printed photographs of Russians in a huge system of tunnel-connected steel and concrete pillboxes, fronted by lines of anti-tank obstacles. A caption said: "With powerful operations, Soviet troops smash these powerful fortifications which lead to Berlin."

Lunging Toward Railroad

Transocean said the latest Russian offensive hit on a line from Schwedt, 48 miles northeast of Berlin, to Greifenhagen, 12 miles south of Stettin, and was lunging toward the Stettin-Berlin railway.

Konev's push west from the Neisse spread along a 45-mile front from Forst to Goerlitz, Transocean said, reporting terriffic fighting and heavy tank battles "in the forest country southeast of Cottbus" on the Spree. Konev's troops are 75 miles or less from Americans pushing toward Dresden.

Near Ancient Battlefield

Moscow dispatches said Soviets in Czechoslovakia had sighted the ancient battlefield of Austerlitz—where Napoleon defeated Russians and Austrians in 1805—in their drive toward the arms center of Bruenn, 12 miles northwest of Austerlitz. German columns were reported being thrown back upon Bruenn despite their heavy anti-tank fire.

Other Russians were ripping the Nazi line along the Erlauf River between St. Poelten and Linz, and one column was reported at the outskirts of Melk, on the Danube, 40 miles west of Vienna.

One dispatch to Moscow from the Berlin front said a divisional commander told his adjutant, "Let's go see the work of our Allies." The group then went up a steep, half-ruined staircase, it continued.

"There, seen on the horizon, was red flame and the sky was like a nervous tick, often winking with the golden spots of anti-aircraft bursts."

"Look," the divisional commander said, "there Berlin burns. We see it with our naked eyes."

Soviet veterans, the dispatch added, carried banners reading: "Banner of Victory. Death to the German invaders. This erected in Berlin by the Famous 'X' Infantry Regiment of the Heroic 'X' Guard Division."

Lines Pierced In Austria

On the Austrian front, the Russians reported Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's troops west of Vienna hammering great holes in the Nazi line along the Erlauf River, between St. Poelten and Linz. One Red Army column was reported to have reached the outskirts of Melk, on the Danube, 40 miles west of Vienna and 15 miles beyond St. Poelten.

In an order of the day, Marshal Stalin yesterday announced the fall of Zistersdorf, oil producing center 25 miles northeast of Vienna. Other Red Army elements drove up toward Bruenn (Brno) in Czechoslovakia.

Bader, Legless RAF Flier, Freed by Yanks in Reich

The [illegible] who won renown during the Battle of Britain, had thrice escaped from German camps but was recaptured each time. His Nazi captors finally took his artificial legs away from him.

Daughter Of King Of Italy Said To Be Air-Raid Victim

KENNEDY

Paris, April 18 (AP)—Repatriated French citizens who arrived in Paris today from the infamous Nazi Buchenwald prison camp reported that Princess Mafalda of Hesse, daughter of the King of Italy, was killed in an air raid last August 26 while confined in a reserved section of the prison.

One former Buchenwald prisoner, Julian Gain, previous administrator of the French National Library, brought word that Leon Blum, one-time Premier of France, once reported hanged at Lublin, had been removed from the camp by the Germans to some unknown destination.

The repatriates said a number of other prominent persons had died.

Infanticide Story

In all, more than 8,000 of France's 2,500,000 prisoners of the Germans and deported citizens arrived in Paris today in another installment of one of the greatest mass repatriations in history. Two hundred planes carrying repatriates landed at fields around the capital, and in some cases those to be brought home first were picked by lot.

Countless human dramas are being enacted daily as the repatriates return home.

One story—perhaps mythical—concerns a prisoner who returned home to find his wife watching over an infant in a cradle. Enraged, he seized the baby and threw it from a window, only to learn that it was the child of a neighbor, for whom his wife was minding it.

Prisoner For 30 Years

There has been no official confirmation of this tale, but hundreds of persons say it is true.

Paris' biggest railway station, the Gare d'Orsay, has been converted into a reception center for repatriates, who are sorted out in dozens and shipped home by every battered truck the Government has been able to muster. Families of men wait at the station.

Another story, which the semi-official French press agency reported had been confirmed, said one of the liberated prisoners had been captured during the first World War and had been in jail in Germany ever since—in all, almost 30 years.

MRS. LUCE TO DEPART FOR HOME THIS WEEK

DAY

PARIS, April 18.—(AP) Representative Clare Boothe Luce, Connecticut Republican, said today she expected to leave home at the end of the week, despite a slight illness. Mrs. Luce, who arrived recently from Italy, was hospitalized after being taken ill in her Paris hotel with a minor gastric disorder.

Reports About Franco Retirement Credited

Paris, April 18 (AP) — Reports gained in diplomatic circles today that Gen. Francisco Franco is about to retire as head of Spain and that he will be succeeded within a few days by Gen. Antonio Aranda.

Confirmation was lacking, but usually well-informed observers were inclined to place credence in the report. They indicated the Spanish dictator long ago had completed plans to quit as head of the state and the imminent defeat of Germany was believed to have crystalized his decision.

It was reported that Aranda had been assured the support of a number of Spanish leaders, including former Premier Joaquin Chapatrieta and Diego Hidalgo, radical republican leader. The Paris newspaper Liberation said the forthcoming new Government would dissolve the Falange and hold a general election as soon as possible.

LILLE, France, April 18 (AP).—An exchange of prisoners and evacuation of 200 civilians from the Dunkerque pocket took place today during a twenty-four-hour truce between the German garrison and the Allied force besieging the port.

4,000 TONS HIT HELGOLAND

Major Part Of German U-Boat Fleet Believed There

CHAMBERLAIN

London, April 18 (AP)—Germany's North Sea island fortress of Helgoland was carpeted with approximately 4,000 tons of explosives today by nearly 1,000 RAF heavy bombers making a record attack on the navy base which now is believed sheltering the major part of Hitler's U-boat fleet.

About 75 Flying Fortresses of the United States 8th Air Force bombed a railway yard and transformer station at Traunstein, 23 miles northwest of Hitler's Alpine hideout at Berchtesgaden.

This group was part of a force of 750 American heavy bombers which smashed at freight yards and rail facilities deep in southern Germany and in western Czechoslovakia for the third straight day. That is the area between the American and Russian armies.

NIGHT

600 Fighters Along

The heavy bombers were accompanied by 600 Mustangs and Thunderbolts strafing all airdromes in the area in a hunt which already has brought the destruction of 2,950 German planes in eleven days, and the total of 1,483 in the last two days.

The American flyers failed to find German planes on the ground today, however, and the 8th Air Force reported destroying only one aircraft on the ground and three in the air. Four United States bombers and one fighter were missing.

United States 9th Air Force fighter-bombers flew 1,137 sorties at a cost of two planes, destroying nineteen German aircraft on eleven fields and shooting down seventeen in combat. The 9th also lost one twin-engined bomber out of 600 sorties.

U-Boat Offensive Seen

Helgoland is just a dot in the North Sea but it is one of Germany's most vital naval bases and submarine lairs, becoming increasingly so since the ports of Kiel, Wilhelmshaven, Hamburg and Bremen have been repeatedly attacked in the last month. Enemy submarines sheltered at Helgoland are believed being readied for an intensified spring offensive on Allied convoy routes.

The Helgoland attack, the first on that area by the RAF in fifteen months, probably was timed also to catch any units of the Nazi high-seas fleet which now might be seeking refuge there.

Spitfires and Mustangs guarded the 1,000-bomber force, one of the largest dispatched in daylight by the RAF. An airdrome on the island of Dune, three fourths of a mile from Helgoland, also was attacked.

1,500-Mile Round Trip

Eight Air Force Liberators and Flying Fortresses attacked rail yards, transformer stations and other facilities at Pilsen, Klattau (Klatovy), 30 miles to the south, and Kolin, 35 miles east of Prague—all in Czechoslovakia. The Kolin operation required a 1,500-mile round trip, one of the longest ever made by Britain-based American heavy bombers.

In addition to Traunstein, other German targets were Rosenheim, 30 miles southeast of Munich; the border town of Passau, on the Danube 75 miles southeast of Regensburg, and Straubing, halfway between Passau and Regensburg on a main railroad line.

The Traunstein raid was the third by American heavy bombers close to Berchtesgaden. It was the first time that United States heavy bombers based in Britain had hit that close, however.

Storage Depot Hit

Late in 1944 and again on February 25, 1945, heavy bombers of the United States 15th Air Force based in Italy atacked rail yards at Salzburg, 15 miles north of Berchtesgaden. Last February 20 rocket-firing Italy-based American Thunderbolts raked all rail sidings in Berchtesgaden itself.

Nearly 500 United States 9th Air Force fighter-bombers scoured rail traffic during the morning along the Czechoslovak border from the area of Plauen to near Regensburg, while a force of two-engined bombers went after the 100,000-ton synthetic oil storage depot at Neuburg, 50 miles south of Nuernberg.

Ninth Air Force planes shot down four German aircraft and destroyed two others on the ground during the morning.

Pilots reported only a slight movement of enemy troops in the Eger-Karlsbad area of Czechoslovakia and saw many trains and rail yards smoldering after repeated attacks in this region in the last few days.

Yanks Bomb Railyards Near Berchtesgaden

APR 19 19

JAMESON

London, April 18 (AP)—United States heavy bombers today battered railyards at Traunstein, in southeastern Germany, less than 25 miles from Hitler's mountain stronghold at Berchtesgaden.

The force hitting Traunstein was part of a fleet of more than 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators that attacked ten rail objectives in southern Germany and western Czechoslovakia.

DAY

Another target was Rosenheim, just north of the Austrian border and within 40 miles of Berchtesgaden.

Rocket-firing American Thunderbolts based in Italy attacked Berchtesgaden itself February 20.

North Sea Base Hit

Close to 1,000 RAF and Canadian bombers, following up a night attack on railway yards near the Czechoslovak frontier, made a concentrated attack in clear weather today on the German North Sea naval base of Helgoland. A number of German warships were believed to be hiding there.

Fighters escorting the American heavy bombers raided airfields in southern Germany and western Czechoslovakia in another ruinous blow at the diminishing German air force.

During the night Berlin was pounded by the first co-ordinated double blow from British and Russian bombers. Other night-flying planes hammered Nazi escape railways into Czechoslovakia.

Third Straight Day For Fighters

Today's assault was the third straight day of hunting by United States fighter fleets writing off the German air force. Hundreds of German planes still were jammed on airfields, most unable to fly for lack of fuel.

B-26 Marauders bombed a 100,000-ton capacity oil storage depot at Neuberg, in Bavaria. Ninth Air Force planes shot down four German planes and destroyed two others aground during the morning.

The combined raid on the German capital began about 11 P.M. when RAF Mosquitos sailed in with their nightly load of 2,000-pou bombs. Just about the time Berliners were coming from their shelters a formation of Russian planes drove in from the east.

LONDON POLES SPURN ACCORD

Exiled Group Split With Mikolajczyk Indicated

SINGLETON

London, April 18 (AP)—Poland's exiled Government, split with the peasant leader Stanislaw Mikolajczyk on policy, spurned in advance today any compromise formation of a Soviet-sponsored Polish administration without British and American consultations.

A spokesman for the Government interpreted Prime Minister Churchill's cancellation of a Commons speech scheduled for Thursday as an admission that the British Government was not being kept informed of Polish-Soviet talks reported in progress in Moscow.

Eyes "Degree Of Pressure"

Simultaneously, the official acknowledged the possibility of the formation of another Soviet-sponsored provisional government, but maintained that such a creation would be directly dependent upon the "degree of pressure" exercised by Russia.

With the Polish Government here expressing determination to stand pat against compromise with the U.S.S.R, the spokesman said it had received no word from sixteen Polish leaders who were reported recently to have left their homeland in the company of Soviet officials.

He said there was a possibility that some of these might be persuaded to join the Warsaw regime and that the joint group might then be introduced by Russia to the United Nations as the new Polish Government on a take-it or leave-it basis.

"Such a group," he said, "would not be representative. Such a group would be under the direct control of Russia."

May Seek Hearing In U.S.

The possibility developed that Premier Tomas Arciszewski would seek a hearing at the coming meeting in the United States of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov and Secretary of State Stettinius. There is some likelihood that Mikolajczyk might be summoned to the United States to take part in the consultations.

Mikoljczyk, former Premier who has been regarded in British and American quarters as a potential choice to head the coalition group, a few days ago issued a statement expressing accord with the Crimea conference's plan for the formation of a new Polish "national unity" adminstration.

Nazi Lists 9 Zones For Holdout Battle

APR 19 1945

DENNEHY

London, April 18 (AP)—Establishment of nine major fighting zones where Germany's remaining forces plan to carry on the war to the bitter end, even though geographically isolated, was announced today by Max Krull, DNB commentator.

"The organic structure of the German front has ceased to exist," said Krull. "The terms West front and East front have lost their meaning."

DAY

He declared that the "newly German-formed fighting zones" all were "self-contained in an operational sense."

Pocket Battle Foreseen

His statement, implying an imminent junction of the Russian and American armies, represented enemy acknowledgment of a belief expressed on the Allied side for some time—that the European war eventually would devolve into fighting in a number of isolated pockets.

Two of the zones he mentioned—the Ruhr and the Dutch front—already are definite pockets. Allied troops are steadily whittling down each and taking out numbers of prisoners.

Another was Fortress Bavaria, including Hitler's mountain hideout at Berchtesgaden. By many accounts, the Germans have hauled vast quantities of supplies into this region and have built the strongest kind of fortifications.

Redoubt Called Bluff

A Stockholm dispatch this morning, however, said the newspaper Dagens Nyheter had quoted a recently returned Swede who has lived in Germany for years as saying the story that the Bavarian Alps have been converted into a final redoubt "appears to be a bluff."

The remaining fighting zones listed by Krull were the Brandenburg area, which includes Berlin; the region of Saxony-Franconia, where Chemnitz is being assaulted; Norway, which he said still was intact; the northern coastal sector, from Emden, Wilhelmshaven and Bremen eastward across Denmark land approaches to beyond Hamburg; Bohemia-Moravia and northern Italy.

Papers Censure Refusal to Allow Reporters to Visit Vienna

LONDON, April 18 (AP). — Two London newspapers took the Soviet government to task today on the ground that accredited American and British correspondents have not been permitted to visit captured Vienna.

Characterizing the fall of Vienna as one of the great stories of the war, "The News Chronicle" accused the Russians of being unreasonable.

"The Daily Mail" said: "The Russians should know that the conspiratorial atmosphere they maintain in their refusal to admit the western press gives rise to deplorable impressions."

Kerr To Travel To D.C. For Parley

APR 19 1945

London, April 18 (AP)—Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, British Ambassador to Moscow, will go to Washington to sit in on a conference of the Big Three Foreign Secretaries, it was learned tonight.

With the Washington announcement that W. Averill Harriman, United States Ambassador to Moscow, is also returning to Washington, there was speculation here that the three-man commission named at Yalta to lay the groundwork for the new Polish provisional government would meet again before the San Francisco conference opens.

Harriman, Sir Archibald and Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov, who will represent Russia at San Francisco, form the commission.

DAY

Action On Note

United States Secretary of State Stettinius's disclosure that a new note had just been received from Stalin met with little surprise here, although authoritative quarters said they had no knowledge of a similar note being received by London.

This series of developments, following Prime Minister Churchill's decision to cancel a statement to Commons tomorrow on the Polish question, led to belief the Polish issue had reached a showdown stage. Stalin is understood to be standing firm in insistence that the Lublin Polish Government be invited to San Francisco unless a new government can be formed.

Allies Warn Nazis On Scuttling Ships

London, April 18 (AP)—Supreme Allied headquarters warned German merchant seamen tonight to ignore any Nazi orders to scuttle their ships and bluntly announced that Germany would have to depend on its own fleet for any supplies it got from the outside world.

"There will be no Allied shipping available for German needs," the Nazi seamen were told in a broadcast transmitted in the name of General Eisenhower. "Germany will have to depend for her own supplies on her own merchant shipping."

NIGHT

"The time is drawing near when the North Sea ports of Germany will work under Allied control," the message said.

"In the little time that is left before organized resistance ceases, the fanatics whose power has been broken from the Rhine to the Elbe will try to create starvation and chaos by ordering ships to be scuttled, by sending ships and crews into Norwegian ports and by recruiting seamen for the Volkssturm."

The message declared the German seamen could organize now and "frustrate that plan and protect yourselves and your ships."

WARNING IS ISSUED TO GERMAN SEAMEN

LONDON, April 18—(AP) Declaring there "will be no Allied shipping available for German needs," Allied Supreme headquarters called on merchant seamen in north German ports by radio today to prevent Nazi fanatics from trying "to create starvation and chaos by ordering ships to be scuttled."

"In the little time that is left before organized resistance ceases," the broadcast said, "the fanatics whose power has been broken from the Rhine to the Elbe will try to create starvation and chaos by ordering ships to be scuttled; by sending ships and crews into Norwegian ports; and by recruiting seamen for the Volksturm.

"By organizing now, you can frustrate that plan and protect yourselves and your ships."

BRITISH QUITTING AIR RAID SHELTERS

APR 1 9 1945

By BARBARA WACE

LONDON, April 18—(AP) Britain's front line civilian army is handing back its uniforms, gas masks and hoses. Shelter dwellers are saying goodbye to the bunks which have been home to many for more than four years.

Hundreds of complicated contraptions for boiling tea are being dismantled and dart boards are being taken down.

Down in "Aldwych Village," an abandoned subway station used as a deep shelter, Shelter Warden Kate May said her charges had shrunk from 1,400 to 250 persons. She and her husband, Henry May, a steeplejack, have had the sole responsibility for the hundreds sheltering there. "Without a single holiday they have given their services free."

Although the air raid protection service still is functioning, it is only a skeleton of the organization it once was at the height of the air war against Britain.

The feeling of the remaining members of the ARP is bitter against the average person in the street. A grey-haired father of eight children, said: "People used to laugh at us when we were practicing before the blitz. Then when the blitz came we were lovely people and heros and everything. Now we get the raspberries again, we hear them talking as they pass the ARP post. They've already forgotten the bad days."

FLYERS IN ENGLAND GOING TO PACIFIC

London, April 18 (A. P.).—The prospect of an early transfer to the Pacific war zone was a subject of intense speculation today for approximately 20,000 American heavy bomber airmen in England, [illegible] of whom already are prepared to return to the United States for training as Superfortress teams. There is a possibility, however, that one bomber division from the United States Eight Air Force may remain in England at least six months to assist the Allied armies in cleaning up any isolated pockets of German resistance.

Crews fresh from American training fields will replace many men to be sent back for B-29 training, but a steady increase is anticipated in the number released from the European theater for potential duty in the Pacific. The division to remain would act as a police force to stamp out any minor uprisings that fanatical Nazis might be able to create.

Veteran bomber crews who have been here the longest probably would make up the police force, with the younger men sent out to blast the Japanese. The declaration on Monday by Gen. Carl Spaatz that the strategic air war against Germany has been won and that bombing from now on will be tactical has heightened speculation over the future of both the Eighth Air Force and the United States Fifteenth, based in Italy.

Large numbers of veterans have volunteered for Pacific duty, and probably will get their wish if the Army feels that they can be more valuable in combat than as instructors.

One-Day Parliamentary Rebel Comes To Heel

London, April 18 (AP)—Parliament's one-day rebel against ceremoney yielded to tradition today in order to take his seat in the Hous of Commons and plead the cause of self-government for his Scottish countrymen.

Sturdy, tousle-haired Dr. Robert McIntyre, 21, reluctantly bowed to the 300-year-old custom that each new member must be presented formally to the speaker by two members before he can take his seat.

The lone elected representative of the Scottish Nationalist party, he refused yesterday to accept introductory sponsorship, holding that it would mean associations with "London-controlled parties."

Today he relented, but after being presented, with his back to Prime Minister Churchill, he shouted suddenly, "I do this under protest. It wa sthe only way of taking my seat."

New Croat Regime Formed

London, Thursday, April 19 (AP). The Moscow radio said today a new Croat Government headed by Radevisko Jerkstulovic, and a new Macedonian People's government under Lazar Kutchevski, had been formed and would enter the Yugoslav federation. The broadcast quoted dispatches from Belgrade.

JAPS SAY THEY ARE BETTER THAN NAZIS

LONDON, April 18 (AP)—A German broadcast tonight declared that the Nazi party's congress hall was in flames as Americans fought into Nuremberg.

DIPLOMATS FLEE TOKYO

LONDON, April 18—(AP) Foreign diplomats have fled Tokyo because of the increasing tempo and severity of American air raids and have taken refuge at Karuizawa, mountain resort 90 miles northwest of the capital, the German agency Transocean said tonight, quoting a Tokyo dispatch.

London, April 18 (A. P.).—The Polish National Council (provisional parliament) will be convened in Warsaw on May 3 for a three-day session to hear reports from the President and Prime Minister of the Polish Provisional government, the Moscow radio said today.

Russia Honors Air Force Chief

LONDON, April 18 (AP)—Marshal Alexander Alexandrovich Novikoff, chief of the Red Air Force, has been named a Hero of the Soviet Union, the Moscow radio announced today. The high honor was conferred for "exemplary fulfillment of combat assignments in the frontal struggle against the German invaders, for valor and heroism."

ALLIES HEAD FOR BOLOGNA

Nazis Fight Stubbornly With Infantry Counterattacks

M. MORAN

Rome, April 18 (AP)—Polish and Indian troops of the British 8th Army crossed the Gaiana Canal 10 miles east of Bologna today and American 5th Army forces drove within 12 and 14 miles south and southwest of that city, which is the first major objective in the campaign to knock out the German Army in Italy.

Italian and New Zealand units in the 8th Army reached the Gaiana on a broad front, while to the northeast other 8th Army forces pressed against determined resistance in the forefield of the enemy's so-called "Genghis Khan Line" covering the Po River approaches and Bologna.

Germans Are Stubborn

This line, running along the Idece River from a point south of Bologna northeastward to Boccaleone and thence along the Sabbiosola Canal to Lake Comacchio, is described as the third and toughest of the German defensive positions northeast of Bologna.

While the 8th Army captured bypassed Argenta, 24 miles northeast of Bologna, and speared within 1,000 yards of Boccaleone, the Germans fought back stubbornly with tank-supported infantry counterattacks.

South of Bologna in advances on both sides of the Bologna-Florence highway, 5th Army troops took Monteramici and San Prospero against fanatical resistance from enemy troops in scores of caves, tunnels and pillboxes.

Prisoner Kills Self

Associated Press Correspondent Sid Feder quoted American officers as saying the suicide resistance being encountered was due to a proclamation by Hitler and Himmler that reprisals would be taken against the family of any soldier who surrenders or fails to fight to the last bullet.

One German prisoner, Feder reported, committed suicide after his capture.

Polish troops who beat down German resistance advanced 2 miles beyond Castel San Pietro.

Two Peaks Captured

Fifth Army troops captured Monteramici, 1,900-foot peak some 3,000 yards west of Highway 65 and 12 miles south of Bologna. South African troops attached to the 5th moved ahead 1½ miles from Monte Solo. The United States 1st Armored Division took Mount Davigo, 1,600-foot peak.

The 10th Mountain Division advanced more than 1,000 yards over difficult terrain from Mount Moscoso and along the west coast Allied forces were driving toward La Spezia.

Gurhka troops of the British 8th enlarged their bridgehead over the Marina Canal.

The aerial round-the-clock offensive continued with Allied warplanes lashing at the enemy from the front line back to rear supply dumps, troop concentrations and road and rail communications.

ALLIES 10 MILES FROM BOLOGNA

Poles of Eighth Army Make Nearest Advance.

HEINZERLING

Rome, April 18 (A. P.).—Polish troops of the Eighth Army, advancing up the Po Valley, drove today to within ten miles of Bologna, major German base in northern Italy.

[Heavy guns of the Allies opened fire on Bologna's railway station, the British radio reported in a broadcast recorded by CBS.]

Fifth Army forces also fought closer to the city from the south, battering through enemy troops entrenched in scores of caves, tunnels and pillboxes along the mountain highway from Florence.

Other Eighth Army forces have advanced beyond Argenta on the extreme right, cutting the German off from this strong point in the Argenta Gap, the key to Ferrara and the Po Valley. The Germans were still holding out in Argenta, but they appeared to be trapped, with Allied troops astride the railway a little more than a mile beyond the town.

The bridgehead over the Marina canal, next water barrier to Ferrara and the Po Valley, was enlarged and strengthened, with heavy casualties inflicted on the Germans. Polish troops who had spearheaded the advance north of Highway 9 fought their way two miles beyond Castel San Pietro.

Pushing out from captured Medicina, fourteen miles northeast of Bologna, Indian troops reached the Canal di Medicina, four miles to the northeast. West of Medicina New Zealand troops blasted their way to 4,000 yards across a maze of water obstacles to reach the Gaina Canal on a two-mile front.

Italian troops 2 miles beyond the Sillaro River were chasing the Germans from one hill position to the next. They had captured 1,000 prisoners in the last 24 hours.

Peak Captured

Monte Rumici, 1,900-foot peak which opposing armies have fought over for months, fell to 5th Army troops. It is about 3,000 yards west of Highway 65.

South African troops southeast of captured Monte Sole gained about a mile and a half and the United States Armored Division captured 1,600-foot Mount Davigo, overlooking Highway 64.

The United States 10th Mountain Division pushed off from Mount Moscoso and advanced more than 1,000 yards over difficult terrain thickly studded with German defense positions.

Along the west coast, other 5th Army troops advanced more than a mile in the area northwest of Tortonovo.

Fear Of Reprisal Shown

With the U.S. 5th Army South of Bologna, April 17 [AP—Delayed]. American officers believe that the fanatical resistance being put up by the Nazis in this sector of the Italian front has reached new heights due to a proclamation from Hitler and Himmler that reprisals will be taken against the family of any soldier who surrenders or fails to fight to the last bullet.

The Americans reached that conclusion after questioning the comparatively few prisoners taken. The captives said they had been forced by their officers to sign statements that they had either heard or read the proclamation.

Signed In Dark

One prisoner said his company had been forced to sign the statement in the dark and they did not know what they had been signing until they heard about its nature later.

He declared the proclamation threatened punishment to either the soldier's family or himself, even after the war. The Germans also were told that the Allies kill all prisoners.

There were two examples in the prisoners' cages today that the Nazis believed what their leaders told them. One prisoner was obviously terror stricken over the possibility that his name would be published. Another committed suicide.

AGENTS RECOVER MUCH U. S. PROPERTY

Rome, April 18 (A. P.)—United States governmental property worth more than $1,500,000 was recovered by agents of the Criminal Investigation Division, Mediterranean theater of operations, which investigated 4,987 alleged crimes against the Government in 1944, it was disclosed today by Lieut-Col. Robert J. Wilson of Columbus, Ohio, the division's director.

TWO NAZI PILOTS FLEE AMERICANS

Rome, April 18 (A. P.).—Two Mustang pilots each destroyed an enemy plane yesterday after the enemy pilots fled combat, landed and ran for safety.

Lieut. Anton L. Hall of Denver, Colo., and pursued a liaison plane as it flew along at tree-top level. The pilot landed and fled. Lieut. Hall set the plane afire on the ground.

Lieut.-Col. Frederick Stoffel, of Capistrano, Cal., got a messerschmitt 109 after it landed before Col. Stoffel had even fired a shot.

Pope Calls for Prayers To Guide Peace Framers

APR 1 9 1945

APR 19 1945

30.24-24903

VATICAN CITY, April 18—(AP) Pope Pius XII in an inferential reference to the San Francisco conference today called for special prayers asking divine assistance be given world leaders to frame a peace which "takes equity and justice into account."

Otherwise, he said in a circular letter to the world episcopate, "latent germs of discord and rivalries," will result in another war destroying civilization.

The Pope asked for special prayers during may—the month of the Blessed Virgin—and the period in which the San Francisco conference is expected to do most of its work.

He said human resources were insufficient for the grave task ahead. "We know full well that human sagacity, especially when blinded by hatred and feelings of vengeance, rarely can achieve a just, impartial settlement and fraternal harmony," he added in calling for prayers asking "supernatural assistance" be given the peace-makers.

The Pope's letter said in part: "It is not easy, alas, among such great differences when the souls of many people still are agitated by feelings of revenge, to obtain a peace which takes equity and justice into account, which satisfies with fraternal charity the aspirations of all peoples and eliminates latent germs of discord and rivalries.

"Consequently, those men especially need divine illumination who must undertake the very grave task of solving this problem and upon whose judgment depends the fate not only of their own nations but of all humanity and future generations.

"For this reason we sincerely desire that all elevate to God fervent intense prayers and that children particularly during the month of May implore the mother of divine wisdom to bestow supernatural assistance to those upon whose decisions rests the cause of all peoples.

"Let these men consider and attentively ponder before God that anything which might surpass the limits of justice and impartiality would certainly sooner or later be most harmful to both victors and vanquished since therein would be hidden the seeds of new wars."

Text of Papal Peace Letter

VATICAN CITY, April 18 (AP).—Following is a translation of Pope Pius's letter on peace, made from the Italian version published by "L'Osservatore Romano," the Vatican City newspaper:

"Venerable Brothers:

"We convey to you our greetings and apostolic benediction.

"Conscious of the common sorrow whereby for a long time now all peoples have been so bitterly oppressed we intend to leave nothing undone to ease in some way and alleviate the immense distress or hasten the end of this terrible conflict. But we know full well that human resources are insufficient to correct these misfortunes; we know full well that human sagacity, especially when blinded by hatred and feelings of vengeance, rarely can achieve a just impartial settlement and fraternal harmony. Wherefore it is necessary to elevate often prayers to God, who alone can, in such serious bewilderment and turbulence of feelings, make every one realize that there are too many ruins, that too many tears have been shed and too much blood spilt. Consequently both divine and human exigencies demand that this fearful scourge cease.

"Therefore, with the approach of the month of May, which is consecrated particularly to the Virgin Mother of God, we desire now, as we have done in past years, to exhort all once again—especially youngsters and innocent children—to implore the Divine Savior through the intercession of his Most Holy Mother, that the peoples who are victims of discord and strife and all sorts of misfortune may finally be liberated from grief and long suffering. But since it is the sins which we have committed in God's presence which keeps us away from Him and lead us miserably to ruin, it is not enough, as you already all know, venerable brothers, to elevate prayers to Heaven; it is not enough that many go to the altars dedicated to The Most Holy Virgin to make offerings and bring flowers and implore her aid; but it is also necessary to renew within and without public and private habits in order to lay those solid foundations on which alone can arise the edifice of domestic and civil life, an edifice which is not perishable and torn by discord but is homogeneous and lasting. Therefore let every one remember and apply in everyday life the warning of the prophet: "Come back to me," said the Lord of Hosts, "and I will come back to you."

"Let everyone also reflect on the words of the great Bishop of Hippo: 'Change your heart and your actions will change. Suppress selfishness and spread charity." . . .

"Do you want peace? Act justly and you shall have peace, since justice and peace have kissed each other. If you do not love justice you will not have peace. In fact, justice and peace love each other and they are so closely united that if you act justly you will find justice kissing peace. If therefore you want to achieve peace, act justly, abandon evil and follow the good—this is what is meant by loving justice. When you have abandoned evil and done something good, look for peace and follow her.

"If all the faithful will be so inspired and disposed there is no doubt that their prayers will ascend to the throne of the Most High and will obtain from the Lord appeased all comforts and gifts which we now need so badly.

"You know full well what gifts, aid and comfort we need in these troubled times. But firstly it is necessary to ask God that the minds and hearts of men be illumined and renovated by the teachings of the Christian doctrine from which alone can come individual and public salvation so that this devastating war of peoples and continents may be ended and citizens of every class reunited by the bond of friendship and begin the reconstruction of the human edifice on an immense pile of ruins under the banner of justice and charity.

"But one must also ask the Divine Redeemer and His Most Holy Mother in a spirit of prayer and repentance that the peace which will end this terrible bloody war be real and sincere.

"It is not easy, alas, among such great differences when the souls of many people still are agitated by feelings of revenge to obtain a peace which takes equity and justice into account, which satisfies with fraternal charity the aspirations of all peoples and eliminates the latent germs of discord and rivalries. Consequently those men especially need divine illumination who must undertake the very grave task of solving this problem and upon whose judgment depends the fate not only of their own nations but all humanity and future generations.

Calls for Month of Prayer

"For this reason we sincerely desire that all elevate to God fervent and intense prayers and that children particularly during the month of May implore the Mother of Divine Wisdom to bestow supernatural assistance to those upon whose decisions rests the cause of all peoples. Let these men consider and attentively ponder before God that anything which might surpass the limits of justice and impartiality would certainly sooner or later be most harmful both to victors and vanquished, since therein would be hidden the seeds of new wars.

"We further desire that all those who willingly respond to our exhortation not to forget the sad condition of those who either as refugees or exiles for a long time anxiously have been waiting to see once again their homes, or those who as prisoners in concentration camps expect to see the establishment of a just liberty after the war, and finally those who lie sick in hospitals. To these unhappy ones and to all those others for whom the present conflict has been a source of suffering, may the most benevolent Mother of God concede celestial consolations and grant the strength of that Christian patience whereby the acutest sufferings become tolerable and make one worthy of eternal happiness.

"We charge you, venerable brothers, with the task of communicating these paternal exhortations and wishes to the faithful entrusted to your care. To them, and especially to you all and individually, we convey with the hope of celestial gifts and as a pledge of our benevolence, our Apostolic benediction.

Nazi Ships Sunk in Kattegat.

Spain Bars All Nazi Planes At U.S. Hint

Madrid, April 18 (AP)—The Spanish Government, acting upon the request of the United States, agreed tonight to prohibit landings of German planes of all types in Spanish territory, effective at midnight tonight.

This ban, which will take effect after the scheduled arrival of the regular Lufthansa passenger and freight plane tonight, will bring to an end [illegible] traffic between the Reich and Spain.

The United States has agreed to provide the Spaniards with facilities for the transportation of mail to and from Switzerland.

There had been previous reports that Lufthansa planes from Stuttgart, Munich and Milan and been prohibited from landing at Barcelona, but afterward the German planes continued to land in Catalonia, province in which Barcelona is located.

Correspondents representing newspapers of the United Nations never were able to learn who arrived in these planes. All their efforts to obtain lists of passengers reaching Madrid by this route were blocked by military authorities in Barcelona.

RED IS SUSPICIOUS OF GOLD SEIZURE

Moscow, April 18 (A. P.).—Konstantin Hoffman, commentator for Red Star, Soviet Army newspaper, suggested today that the Germans deliberately placed their 100-ton cache of gold in the Allied path, and he also viewed the capture of Franz von Papen, the diplomat, with suspicion. The capture by the American Third Army of the Merkers salt mine and 8 tons of Reichsbank gold bullion early this month was termed by the article the result of "a timely transfer from Berlin to one of the towns lying on the route of the advanced Allied armies."

Hoffman quoted the Yorkshire Post as saying that Von Papen was no "accidental prisoner" of the Americans, and expressed alarm over the presence of the diplomat and German industrialists on the Allied side of the front. He said that Von Papen in 1943 had informed a Tokyo friend of the plans of German monopolists in the event of defeat. These plans, the commentator said, included an effort of German industrialists to get foreign financial support.

RED STAR COMMENT

Moscow, April 18 (A. P.).—The first Soviet editorial comment on President Truman's speech before Congress said today that the President was intent on carrying out the program of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Writing in the Army newspaper Red Star, Commentator Konstantin Hoffman said:

"The responsible and honorable task of continuing the cause of the great President in the interests and welfare of the American people [illegible] freedom-loving peoples has been placed on Truman and his collaborators. Truman's first steps witness his intentions to pursue the wise requests of Roosevelt."

The Russians are following every statement of the new President with great interest and thus far no criticism of him has been heard here. His lend-lease statement was featured by the press and radio.

Egyptian Museum Reopens Doors

Cairo, April 17 (Delayed) (A. P.).—King Farouk today reopened the doors of the Egyptian Museum here containing fabulous treasures of the ancient Pharoahs which had been dispersed and hidden since the war began in Europe. With the opening the sun shone for the first time since 1939 on the three gold coffins of King Tutankhamen.

As soon as the first German troops crossed the Polish frontier, the treasures were taken to rock-hewn caves. In some cases they went back into the tombs cut thousands of years ago by the Egyptians themselves.

Marines Reach Northern End of Island—Doughboys Are Stalemated.

GUAM, Thursday, April 19—(AP) Invasion of Okinawa and associated attacks on other Ryukyu islands and Japan itself have cost 7,988 casualties thus far for American Pacific Fleet naval forces and Tenth Army ground troops.

This toll was announced today by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, who reported U. S. Marines had reached the northern end of Okinawa. Doughboys at the south still were stalemated amid a furious artillery duel.

Nimitz reported, on the basis of information available yesterday, that 1,482 Army, Navy and Marine personnel had been killed in action since the Okinawa campaign started with Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's carrier plane strikes March 18 against the Ryukyus and Japan itself.

The wounded total 4,750, the missing 1,756.

The Navy, which has been under heavy air attack, including assaults by Kamikaze (suicide) pilots, suffered more dead than the Army and Marines for the first time in the Pacific war. Naval losses were 989 killed, 2,220 wounded and 1,491 missing.

Army and Marine casualties totalled 493 dead, 2,530 wounded and 265 missing.

Repeated suicide attacks against the 1,400-ship American invasion armada damaged a number of U. S. vessels. Loss of one destroyer has been announced. Tokyo radio has claimed the destruction of scores of American warships off Okinawa.

The latest reports on Japanese casualties on Okinawa, invaded April 1, were as of midnight Friday, when 9,108 had been killed and 391 made prisoner.

The heavy count of American casualties was announced in a communique reporting that Marines on Okinawa had reached the northern end. In the southern sector of the island, 325 miles south of Tokyo, the Yanks were still locked in a bitter artillery duel.

Twenty-fourth corps doughboys made substantial gains on little Ie island, just off Okinawa's west coast, yesterday, third day of the invasion. The enemy still was offering stiff resistance from dug-in positions and from concrete pillboxes. The four-strip airdrome was captured the first day of the invasion.

Japanese Plane Losses Are Far Above Output

Guam, Thursday, April 19 (AP)—The toll of Japanese aircraft smashed by Allied guns and bombs in the Ryukyus and Japan in 31 days—more than 2,280—far exceeds the estimated 1,500 planes produced monthly by Nippon's factories.

Blows struck by Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's fast United States Carrier Task Force accounted for 1,600 of the enemy planes in the 2,280 destroyed from March 18, start of the Okinawa invasion operation, to April 17, said Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

The remaining number included 600 knocked down in Japanese strikes at the American ground installations on Okinawa and offshore naval forces, and 80 more destroyed by the British Pacific Task Force.

The total does not take into account an undoubtedly large figure of enemy planes destroyed in Superfortress strikes which have blasted Japanese airfields and assembly and aircraft plants in the Nipponese homeland.

Last available information on Japanese plane production put the figure at 1,500 a month, but this was compiled before outlying Japanese islands afforded bases for frequent Superfortress raids on the enemy homeland.

Army Mustang fighters from Iwo Jima, Superfortresses from Marianas bases and carrier planes of Mitscher's force shared daily strikes at Japan from Saturday through Wednesday—five days.

While Tokyo was showered with incendiary bombs in two of the attacks, Saturday and Monday, the other raids were centered on major airfields on Kyushu, southernmost of Japan's home islands, only 325 miles north of Okinawa.

Japs Lose Over 2,280 Planes In Month

Guam, April 18 (AP)—More than 2,280 Japanese planes—a sizable chunk of the Nipponese air force—were destroyed by American and British carrier planes and anti-aircraft gunners in the last month in support of the Okinawa invasion.

This staggering toll was announced by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz today amid increasing indications that Japan's fierce air attacks on the American invasion armada off Okinawa heavily drained the enemy's supply of planes and pilots.

The planes were knocked out of enemy air fleets attacking the Americans on and off Okinawa, and also in United States and British carrier raids on the Ryukyus and the Japanese main islands.

Carrier Bag High

Pilots from Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's fast carrier force shot down the greatest number—1,600. Land-based aircraft, anti-aircraft guns and planes flying from escort carriers accounted for 600. British carrier planes covering the southern flank wiped out 80.

Destruction of the Japanese air force thus averaged 76 planes a day from March 18 through April 17.

This toll does not include planes shot down by Superfortresses or by escorting Mustangs from Iwo Jima. In one recent Tokyo raid B-29 gunners alone shot down or damaged 136 aircraft and escorting fighters added 37.

Suicide Raid

Japanese planes hit the Okinawa area heavily again on Monday, striking in ten waves between 9 and 10.30 A.M. At least ten of the attackers were demolished in suicidal attempts. Sixty-two were shot down in combat and 38 fell to anti-aircraft fire.

B-29's and Mustangs sweeping airfields on Kyushu, southernmost of Japan's mainland islands, yesterday found only empty fields and empty skies. The Japanese evidently had mustered all the airpower they could for the Okinawa attack.

Associated Press Correspondent Vern Haugland reported that old style training planes were sighted among some Japanese bombers—planes which have not been seen since the war began. One Japanese pilot rescued from the sea yesterday appeared to be a boy of 16.

Battle For Naha Continues

Infantrymen on southern Okinawa still were locked in a bitter artillery duel 4 miles north of the capital city of Naha while Marines edged closer to the northern beaches through small pockets of Japanese resistance.

Ten-square-mile Ie Island off the west central coast of Okinawa was virtually in American hands.

Invaded by 24th Corps doughboys who quickly seized a four-strip airfield, the island was reported today two-thirds in American control. The Yanks were meeting only moderate resistance as they closed in on the remaining garrison, encircled in the southeast corner.

Tokyo radio claimed, meanwhile, that American forces had invaded tiny Menna islet, about four miles south of Ie. Menna also has an airfield.

Report On Iwo

Admiral Nimitz gave a cleanup report on Iwo Jima, the little island in the Volcanos, 750 miles south of Tokyo. Iwo was the bloodiest conquest of the Pacific war.

He reported that 22,731 Japanese were killed from D-day, February 19, through last Saturday. The captured totaled 624. American Marine casualties have been listed as 4,189 dead, 15,308 wounded and 441 missing—a total of 19,938.

MINDANAO ISLAND IVADED IN SOUTH

35 Mile Beachhead Secured —Guerrillas Prepared Invasion Route.

MANILA, Thursday, April 19 —(AP) Battle-tested doughboys of Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving's 24th army division, landing under excellent air and naval cover, secured a 35-mile beachhead on southern Mindanao Tuesday in a second invasion of that Japanese-infested Philippine island.

They went ashore at Malabang and Parang, on the eastern shore of Illana bay. This was eastward across the [illegible] from Zamboanga peninsula, now largely in the hands of 41st division Yanks who made the first Mindanao landing March 10.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, announcing the new invasion in his communique today, reported that Filipino guerrillas, operating along the shores of Moro gulf, had helped prepare the way for the landings by effective assaults on Japanese forces.

Three enemy divisions, amounting to approximately 50,000 troops, are estimated on Mindanao, second largest Philippine island and the only major one not under American control. These include the 30th and 100th infantry divisions and a mixed division of Naval, Marine and garrison troops.

Davao, one of the major cities of the Philippines, is 85 miles east of the new landing beach. Much of the intervening country is so rugged it is shown as "unexplored" on recent maps.

Associated Press Correspondent Richard Bergholz, aboard a U. S. cruiser, watched the landing at Parang. He reported the first wave landed unopposed.

Bergholz quoted Eighth Army commander Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger as saying from his bridge: "It looks as if the Nips are going to run away from us again, just as they did at Zamboanga, Cebu and Iloilo. Well, we're going to chase them all the way across the island, or until they want to stop and give us a fight."

This invasion came as 33rd division ground troops continued to mop up enemy cave positions on the outskirts of Baguio, Philippine summer capital on northern Luzon. The Yanks are within the outskirts but meeting furious resistance.

Capture Supplies

Large amounts of Japanese military supplies were captured in the American advance, which was aided by attack bombers and fighters which dropped more than 280 tons of explosives in close support.

A heavy raid on Formosa was carried out by strong formations of Liberators and Mitchells, which unloaded 360 tons of bombs on Taihoku town and airbases in the north. Numerous parked planes were demolished on the ground, several gun positions were knocked out and warehouses and fuel dumps went up in smoke.

No attempt at interception was made.

Patrol bombers damaged six coastal vessels off Formosa and to the south sank a 10,000-ton tanker, damaged two small freighters and destroyed or damaged more than 75 river craft along the Canton-Foochow coastline.

Other planes hitting French Indo-China and Malaya damaged railway stock and wrecked four freighters.

Four Filipinos who had joined the quisling government were captured as they made their way out of Baguio. MacArthur said they would be turned over to the constituted Government "for trial and judgment." They were Jose Yulo, chief justice of the Supreme Court; Antonio de Las Alas, Minister of Finance; Teofilo Sison, Minister of the Interior, and Quintin Paredes, Minister of Justice.

Colorful Bontoc Igorotes, who have never changed their dress from homemade G-strings, saved many of the civilians. They guided them over secret mountain trails to the American lines, often carrying the sick and feeble.

Fighting Is Hard As Yanks Edge Into Baguio

Manila, April 18 (AP)—American soldiers fought inside the Japanese stronghold of Baguio today. Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced the rescue of more than 7,000 civilians from that once gay summer capital of the Philippines.

From a line on the northwest outskirts, four miles from the center of the ruined city, doughboys of Maj. Gen. Percy W. Clarkson's 33d Division encountered heavy artillery fire. The Japanese indicated that they intended to defend their mountain citadel to the limit. The battle increased in intensity.

Other Units Moving Up

Other units of the 33d, which has been closing in on Baguio for weeks over difficult terrain, were within three miles of the city limits on the southwest Kinnon road approach. Still other units were moving in over mountain trails from the west and southeast.

Heavy rains, heralding the approach of the wet season, hampered movements on newly bulldozed roads.

Mountaineers Make Rescues

Igorote mountaineers were credited with saving many of the 7,000 civilians, mostly Filipinos but also including Americans, Britons, Russians, Chinese, Poles, Swiss, Spaniards, Turks, Cubans, Belgians, Czechs, Italians, Germans and Austrians.

The Igorotes guided them singly, in groups and once in a mass delivery of 800 persons over secret mountain trails to the American lines. Often the sturdy native mountaineers carried the sick and feeble.

Many Die On Journey

Many, the Igorotes and refugees said, were too sick or starved to complete the four-day roundabout journey. The trail was dotted with graves.

Baguio, the Japs' last-stand headquarters, was also the last seat of their Filipino puppet government, headed by Jose Laurel. Refugees from the city confirmed reports that Laurel had fled to Japan, but four members of his cabinet were among the refugees seeking safety behind the American lines.

MacArthur announced that the four—Supreme Court Chief Justice Jose Yulo, Finance Minister Atonio de las Alas, Interior Minister Teofili Sison and Justice Minister Quintin Parades—would be turned over to the Philippine Government after the war for "trial and judgment."

Two Others Flee To Japan

Refugees said Laurel's Minister of Education, Camilo Osias, and House Speaker Benigno Aguino, an outspoken collaborationist, had fled with him to Japan.

Among the rescued was Brig. Gen. Manuel Roxas, former Speaker of the Philippine National Assembly, who had steadfastly refused to collaborate with the Japanese.

Another was Milagros Osmena, a daughter of Philippine President Sergio Osmena by his first marriage. Her condition was reported very poor.

SIX MAIN AIRFIELDS ON KYUSHU BOMBED

Guam, April 18 (A. P.).—Superfortresses delivered another heavy bombing on six principal airdromes on the southernmost Japanese mainland island of Kyushu today—even before another large force had returned from the same targets. Probably around 150 B-29s, flying from Marianas bases, again wrecked buildings and cratered runways of airfields from which Japanese planes have attacked American forces on and around Okinawa, 325 miles to the south.

Six task groups of B-29s took off for the mission while six earlier ones were winging their way back. The attacks, seventeen hours apart, supplemented carrier plane strikes against Kyushu on Sunday and Monday.

The results of yesterday's and today's high-level demolition assaults on Kyushu were not disclosed immediately. The bombing was done visually, and therefore accurately. Yesterday's raiders saw no Japanese planes, though the targets included the most important airfields at the southern end of the empire.

2 B-29'S LOST OVER KYUSHU

Heavy Fire Met In Attacking Six Jap Airfields

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Two Superfortresses were lost in attacks yesterday and today on six airdromes on the Japanese mainland island of Kyushu.

Large forces of the B-29's, possibly 150 in each mission, hit the airfields twice within seventeen hours, apparently in an attempt to pin down Japanese planes and keep them from attacking American forces at Okinawa, 325 miles to the south.

A 20th Air Force communiqué said the B-29's ran into "considerable" anti-aircraft fire but met few Japanese fighter planes except over one field at Tachiarai, in the northwest part of Kyushu. The five other fields bombed by the Marianas-based Superfortresses were in the southern part of the island.

Ernie Pyle, War Writer, Killed On Ie Jima

Guam, April 18 (AP)—Ernie Pyle, the GI's columnist, was killed today by a Japanese machine-gun ambush on Ie Jima, a 10-square-mile island just west of Okinawa.

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's headquarters said Pyle was killed instantly by a surprise machine-gun attack at 10.15 A.M. on the southern side of the island while watching the advance of 10th Army troops who had invaded the island Monday.

Pyle was standing with a regimental commanding officer of headquarters troops when hit.

General's Announcement

The commanding general of the Ie Jima invasion troops officially reported Pyle's death as follows:

"I regret to report that War Correspondent Ernie Pyle, who made such great contribution to the morale of our foot soldiers was killed in battle on Ie Jima today."

30.24-24905

In Washington his death was announced by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, and President Truman issued a statement of condolence.

"The nation is quickly saddened again by the death of Ernie Pyle," Mr. Truman said.

"No man in this war has so well told the story of the American fighting man as American fighting men wanted it told. . . . He deserves the gratitude of all his countrymen."

Forrestal's Statement

Secretary Forrestal's statement said:

"With deep regret, the Navy announces the death on Ie Shima (Jima) of Ernie Pyle, whose reporting of this war endeared him to the men of the armed forces throughout the world and to their families at home.

"He was killed instantly by Japanese machine-gun fire while standing beside the regimental commanding officer of Headquarters Troop, 77th Division, United States Army. At the time of his death, he was with the foot soldiers, the men for whom he had the greatest admiration.

"Mr. Pyle will live in the hearts of all service men who revered him as a comrade and spokesman. More than anyone else, he helped America to understand the heroism and sacrifices of her fighting men. For that achievement, the nation owes him its unending gratitude."

Truman's Tribute

In his tribute to the 44-year-old reporter for Scripps-Howard newspapers, who covered the war in Europe before going to the Pacific early this year, President Truman said:

"More than any other man, he became the spokesman of the ordinary American in arms doing so many extraordinary things. It was his genius that the mass and power of our military and naval forces never obscured the men who made them.

"People Still"

"He wrote about a people in arms as people still, but a people moving in a determination which did not need pretensions as a part of power.

"Nobody knows how many individuals in our forces and at home he helped with his writings. But all Americans understand now how wisely, how warmheartedly, how honestly he served his country and his profession. He deserves the gratitude of all his countrymen."

Hated War

Ernie Pyle's full name was Ernest Taylor Pyle, but he was addicted to simplicity, both in his writings and in his dealings with the doughboys whose stories he told.

Pyle saw more war than many soldiers, and he hated it. Twice in Europe he narrowly escaped the death that overtook him on Okinawa.

A beachhead villa in which he had been sleeping in Italy was hit by an enemy bomb shortly after he had switched beds a year ago last March. He and four other newspaper men, including George Tucker, of the Associated Press, escaped with light cuts.

Again, during the battle of the breakout in France, he was almost killed by Allied bombers at the time Lieut. Gen. Lesley McNair was killed.

"No Way To Play It Safe"

About the dangers of being a war correspondent, Pyle once wrote a friend:

"I try not to take any foolish chances, but there's just no way to play it completely safe and still do your job. The front does get into your blood, and you miss it and want to be back. Life up there is very simple, very uncomplicated, devoid of all the jealousy and meanness that float around a headquarters city, and time passes so fast it's unbelievable.

"No Bed For A Month"

"I didn't have my clothes off for nearly a month, never slept in a bed for more than a month."

Sometimes it was so cold, he said, that "my mind would hardly work and my fingers would actually get so stiff I couldn't hit the keys."

Like other war reporters, Pyle spent much of his time living in the field with the troops. During the fighting in Tunisia he went four and five weeks without a bath, sleeping on the ground and on farmhouse floors, under jeeps and in foxholes.

Widow In New Mexico

Pyle was born August 3, 1900, on a farm near Dana, Ind. His father, William C. Pyle, still lives there. His widow, the former Geraldine Siebolds, of Stillwater, Minn., lives in Albuquerque, N.M., where they built a home a few years ago.

After attending Indiana University, he started newspaper work on the Laporte (Ind.) Herald. He worked on the Washington (D.C.) Daily News from 1923 to 1926, when he quit to make a leisurely motor tour of the country with Mrs. Pyle.

Winding up in New York, he worked a year or two with the Evening World and the Evening Post before returning to the Washington Daily News.

Started Column in 1935

In August, 1935, he left the managing editor's desk to start writing his daily column.

He encountered the war in 1940, when he went to London in time to be in on the great fire bombing at the end of December.

He accompanied Allied troops on the invasions of Africa, Sicily, Italy and France. Last September he returned to this country for a rest before leaving for the Pacific early this year.

In 1944 he was awarded a Pulitzer prize for distinguished correspondence during the preceding year. He also received the Purple Heart for wounds suffered in action on the Anzio beachhead.

"Have Just Got To Stop"

When he returned from France last fall, he said in a farewell column from Paris, distributed by United Features Syndicate: "I'm leaving for one reason only—because I have just got to stop. . . . I have had all I can take for a while."

He was the author of "Ernie Pyle in England," "Here Is Your War" and "Brave Men."

Ernie Pyle Dies At Ie Front, Shot By Machine Gun

APR 19 1945

Dives From Jeep to Ditch, Peers Out, Is Killed in Invasion He Meant as Last

By Grant MacDonald

AT A COMMAND POST, IE JIMA, RYUKYUS ISLANDS, April 18 (AP).—Ernie Pyle, war correspondent, beloved by his co-workers, G. Is and generals alike, was killed by a Japanese machine-gun bullet through his left temple this morning.

The famed columnist, who had reported the wars from Africa to Okinawa, met his death at 10:15 a. m. (9:15 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern War Time) about a mile forward of this command post.

Pyle had just talked with a general commanding army troops and Lieutenant Colonel James E. Landrum, executive officer of an infantry regiment, before jeeping to a forward command post with Lieutenant Colonel Joseph B. Coolidge, of Helena, Ark., commanding officer of the regiment, to watch front-line action.

Coolidge was alongside Pyle when he was killed. I talked with Coolidge as he was coming back down the road from the fatal spot a mile ahead where Pyle's body lay guarded by an unnamed soldier who was still pinned down by machine-gun fire.

"We were moving down the road in our jeep," Coolidge related. "Ernie was going with me to my new command post. At 10 o'clock we were fired on by a Jap machine gun on a ridge above us. We [illegible] jumped out of the jeep into a roadside ditch.

"A little later Pyle and I raised up to look around. Another burst hit the road over our heads and I fell back into the ditch. I looked at Ernie and saw he had been hit.

"He was killed almost instantly, the bullet entering his left temple just under his helmet.

"I crawled back to report the tragedy, leaving a man to watch the body. Ernie's body will be brought back to Army grave registration officers. He will be buried on Ie Jima unless we are notified otherwise.

"I was so impressed with Pyle's coolness, calmness and his deep interest in enlisted men. They have lost their best friend."

Coolidge was shaken by his deep sorrow as he told the facts of Pyle's death. Almost tearfully, he described the tragedy.

APR 19 1945

General Is Shaken

The general also was visibly upset as he read a message about Pyle's death. He said: "I am terribly sorroy to hear this news. Just before Ernie went up this road [pointing toward the front lines] he talked with me and Colonel Landrum at this command post and Ernie made arrangements to meet me back here at 3 o'clock. I told him if he was not here on time I couldn't wait for him, as I had to be back on my flagship."

While the general was talking soldiers standing near by were deeply moved to hear of Pyle's death. A short distance ahead, enemy machine guns and our own [illegible] and artillery were rattling [illegible] roaring. Soldiers tenderly exhumed "short snorter" bills Pyle had signed for them less than an hour before.

Private First Class Louis J. Vespole, of 99-14 Forty-first Avenue, Corona, Queens, New York City, and Private First Class Patsy J. Rubbino of 122 Manhattan Avenue, White Plains, N. Y., showed me their bills with his signature. Vespole said: "Gee, he was a swell little guy. He stopped to talk to us just a little while ago before he went forward."

(Ie Jima or Ie Island, about two and a half miles off Okinawa's Motobu Peninsula, is pronounced as if it were written Ee-eye. Its area is about ten square miles, the size of Iwo Jima, 800 miles to the east, whose conquest the marines completed on March 17.)

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—President Truman issued the following statement today on the death of Ernie Pyle:

"The nation is quickly saddened again by the death of Ernie Pyle.

"No man in this war has so well told the story of the American fighting man as American fighting men wanted it told.

"More than any other man he became the spokesman of the ordinary American in arms doing so many extraordinary things. It was his genius that the mass and power of our military and naval forces never obscured the men who made them.

"Nobody knows how many individuals in our forces and at home he helped with his writings. But all Americans understand now how wisely, how warm-heartedly, how honestly he served his country and his profession. He deserves the gratitude of all his countrymen."

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied armies in Europe, was quoted last night in a broadcast by Herbert Clark, Blue Network correspondent, as saying of Ernie Pyle: "The G. I.s in Europe, and that means all of us here, have lost one of our best and most understanding friends."

In the same broadcast, General Omar N. Bradley, commander of the 12th Army Group, was quoted as saying: "His loss again reminds us of the enormous risks correspondents have taken to bring us the truth of this war."

Had Planned to Quit

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 18 (AP).—Ernie Pyle was on what he planned as his last invasion when he was killed on Ie Jima.

"I'm on another invasion," he wrote to his wife here on March 31, just before the Okinawa landings. "I never intended to. But I feel that I must cover the marines, and the only way to do it honestly is to go with them. So here I am. But I promised Max Miller [author and naval officer] and I've promised myself and I promise you that if I come through this one I will never go on another one."

In the last letter received by his wife, dated April 6, Pyle said he planned to be back at Guam by May 1, there to write about the Seabees.

Word of Pyle's death was carried to his wife by Dr. W. R. Lovelace and Mrs. Elizabeth Shaffer, widow of E. S. Shaffer, "Albuquerque Tribune" editor and lifelong friend of Pyle. The physician reported that Mrs. Pyle was prostrated with grief and under his care.

Pyle Film to Appear in July

HOLLYWOOD, April 18 (AP).—The motion picture of Ernie Pyle's life, "G. I. Joe," will be released as planned, some time in July, it was announced today by Lester Cowan, head of the company that made it.

Mr. Cowan said he had promised to send the first print of the picture to Pyle for showing to troops. Because Pyle was killed in Okinawa, the print will be sent to troops there.

U. S. Civil and Military Leaders Mourn 'Foxhole Correspondent'

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP)—Ernie Pyle's death was announced by Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal, and President Truman issued a statement of condolence.

"More than any other man, he became the spokesman of the ordinary American in arms doing so many extraordinary things. It was his genius that the mass and power of our military and naval forces never obscured the men who made them.

"He wrote about a people in arms as people still, but a people moving in a determination which did not need pretensions as a part of power.

"Nobody knows how many individuals in our forces and at home he helped with his writings. But all Americans understand now how wisely, how warm heartedly, how honestly he served his country and his profession. He deserves the gratitude of all his countrymen."

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson said today that soldiers have "lost a champion" in the death of Mr. Pyle.

"The understanding of Americans in battle which ran through all of Ernie Pyle's dispatches was drawn from hours spent with them under fire, sharing dangers they endured," Mr. Stimson said.

Marshall Expresses Sorrow

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff said: "Ernie Pyle belonged to the millions of soldiers he had made his friends. His dispatches reached down into the ranks to draw out the stories of individual soldiers. He did not glorify war, but he did glorify the nobility, the simplicity and heroism of the American fighting man. The Army deeply mourns his death."

Eisenhower Pays Tribute

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower paid tribute to Ernie Pyle Wednesday night, saying: "The GI's in Europe—and that means all of us here—have lost one of our best and most understanding friends," a Blue network correspondent, Herbert Clark, reported in a broadcast from Paris, according to The Associated Press.

New Mexico Mourns "Son."

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 18 (AP)—Albuquerque and the State of New Mexico were stunned today by the news that Ernie Pyle had been killed.

Only recently the seventeenth Legislature of New Mexico, by resolution, declared Aug. 3, the columnist's birthday, as "Ernie Pyle Day."

"Ernie Pyle was Albuquerque's adopted son, and all of us sorely grieve his passing," said former Governor Clyde Tingley, Mayor of Albuquerque.

American Reporters in Germany Unite in Homage to Ernie Pyle

By KENNETH L. DIXON

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN GERMANY, April 18—(AP) The word spread fast at the front: "Ernie Pyle is dead." At first nobody would believe it.

There is always tough, and often bitter, competition around any press camp, but somehow everybody always declared a moratorium on it in Ernie's case, because in some way he wasn't a competitor. He was Ernie.

"He was the most completely lovable man I've ever known," said Gordon Gammack of the Des Moines Register and Tribune. "He never said anything unkind about anybody and he went out of his way to be nice to guys."

It was that way with everybody here tonight, practically at Berlin's door. All that the boys could talk about was Ernie.

I found the news particularly hard to believe, because at Cassino and Anzio and lots of other places we had talked plenty about our post-war plans. As two New Mexico residents, we had decided we were going to sit together out there in the sun. And every now and then one of us would say, "Ain't peace wonderful" and the other would mutter "Yeah."

Then we would sit in the sun some more.

We all got pretty sentimental at a Ninth army press camp tonight, and here's what some of the boys who worked with Pyle had to say:

Robert Vermillion of the United Press: "He was the soldier's idea of what a war correspondent should be. He will be mourned by thousands of men and they'll say as they've said of so many comrades, 'It's always the good ones who get it.'"

Wes Gallagher of the Associated Press: Yes, they felt that way. If you didn't know Ernie you were a nobody in the eyes of the average G.I."

Michael Wallenstein of the Kansas City Star: "Yet he hated everything about war except the companionship of the decent little guys whose story he always told."

Bill Lang of Time magazine: "It's the end of a legend, but that isn't all. Ernie was a profane, hard-working little guy and loyal to these little soldiers."

James Wellard of the Chicago Tribune and London Daily Express: "There isn't much you can say about such a gentle person as Ernie except that he was innately good, and I guess that's why everybody loved him."

Noel Monks of the London Daily Mail: "If ever a newspaper man had a mission in life I say it was Ernie Pyle; yet tragically, only in death did he reach fulfillment. He died a soldier's death, just as he lived a soldier's life in order to fulfill his mission—to write about them."

Ronald Stead of the Christian Science Monitor: "The G.I.'s always asked about him whenever they met anyone they thought might know him. That was the sincerest tribute to a man we all admired personally and professionally."

Liked Even by Censors

Censors and reporters often fail to see eye-to-eye, but the Ninth army's chief press censor, Capt. Edward C. Lavelle of West Hartford, Conn., said: "Nobody was so unimportant that Ernie wouldn't listen to his opinion, and nobody was so important that he would not mildly voice his. There was something humble and fine about the little guy."

To all these unusual tributes Gallagher put an end with possibly the most fitting of all:

"Well, wherever he is now, he's among friends—thousands of those guys whose stories he wrote before they fell and before he fell with them."

NEW YORK, April 18 — Gen. Eisenhower paid tribute to the late Ernie Pyle tonight, saying, "the GI's in Europe — and that means all of us here—have lost one of our best and most understanding friends," Blue Network Correspondent Herbert Clark reported in a broadcast from Paris.

Gen. Bradley Praises Pyle, Mourns Loss

TWELFTH ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS, April 18. — (AP) Gen. Omar N. Bradley said tonight: "The death of Ernie Pyle has saddened the thousands of good friends he left behind him in Tunisia, Sicily, Italy and France.

"I have known no finer man, no better soldier than he.

"His loss again reminds us of the enormous risks correspondents have taken to bring our people the truth of this war."

Forrest Hopeful Parley Will Support Free Press

Is Optimistic on Results of World Tour of Editors

SYDNEY, Australia, April 18 (AP). —The world tour of the free press committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors has raised strong hopes that free press principles will be recognized in the San Francisco world security conference, Wilbur Forrest, committee chairman, said today. In an interview Mr. Forrest, assistant editor of the New York Herald Tribune, said the group had traveled 40,000 miles since January in behalf of a press free from government control and political interference and added: "We have aimed to have these ideals pledged at the San Francisco security conference and have excellent reasons for believing we have succeeded even in Russia where there has been considerable censorship."

'CAVALIER OF HOPE' FREED IN BRAZIL

RIO DE JANEIRO, April 18—(AP) Luis Carlos Prestes, South America's most famous political prisoner, once known as the "cavalier of hope," was freed today after nine years in jail.

Serving sentences totaling 40 years, Prestes was released under a general amnesty decree signed by President Getulio Vargas freeing political enemies who were imprisoned as far back as 1935 and granting political exiles the right to return to Brazil.

Prestes was imprisoned after his Communist-tinged unsuccessful revolution against the Vargas government in November, 1935, and some quarters predicted today that he could control the balance of power in Brazil's politics.

FIVE MEMBERS QUIT CANADIAN CABINET

OTTAWA, April 18.—(AP) Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced at a press conference today the resignation of five cabinet ministers and the appointment of seven new ones.

The cabinet reorganization arose from the plans of several ministers to retire from public life and the need for presenting a full council lineup before voters in the federal election June 11.

Those who resigned were Resources Minister J. A. Crerar; Transport Minister J. E. Michaud; State Secretary Norman McLarty; Navy Minister Angus Macdonald; and War Services Minister L. R. LaFleche.

The appointments:

Speaker J. A. Glen, to be minister of mines and resources.

Joseph Jean, former parliamentary assistant to the justice ministry, to be solicitor-general, a re-establishment of an old cabinet post.

Lionel Chevrier, parliamentary assistant to the munitions ministry, to be minister of transport.

Paul Martin, parliamentary assistant to the labor ministry, to be secretary of state.

Douglass Abbott, parliamentary assistant to the defense ministry, to be navy minister.

Dr. J. J. McCann, liberal member of parliament, to be minister of war services.

D. Laurence MacLaren, former mayor of Saint John, N. B., to be minister of national revenue.

Rocket Planes Hit Jap Isle

An Aleutians Base, April 16 [AP —Delayed] — Rocket-firing navy planes attacked Tomari Cape, on northeastern Paramushiro in the Kuriles, today, pouring both rocket and machine gun fire into the Japanese installations from a low level. One plane went in so low that debris from its own rocket explosion struck it as it roared over the target.

Nominal damage to the enemy installations was caused by the American raiders, all of which returned safely.

Three Japanese planes were seen in the air, but made no attempt to attack. Scattered and inaccurate flak was fired by the Japanese.

Cuban Senator Wounded In Back In Saber Duel

There was no announcement of the reason for the duel.

JAPS SEE FAILURE OF OWN ASIA PLAN

San Francisco, April 18 (A. P.)—Japan's "Asia for Asiatics" campaign has failed because of governmental inaction, the Japanese Domei News Agency charged today. Used as a slogan to rally occupied countries behind Japan, the phrase has become "vinegar and ammunition for enemy propaganda," said the Tokyo radio in a broadcast recorded here by the FCC.

The Greater East Asia slogan was adopted in Tokyo in 1943 under the auspices of Gen. Hideki Tojo's government, but, Domei asserted, it has failed because "not a second thought was given it." The program stressed economic co-operation from occupied countries and used "abolition of racial discrimination" as an added attraction.

Citing instances of governmental laxity, Domei said that the "Indian people took up arms, but failed to fight," and "Chungking has been satisfied to become the spearhead of the Anglo-American movement against East Asia. Domei suggested that the new cabinet of Premier Suzuki call another conference of puppet governments.

New Tokyo Area Raid Reported By Japanese

San Francisco, April 18 (AP)—Jana's Domei news agency said tonight three American Superfortresses and about 60 fighters raided the Tokyo area for 30 minutes before noon Thursday (Japanese time).

Domei said the attack was concentrated mainly on airfields, and claimed a "considerable number" of attackers had been shot down.

JAPANESE ADMIT PROGRAM FAILURE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18—(AP) The Allies have profited by Japan's neglect of its "Asia for Asiatics" campaign, Domei, the Nipponese news agency, charged today in a Tokyo broadcast.

While the Japanese government has faltered in the Asia program, launched in 1943, counteraction by the Allies is manifest in opposition to Nippon policies in India and China, said the broadcast heard by the FCC.

Domei noted that the "Indian people took up arms but failed to "fight" for Japan's greater east Asia slogan, and "Chungking has been satisfied to become the spearhead of the Anglo-American combat movement against east Asia."

Tokyo radio also broadcast a Domei news item saying Spain has not formally notified Japan of its break in diplomatic relations.

Domei quoted Sadao Iguchi, spokesman for the Japanese Board of Information, as saying the appointment of a diplomatic agent for Japan in belligerent countries awaits receipt of Spain's formal word through Spanish Foreign Minister Mendez de Vigo.

The Japanese Imperial headquarters in its usual daily claim of U. S. warships sunk by Nipponese suicide plane pilots said nine American war vessels and four transports were destroyed Monday and Tuesday near Okinawa. There was no confirmation of this report from American sources.

Baseball Back In Manila's Big Stadium

San Francisco, April 18 (AP)—Baseball lives again in the Philippines.

Even as bombs are bursting and bullets whining as a different kind of Yankee team is winning the biggest world series of all, the crack of willow against horsehide is being heard again in the heart of Manila.

Associated Press War Correspondent Russell Brines, who became a war internee in Manila early in 1942, and who is back on the job after repatriation, tells about it.

Garrison Troops Play

"American soldiers have brought baseball back to the ruins of Rizal Stadium," he says. "Garrison troops are playing regular games before thousands of fans in what once was Manila's most elaborate sports establishment. There are no uniforms, no hot dogs, but the playing is enthusiastic. It crowds the hell-ripped stands regularly with soldiers, sailors and Filipino citizens.

"Rizal Stadium was a Japanese entrenchment during the bitter fight for Manila and the marks of war are still on it. Mortar holes yawn between the feet of spectators, sitting on concrete tiers, because benches were stripped away. The sun peeks through the roof of the stands, perforated by machine gun bullets.

Dugouts War-Blackened

"The dugouts are black from flame throwers and chipped by shells. Outfields are foreshortened by crumbled walls and Japanese bunkers. The former turf diamond is now dirt, carefully rolled by the doughboys.

"Marks of big league players who dedicated the Stadium in 1935 are still there. The outfield wall bore the names and locations of home runs hit by them during the inaugural series. Only two remain between shell holes.

Ruth's Mark Gone

"One sign notes that the late Lou Gehrig hit the first and sixth homers near the right-field foul line. Earl Averill (Cleveland Indians) knocked the third and fifth into right center. The home-run records of Babe Ruth and Jimmy Foxx (Philadelphia Athletics) and others were erased by the war."

But baseball lives again in the Philippines.

100,000 M.P.H. Speed Seen For Jet Planes

Los Angeles, April 18 (AP)—A rocket plane flying 100,000 miles an hour at an altitude of 100 miles above the earth!

Sounds fantastic? Maybe it is. But 41-year-old Hall L. Hibbard, vice president and chief engineer at Lockheed Aircraft Corporation says plane designers right now are placing the finishing touches on jet-propelled craft that conceivably may travel that fast and that high.

"There is no problem connected with the use of jet propulsion that either has not been solved or cannot be solved," Hibbard told newsmen. He supervised construction of Lockheed's new P-80 Shooting Star.

Hibbard said he could not discuss many aspects of the Shooting Star because of military security, but he pointed out that the German Messerschmitt 163 has no ceiling except that imposed by limited fuel capacity and stratospheric pressures.

"If the cockpit could be pressurized for comfort and the fuel problem solved," said Hibbard, "such a rocket could fly to the moon."

FORD WILL END B-24 OUTPUT

Liberator Production to Cease in August.

Detroit, April 17 (A. P.).—The Army Air Forces announced today that the production of Liberator bombers at the Ford-operated Willow Run plant will cease not later than August of this year.

The announcement, made by Col. Nelson S. Talbott, commanding officer of the central district, Air Technical Service Command, said that the Army Air Forces currently are engaged in a study to determine whether the facilities of the plant can be adapted to the production of other AAF items.

APR 19 1945

"Drastic and sudden changes in aircraft requirements due to the unexpectedly rapid collapse of the German Luftwaffe," Col. Talbott stated, "have enabled the AAF to accumulate a substantial backlog of these excellent planes which have carried such a large share of the bombing war in the European theater. The contemplated shifting of the war to the Pacific is another factor contributing to this curtailment of the B-24 (Liberator) program. There the emphasis is on heavier, faster bombers such as the B-29, which fly higher, farther and carry more bombs and more armament.

"Both management and labor at Willow Run have done a magnificent job in producing more than 8,000 planes in the less than the three years they have been operating."

Cutback Will Affect Many.

Employment as of today at Willow Run is 21,731. More than 9,000 additional employees in Ford plants in the Detroit area will be affected by the cutback.

Wallace Gets Office Of Surplus Property

Walker Visits President, Reports No Decision on His Leaving Cabinet

By Paul Tobenkin

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Closer co-operation between the Republicans in Congress and the Administration on both foreign and domestic policies than has existed since President Roosevelt assumed office in 1933 was indicated today in an unprecedented conference of eight members of the Senate Republican steering committee with President Truman at the White House.

While the Republicans hope to function as a "loyal opposition," co-operating with the Administration to win both the war and the peace, they made it clear that they did not intend to surrender their views and principles on important issues on which disagreements might be expected to arise.

While no agreements were reached on the question of future meetings between President Truman and Republican leaders, a number of those who attended the conference indicated they expected to be called back again.

Agency Transferred to Wallace

This was one of several developments today bearing on President Truman's domestic problems, which included an announcement this evening by Fred M. Vinson, director of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, that, on the President's orders, the office of surplus property of the Treasury procurement division is being transferred to the Department of Commerce under Secretary Henry A. Wallace.

Another was a conference between President Truman and Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, after which Mr. Walker informe' reporters that his status in the Cabinet had been discussed but that no decision was reached. It has been widely rumored that Mr. Walker would lea e.

A further evidence of co-operation between the Republicans and the new Administration came in a separate meeting between President Truman and Senator Albert W. Hawkes, of New Jersey, industrialist and former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Senator Hawkes said he told President Truman he would do everything possible to get business men throughout the United States to co-operate with him.

Taft Leads Delegation

The Republican Senatorial steering committee delegation consisted of Robert A. Taft, of Ohio; Wallace H. White jr., of Maine; Kenneth S. Wherry, of Nebraska; Eugene D. Millikin, of Colorado; Warren R. Austin, of Vermont; Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire; Harlan J. Bushfield, of South Dakota, and C. Wayland Brooks, of Illinois.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, who heads the Republican committee, was unable to be present, and in his absence Senator Taft led the delegation and acted as its spokesman.

Senator Taft, nothing that today's visit marked the first time he had been in the office of the President since the days of Herbert Hoover, said that the Republicans had visited President Truman "to tender our regards and good wishes, and express our willingness to have him call us in at any time on any subject."

The contact between the Presi-

mittee began public hearings today, would authorize the President to make reductions up to 50 per cent in tariff rates in effect Jan. 1, 1945. In the case of any rate which already has been cut 50 per cent under the trade agreement program since 1934, this would mean an over-all reduction of 75 per cent below the rates of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act of 1930. The bill also continues the executive authority to make reciprocal tariff agreements for three years after June 12, the expiration date of the present law.

That a strong element in Congress, particularly on the Republican side, may be expected to fight the bill became apparent at today's hearing. There were definite indications that this issue may be the first test of President Truman's ability to prevail on Congress to put through a proposal, which was one of the chief international economic recommendations of his predecessor.

Committee Is Sharply Divided

Many Republicans who might vote for continuation of the eleven-year-old reciprocal trade program as it stands are prepared to oppose the Administration on the pending proposal to cut more deeply into existing tariffs. In fact, the controversy flared today in the sharply divided Ways and Means Committee even before the issue was clearly presented.

Mr. Stettinius, whose statement was read by Mr. Clayton, and Mr. Clayton as well, pointed out that the United States cannot sell goods abroad unless it buys goods abroad. Both, in their prepared statements used the phrase "let the rest of the world earn dollars to buy the products of American workers."

Both emphasized the "extreme danger" of international restrictions, the revival of blocs and the danger of trade barter between nations unless the United States, "the most powerful world trading country," leads the way to freer trade. The committee was told, particularly in the statement read for Secretary Stettinius, that the tariff issue was a "preliminary" to success in the objectives proposed for consideration at San Francisco.

Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, ranking Republican member of the committee, asked Mr. Clayton why "employment was never overcome" after the existing trade agreement law was enacted in 1934, "why the depression was never ended until the war intervened," and "why the standards of living were never restored to the levels existing under Republican tariff practices of the 1920s."

And Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart, Republican, of California, wanted to know how the trade agreement act had "contributed to peace" as it had been contended by Mr. Hull "in the first set of promises made."

Meanwhile, Claude R. Wickhard, Secretary of Agriculture, and Oscar Cox, Deputy Foreign Economic Administrator, testifying before the Senate Small Business Committee, declared that an expanding world trade is essential to lasting peace and told Senators that a broadened trade agreement law and enactment of the monetary stabilization measures drafted at Bretton Woods would spur international commerce.

Hull's Letter on Trade Pacts

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—The complete text of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull's letter to Representative Robert L. Doughton, Democrat, of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, urging continuation and expansion of the reciprocal trade act:

My Dear Mr. Doughton:

I very much regret that this year I cannot personally attend your committee hearings on the trade agreements act. I want you to know, however, that the program today is just as central to my thinking on international affairs as it has always been. Indeed, with the coming total destruction of the forces of aggression, the opportunity to realize the full benefits of reciprocal trade agreements and through them to further the cause of world peace is greater than ever before.

Back in 1917 and again in 1920 I pointed out in the House that the countries of the world were in danger of sinking into a chaos of unfair competition and economic warfare unless measures were taken to stop it, and I proposed that the Congress advise the President to call an international conference to work out ways of reducing old trade barriers and preventing new ones, and to agree on rules of fair competition in commerce among nations. Instead, we raised our tariffs in 1921 and 1922, and again in 1930; other countries began to try to fence out imports and the world started down the road of commercial conflict that helped bring on this war.

Agreements With 28 Countries

In 1934 the United States decided to go the other way, and to use its influence to persuade other countries to take the same new course. Under the trade agreements act we have succeeded in reaching agreements with twenty-eight countries to our advantage and theirs. But international relations had already deteriorated to such an extent that, against the setting of trade wars and depression, Hitler had come into power in Germany and the Japs were in Manchuria.

We shall soon have another chance to make a peace. This time we propose to make one that will last. We know that it cannot be lasting unless it embraces not only political and military affairs but also arrangements to provide the essential prerequisites to economic prosperity and to maintaining and improving standards of living in our own and in all countries. The trade agreements program is one of these essentials. Its purpose has always been—must continue to be—to bring about a reduction or elimination, on a reciprocal basis of mutual benefit, of excessive barriers to trade which impair the well-being of all countries and thus undermine peaceful and friendly relations among nations. The action of the Congress on your bill is therefore one of the decisive tests of whether the United States is prepared to assume its share of the responsibility for creating the basic conditions upon which enduring peace depends.

As President Roosevelt pointed out in his message to Congress on March 26, 1945, we cannot, in the difficult period immediately ahead, have an effective trade agreements program unless the act is strengthened and brought up to date as your bill proposes. In the agreements which the United States has already made, we have used up a major part of the authority under the original law and have obtained in exchange valuable relaxations of barriers to our exports which will give us renewed benefits in the post-war years But we must now go further. In the conditions which confront us now and will confront us after the war, we must have the additional authority which your amendment provides in order to make the act an adequate instrument for expanding our foreign commerce and world trade in general.

Praises House Bill

Neither the original act nor your bill contemplates any indiscriminate slashing of tariffs. When your bill has been adopted the act will still contain all the provisions that it always has contained for full consultation, before action, among the departments of the government that know the most about commercial questions, and for public hearings at which any citizen may submit facts and arguments. The administrators of the act will still be required, under your bill, to give due consideration to all interests. I have complete confidence that the act will continue to be carried out wholly in the best national interest and in the same careful and scientific manner in which it has been carried out for the last eleven years.

Although I shal you this time dur gressional consider trade agreements p[illegible]n, I shall follow the discussions in the Congress with absorbing interest and with high hope that, in this crucial decision, we shall again let the world know that we will not fail to play our full part in bringing about the conditions necessary for prosperity and a lasting peace.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

Top Diplomats Plan Final Try On Polish Issue

Washington Awaits Molotov; Kerr and Harriman Due; Russia Sends a New Note

By Jack Steele

WASHINGTON, April 18.—A last-minute attempt to settle the Polish controversy before the opening of the San Francisco conference of United Nations on international organization will be the main business of a meeting of top-ranking diplomatis of the Big Three powers—the United States, Great Britain and Russia—scheduled to begin in Washington tomorrow or Friday upon the arrival here of Viacheslav Molotov, Soviet foreign commissar.

The foreign secretaries of these nations and China will also meet in the next few days, as signers of the Dumbarton Oaks agreement, to seek pre-conference unity on the major amendments proposed to the international organization blue-printed at Dumbarton Oaks, including several amendments agreed upon by the United States delegation.

There were scores of rumors in Washington today that the solution of the Polish dispute is at hand, but there were only two concrete developments regarding this difficult problem. They were:

1. The arrival in Washington of a new note from Russia on the

Polish question, the contents of which both the State Department and the White House refused to disclose.

2. The disclosure that both the British and United States Ambassadors to Russia, Sir Archibald John Kerr Clark Kerr and W. Averill Harriman, are coming to Washington to join in the conferences on the Polish situation. These two Ambassadors and Mr. Molotov were designated at Yalta to direct the organization of a new Polish government.

Both events indicated strongly that the Polish dispute is rapidly coming to a head and that an all-out attempt will be made in Washington in the next few days to solve it. Informed sources said President Truman was prepared to step into the dispute if necessary in the interest of solving it before the San Francisco conference begins.

The United States delegates to San Francisco completed their pre-conference deliberations today and announced, through Edward R. Stettinius jr., Secretary of State and chairman of the delegation, that they had reached agreement "on all major points."

Mr. Stettinius confessed, however, that the question of trusteeships for some liberated areas, including Pacific islands reconquered from Japan, had not been settled and was still under discussion.

It was learned that some delegates had objected vigorously to the trusteeship idea, contending that strong opposition to it in Congress and by the Navy Department might imperil the work at San Francisco if trusteeships are demanded.

Mr. Stettinius declined to make public a list of the major points agreed upon by this country's delegates—or any minor points on which they failed to agree—but it was reported that they had decided to propose to the conference several amendments to Dumbarton Oaks following generally those suggested by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan.

TRUMAN KNEW BATTLE MISERY

Tells Soldiers He Shared Their Hardships.

Washington, April 18 (A. P.).—President Truman recalled the death and misery he saw in the last war to assure the nation's fighting men there will be no faltering in this one.

Addressing the armed forces and the nation by radio last night, the new Commander in Chief declared:

"I have done as you do in the field, when the commander falls. My duties and responsibilities are clear. These duties will be carried on in keeping with our American tradition.

"As a veteran of the first world war, I have seen death on the battlefield. I know the strain, the mud, the misery, the utter weariness of the soldier in the field. And I know his courage, his stamina and his faith in his comrades, his country and himself."

Terming President Roosevelt "a farsighted statesman and a real friend of democracy," Mr. Truman said "all of us have lost a great leader. You have lost an old friend of the services.

"Our hearts are heavy. However, the cause which claimed Roosevelt also claims us. He never faltered—nor will we!"

Text of Address.

The text of the President's speech follows:

To the armed forces of the United States throughout the world:

After the tragic news of the death of our late Commander in Chief it was my duty to speak promptly to the Congress and the armed forces of the United States.

Yesterday I addressed the Congress. Now I speak to you.

I am especially anxious to talk to you, for I know that all of you felt a tremendous shock, as we did at home, when our Commander in Chief fell.

All of us have lost a great leader, a farsighted statesman and a real friend of democracy. We have lost a hard-hitting chief and an old friend of the services.

Our hearts are heavy. However, the cause which claimed Roosevelt also claims us. He never faltered—nor will we!

I have done, as you do in the field, when the Commander in Chief falls. My duties and responsibilities are clear. I have assumed them. These duties will be carried on in keeping with our American tradition.

As a veteran of the first world war, I have seen death on the battlefield. When I fought in France with the Thirty-fifth Division I saw good officers and men fall and be replaced.

I know that this is also true of the officers and men of the other services, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard and the Merchant Marine.

I know the strain, the mud, the misery, the utter weariness of the soldier in the field. And I know too his courage, his stamina, his faith in his comrades, his country and himself.

APR 19 1945

Quotes Lincoln's Words.

We are depending upon each and every one of you.

Yesterday I said to the Congress and I repeat it now:

"Our debt to the heroic men and valiant women in the service of our country can never be repaid. They have earned our undying gratitude. America will never forget their sacrifices. Because of these sacrifices the dawn of justice and freedom throughout the world slowly casts its gleam across the horizon."

At this decisive hour in history it is very difficult to express my feeling. Words will not convey what is in my heart.

Yet, I recall the words of Lincoln, a man who had enough eloquence to speak for all America. To indicate my sentiments, and to describe my hope for the future, may I quote the immortal words of that great Commander in Chief:

"With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up our nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

Reds Send U. S. Note on Poles

Stettinius Receives Message but Does Not Disclose Any of Contents.

Washington, April 18 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Stettinius has received a note from Russia on the delicate Polish situation. Its contents were not disclosed.

APR 19 1945

Telling his news conference of the note's receipt, the Secretary also announced that the United States Ambassador to Moscow, W. Averell Harriman, is returning to Washington for consultations in connection with the visit of Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov.

Mr. Stettinius also reported that the United State delegation to the San Francisco conference completed its review of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals this morning and was "in agreement on all major points."

Optimism Expressed

He said that he had not yet seen the Russian note. There was no indication whether it contains proposals for breaking the Allied stalemate on Poland's government or whether it is a renewal of the Russian demand that the present provisional government in Warsaw be invited to the United Nations conference even though Great Britain and the United States do not recognize it.

However, coming shortly before the Molotov visit, there was considerable optimism that Moscow is moving toward an agreements with Washington and London on the stalled Polish question. Mr. Stettinius made it clear that he would discuss the matter with Molotov. He said he could not answer a question as to whether Harriman and Molotov are traveling together.

The Big Three foreign ministers' meeting is expected to begin as soon as Molotov gets here.

The Secretary declined to give any details regarding the decisions reached by the United States delegation to San Francisco.

Polish issue had reacned a showdown stage. Stalin is understood to be standing firm in insistence that the Lublin Polish government be invited to San Francisco unless a new Government can be formed.

Congress Warned U.S. Must Retain Islands

Rep. Wadsworth Opposes America Acting as 'Trustee' for Pacific Bases.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(AP) Vigorous applause today greeted a suggestion in the House by Rep. Wadsworth (R-N.Y.) that the United States keep Pacific islands it has wrested from the Japanese.

The influential New Yorker told colleagues he was "not captivated" by the idea that the United States should hold as "trustee" for other Allied nations territory which we have won "with our treasure and our blood."

To keep the peace, he said, we must "hold that position in the Far East which all Asiatics want to hold" without being "responsible to any international organization."

Specifically, Wadsworth mentioned Iwo Jima, Saipan, Okinawa, the Marianas and Caroline islands.

The question of trusteeships is one to which the United States delegates to the United Nations conference on world organization have devoted much thought. Their decision has not been disclosed, although Secretary of State Stettinius said today they had reached agreement "on all major points."

Yesterday, a majority of the delegates were reported inclining toward the principle of mandating certain conquered territory to individual Allies. This is in line with views held by the British.

Some officials have talked of the possibility of some sort of joint control by the big five, but the Navy apparently favors American control of bases leading to Japan, and a majority of the American delegates to San Francisco also were believed to be leaning that way.

Meantime the troubled question of Polish representation at San Francisco persisted, with Russia reported renewing her demand that the Soviet-backed Polish regime be invited if a coalition government is not set up in the week before the conference opens.

Secretary Stettinius told a news conference that a new Russian note on Poland was received this morning, but did not announce its contents.

Redeployment Of Troops Is Speeded By U.S.

APR 19 1945

Washington, April 18 (AP)—First steps to transfer this country's full military might against Japan already are under way. Its final accomplishment now is expected four months earlier than had been planned.

High officials emphasized that the full tide of redeployment will not set in until the Allies are satisfied that organized military resistance in Europe is at an end.

Destinations Changed

However, some items of equipment originally labeled for delivery in Europe have been shipped instead to the Pacific.

Personnel shifts, confined for the present to comparatively small numbers of specialist troops, have been instituted.

The officials have been confronted with one dominant bottleneck—shipping. To ease it they now plan to make double use of the large number of fast cargo ships now in the American mercantile-type fleet.

Some of these will be sent to European ports with relief and rehabilitation material needed in Europe after V-E. There, their holds will be refitted to handle troops and the ships will return as transports.

dent and the Republicans, Senator Taft said, could furnish an opportunity for him to deal directly with them as a means of avoiding as many legislative battles as possible between the two parties. While conceding that it might not always be possible to avoid clashes, Senator Taft said, "there may be occasions where differences can be ironed out by consultation and agreement."

Senator Austin, reached at the capitol after the meeting, agreed that the White House conference had been unprecedented, and said it represented an expression of the Republican minority's desire to help the new President "in this hour of crisis" with his foreign policy and work for world security. Although no date has been set for future meetings, he indicated that he and his colleagues "fully expect to go back again" to discuss important issues—even those on which a disagreement exists.

"Same Old Truman"

Senator Wherry, Republican whip, recalling President Truman's service in the Senate, said that the President had been "the same old Harry Truman." The President's voice broke, Senator Wherry said, as he welcomed the Republicans into his office.

From other sources, it was learned that a somewhat strained atmosphere at the beginning of the meeting was dissipated when the President jokingly said that if the Democratic Senators ever needed to be whipped into line, he would be glad to do it.

Other Senate Republicans gained the impression that the meetings were a recognition of the force and power of the Republican party, and an indication that Senator Vandenberg might be the most influential figure in the American delegation at the San Francisco conference of United Nations on international organization.

The transfer of the Office of Surplus Property will extend the duties of Mr. Wallace, whose confirmation for a Cabinet post by the Senate came only after a bitter fight during which President Roosevelt agreed to divorce the government's lending powers from the Commerce Department. The transfer was made, Mr. Vinson said, to place surplus property disposal under "a parent agency whose basic functions are closely associated with the commercial and industrial life of the nation."

Mr. Vinson noted that Henry Morgenthau jr., Secretary of the Treasury, recommended the transfer and that it was concurred in by Mr. Wallace as well as Mr. Vinson.

In apparent conflict with some suggestions for integration of all surplus property functions, Senator Brien McMahon, Democart, of Connecticut, introduced today a bill to establish the surplus property board as a separate agency—a proposal which, if adopted, might block any plan to bring the whole group of these agencies under Secretary Wallace's control.

Truman Announces Hours

J. Leonard Reinsch, President Truman's press secretary, announced today that henceforth the President's appointments will start at 9:30 a. m. The President's actual work day will begin earlier, however, probably at 8:30 a. m., and will continue until "he gets his work done."

President Truman also conferred today with Edward R. Stettinius jr., Secretar of State; Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, and twice with James Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy. Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King accompanied Secretary Forrestal on his second visit. In addition, he received Marvin Jones, War Food Administrator; Howard D. Smith, Budget Director, and Senator John H. Overton, Democrat, of Louisiana.

President Truman, accompanied by Ted Marks, a friend who had served in the Army with him in the last war, walked from the White House to Blair House, for lunch.

Hull Backs Bill On Trade Pacts As Peace Basis

Urges House Approval of Extended Reciprocity; Issue Is Test for Truman

By Samuel W. Bell

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Cordell Hull, former Secretary of State and original sponsor of the trade agreements program, declared today that the action of Congress on pending legislation to broaden the President's authority to make reciprocal tariff agreements will be the test "of whether the United States is prepared to assume its share of responsibility for creating basic conditions upon which ... enduring peace depends."

Mr. Hull, whose health forced him to relinquish his post in the State Department, submitted his views in a letter to the House Ways and Means Committee. In effect, Mr. Hull supported the testimony given to the committee today by his successor, Secretary Edward R. Stettinius jr. and Assistant Secretary W. L. Clayton.

Mr. Hull's assertion that the proposed trade agreement extension "contemplates no indiscriminate slashing of tariffs," was subscribed to by Mr. Clayton, speaking for both himself and Mr. Stettinius, in meeting assaults on the proposals made by Republican members of the committee.

U. S. and Belgium Sign 2-Way Lend-Lease Pact

America to Send $325,000,000 Goods, Not for Post-War Aid

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Edward R. Stettinius jr., Secretary of State, announced today that a new lend-lease and reverse lend-lease agreement had been concluded with Belgium providing for shipment by the United States of supplies valued at $325,000,000. Belgium is to continue a contribution to the United States war effort estimated at $18,000,000 worth of goods and services a month.

A statement on the agreement issued jointly by Mr. Stettinius, Leo T. Crowley, Foreign Economic Administrator, and Henry Morgenthau jr., Secretary of the Treasury, made it clear that no supplies have been included for post-war relief rehabilitation or construction purposes.

The three Administration officials ascribed the omission of heavy industrial equipment, inclusion of which in the Feb. 28 agreement with the French provisional government brought Congressional criticism, to "the present advanced stage of the war."

The United States has undertaken to furnish to Belgium and the grand duchy of Luxemburg, which has an economic union with Belgium, raw materials worth $90,000,000; food, $75,000,000; petroleum, $14,000,000; agricultural supplies, $18,000,000; clothing and footwear, $5,000,000; medical supplies, $1,500,000; short-life equipment for industrial and transport facilities used in war production, $77,000,000; prisoner-of-war supplies, $2,500,000, and freight charges on United States vessels, $42,200,000.

The State Department also announced today that mutual wartime aid by the United States and the Union of South Africa has been changed, as of Feb. 15, 1944, from a lend-lease to a cash basis

Col. J. F. Haskell Loses Leg as Result of Wounds

Stock Exchange Ex-Official Led Task Force in Germany

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—Colonel John F. Haskell, former vice-president of the New York Stock Exchange and organizer of the War Department's civil affairs section, has lost his right leg as the result of wounds received in Germany, his wife reported today.

Mrs. Paulette Heger Haskell, who resides here, said her husband was leading a special task force attached to General Omar Bradley's 12th Army group at Mors, just north of Cologne, when he was wounded. He is now in a hospital in Belgium.

The forty-one-year-old colonel was graduated from West Point in 1925. He resigned his commission about a year later to enter business and in 1931 became a member of the New York Stock Exchange. He wa selected vice-president in 1935.

He re-entered Army service in 1940 and was sent to Hawaii with the 27th Division.

Bidault Reaches Washington on Way to Parley

French Foreign Minister May See Molotov and Eden Besides Stettinius

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—French Foreign Minister George Bidault arrived tonight for conferences here before going West to the United Nations conferences in San Francisco.

Asked whether he expected to confer with the Russian Foreign Commissar, V. M. Molotov, and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden during top-level diplomatic talks this week end, Mr. Bidault said, "I hope so."

He arrived on an Air Transport plane at 10:30 p. m., and was met by the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, and the chief of the French naval mission here, Admiral Raymond Fenard. The French Minister of Public Health, Francois Billoux, accompanied M. Bidault.

Edward R. Stettinius jr., Secretary of State, said this morning that so far there were no plans to include France in the talks of the Big Three foreign ministers set for this week end. He said, he would be very glad to see M. Bidault.

WALKER WILL STAY 'FOR TIME BEING'

APR 19 1945

WASHINGTON, April 18—(AP) Postmaster General Frank C. Walker announced after a White House conference today that he will continue in President Truman's cabinet "for the time being."

Walker told reporters his future in government was discussed "incidentally" in his talk with President Truman, but "no decision was reached."

Walker has indicated his desire to retire from the cabinet on previous occasions.

Asked if he still would like to get away, he said:

"I'd rather not answer that at this time," then added that he was "staying on for the time being."

Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan from Truman's home state of Missouri has been mentioned for the postmaster general post in the event of Walker's retirement. Hannegan talked with the President yesterday, but said at that time that "jobs were not discussed."

Lt. Rogers Wounded

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Lieut. Will Rogers, Jr., former California member of Congress and son of the cowboy humorist, has been wounded in action.

Rogers telegraphed his wife here that he had been hospitalized but that his wound was not serious. The message gave no details as to time or place.

Rogers was with the 1st Army in Germany after participating in the Normandy invasion. He won the Bronze Star in the battle of the bulge.

Rogers was an army lieutenant when he was elected to Congress in 1942. He resigned from Congress in May, 1942, to return to army duty.

He Vowed He'd Give The Germans Trouble

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Tech. Sergt. Russell E. Dunham vowed he'd give the Germans plenty of trouble.

He gave them so much that he's going to get the Congressional Medal of Honor. He wiped out three machine-gun positions, killed nine Germans, wounded seven and captured two.

The 24-year-old Brighton (Ill.) doughboy will receive the medal in Germany, where he is fighting with the 3d Infantry Division.

Wounded, But Fought On

Dunham won the decoration during an attack January 8 against the machine guns on a snow-covered hill near Kayserberg, France. He was wounded early in the assault, but kept going until the last gun was knocked out.

Before starting his foray, Dunham donned a white camouflage robe made from a mattress cover and loaded himself down with ammunition and grenades. By the time he finished, he had fired 175 rounds and thrown 11 grenades.

Dunham crawled 75 yards under heavy fire to within 10 yards of the first gun, then jumped up and charged. A machine-gun bullet ...pped him in the back and sent ...im spinning 15 yards back.

He staggered up and went ahead again. A German grenade landed in the snow beside him, but he kicked it aside and it exploded without harm. By that time he had closed in on the machine gun and killed the gunner and assistant gunner with his carbine. He leaped into the emplacement and hauled out a third German by the collar.

The Other Two

Although blood from his wound had soaked his robe, making him an easy target in the snow, Dunham started for the second machine gun 50 yards away. He got within 25 yards and tossed two grenades, destroying the gun and its crew. Then he went after riflemen in supporting foxholes, killing one and wounding two.

Telling his comrades that he was going to see the attack through even if it cost him his life, he started up the hill for the third gun. Grenades exploded within 10 yards of him. A German jumped from a foxhole 10 feet from him and fired. The Nazi missed and Dunham shot and killed him.

He wounded five other Germans who jumped up from foxholes, routed others, and took the gun.

Army Strength At 7,536,601 At End of 1944

Grew From 513,410 Total in October, 1940; N. Y. Leads With 900,562

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—The War Department reported today the Army was 8,050,011 strong at the end of 1944 and that New York led the states in the number of residents in service.

A tabulation put the Army's strength at 513,410 on Oct. 31, 1940. From that time until Dec. 31, 1944, inductions, enlistments and appointments totaled 9,444,283 while separations from service in the same period amounted to 1,907,632, leaving an active total of 7,536,601.

New York, as of last Dec. 31, had 900,563 in service, including 17,563 Waes and nurses, while Pennsylvania had 663,666, including 11,666 women. Illinois ranked third, with 507,233, of whom 9,233 were women.

A table giving round figures on Army strength by states as of Dec. 31; the net accessions (inductions, etc.) from Nov. 1, 1940, to Dec. 31, 1944, and total separations during that period follows (the strength figure takes into consideration the number in service on Nov. 1, 1940, and does not represent the difference between net accession and separations):

Improvements in White House

APR 19 1945

Mrs. Truman Will Find Former First Lady Has Installed Modern Equipment.

Washington, April 18 (A. P.).—When Mrs. Harry S. Truman moves into the White House she will be the first President's wife to find modern equipment, good beds, no rats and a complete household staff.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is responsible.

During the dozen years of her residence the retiring First Lady installed many improvements for the comfort of White House occupants.

Inadequate and rusty drains were removed. Pantries and dumbwaiters appeared. Glass-enclosed showers were set up in the old-fashioned bathrooms. New mattresses were placed on the beds.

Air-cooling went in.

Rats, which had over-run the place for decades, went out after a long fight.

Mrs. Truman, a model housekeeper herself, will be pleased at the up-to-date kitchen she'll find.

Grateful to Mrs. Nesbitt.

There is a thermos cabinet on wheels for serving hot food at odd hours in various apartments of the mansion; a bathtub-size stock pan for soup-making, a thirty-gallon ice cream pack and a pancake griddle built in as part of the huge electric stove.

The new First Lady, however, will be perhaps most grateful for the guidance and long experience of Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, housekeeper for the Roosevelts, who will remain to see the Trumans comfortably installed.

Mrs. Nesbitt came to the White House with the Roosevelts from Hyde Park. Today she was busy helping her mistress pack the family belongings.

In her little downstairs office in the executive mansion, where Duchess, the huge mastiff companion of the dog Blaze, dozed at her feet, Mrs. Nesbit took time to explain that everything would be in readiness for the Trumans when they move in.

"It will be pust as if they moved into a well-equipped hotel suite," she said.

The White House, maintained by the Government, is completely stocked with everything from gold plate to dish cloths. Families or incoming presidents bring only what they wear and such personal effects as pictures and lamps to "make things more cozy."

But things accumulate.

SENATE OKAYS WATER TREATY

APR 19 1945

Truman Applauds Support Of "Good-Neighbor" Step

Washington, April 18 (AP)—President Truman tonight applauded the Senate's action in ratifying the controversial treaty dividing waters of the Rio Grande and Colorado River between Mexico and the United States.

A short time after the Senate approved the treaty by a vote of 76 to 10 (far more than the necessary two thirds), Truman issued a statement saying:

"In voting its approval of the water treaty with Mexico, the Senate today gave unmistakable evidence that it stands firmly in support of the established policy of our Government to deal with our good neighbors on the basis of simple justice, equity, friendly understanding and practical co-operation.

Described As Constructive

"By this action of the Senate, the United States and Mexico join hands in a constructive, business-like program to apportion between them and develop to their mutual advantage the waters of the rivers that are in part common to them."

California and Nevada congressmen had attacked the pact as harmful to domestic users of Colorado River waters. It was supported by other Western senators as necessary to full and orderly development of the Colorado and Rio Grande basins.

The Senate hedged its favorable action with several reservations interpreting and defining provisions of the convention.

The treaty must be ratified by the Mexican Senate before it becomes binding. However, Senor Doctor Don Francisco Castillo Najera, the Mexican Ambassador told a reporter that he was sure his country will approve it.

Armed Forces News Coverage On Frisco Set

Washington, April 18 (AP)—American troops around the world will get coverage of the San Francisco conference from their own publication, radio stations, motion pictures and bulletin boards.

The War Department has announced that a small group of soldiers, including combat correspondents recently returned from overseas, will go to the conference. Each will represent one of the regular army media, including Yank, the Army News Service, the Camp Newspaper Service, the Armed Forces Radio Service, the Army-Navy Screen Magazine and key additions of the Stars and Stripes.

Day-by-day news coverage will be handled by the Army News Service. Yank, largest army publication, will emphasize trends and background.

AMERICAN SOLDIER HANGED IN ENGLAND

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(AP) William Harrison, Jr., 22-year-old American soldier convicted of killing an Irish girl, has been hanged in England.

Reps. McCowen and Jenkins (R-Ohio) were notified today by the Army's judge advocate general of the execution.

It climaxed months of effort by the soldier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison of Havenkill, Ohio, to have the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. The mother came to Washington several times to plead for her son's life.

Congress to Investigate 'Coddling' of Prisoners

Full Information To Be Given to the Public

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—Representative Andrew J. May, Democrat, of Kentucky, today ordered a full prisoner-of-war investigation by the House Military Affairs Committee, of which he is chairman, to "clear up - general public misunderstanding."

It will get under way April 26, Representative May said in an interview, "and it will be kept open to the public." Witnesses will include War and State Department officials.

"There has been too much mouthing about the prisoner-of-war situation by people who don't know what they're talking about," Representative May said. "We expect during this investigation to bring out all the facts and the people can judge for themselves whether our policy is sound."

The Kentuckian noted that the United States, in handling war prisoners, is governed by the Geneva convention. Regardless of how other nations feel about their responsibilities under this agreement, he added, the United States, as a signatory, is bound by it.

Recent disclosures of mistreatment of United States prisoners by Japan and Germany have brought suggestions, committee members said, that the United States retaliate against Axis prisoners in the United States.

River Authority Views Stated By Ickes

APR 19 1945

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes today advocated creation of a series of authorities for development of the country's water resources.

He told a Senate Commerce subcommittee he was in "sincere and unequivocal accord" with the underlying purposes of a bill by Senator Murray (D., Mont.) to set up a Missouri Valley Authority, but suggested it be drastically amended.

Instead of giving a three-man board full control of the MVA as proposed, Ickes suggested that the Interior Department be the co-ordinator for existing governmental agencies.

Counterproposal Drawn

He disclosed that the department has drawn a counterproposal for introduction in Congress which differs in many details from the Murray measure.

"The Interior proposal is designed to secure all of the benefits of grass-root administration, without the travesty of setting up of additional uncoordinated and, in fact, irresponsible, agencies," Ickes said.

"This would be achieved by fitting the authorities into the existing pattern of government by requiring them to use, wherever feasible, going agencies of government, and by attaining co-ordination through a limited degree of supervision by the Department of the Interior, as the principal resource-development agency of government."

Proposed Board

Ickes proposal would set up a "river basin development board," composed of the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, the chief of army engineers, the board chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, the administrators of any authorities created and others.

Each authority would have an administrator subject to the direction and control of the Secretary of the Interior.

Ickes said the TVA should not be used as a final pattern in working out authorities for other river valleys. Congress should, he said, create an authority for the Missouri River basin that could be duplicated for any other national watershed with practically no change.

NLRB ASKED FOR DELAY

Postponement Of Action On Foremen Requested

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Fourteen companies with foremen's unionization programs asked the War Labor Board today to put off any action on foremen's demands until the National Labor Relations Board disposes of the recognition issue.

Walter M. Nelson, attorney for the Foremen's Association of America, which yesterday won an election at the Packard Motor Car plant, Detroit, also asked for postponement of the cases before the WLB, pending settlement in the courts. Other union attorneys, however, vigorously opposed any further delay.

Nelson said six months or a year would be consumed by a company test of the NLRB's recent decision in the Packard case in which it recognized foremen as a proper bargaining unit. The election was the outgrowth of that decision.

Detroit-Led Move

Nicholas Kelley, speaking for the Chrysler-DeSoto Wyoming plant, in Detroit, said the WLB was not authorized to take jurisdiction in the foremen's grievances and demands until after all of the procedures before the NLRB had been exhausted.

The move for postponement was led by the Detroit automotive industry.

Kelley's request toward dismissal or postponement of action was concurred in by attorneys for Packard, Briggs Manufacturing Company, Murray Corporation, Hudson Motorcar, Bohn Aluminum and Brass, Republic Steel, Aeronautical Products, Inc., Gar Wood Industries, Inc., Baldwin Locomotive Works, Maryland Drydock, Federal Shipbuilding and New York Shipbuilding companies.

Similar Plea Made

M. H. Goldstein, speaking for the CIO-United Marine and Shipbuilding Workers at the Maryland Drydock, New York and Federal Shipbuilding companies, said the foremen in those three companies had disputes pending before the WLB since January, 1944. He argued that they should be passed upon without regard to NLRB certification of any union as representative.

A similar plea was made by Louis H. Wilderman, of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, who said the Packard decision of the NLRB was not regarded by that board as binding in other cases, and that immeasurable delay might be encountered there. The Baldwin foremen voted in May, 1944, to strike, but have not done so.

Milk Firm Sees Encroaching By WLB On Farm Workers

APR 19 1945

30.24-24911

Washington, April 18 (AP)—Senate food investigators expressed concern today that the War Labor Board may be opening the way for classifying many farm workers as "industry employés" subject to the National Labor Relations Act.

Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) and Senators Aiken (R., Vt.) and Bushfield (R., S.D.) of the Agriculture Committee raised this point after hearing testimony on a dispute between a Plainsboro (N.J.) milk concern and the AFL Teamsters Union.

Henry W. Jeffers, president of the Walker-Gordon Laboratory Company, producers of certified milk, said the WLB had assumed jurisdiction over the dispute. He contended the employés involved were farm workers exempted by Congress from the National Labor Relations Act.

Milk-Price Violations Alleged

From another witness, Daniel Liberman, representing the Independent Milk Marketers of New York, the committee heard that the OPA has repeatedly ignored complaints of violations of milk-price orders by the Dairymen's League Co-operative Association.

Liberman testified that since February, 1944, the Dairymen's League had charged 10 cents more on a 40 quart container of milk than is allowed by OPA orders as the "interhandler's charge" on milk sold from one wholesaler to another.

Thomas told the witness that Chester Bowles, price administrator, would be called for questioning about the situation.

The chairman also assured Fred Tobin, Washington representative for the AFL Teamsters, that the union will have opportunity to tell its side of the dispute with Walker-Gordon. Tobin said, "We can give an absolutely different picture."

Checkoff Demanded

From Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Co-operative Milk Producers Federation, Jeffers, and the latter's son, Henry W., Jr., the committee got this story:

Last January 8 the AFL teamsters advised the Walker-Gordon company that it must "sign up" for its 150 emloyés and check off $3 a month dues or its product would not be hauled.

There was a two weeks' stalemate during which some milk moved by train to Philadelphia, but deliveries to the New York and northern New Jersey area, usual buyers, stopped.

WLB Takes Jurisdiction

Then the company agreed to recognize the Teamsters as bargaining agent for 36 bottlers and other employés. Excepted were strictly farm workers and milkers. The elder Jeffers added a belief that the "great majority" of the 36 did not want to belong to the union.

The WLB has taken jurisdiction over the dispute over wages and working conditions for employés for whom the union proposes to bargain and has set a hearing for May 1.

Holman expressed belief the union plans to "blitzkrieg the American dairy farmer by attempting to organize all milking-machine operators, whether they be hired workers, tenants or farm owners."

He said he did not question the union's right to organize farmers by persuasion, but declared its tactics were those of boycott.

"Is it your opinion," Thomas asked, "that if the union can force organization of milking-machine operators it can also force unionization of operators of tractors, combines and machines like that?"

"Yes, sir," Holman replied.

Mother's Day Is Set for May 13 By President

Urges Acknowledgement of Nation's 'Gratitude, Love and Devotion' to Them

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—President Truman today proclaimed Sunday, May 13, as Mother's Day in acknowledgement of the nation's "gratitude, love and devotion" to the nation's mothers.

The proclamation follows:

"Whereas, it is fitting that we acknowledge anew our gratitude, love, and devotion to the mothers of America; and

"Whereas, in this year of the war's greatest intensity we are ever mindful of their splendid courage and steadfast loyalty to the highest ideals of our democracy; and

"Whereas, Congress by joint resolution approved May 8, 1914, set aside the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day, and acclaimed the service rendered the United States by the American mother as "the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration';

"Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do hereby request the observance of Sunday, May 13, 1945, as Mother's Day, and call upon the officials of the government to display the flag of the United States on all government buildings, and the people of the nation to display the flag at their homes or other suitable places, on that day. And I urge that by our prayers, by our devotion to duty, and by evidences of affection, we give expression to our love and reverence for America's mothers.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this seventeenth day of April in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-five, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-ninth.

'HARRY S. TRUMAN."

SURPLUS PROPERTY OFFICE IS SHIFTED

WASHINGTON, April 18 — (AP) President Truman today ordered the transfer of the office of surplus property of the treasury procurement division to the Department of Commerce. This makes Secretary Wallace's department the disposal agency for surplus consumer goods.

The transfer was announced by Fred M. Vinson, War Mobilization director, who said it had been recommended by the surplus property board, and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau.

Typical commodities in the consumer goods category which will now be handled by the Commerce department are automobiles and trucks, clothing, hardware, agricultural implements, medical equipment and construction machinery

REFINERY PICKET LINE CONTINUES, U.S. RUNS PLANT

APR 19 1945

LAKE CHARLES, La., April 18.—(AP) The Cities Service Refining corporation's strike-bound 100-octane gasoline refinery and butadiene plant, one of the nation's largest, was taken over today by the Federal government.

Notices were posted on plant bulletin boards that Petroleum Administrator Harold Ickes had taken charge under orders of President Harry S. Truman.

Pickets who have marched back and forth before the gates since 1,500 workmen walked out because of a rent controversy continued at their posts, however, and no workmen had entered the plant early tonight.

At least seven persons were injured slightly last week during an unsuccessful attempt to crash picket lines.

A meeting was called late today at Maplewood housing project, where the work stoppage was called after 600 key men in the plant reported receiving notice that their rents were being increased. Unofficial observers expressed the belief they would vote to "work for the government."

At the plant 120 armed military policemen, sent here last week by the Eighth Service Command, continued to stand guard.

Bonner H. Barnes, assistant of refining for the PAW, told company officials he had been sent from Washington to take technical charge and "to operate or arrange operation of the plant in such manner as is deemed necessary for the successful prosecution of the war."

In explaining the action, Barnes said:

"The work stoppage at the Cities Service plant must be ended immediately, because it is preventing production of aviation gasoline and other petroleum products vitally needed by the Army and Navy.

"The executive order of the President specifically provides that the Army, if necessary, will furnish any protection required to assure that workers who wish to return to work will not be prevented from doing so by threats or violence of anyone. Protection will also be given to their families and property, if required."

Says Truman Was Good Store Partner

Kansas City, April 18 (A. P.).—Edward Jacobson, former co-owner of a haberdashery store here with President Harry S. Truman, says "Harry was a mighty fine business partner even if we did go broke."

Jacobson recalled yesterday that "we pooled our resources and our war buddies were our customers. Harry did the bookkeeping and I did the buying. We both did the selling."

"We went broke in 1922," he related, "and lost all we had. Harry went into politics and I stayed in the shirt field."

Hoover Sees Russians Accepting His Proposal

Says They Should Not Object to Propaganda Ban

PHILADELPHIA, April 18 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover said today "there should be no objection from Russia to putting in the San Francisco (world peace) charter a definition of aggression that includes propaganda."

Expanding on remarks made last night before the Foreign Policy Association here that the conference should agree on a definition of aggression to include direct or indirect subsidized government propaganda in other nations, Mr. Hoover said:

"Russia, in making treaties with surrounding states, put in a wider definition of agression than has ever been given before."

Speaking of the Soviet, he said Premier Stalin's decision to send Foreign Minister Moltov to San Francisco now "shows a real interest (by Russia) in the whole proposition—more than was originally shown."

Mr. Hoover said a bill of rights that would record the moral, spiritual and lawful standards of conduct among nations "is the major thing to get in the document. Such a bill . . . is the American answer to the whole business.

"It's why, fundamentally, we went to war. If we had not been anxious to protect the political rights and independence of China we would not have been forced into war with Japan. And if we had not been anxious to protect the political rights and freedom of Great Britain we would not have been forced into the war in Europe," Mr. Hoover said.

GERMAN BOY OF 9 KILLS U.S. SOLDIER

APR 19 1945

DULUTH, Minn., April 18.—(AP) The slaying of an American soldier by a nine-year-old Nazi boy was related by Second Lt. William Barnes of Duluth in a letter from Germany received this week by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barnes, Duluth.

"We had stopped to re-form when a small boy, nine or ten years old, asked a soldier for some chocolate," he writes. "He was a cute looking youngster and from force of habit the soldier put his hands in his pockets to see if he had any.

"Then the cute little boy drew a pistol from his clothes and shot the man through the abdomen. He couldn't miss. He was so close."

The soldier died of his wounds, Barnes wrote.

"Would you feel like giving a toy to a child after that?"

(Lieut. Barnes' parents said that they ha denclosed some small toys for refugee children in their Christmas boxes to their son.)

"And now do you suppose I take my eyes off a civilian for a minute? I've already had to kill one in self-defense. No, Mom, I'm not giving toys to German children."

Stars and Stripes In Opera Nuernberg

CLEVELAND, April 18 (AP).—In tribute to the 7th Army now assaulting Nuernberg, the American flag was carried through the stage-set streets of the shrine city in last night's Metropolitan Opera Association's presentation of "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg."

Earle R. Lewis, assistant general manager, said it was the first time the Stars and Stripes had been used on the stage in a German opera.

As Hans Sachs sang "If the Holy German Empire should fall to pieces, we still will have our Holy German art," the Meistersinger placed the American flag in the hands of the heroic Sachs. A capacity crowd caught the significance of the gesture and gave the singers an ovation.

NIEMAN HONORS OPENED TO GI'S

Awards Of Fellowships In Journalism Are Extended

Cambridge, Mass., April 18 (AP). Harvard University's Nieman fellowships in journalism were made available today to former newspaper men now in war service and to "self-employed journalists."

The Nieman Foundation said the action was not a departure from the normal requirement that a candidate must be a member of the working press.

"It is intended solely to make it possible to consider those newspaper men now in war service and the occasional self-employed journalist who otherwise would be barred from consideration," the foundation explained.

Women Eligible

Earlier this year, the Harvard Corporation also made newspaper women eligible to fellowships.

The admission of qualified newspaper men in war service permits them to take advantage of the year of study without first re-establishing themselves in newspaper work.

"This will make possible for some a refresher year between their war absence and their resumption of their former occupation," the foundation said.

Dozen Awarded Annually

Harvard awards about a dozen Nieman fellowships annually to newspaper men of at least three years' experience, giving the holder one year of study at the university in any department he may choose.

The stipend is the equivalent of the normal earnings of the recipient for the period of his absence from work.

The fellowships were established in 1938 by the bequest of Agnes Wahl Nieman, widow of the publisher of the Milwaukee Journal, "to promote and elevate the standards of journalism in the United States."

Eighty-seven newspaper men have received fellowships to date, and applications for those for the college year starting next September will be received until July 1.

DIVISIONS MAINTAINED POSITIONS FOUR MILES FROM THE CZECHOSLOVAK FRONTIER.

POSITIONS AROUND CHEMNITZ REMAINED PRACTICALLY UNCHANGED. LT. GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S MEN MET CONSIDERABLE SMALL ARMS AND ROCKET FIRE AROUND AUERSWALDE, THREE MILES FROM CHEMNITZ.

TRUEN, 15 MILES SOUTHWEST OF ZWICKAU, WAS CLEARED.

FROM 30 TO 40 SS TROOPS PUSHED BACK INTO AN OCCUPIED TOWN IN THE BAYREUTH AREA, TORE DOWN WHITE FLAGS AND BOOBY-TRAPPED SOME AMERICAN VEHICLES, BUT THEY WERE DRIVEN OUT.

THE THIRD ARMY CAPTURED 6,842 PRISONERS YESTERDAY FOR A TOTAL EAST OF THE RHINE OF 189,188. PRISONERS, INDEED, WERE COMING IN AT THE RATE OF 100,000 OR MORE A DAY ON GEN.EISENHOWER'S WHOLE FRONT.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS HAD NO CONTACT EARLY TODAY WITH GEN. BRADLEY'S 12TH ARMY GROUP. THE FIRST, NINTH AND THIRD ARMY MAY BY NOW HAVE ACHIEVED SEVERAL UNANNOUNCED TRIUMPHS.

THE NINTH ARMY ON THE ELBE HELD FIRMLY TO ITS BARBY BRIDGEHEAD 15 MILES SOUTHEAST OF MAGDEBURG AND 52 SOUTHWEST OF BERLIN. THERE WAS NO WORD OF ANY IMMEDIATE BREAKTHROUGH TOWARD THE CAPITAL, WHICH THE GERMANS SAID WAS UNDER ASSAULT FROM RUSSIAN TROOPS 18 TO 20 MILES EAST OF BERLIN.

THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY CAPTURED THE IMPORTANT ROAD CENTER OF SOLTAU (10,000) IN ITS DRIVE ON HAMBURG AND TOPPLED VERDEN (12,000) AND SURROUNDED UELZEN, WHICH WAS HALF CLEARED AFTER FIVE DAYS OF HEAVY BATTLE.

THE BREMEN SUBURB OF BRUNKUM WAS TAKEN AND DELMENHORST (31,000), A WEST SUBURB OF BREMEN AND MANUFACTURING CENTER, WAS MENACED BY TROOPS FOUR MILES AWAY.

THE 11TH ARMORED AND SIXTH AIRBORNE DIVISIONS THRUST DEPPLY TOWARD THE ELBE PAST UELZEN, CUTTING ESCAPE ROUTES NORTH.

THE DESERT RATS (7TH ARMORED DIVISION) WERE THE BRITISH TROOPS CLOSEST TO HAMBURG, WHICH LIES IN RUINS EAST OF THE ELBE. TANKS WERE 28 MILES FROM ELBESON. ENEMY POCKETS LEFT BY THE SWIFT ADVANCES WERE BEING MOPPED UP. THE 53RD WELSH DIVISION TOOK VERDEN. THE FOUR ARMORED BRIGADE, IN A FLANK ATTACK FROM THE EAST, MOWED DOWN SCORES OF GERMAN MARINES WITH MACHINEGUNS.

THE ENEMY WAS X X X ETC., AS BEFORE.

THE IRON THIRD DIVISION CLEARED BRINKUM AFTER THREE DAYS OF HARD FIGHTING AND THE 53RD DIVISION STARTED THROWING AN ARC AROUND THE SOUTH SIDE OF BREMEN (342,306).

THE BRITISH TOOK 4,000 PRISONERS YESTERDAY FOR A TOTAL OF 60,000 EAST OF THE RHINE.

OPERATING ON THE BRITISH RIGHT FLANK, NINTH ARMY TROOPS BYPASSED A FORCE OF 700 GERMANS WITH 30 TO 40 TANKS AND SELF-PROPELLED GUNS. THE GERMANS SUDDENLY SPRANG OUT OF HIDING AND ATTACKED THE REAR OF THE NINTH ARMY FORCES AND CAUSED SOME HAVOC BEFORE LT.GEN.WILLIAM H. SIMPSON COULD GET REINFORCEMENTS BACK TO CONTAIN THE FOE.

THIS ILLUSTRATES HOW RAPIDLY THE WESTERN ARMIES HAVE ADVANCED IN SOME PLACES, LEAVING LARGE AREAS ENTIRELY UNEXPLORED.

THE CANADIAN FIRST ARMY PUT TANKS AND INFANTRY INTO PUTTEN WITHIN SIGHT OF THE ZUIDER ZEE NORTHEAST OF AMERSFOORT (48,000.) THE CANADIANS WERE IN THE OUTER DEFENSES OF THE GREBBE DEFENSE LINE.

TO THE NORTHEAST, THE CANADIANS HELD DOGGEDLY TO THEIR KUSTEN CANAL BRIDGEHEAD--A VICTORY WHICH BREACHED DEFENSES OF THE CUXHAVEN PENINSULA.

THE ZUIDER ZEE IS SLOWLY LAPPING OVER FAMOUS DUTCH TULIP

FIELDS, NOW IN FULL BLOOM, NORTHEAST OF UTRECHT.

THE GERMANS STILL EVACUATED TROOPS OVER THE WATER INTO THE AMSTERDAM AND HOOK OF HOLLAND AREAS.

THE ONLY REMAINING POINT OF RESISTANCE IN NORTHEAST HOLLAND WAS ZULIG, ENTRANCE TO THE CAUSEWAY WHICH SKIRTS THE NORTHWEST NETHERLANDS COAST. THE TOWN HAS BEEN ENTERED.

INFANTRY DROVE EIGHT MILES WEST OF CAPTURED APELDOORN (71,158) AND REACHED NEIUWMILLINGEN AND LINKED UP WITH ADVANCING TANKS DRIVING NORTH FROM CAPTURED BARNEVELD.

THE EXTENT OF THE SEVENTH ARMY'S ADVANCE INTO NUERNBERG WAS NOT PINPOINTED, BUT THE 42ND (RAINBOW) DIVISION WAS REPORTED FIGHTING AT THE EDGE OF FURTH, A WESTERN SUBURB OF THE CITY ACROSS THE REGNITZ RIVER. THE 45TH DIVISION AT LAST REPORT WAS WELL INTO THE TOWN AND FIGHTING AROUND THE GREAT ARENA WHERE THE PRE-WAR NAZI PARTY CONGRESSES CENTERED, WHILE THE THIRD DIVISION WAS DRIVING ON THE CITY FROM THE NORTH.

AMERICAN GUNS DRAWN UP ON A 10-MILE ARC WERE SUBJECTING THE SHRINE CITY TO A TERRIFIC POUNDING. SOMEWHERE BETWEEN 4,000 AND 15,000 NAZIS WERE BELIEVED DEFENDING THE CITY. IT APPEARED UNLIKELY THEY COULD HOLD OUT MUCH LONGER.

ON THEIR LEFT THE SEVENTH (DESERT RATS) ARMORED DIVISION PUSHED THREE MILES INTO THE VILLAGE OF KAMPEN, 18 MILES DUE SOUTH OF HAMBURG. IT WAS EXPECTED THAT HAMBURG WOULD BE STRONGLY DEFENDED. ON THE RIGHT, MONTGOMERY'S SIXTH AIRBORNE DIVISION REACHED A POINT 11 MILES EAST OF UELZEN AND 15 MILES FROM THE ELBE. UELZEN VIRTUALLY WAS CUT OFF.

A FIELD DISPATCH SAID THE GERMANS WERE FLOODING THE COUNTRY BEFORE THEIR GREBBE DEFENSE LINE IN HOLLAND TO BLOCK THE CANADIAN ADVANCE. THEY HAD OPENED SLUICE GATES NORTH OF AMERSFOORT, AND FLOOD WATERS FROM THE ZUIDER ZEE WERE BEGINNING TO INUNDATE LARGE AREAS.

PARIS, APRIL 18-(AP)-GEN.HENRI FERNAND DENTZ, BEING TRIED ON A CHARGE OF TREASON, ASSERTED TODAY THAT BY RESISTING THE BRITISH INVASION OF SYRIA IN 1941 HE SAVED THE ENTIRE MIDDLE EAST FROM FALLING INTO GERMAN HANDS.

ACTUAL ORDERS TO FIGHT THE BRITISH CAME FROM VICHY, THE AILING, 63-YEAR-OLD OFFICER TESTIFIED, ADDING THAT THE FIVE-WEEK CAMPAIGN WHICH COST 3,000 LIVES WAS "THE MOST PAINFUL EXPERIENCE OF MY LIFE."

DENTZ WAS ON THE STAND AT THE OUTSET HE NOTED THAT FOR FOUR HOURS. HE WAS MILITARY GOVERNOR OF PARIS WHEN THE GERMANS ENTERED IN 1940, AND SAID THAT IF PARIS WAS INTACT TODAY IT WAS PARTLY DUE TO HIM.

A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER ALREADY HAVE BEEN PUT TO WORK CARING FOR OTHER LIBERATED PRISONERS.

AMONG THE DISPLACED PERSONS ARE DOCTORS, NURSES AND OTHER PROFESSIONAL PEOPLE AS WELL AS COOKS, CHAUFFEURS AND CRAFTSMEN--THE VERY TYPES UNRRA NEEDS MOST.

THE UNRRA'S ROLE IN GERMANY, UNLIKE ITS EXTENSIVE RELIEF PROGRAMS IN COUNTRIES SUCH AS GREECE AND YUGOSLAVIA, IS LIMITED TO OPERATING UNDER THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT. IT RELIES ENTIRELY ON THE ARMY FOR ITS SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT AND ITS JOB IS SUPPLYING TRAINED TEAMS FOR HANDLING DISPLACED PERSONS.

THESE TEAMS CONSIST OF 13 PERSONS, INCLUDING A DOCTOR AND NURSE. THE PROGRAM CALLS FOR 450 TEAMS. THIRTY-SEVEN TEAMS ALREADY ARE OPERATING AND 200 MORE ARE BEING TRAINED.

ROTHESHORN ISLAND IN THE ELBE, WHICH DIVIDES THE RIVER AT MAGDEBURG, WAS STILL A STRONG GERMAN HOLDOUT POINT.
AT EACH END OF THE ISLAND THERE IS AN ANCIENT FORT. THE ISLAND ITSELF IS LARGELY A PARK AND OF NO STRATEGIC VALUE.
THE GERMANS ADDED DESTRUCTION TO CITY BY PASTING IT WITH ARTILLERY. AN AIRFORCE RAID YESTERDAY TOPPLED BUILDINGS ON MANY GERMAN 88'S AND HAMPERED THEIR PLANNED DEFENSE. MOST OF THE DEFENSE OF MAGDEBURG WAS CONFINED TO PERIMETER ROADBLOCKS AND ONCE TO AMERICANS WERE BEYOND THESE THE ADVANCE WAS RAPID.
EVEN BEFORE THE SOUND OF FIRING HAD DIED IN THE CITY, THE ROADS WERE FILLED WITH GERMAN REFUGEES WHO HAD FLED THE CITY AND WERE TRYING TO RETURN.
MANY SLAVE WORKERS SCRAMBLED IN THE WRECKAGE FOR FOOD.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA (375)
BY EDWARD D.BALL
WITH THE U.S. THIRD ARMY IN CZECHOSBOVAKIA, APRIL 18-(AP)-TANK-RIDING INFANTRYMEN OF THE 90TH DIVISION CHARGED ACROSS THE BORDER OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA TODAY, INVADING THE SUDETENLAND, WHICH HITLER WON BLOODLESSLY AT MUNICH IN 1938.
THE POINT OF ENTRY WAS IN THE ASCH AREA AT THE EXTREME NORTHWESTERN TIP OF THE REPUBLIC WHICH HITLER ONCE CALLED "AN APPENDIX IN THE SIDE OF GERMANY."
THE LAST LAP OF THE DRIVE WHICH CUT GERMANY IN TWO WAS MADE WITHOUT OPPOSITION, EXCEPT FOR A BRIEF FLURRY OF GUNFIRE IN THE GERMAN VILLAGE

OF PKLA, NEAR THE BORDER. AFTER FIRING TOKEN SHOTS, 35 GERMANS SURRENDERED THERE.

LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S MEN ENCOUNTERED SOME BRISK FIRE AFTER THEY CROSSED THE BORDER. THE BORDER-SMASHING SPEARHEAD, WHICH WAS IN THE NATURE OF A STRONG PATROL, SLUGGED IT OUT FOR A WHILE AND THEN WITHDREW.

LATER PATTON'S FORCES DROVE TWO MILES INTO THE COUNTRY AT GOTTMANSGRUN.

THE FIRST TROOPS ACROSS--IN A PROCESSION LED BY A JEEP -- WERE FROM THE THIRD BATTALION OF THE 358TH INFANTRY REGIMENT, WHOSE REGIMENTAL COMMANDER IS COL.JACOB W.BELKE, JR., OF BOONVILLE, MO.

THE THIRD BATTALION, WHICH WON A PRESIDENTIAL CITATION IN THE BATTLE OF FDAMZO CASTRE FOREST BACK IN

OF THE MONT CASTRE FOREST BACK IN NORMANDY, WAS LED IN THIS MORNING'S ACTION BY ITS COMMANDER, MAJ.CHARLES B.BRYAN OF JOHN'S ISLAND, S.C.

AMONG THOSE IN THE VANGUARD IN THE INVASION WERE PFC.JEROME T.BROWN, BILLINGS, MONT.; PFC.WILLIAM MCCUAN, WOODVILLE, OKLA.; SGT.CARL D. THAYER, PAGOSA SPRINGS, COLO.; SGT.MATHEW A.RELUGA, 2016 FAIRMONT AVE., PHILADELPHIA, PA., AND PFC.RICHARD SANN, TEN KENMORE AVE., NEWARK, N.J.

IT WAS A RACE, AND NOTHING MORE, NEGOTIATING THE LAST EIGHT MILES ACROSS GERMANY. THE PATROL OF SIX JEEPS STARTED YESTERDAY TO WIN FIRST HONORS, BUT WHEN IT WAS TWO MILES FROM THE FRONTIER IT HAD TO TURN BACK. IT PICKED UP TOO MANY PRISONERS FOR SUCH A SMALL GROUP TO HANDLE.

RUNNING MAJ.BRYAN'S BATTALION A CLOSE SECOND WAS THE 358TH REGIMENT'S SECOND BATTALION, COMMANDED BY MAJ.THOMAS J.MORRIS, JR., OF WICHITA, KANS. THE THIRD BATTALION'S INITIAL COMPANY WAS COMMANDED BY CAPT. CHARLES PARISH OF PARISH, FLA.

AS SOON AS THE BORDER WAS CROSSED A SIGN WAS CEREMONIOUSLY STUCK IN THE GROUND BESIDE A SMALL STONE BRIDGE READING "YOU ARE NOW ENTERING CZECHOSLOVAKIA BY COURTESY OF THE THIRD BATTALION, 358TH INFANTRY." SOMEBODY ADDED THE POSTSCRIPT: "NOW YOU MAY FRATERNIZE, BY COURTESY OF THE SAME OUTFIT."
